The general is to be sacrificed as the goat, but meanwhile the terror in Syria will continue until the natives get sufficient power to drive them out.

BEIRUT, Syria, Oct. 30.—Consolidating their forces with the Druse tribesmen the thousands of Mohemmedans and others who were forced to flee the stricken city of Damascus laid waste by the savagery of the French, have launched a fierce counter-offensive against the depraved hordes under the blood-thirsty General Sarrail.

Just at the moment the French thought they had reduced the Syrian population around Damascus to submission, when they thought they had established "peace"—the peace of wholesale death—the tribesmen and those who fled the city rallied their forces and started a drive to retake the city of Damascus from French troops.

More Murder Gangs

The new drive alarmed General Serrail and he wired the government at Paris for more forces. A few hours later he gave an interview to the effect that 20,000 more troops were shortly be arrive, and that all efforts would be put forth to crush the revolt that is growing all over Syria.

A column under the command of General Gamelin is under heavy attack from the tribesmen, according to General Sarrail.

Wholesale Murder.

Facts now coming to light regarding the French bombardment of Damascus prove that the early reports of atrocities were underestimated, rather than exaggerated. After the first harrowing reports were published the French high command ordered a censorship established and heavy bribes were given capitalist journalists to induce them to wire lies to the world regarding the conditions existing in the stricken city.

The facts now coming to light prove that armoured tanks were run down thickly populated streets while roaring death from guns protruding from all sides. Steel jacketed bullets pierced the walls of the houses and slaughtered men, women and children seeking shelter in their own homes. Gattling guns, with dum-dum bullets (supposed to be outlawed in "civil-

CHINESE SCHOOL AT MOSCOW WILL BE SUN MEMORIAL

To Train Chinese in Social Sciences

MOSCOW, Oct. 30.—The Soviet autories have completed plans for the opening in Moscow, in December of the Chinese Memorial University, dedicated to Dr. Sun Yat-sen, the "father of the Chinese revolution" and in his later years an ally of Bolshevism, who died in February in Peking.

Karl Radek, who has been officially designated the head of the new institution, said today that the university would train Chinese students in political and social sciences and would fit them for public service in China.

"The history of the Russian revolution, events in modern China and general political history will form the basis of their education," he said. "Contrary to the policy of foreign schools in China, our university will not occupy itself with propaganda. We shall concentrate our attention on social and political science."

The presidium of the university which will be supported by Russian and Chinese funds, will include Mme. Lenin, N. Bukharin and M. Tomsky with A. A. Joffe, former Soviet minister to China, as chairman.

In the first year 250 students will be accepted, their selection being left to Chinese student organizations.

Communists in Whirlwind Finish as Greater New York Blazes with "Red Nights"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—As the municipal campaign nears its close the Workers (Communist) Party is prepared to stage a whirlwind finish, and in spite of the fact that the name of its mayoralty candidate, Benjamin Gitlow, has arbitrarily been ruled off the ballot by the Tammany controlled election board, the Communist campaign has been far more effective than the milk-and-water reformist campaign of the yellow socialists under the leadership of the notorious labor-bating Jewish Daily Forward, with the sky-pilot, the Rev. Dr. Norman Thomas, as its candidate.

Red Nights Everywhere.

Big Red nights on Friday and Saturday in Williamsburg and lower New York (the East Side); big indoor meetings at West Side Workers Hall, at Claremont Casino in the Bronx and Hopkinson Mansion in Brooklyn; two button tag days on Saturday and Sunday; a general literature distribution on Sunday morning; and a city wide campaign for the writing in of the name of Benjamin Gitlow on the ballot for mayor;—these are some of the activities in which the entire party will be mobilized for the windup of the campaign.

The activities of members of the party and sympathizers in the shops and in the unions have awakened the workers of the city to the importance of the Workers Party fight for a labor party and a workers' government, and contributions have been made by locals of the Furriers, Garment Workers, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Metal Workers, Food Workers, and others.

Workers Aroused.

The barring of Gitlow from the ballot has provoked universal indignation among the workers of the city of New York. They know that he has been barred because of his activities on behalf of the workers as he was convicted and jailed for these activities. Even the socialist party has protested, altho laughably enuf providing for the writing in of the name of Benjamin Gitlow on the ballot is being intensified and the answer of the workers of the city of New York will be a clear one.

Literature Distribution.

An enormous amount of literature must be distributed on Sunday morning and all members of the Workers Party are instructed to go to the section headquarters as early as possible on Sunday morning in order to secure their batch of literature and their stock of buttons and make this Sunday "Red Sunday." The following section headquarters will be open on both Sunday morning and Saturday with campaign buttons and literature:

Downtown—108 East 14th St.
Harlem—64 East 104th St.
Bronx—1347 Boston Road.
Lower Bronx—535 E. 146th St.
Williamsburg—56 Manhattan Ave.
Brownsville—1844 Pitkin Ave.

Among the pieces of literature that must be distributed are: The program of the Workers Party in English and in Jewish, a leaflet entitled "Why not Unity Here and Now, Mr. Thomas?" a leaflet addressed to the members of the socialist party, "Which," also a leaflet on the anthracite strike situation which has become especially timely on account of the terrible scarcity and profiteering in coal, with winter approaching. There are tens of thousands of these leaflets prepared Whirlwind Finish.

For the printing and distribution of so many leaflets, free to the workers of the city of New York, a big "whirlwind finish campaign fund" must also be raised in these few days to finance the "whirlwind finish of the campaign." If your union has not yet contributed, you must see that it does so this week. If you contribution list is not yet full, complete it now. If you have not yet ordered your campaign Stamp Books, you must get them at

N. Y. COMMUNISTS BROADCAST DEMANDS FROM RADIO STATION

NEW YORK.—The political message of the Communists was broadcasted on the air for the first time on Thursday, when Station WNJ was used by Rose Pastor Stokes, Workers Party candidate for registrar in Manhattan, and William W. Weinstone, Workers Party candidate for comptroller.

Rose Pastor Stokes spoke on "Women Under Capitalism" and Weinstone spoke on "What the Workers (Communist) Party Wants."

Saturday night Station WNJ will broadcast the speech of Benjamin Gitlow, Workers Party candidate for mayor, who has just been barred off the ballot by the election board and for whom the party is conducting a "write in" campaign. Gitlow will speak on "The Issues of This Campaign, from a Communist Point of View."

WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY CALLS UPON DEBS AND THE SOCIALISTS TO SUPPORT CANDIDACY OF BEN GITLOW

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—The following telegram was sent to Eugene V. Debs, many times socialist candidate for president of the United States and now the sole leader of the socialist party, whose record ever showed the lightest connection with or influence over the labor movement:

Eugene Victor Debs,
Terre Haute, Ind.

New York board of elections has just published official ballot for next Tuesday's municipal election. Name of Benjamin Gitlow, member of Amalgamated Clothing Workers and Workers Party candidate for mayor, omitted. Because of his prosecution under criminal syndicalist law and for serving prison term considered felon not eligible to be candidate. Like Gitlow, you served sentence for same crime and are a felon under capitalist justice. As leader of socialist party we propose you call on the workers of New York to vote for Gitlow as protest against his disfranchisement by writing his name on ballot under Workers Party emblem. This is the only course open to anyone that stands for class solidarity and the class struggle. The open use of state power by the capitalist class, use of injunctions curtailment of free speech, arrest and clubbing of pickets and ever growing use of army and navy against workers are chief issues before the workers today. We have proposed united labor ticket so that all workers may be combined in common campaign against capitalist oppression we have gone to extent of expressing willingness to withdraw our ticket in favor of one common united labor ticket if socialist party would do likewise. The only way to strike a blow against arbitrary use of government against workers is by supporting candidacy of Gitlow. The workers of New York will judge your devotion to revolutionary principles by action you take.

Workers Party, District No. 2, 108 E. 14th St., New York City.
William W. Weinstone, General Secretary.

KELLOGG BARS FAMOUS SCIENTIST INVITED BY ROCKEFELLER SCHOOL

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Oct. 30.—Prof. Abraham Joffe, physicist and member of the Russian Academy of Sciences, telegraphs from Berlin that he has been forbidden to go to the United States despite the invitation of the Rockefeller institute. Prof. Joffe expected to study in electrical and scientific laboratories.

His latest invention, a powerful dynamo, is of such minute size that he is able to carry it.

Prof. Joffe is not related to the former diplomat, Adolf Joffe, vice-chairman of the supreme concession committee of the Soviet Russian government.

"MOVING" THREAT FAILS TO SCARE SILK STRIKERS

Workers Party Cheered by N. J. Pickets

By Worker Correspondent.

NORTH BERGEN, N. J., Oct. 30.—Threats of the Hillcrest Silk Co. to move their plant to North Carolina show how effective the strike of the loom-workers has become. This is a favorite fiction of the company when they are beaten and was originated years ago, according to the oldtimers among the strikers. They laughed at this fake propaganda.

Strikers are determined to maintain the strike 100 per cent, with each one assigned to regular picket duty. They refuse to accept a wage cut and will not submit to an increase of the number of looms which each worker operates.

The strikers cheered heartily when it was announced that $12.00 had been received from the Armenian branch of the Workers Party.

Kills Self to Escape Jail.

CLINTON, Ill., Oct. 30—Rather than submit to arrest, Earl Starnes, 24, escaped convict of Joliet prison, committed suicide in his uncle's home here, when police surrounded the house and took in custody his companion, Donald Kerdell, 16, charged with the murder of a Dubuque, Ia., deputy sheriff.

Forty Laid Off; "B. & O." Plan Bares Its Fangs

By SANDE

(By Worker Correspondent)

BRADDOCK, Pa., Oct. 30—The first shop to introduce the notorious "B. and O." class-collaboration plan in the United States, the Glencoe, Pa. railroad shop, today posted up notices informing its employes that on Monday, Nov. 2, seventeen machinists and twenty-three helpers would be laid off.

When "Big Bill" Johnston's scheme was started, it will be remembered, its so-called purpose was to guarantee workers steady employment and better conditions. Well, the "benefits" are now being reaped in the form of a lay-off. And there are indications that in the near future more machinists are to be forced out into the ever-growing army of the jobless.

Willing to Defend His Country or Defraud It

CINCINNATI, Oct. 30.—Military triumphs won in the Cincinnati sector of the home front during the world war were recalled in Eden Park when Nick Longworth, dedicated a war memorial for those members of battery F., 136th field artillery, who are still alive. Decreased members already have theirs.

"Eleven times I raised my hand to god swearing to protect my country and I am willing to take a perpetual oath so to do," the stay-at-home millionaire congressman declared.

IMPERIALIST SPIES IN SOVIET RUSSIA CAUGHT BY RED POLICE

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Oct. 30.—The sensational charge that a certain unnamed European state is plotting thru Esthonia to dynamite the military establishment railroad in the Leningrad district has been made here, following the wholesale arrest of alleged Esthonian spies.

According to the findings of the Soviet political police the Esthonian general staff sent spies to obtain information regarding military and political conditions in Russia.

Papers seized when the leader of the spies was arrested disclosed that he carried a request from the Reval representative of a certain stronger power to prepare for the wrecking of various Soviet government properties.

INTERNATIONAL LABOR DEFENSE SHOWS UP MORGAN AS PAYMASTER OF DICTATOR HORTHY'S GOVERNMENT

(I. L. D. News Service.)

In the face of the well-organized campaign, mobilizing various shades of opinion in the labor movement and among sympathetic elements in general, the Horthy agents soon realized that the interests of the bourgeois dictatorship required a more cautious and moderate policy. One of the publicity features of the International Labor Defense demonstrations that hurt Hungary's interests most was the stressing of the fact that the Horthy government known in Europe as the "Hangman's government" is supported by funds supplied by the house of Morgan and that the real finance minister of the Horthy government is an agent of Morgan by the name of Jeremiah Smith.

The Hungarian embassy in Washington was bombarded with telegrams from all over the country. At first the Horthy officials in Washington were disposed not to take the campaign seriously but when Senator Borah, chairman of the foreign relations committee of the United States senate in a telegram to James P. Cannon, secretary of the International Labor Defense—announced his intention of acting in the matter the Hungar-

CONSERVATIVE ADVOCATES OF HIGH TARIFF AGAINST U. S. SWEPT INTO POWER IN CANADIAN LANDSLIDE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

OTTAWA, Ontario, Oct. 30.—Yesterday's election returns, altho partially complete, show unmistakeably that the W. L. MacKenzie-King government has been defeated and that the conservative party, led by Arthur Meighen, ex-premier of Canada, is swept into power.

This means a Canadian policy of a high tariff barrier against the United States, as against the liberal demands for a low tariff. Returns are only semi-official, but they are such as to have forced the resignation of the King government. Returns show eight members of the present cabinet defeated for re-election, hence there is nothing left for MacKenzie King to do but present the resignation of his cabinet.

CHICAGO LABOR HIT AVIATORS IN NO. AFRICA

Attack French War on the Riffians

ganized workers—the Communists—of France were aiding the Riffs in their struggle to gain independence. He brout out that not only are French Communists aiding the Riffs in words, but also in deeds, and that the French government has jailed one of the Communist members of the chamber of deputies for his activities against the French imperialist policy.

Manuel Gomes, secretary of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League, was applauded when he said that "nothing can destroy a powerful, resolute, determined movement of oppressed peoples for national liberation."

"But the American aviators," continued Gomes, "have a sinister significance. Here we have a situation where a nation is trying to rise, trying to find its feet. To the Riffians, these American aviators represent America.

"In the Riff we see an alignment of forces which is world-wide. All over the world, the big and powerful nations and trying to bring the weaker and more undeveloped ones under their control.

"Of all the imperialist nations, the United States is the most aggressive, the most militant, and the most powerful. During the past twenty years we have witnessed an enormous expansion of American imperialism. The United States is trying to embrace the whole world.

"But there is a strong movement against this growth of American imperialism. This movement finds its expression in the Americas in the All-America Anti-Imperialist League, whose aim is to unify and coordinate the struggle against imperialism of peoples all over the world.

"The All-America Anti-Imperialist League will fight against the Monroe doctrine, which gives the United States the right to exploit and oppress the nations of Latin-America.

"The All-America Anti-Imperialist League will fight the so-called 'peaceful penetration' of China.

"The All-American Anti-Imperialist League will fight for equal social, economic and political rights for Negroes, and for all races.

"These ends cannot be attained unless we overthrow the powers that rule America.

"The All-America Anti-Imperialist League was founded less than a year ago. It now has living sections organized in Cuba, Mexico, Central America, and a section is growing up in the Phillipines.

"I am going to ask all those of you who want to fight American imperialism to join tonight in forming a section of the All-America Anti-Iimperialist League."

Resolution Unanimously Adopted

The following resolution presented by Manuel Gomes, secretary of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League, was unanimously adopted by the meeting protesting against the use of American aviators in the war on the Riffs.

American adventurers and soldiers of fortune, who were trained as aviators in the great imperialist slaughter of 1914-18, have crossed over into Africa and are fighting on the side of the French robbers in their war against the brave Riffian tribes struggling for independence.

American Hypocrisy.

While these aviators now fighting Abd-el-Krim were still in America preparing to go to Africa, and while the United States government was still able to stop them, it made no effort to prevent their going. Some of the aviators received passports from the government after they had specifically declared their intention of fighting the Riffians.

No amount of hypocritical evasion can conceal the hostility of the United States government to the national movements of oppressed peoples. We call the attention of the American workers, and of all lovers of liberty, to this fact.

New Spirit Arises.

Among the darker races all over the world, there has risen a new wave of the struggle for freedom. In the Riff country of northern Africa, in Mesopotamia and China, in India and the Phillipine Islands, in Jamaica, Porto Rico, Panama, and the other countries to the south of us, the people are demanding the right to conduct their own affairs free from the interference of foreign powers.

We declare that it is the duty of all intelligent, liberty-loving Negroes in this country to stand by their brothers in foreign countries in these struggles.

We declare that the reason France and Spain are warring or the Riffs is because they want tc bring the rich natural resources o Morocco under the control of the French and Spanish monopolists The soil of Morocco is rich in tin, copper and zinc. Its northern shore makes the approach of ships easy The natives of Morroco can be made to work in factories, on railroads and in mines for very little wages It is because of these things that Abd-el-Krim's tribesmen are being slaughtered on the soil of northern Africa.

We declare that American aviators by fighting on the side of the French are helping the cause of robbery and oppression. We further declare that if the United States government really wished to stop the aviators from going—as it now pretends—it could easily have done so by refusing to issue passports. We therefore protest against the criminal connivance of the United States government.

We further declare that the scheme of American capitalists to spend millions of dollars in Liberia for the purpose of establishing monopoly-controlled rubber plantations and factories, is a scheme which will benefit only the American money lords, and will cause the Negroes of Liberia endless suffering. Such a scheme is sure to lead to just such oppressive wars as the French are now waging in the Riff.

Africa For the Africans.

We declare that Africa should belong to the African people, not to a small band of foreign plunderers.

We demand that the American government now take whatever steps are necessary to recall the American aviators from Morocco. We demand further that the United States government publicly relinquish all privileges of "extra-territoriality" that it enjoys in Morocco, as well as all similar privileges that have been wrenched from the weaker peoples in other parts of the world.

Against the robber policies of France, Spain, England and the United States! Hands off Morocco! Liberty for the oppressed peoples of Africa, Asia, and Latin-America!

C. T. Chi, in his speech following Manuel Gomez, greeted the assembled workers and greeted the American Negro Labor Congress in the name of the workers of China.

He then went on to describe the penetration of China by the imperialists in the following words:

"Peaceful Penetration."

"Missionaries and scientists in the name of god and civilization, penetrated into depths of Asia, disturbing the tranquil life of the people. The genius of the scientists and the fervor of the religious missionaries were followed by the money grabbing desires of business men and blood thirsty ambitions of 'benevolent' governments.

"Fearing that they might be punished for their deceit, when they got to heaven (if they still believe in the istence of such a place) they in- nted a few phrases to justify their tions. 'The White Man's Burden,' he Crusade of Civilization" and the dless train of bunk that followed, . f these are intended as catching hrases.

Phrases Deceive None.

"Friends, these phrases deceive one. They might claim that, thru eir missionaries they saved our uls, but friends, let me assure you, hat what they have done is to lose heirs."

After describing the Amritsar massacre of India and the manner in hich the imperialist nations have attempted to crush India, he then went on to analyze the causes of the recent Shanghai strike.

"We are bound in every side by unjust treaties, fraudulently concluded our disadvantage. Using the abundant material and the cheap labor hich we can easily provide, these nperialist money grabbers made millons with little effort, much deceit nd plenty of inhumanity.

Labor Strikers.

"The Shanghai incident had its origin in a labor strike, and the labor trike was the direct result of the unearable labor conditions in the forign cotton factories of Shanghai."

Imperialism Passing.

"Friends, the world of imperialism passing," declared Chi in his closg appeal for unity of all workers. he movement in China, the war in Morocco, the war in Turkey—numerous movements in various parts of the world—and the trend of public opinon of enlightened circles, all augur the ill fate and coming end of imperialism.

"We don't have to be afraid that imperialism will stay. It will meet its doom sooner or later. What we want to do is to hasten its death, to wash it away forever from the earth.

Unite in One Camp!

"Let us join hands with all enemies of imperialism, disregarding race, creed or nationality. Let the oppressed people as well as all enemies of oppression, whether white or black, unite into one camp and face every imperialist activity with uniform vigilancy."

Fifty Applications Signed.

Applications that had been passed out at the beginning of C. T. Chi's speech were collected at the end of his speech. Fifty of the workers present signed the applications and it is the intention of this section to hold many more demonstrations of the type that was held.

Congress Donates Hall.

The All-America Anti-Imperialist League had issued circular letters calling on all Negro, Chinese, Hindu and white workers to participate in the protest meeting against the participation of the American aviators in Morocco and intervention in Haiti and China. The American Negro Labor Congress donated the use of the meeting hall to the All-America Anti-Imperialist League as its contribution.

NEW YORK LEFT-WING COMMITTEE TEACHES AMALGAMATED OFFICIALS HOW INJUNCTIONS ARE MADE VOID

By ART SHIELDS,
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—New York's hardest strike of the season had its most dramatic day with two mass demonstrations at the corner of 12th street and Fourth avenue where the twin International Tailoring Co. and J. L. Taylor & Co., filling most of the block, rise in stone and steel and glass for 12 stories.

The first demonstration rushed a supposedly air-tight injunction off its feet, for the present at least, and in the doing of it brot forth one of the wildest police clubbings this reporter has seen. The second took place an hour later when thousands of celebrating workers welcomed the march into their midst of 18 foremen and 85 key-position workers in all from the plant that has been fighting the union four and a half months.

Leading the first demonstration was the Amalgamated Action Committee, an unofficial left wing movement that advocates open defiance of injunctions. Organizing the second demonstration was the official body of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union itself. When the International Tailoring Co. got what it considered the tightest injunction New York City has known in a labor case the union's tactics were to continue the fight but officially to confine its picketing to the J. L. Taylor & Co., an allied concern and located in the same building, and in this course they were technically endorsed by a court when arrests had been made.

This morning at seven there were eight or ten Amalgamated pickets bearing the Taylor strike placards and more than that many policemen. One picket, however peaceful, is always considered to justify as many policemen as possible. The scene was quiet, but not for long. At 7:30 the left wing marchers came, several hundred strong, bearing fore and aft big red lettered placards emblazoned with the name of the International Tailoring Co., which Judge Churchill has ordered not be advertised as a struck firm by the union.

More police came and rushed the new pickets violently when the latter insisted on going on down Fourth avenue. They began striking with fists and the butts of their sticks but as the workers attempted to stand firm the police swung at full arm length, flailing viciously in six-foot arcs at the buttocks, sides and legs of the pickets. One of the leaders, Sam Lipsin, collapsed, and was taken to St. Marks Hospital. Women's screams rose in the air as the police beat them viciously. Most of the strikers gave way, police tearing after them with flailing clubs. But several managed to hold their positions for a time, among these Ben Gitlow, a member of the Amalgamated cutters' local and a leader of the left wing, also Workers Party candidate for mayor. Gitlow is a tall, heavy man and the police chose the shorter workers around him for their targets. One girl, Jennie Cohen, was arrested and later released in court, but the arrest was on an ordinary police charge, not under the injunction which was a dead letter for the day.

There was excitement about half an hour later when 85 workers walked out. Raymond Reiss, vice-president, general manager and so on, of the millionaire owner lost his head and pulled a gun. But without avail.

Only three cutters are left, no button hole workers and the key craft positions generally are out of fix. There are still left about 300 workers in the New York plant out of the thousand needed in the busy season, but the absence of key workers has practically halted production. The Amalgamated has been feeding strikers with the assistance of voluntary local union assessments amounting to thousands of dollars.

Calls for International Race Congress

darker-skinned peoples in the colonies of imperialism everywhere."

Corrine Robinson, delegate from the Young Workers' League, presented a resolution on the role of the Negro youth in America out of which the following excerpts are taken:

"When thousands of young Negroes entered the industries of the north during the migration, the bosses did their best to stir up racial prejudices between the young Negro and the young white workers. They did this because they wanted to keep the young Negroes working for even lower wages than the young white workers. These young Negroes who are discriminated against in this way are forced to work for the lowest imaginable wages and in certain shops and industries young Negroes are employed almost entirely in an effort to keep the wages down and increase the profits.

"These young Negro workers get as low as $10 to $15 a week, the young Negro girls and women getting nearer the lower scale. On this they are expected to live. These young Negroes who are being forced to work in greater and greater numbers on account of the low wages their parents receive are an important source of cheap labor for the bosses and are used by them in cutting down the wages of the other workers."

Negro Children and Child Labor.

"Most of the Negro child laborers are found in the south, where records show that almost 1,000,000 Negro children of school age were not enrolled in the public schools.

"Not only is segregation the common practice in the public schools of both the south and the north, but especially in the south, the states discriminate against the Negro school children thru unequal expenditures for education, etc.

"For example, in South Carolina, there is only $5 invested in school property for Negroes while there is $60 invested for the whites. Similarly there is only $8 invested in school property for Negroes to $74 for white in Louisiana, and much the same in the other states thruout the south. . . . The school term is shortened so that the Negro children can be sent to work in the cotton fields as early as possible. . . . . In the north, the most marked discrimination consists in segregation, housing of Negro children in the oldest, most unsafe and unsanitary school buildings and inferior educational arrangements of all kinds.

International Labor Defense Shows Up the House of Morgan

ian embassy sat up and took notice.

In addition to the cable and telegram bombardment the I. L. D. organized a giant nation-wide campaign of mass meetings and demonstrations. The Hungarian embassy in New York was picketed and the police of the Hearst protege Mayor Hylan, aided the Horthy government by arresting many of the demonstrators.

Change of Methods.

When news of these American demonstrations reached Budapest it is reported that Horthy decided to make a concession to world opinion by granting the prisoners a civil trial. Whether this is true or not is hard to determine just now. One thing is certain, Horthy has not relinquished his intention to murder Rakosi and his comrades. The campaign to save Rakosi and his fellow workers will continue and the American working class are expected to do their share in halting Horthy's bloody hand. It should not be forgotten that the dollars of Wall Street are paying the salaries of the executioners.

NEW YORK, ATTENTION!

The Greek local, New York, has its annual entertainment and ball on Tues., Nov. 3 (election day), at Palm Garden, 58th street, between Lexington and Third avenues, New York, at 8:30 p. m. The proceeds will go to Empros, the official organ of the Greek bureau, Workers Party.

The program is rich and picturesque with a drama and comedy in Greek, oriental dances, songs, etc. Comrade Ben Gitlow will speak. Don't miss it. Admission 50 cents.

To Pray for "Peace."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Churches were urged to observe Sunday, Nov. 8, and Wednesday, Nov. 11, as special days on which to devote their efforts to propagandizing for world peace and, international relationship.

Nobel Peace Award Goes Begging Among Flunkeys of World's Imperialists

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the Nobel Committee, that has the awarding of the so-called Nobel Peace Prize, announces that it is reserving its decision until next year, confessing that in all the world it cannot find any organization or individual worthy of this alleged honor. This is easily understood, since the committee confines itself merely to that part of the world under the domination of war-breeding capitalism, and then only to the profit-hungry capitalist class, that foments wars to advance its ambitions.

This is the sixth time that the committee has missed in its selections since the world war broke in 1914. But its selections are more interesting than its failures to select.

In 1906 it picked Theodore Roosevelt, the embodiment of American jingoism, who won his reputation as a killer in the Spanish-American war, that marked the real entry of the United States on the blood be-spattered stage of world imperialism. In 1912 the "honor" fell on Elihu Root, legal adviser of Wall Street. In 1918 it went to Woodrow Wilson, who sent the United States into the European war, obedient to the dictates of the international financiers. Then in 1921 the committee picked Hjalmar Branting, the late "socialist" premier in Sweden, who tried to betray the workers into the "Black International" of capitalism, the League of Nations, an enemy of the Bolshevik revolution in Russia. This is surely a fine selection of stool pigeons of the profit bandits of international big business. It is typical of all the rest.

Alfred Bernhard Nobel, who furnished the gold to provide these "peace prizes," was a Swedish chemist and engineer, who spent his lifetime inventing and manufacturing deadly explosives. Thru the manufacture of dynamite and the exploitation of the Baku oil fields in the Near East, he amassed a great fortune that made this possible. He declared his peace award was "to be given to the person or society that renders the greatest service to the cause of international brotherhood, in the suppression or reduction of standing armies, or in the establishment or furtherance of peace congresses."

If this peace committee had looked to the world of revolutionary labor in 1914, 1915 and 1916, it would have found many individuals and organizations fighting for international brotherhood. There was Vladimir Ilyitch Lenin, exiled in Switzerland; Karl Liebknecht in a German prison, later martyred; and the Zimmerwald Conference that raised its appeal to world labor, demanding that it recognize its own fraternity and quit fighting the battles of the imperialist masters.

The opportunities for selection are even greater today. At no time in all the world's history have there been such organizations, fighting for the brotherhood of mankind, as the workers have established themselves in the Communist International, the Red International of Labor Unions and the Young Communist International. Voices are raised in every land against the imperialist bloodshed, Doriot, in France; Saklatvala, in England; Rakosi, in Hungary; Lanzutski, in Poland, with hosts of others.

But those who award the Nobel prizes help lead the attack on these militant fighters for the only world peace possible; demanding that these soldiers of peace be sent either to prison or to the executioners' block.

International brotherhood and world peace will not be furthered because a profiteer in explosives hands out prizes to the intellectual and political flunkeys of his own class. It will come when the workers demand a new world eceonomy based on Communism, that comes to blot out the present war-breeding capitalist social order.

ized" warfare) tore ghastly holes in the bodies of pedestrians, while whole sections were gassed with the most poisonous fumes. Thousands upon thousands of corpses litter the streets, where they are still laying in heaps, a putrefying mass. The systematic slaughter is still going on outside the city and was only arrested by the counter offensive of the exiles and the tribesmen combining their forces and trying to win back the city laid waste by the agents of French imperialism.

Islam Stirs Restlessly

Despite the activities of the censorship and the pen valets who have tried to hush up the atrocities by modifying their first stories, the news of the bombardment of Damascus is spreading like wildfire thruout the world of Islam, and everywhere the rule of European and American capital has become the object of new and deeper hatreds than ever before.

Revolutionists observing developments among the Mohammedans in Asia, Asia Minor and Africa are elated over the turn of affairs and see in the reaction to the shelling of Damascus and the murders in the streets the possibilities of an issue that may unite the colonial and semi-colonial natives in one mass upheaval that will result in expelling from their boundaries all agents of American and European capital, thus breaking the back bone of the imperialist power of both Britain and France and seriously threatening the power of the United States in this part of the world.

Powers Protest

The French general, Serrail, in his zeal for murder, permitted his forces to indulge in excesses not only against the native population, but reliable reports state that he made the blunder of neglecting to tell British and American inhabitants that he was going to reduce the city to ruins, hence they remained while the French evacuated. As a result a number of Americans and Englishmen were slaughtered in the general butchery.

The British press is extremely critical of the massacre and the American government has sent an official protest to France.

Gitlow Buttons Out.

The whole party must be mobilized for the Saturday and Sunday tag days. An attractive button, with a photo of Benjamin Gitlow in black and white and the name of the party and its emblem in red, the whole in a red circular frame, has been prepared by the district office in thousands. All of the section headquarters, mentioned above, will have their boxes containing thousands of buttons and will be open all day Saturday and Sunday for the distribution of these buttons.

By Monday morning, the eve of election, every worker in the city of New York must be wearing a "Gitlow for Mayor" button and must have been made to understand, thru personal conversation, what wearing of this button means. Everything must be set aside for Saturday and Sunday in favor of the final distribution of literature ando the two big button tag days. Tag workers will wear a ribbon bearing the words "Write in the name of Gitlow for mayor."

U. S. Imperialism in New Oppressive Acts Against the Haitians

Press dispatch reported that "State department officials see no reason to expect serious trouble in Haiti even if President Borno should decide, as he probably will, and has the costitutional authority to do, to withhold the call until October 1927." This prediction was fulfilled by President Borno on October 10, and Washington has decided not to interfere.

Military Rule

Political life in Haiti, however, is completely dominated by American interests. The United States controls the republic through a detachment of marines, an American-controlled constabulary, an American financial adviser, and an American receiver-general who collects all customs revenues. Above all there is an American high commissioner, at present General John H. Russell of the U. S. marine corps.

Haiti's political subjection to the United States is intimately connected with the investments in that republic of the National City Bank of New York, a Rockefeller intitution. Six times during 1914 and 1915 the state department made direct overtures to Haiti to obtain control of its customs in order to guarantee American investments. When these overtures were turned down, American battleships and marines, commanded by Admiral Caperton, invaded the republic and assumed control.

A Rockefeller Game

The "legal" foundation of America's control rests on the treaty of 1915, which was later extended to 1936. The treaty was forced on the Haitian legislature after Admiral Caperton seized the capital and the leading ports and declared martial law. Subsequently an American financial adviser appointed by President Harding brought pressure to bear on Haiti to pass laws giving the National City Bank financial control. Haiti owes the New York intitution $16,000,000. Furthermore, Haiti's national bank and railroad are both in the hands of the National City Bank.

Over 3,000 practically unarmed Haitians were killed during the process of turning Haiti into a protectorate of the United States.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 30—Frank Schnelle, 9, dumb, blind and unable to walk as a result of an accident in which his stepfather, and two other men were killed on last Christmas eve, was today awarded $15,000 damages instead of the $100,000 asked of the Michigan Central railway in federal court here.

BRITISH LABOR MAY BE FORCED INTO REBELLION

Purcell Tells of Big Struggle Coming

By ESTHER LOWELL.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.—(FP)—All the elements for revolution exist in England in case the miner demands are refused, A. A. Purcell, British fraternal delegate to the 45th American Federation of Labor convention, told The Federated Press before his departure for Mexico. But whether there will be revolution depends upon the report of the coal commission.

There are three answers the government commission may give the miners union, Purcell sees. The worst is to ask for more time. The second is a partial grant which would help for awhile and would be a victory. But in case the inquiry results in a flat refusal, Purcell refuses to predict what may come.

"There are all the elements for revolution," he replied to a direct question. "On the one hand there are the more stable unions of railwaymen and building trades workers who have maintained their wage scales but who know that if the miners' wages are cut theirs will follow. There is the ever-growing army of unemployed and of course the miners will take no such denial of their demands."

The semiofficial O. M. S. (Organization for the Maintenance of Supplies) is really a second line defense, Purcell believes, due to government fear that the army and navy won't remain loyal. There was a terrific uproar when a cut in pay was threatened for lower deck navy men and the government was forced to back down.

The British Trades Union congress seems much more democratic to Purcell than any organization he has seen in America so far. British women workers are better organized than American women workers, Purcell observes. Married women particularly respond to unionization in England. The miners and their wives, many of them in Purcell's parliamentary constituency, are active in the Labor party together.

The British labor movement is looking to the colonies and dominions of the British empire with more interest than ever, according to Purcell. The Trades Union Congress selected a committee to get more information about India and China particularly their developing labor movements. The donation of $500 which British labor sent to the Indian railway strikers is being used, after the strike ended, for organization work, Purcell reports. He repeatedly refers to the internationalism of capital, which produces more and more in the country of cheapest labor.

Purcell will speak at trade union gatherings around the country under direction of Morton Johnson, Chicago electrical worker. The British delegate's first date is Kansas City, Nov. 4.

INHERITANCE TAX HITS ONLY ONE OUT OF A HUNDRED, BUT SHOWS WEALTH CONCENTRATION

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Repeal of the federal inheritance tax would not benefit one heir in a hundred, as revealed in a report of the commissioner of internal revenue on taxes from that source in 1924. Less than 1 per cent of the adults dying in that year left as much as $50,000 while the proportion subject to the tax after deduction of the $50,000 specific exemption is much smaller.

The report shows 12,403 estates with a gross value of $2,350,248,804, an average of $189,490 apiece, but only 9,315 were large enough to be subject to the tax. Invested at 5 per cent these estates would furnish an average income of more than $9,000 a year or about 5 times the average wage of a skilled tradesman. The inheritance tax takes less than 3 per cent of the average estate, hardly enough to keep the beneficiaries from living on the backs of the rest of the population.

The 530 estates with a net value of over $450,000, altho only about 4 per cent of the total number, contained over 50 per cent of the total net value reported after all allowable deductions. Estates with a net value of more than $1,000,000, the millionaires, numbered 180 or 1¼ per cent of the total number but contained nearly one-third of the net value. Narrowing to the peak of the pyramid there were 25 estates of more than $3,000,000, less than 1-5 of 1 per cent of the total number but 16 per cent of the total net value.

The concentration of wealth is shown by the following table which divides the taxable estates into classes according to size with the total net value of the estates in each class:

1924 Net Taxable Estates	Number	Net Value
No net taxable estate	3,088	....
Net under $50,000	5,166	$ 99,501,809

Red Army Is Reduced to New Low Record; Lower Than Its Foes

The Red army numbers 562,000 men, according to official figures, compared with a standing army of 1,350,000 under the czar's regime. Russia, with a population of over 130,000,000, has an army that is smaller by 183,000 men than that of France whose population is only 39,000,000. The Red army is also smaller by 17,000 than the combined armies of the border states, Esthonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland and Rumania, whose combined population is 50,000,000.

CANNOT EXPECT LOANS FROM BANKRUPTS, SAYS COMMISSAR OF FINANCE

MOSCOW, Oct. 30.—Russia's national debt policy was outlined by Commissar of Finance Sokolnikoff. Speaking of the debts of the czarist regime he said:

"The practice now popular abroad is to recognize all debts and pay none. We have a different policy. We state we will not pay, then tell how much we can pay. The purpose of this policy is to pay the least amount possible of the old debts.

"We hope to come to terms with the French but when we ask for loans anywhere in Europe we are met by a government which cannot lend anything because Europe lives largely on America."

Take Out Your Paper and Pencils and Write to Our Moscow Pioneer

Dear American Pioneers:—I am a pioneer of the Moscow division, I wish to be put in touch with one of your divisions to acquaint you with the organization of youthful Pioneers of the first workers' republic, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. From the first of August 1923 to January 1924 I was a member of the Pioneers in Harbin, Manchuria, the Chinese authorities there did not allow us to meet each other, sing revolutionary songs or to wear our red ties. Many arrests were made and many were beaten. Besides the beatings of the police, we were often beaten by the "Scouts." Notwithstanding we did not waver knowing that a time would come when we would have a Soviet government there too. When I came to Moscow I at once noticed the great movement of the Youth. In Moscow alone there 60,000 pioneers and this figure increases day by day.

During summer the Pioneers leave for the camps where they gain strenght and health and come back when summer is over hale and strong. Each division (a division contains 40-50 members) has its own club where they study and hold meetings. Almost every club has its own shops (carpenter, mechanical, shoe, and book binders.) The Pioneers work in the shops so that when they grow up they would be able to have a profession. Every one from eleven to sixteen years old can join the Pioneers.

Write about the American organisation of the youthful Pioneers and I will publish everything in our magazine of the youthful Leninist Pioneers The Drum.

UNDERSEA SHIPS SWARM WATERS DURING NIGHT

Preparations for Next War Speed Up

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 30.—The waters at the mouth of Naragansett Bay literally swarm with submarines operating at night off Block Island. This revelation of the vast naval maneuvers of the government in building up a powerful navy to consolidate by force the conquests of American finance capital at the investigation of the sinking of the submarine S-51 came from an unexpected source.

Roland Litchfield, second mate aboard the steamship H. F. Dimo, testifying before the naval board of inquiry probing the sinking of the submarine, S-51, with a loss of 33 lives, said that these submarines are nightly being operated recklessly and carelessly.

Came Near Ramming One.

His ship recently almost rammed a submarine without lights in the vicinity of the spot where the steamship City of Rome ran down the S-51, Litchfield said.

Litchfield's testimony was put into the records after objections by Lieutenant Commander Charles A. Lockwood, one of the board, had been overruled by the presiding officer.

Later Captain John H. Diehl of the City of Rome was refused permission to change his testimony that for three minutes before the crash he saw the lights on the S-51 instead of 17 minutes as he testified.

French Authorities Receive Protest of Diplomatic Corps

DAMASCUS, Oct. 30.—The consular corps in Damascus sent a protest to the French authorities for their action in the shelling of Damascus.

When the French had decided to shell the Musselman quarter they immediately had their nationals evacuate Damascus, before the bombardment. The nationals of other nations were not given the same consideration, reads the complaint, and thus nationals of other countries and the natives of the city were shelled.

Newspapers Grow in Soviet Russia; More Than 2,000,000 Daily

Newspaper circulation in Russia shows a marked increase. Total circulation is over 2,000,000 copies. Isvestia, official soviet government daily, has the widest circulation, 500,000 copies. Pravda, Communist party daily comes a close second with 420,000. There are 500 periodicals, 430 in Russian and 70 in other languages.

ONE OF COOLIDGE'S "BEST PEOPLE" GOES DIPPY OVER GIRLS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Another eminent christian gentleman, of the type President Coolidge claims are the foundation of the republic, has become too religious, by following too closely the literal interpretation of the so-called holy bible. This gentleman's name is Wilson Johnson. He is 40 years old. He is also the superintendent of a children's orphanage in Brooklyn. Children without parents are placed in his care. He has spent his life openly and brazenly polluting their minds with baptist faith. Now he is held on $10,000 bail for polluting their bodies. He is held on a charge of criminal assault against Elizabeth Sulliva, a little 6-year old girl. Five other girls between 12 and 15, inmates of the home, told stories of Johnson attacking them. We could not learn whether his ancestors were New England puritans or not.

Furriers to Hold Important Meeting Sunday, November 1

The progressive group in the Chicago Furriers' Local 45, have invited the whole membership of the local to hear their program and what the left wing stands for in the trade union movement as a whole. A meeting is to be held on Sunday, November 1, at 6:30 p. m., at Northwest Hall, 2403 North avenue, corner Western avenue, to which every furrier is invited, with no admission charged.

A fine musical program and recitations have been arranged by Brother Goldstein of Local 45, and the speakers will be Earl R. Browder, the well-known labor editor, and progressive members of Local 45. No member of the Furriers' Union should miss this important meeting. Remember the date and the place—Northwest Hall, November 1, 6:30 p. m.

Co-operatives Started by Lithuanian Workers

Civil Liberties Union Cites Precedents

NEW YORK—(FP)— Gov. Friend W. Richardson of California was asked to pardon Charlotte Anita Whitney by the American Civil Liberties union immediately upon the U. S. supreme court decision that it had no jurisdiction in the case.

"The refusal of the supreme court to take jurisdiction is a blow to the advocates of free speech who looked to this case for a decision that would affect the criminal syndicalism and sedition laws of 35 states," the union comments. "This case revives the medieval doctrine of guilt by association. There were no other convictions of members of the Communist Labor party except in California, where the criminal syndicalism law has been used more vigorously and more frequently than in any other state."

Gov. Al Smith of New York and Gov. Len Small of Illinois pardoned all Communists convicted about the same time as Miss Whitney. Gov. Richardson is urged "as a matter of public policy that it is senseless at this late day, five years after the alleged offense, to lock up a woman against whom the only charge was her membership in what was properly supposed at the time to be a legal political organization," says the Civil Liberties union.

Mitchell's Court Martial

The trial of Col. William Mitchell before a military court in Washington has far greater significance than establishing the fact whether Mitchell, in his attacks upon the army and navy, did or did not violate military discipline.

It cannot be separated from the frantic development of the military power of the United States. At a time when millions upon millions of dollars are being spent to build up every branch of the army and navy, when experiments are being conducted on land and sea, and in the air above and the depths below, when the United States army and navy operates in every part of the world, it is reasonable to expect bitter conflicts within the service. This is to be expected all the more at the present time as the technique of warfare is undergoing marked changes.

Mitchell, as an individual is just the ordinary, swaggering, bombastic, ignorant military bully, with an inordinate ambition for power and, like his type thruout the world, he loves the spotlight of publicity. Like all small calibre military puppets he imagines his particular branch of the service is more important than any other. His mentality and training fit him for the role he is now playing—that of publicity agent for the manufacturers of aircraft who want a large slice of the military appropriations fund for their own profit With the backing of these "patriots for profit," Mitchell indulges in a series of sensational charges against the conduct of the army. Personally he wants a unified air service, independent of the army and navy, with his own clique of officers at the head of it. The manufacturers of aircraft also desire this separation.

In his campaign for a unified air service Mitchell is supported by that branch of the reptile press than is linked with the air-craft patriots, anxious to get a large slice of the military appropriations fund. The Hearst publications, in particular, endeavor to lionize this puppet.

On the other hand the publicity attendant upon the charges against the military machine have caused Wall Street, thru the White House, to act. An investigation independent of the army and navy was ordered by Coolidge. Since the armed forces of the United States exist for the specific purposes of defending the interests of finance capital at home and abroad it was but logical that the head of President Coolidge's committee should have been Dwight L. Morrow, a partner in the House of J. P. Morgan & Co.

Tho the manufacturers of air craft will strive to get a large juicy slice of the military appropriations melon, tho the arms and ammunition manufacturers will find military "authorities" to express in terms of exalted patriotism their special interests, tho the manufacturers of armor plate will prove that battleships are the backbone of national defense, the agents of the House of Morgan can be depended upon to formulate a program that will aim to make the military might of the United States formidable enuf to back with force of arms the economic power of Wall Street's billions.

And the military marionettes who stalk thru the newspaper columns in spectacular array and the special interests that back the various groups will be forced to yield to the desires of the House of Morgan, whose interests transcend any and all of them.

The working class will be expected supinely to submit to the dictatorship of the government at Washington, which is itself the mere executive committee of the capitalist class.

The Workers (Communist) Party, as the vanguard and defender of the interets of the working class, will wage a relentless campaign to unmask and discredit the whole military clique before the workers so that, altho the most ambitious plans may be perfected, the one essential element of all military ventures will be lacking—the human cannon fodder.

Can Debs Take a Revolutionary Stand?

Eugene V. Debs, who, at times during his thirty years of prominence in the labor movement, has shown flashes of revolutionary fervor is the sole stock-in-trade of the bankrupt socialist party. Debs and his past reputation constitute the sole support of that party. None of the prominent leaders of the socialists have any standing in the labor movement, so they must lean upon Debs.

But one cannot always live on the acts of the past. Debs has for a long time disgraced his previous record by meekly following the socialists into every treacherous path they found it most convenient to tread in the betrayal of the working class. He has had numerous chances to take a stand for the working class and against the socialist party traitors.

He now has another chance. This time he is confronted with the choice of supporting a working class candidate in the New York elections—Ben Gitlow—or remaining silent while the fakirs around Norman Thomas try to split the working class vote.

The executive committee of District No. 2, Workers (Communist) Party, has wired to Debs at his home in Terre Haute, Indiana, requesting him to use his influence to rally the workers in support of Gitlow, who is the only working class candidate, running on a working class ticket and whose name has arbitrarily been removed from the ballot by Tammany politicians.

The Communists have said to Debs:

> We have proposed a united labor ticket so that all workers may be combined in common campaign against capitalist oppression. We have gone to extent of expressing willingness to withdraw our ticket in favor of one common united labor ticket if socialist party will do likewise. The only way to strike a blow against arbitrary use of government against workers is by supporting candidacy of Gitlow. The workers of New York will judge your devotion to revolutionary principles by action you take.

There are but a few days left in which to respond to this appeal. Debs, who likes to talk much about universal brotherhood, justice, liberty and other shibboleths of a by-gone age, now has an opportunity to show whether he has a modicum of revolution in his make-up or whether he is just a sentimental religionist basking in the limelight while supporting the vilest elements of labor reaction in the country—the socalist party leaders.

MOSCOW TOILERS PROTEST HORTHY WHITE TERROR

British Delegation Joins Protest

MOSCOW, Oct., 30.—An immense meeting of the Hungarian and Russian workers took place in the hall of the Trade Union House on the initiative of the Moscow Trade Union Council as a protest against the persecution of the opposition in the Hungarian trade unions by the bureacratic leaders' and against the arrest of revolutionary workers and leaders of the Communist Party of Hungary, Rakosi, Weinberger, etc. The splendid hall was filled to overflowing, over 5,000 workers being present.

The presidium of the meeting consisted of leaders of the Russian trade union movement, one time leaders of the Hungarian trade unions and representatives from the Moscow factories.

The one time chairman of the National Metal Workers' Union of Hungary, Bajaki, spoke upon the present situation of the working class in Hungary, upon the criminal tactics of the Hungarian social democratic leaders in the trade unions, the mass expulsions, and the participation of the Hungarian social-democracy in the police provocation, the arrest of Rakosi and the persecution of the leaders of the socialist workers party. In the meantime the chairman informed the meeting of the arrival of the British trade union leaders, Hicks and Citrine, who were greeted with enthusiastic cheers.

After speeches of protest by several workers, including a non-party Hungarian worker, Melnitchansky, spoke in the name of the Moscow Trade Union Council. He pointed out that the Russian trade unions had never expelled the opportunists, but that the opportunist leaders had conducted a systematic campaign of expulsions against revolutionary workers.

Hicks took the floor amidst stormy applause. He condemned the action of the Hungarian trade union bureacrats, of the Horthy regime and the whole terrorist system of capitalism and demanded a struggle against the persecutions and for the international unity of the working class.

After the speeches of the representatives of the Moscow shops and factories a resolution was adopted unanimously condemning the Horthy government and its tortures, and the social-democratic trade union bureaucracy. The resolution demanded the sending of a delegation from the Trade Union Council to Hungary to enquire into the situation, and plan measures against the persecutions. The meeting ended with cheers for the arrested working class leaders, Rakosi, Weinberger, etc., as the workers left the hall singing revolutionary songs.

Paint Manufacturing Co. Head Arrested in Booze Ring Quiz

That the government investigation of a $9,000,000 beer syndicate with headquarters here has not feazed the ring entirely was indicated when federal agents, prowling the railroad yards, found a car load of bottled beer from Scranton, Pa., being unloaded.

After following loads to a hotel and to a paint manufacturing company and causing the arrest of the managers of each on charges of conspiracy to violate the prohibition law, the agents seized the rest of the carlod, consisting of barrels of the bottled product.

Politicians Mixed Up

The district attorney's office, shutting down on publicity as to what it was doing was said to have been put in possession of the names of the "higher-ups" who, it was reported, have for three years been handling beer, alcohol and slot machines in Chicago under political and police protection. The operations of the ring is said to have netted the three leaders between $200,000 and $250,000 a month.

Another "Red Invasion" Is Nipped in the Bud by Argus Eyed Police

By WALLACE T. METCALF.
Worker Correspondent.

FARRELL, Pa., Oct. 30—Arrested again by the Farrell police for distributing alleged seditious literature amongst the Negro steel workers, Andy Kovacovich, one of the defendants in the Mercer county sedition trials of 1924, was held in jail for several days and fined $25.00 and costs by Burgess Fish of Farrell. The capitalist press had visions of another big "red" uprising being staged by the Communists and pictured worker Kovacovich as "King of the Reds."

Chief of Police Lyshock, now promoted to county detective of Mercer county, led in the chase and again won additional spurs for "saving the countryside from another red invasion."

It is stated that Lyshock pointed his trusty pistol in Kovacovich's face and "demanded" to know who this "other party was" who was in Farrell directing the "red invasion."

The workers in Farrell are much pleased with the Communist literature and the Negroes are finding out that the steel barons press is handing them the same old line of "bunk" as of yore. The steel barons in Pennsylvania will have a very difficult task to stem the "Red invasion."

Immediately after the Red invasion, the K. K. K. burned a few crosses to let it be known "that law and order" still reigns in the land of steel and coal.

WHOLE FORCE OF HILLCREST MILL GOES ON STRIKE

Mill Strike Committee Is Organized

By ALBERT WEISBORD

PASSAIC, N. J., Oct. 30.—All of the workers of the Hillcrest Silk Co. of West New York, New Jersey are on strike against the attempts of the company to double the work and actually cut the pay at the same time.

The strike is a hundred per cent effective and is under the direction of the united front committee of textile workers thru its secretary, Albert Weisbord. A strong picket line has been established and it seems assured that no scab will dare to work in the place.

Workers' Demands

The workers are fighting for the following immediate demands:

1. No more than two looms under the same price conditions as before.
2. Ten per cent increase of wages for all night workers based on the day rate.
3. No more than two shifts in the mill.
4. One-quarter of a cent more per yard for every two picks more than 46 picks per inch of cloth.
5. Recognition of the mill workers' committee.

Organize Mill Committee

In a number of enthusiastic meetings the strikers have expressed their determination to fight until the last ditch for these demands. They have also expressed their determination to fight until the last ditch for these demands. They have also expressed that since they are now together that they remain organized under their own mill committee.

At their last meeting they decided to organize themselves into a mill workers' council called the Hillcrest Silk Mill Workers' Council.

Questions of permanent national organization will come up later. In the meantime the workers are behind the united front committee of textile workers.

More Arrests in Mail Theft.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 30—Other arrests may be made in connection with the sensational $600,000 mail truck robbery, Oct. 8, it was indicated following the returning by the federal grand jury of two "John Doe" and two "Jane Doe" indictments.

In addition to these indictments a true bill was returned against Genevieve Derscher, alias Jennie Guerimo, arrested in Chicago last week with her sister-in-law, Mrs. Dorothy Lee Tesciona. Mrs. Tesciona was originally indicted with the six men held here in connection with the gigantic mail theft. Bond of Mrs. Derscher was set $100,000

SAXON WORKERS ASSIST REBELS OF OTHER LANDS

Show Solidarity with Chinese

By WILLIAM F. KRUSE.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Germany—(By mail).—In little Saxony, which in 1923 held the attention of the revolutionary workers of the entire world, the spirit of international solidarity lives on in action to help rebel workers all over the world as well as in its own district. In fifty-five industrial cities and towns great meetings were held to raise money to aid the Chinese workers.

Class Solidarity Felt.

In addition and at the same time this single section of the International Workers' Aid carried on many other activities, 53 mass meetings and 12 landern-slide lectures to spread the truth about Soviet Russia and particularly the British trade union report, 30 concerts and 12 dramatic programs to raise money for strike relief.

The largest single campaign was on behalf of the striking building trades workers who for months waged a bitter struggle thruout Germany only to have it end in a compromise two weeks ago. During the fight, however, in Leipzig alone over 25,000 pounds of bread were distributed, in three days of special stress 2,500 food packages were given out, while 100 workers in direst need were maintained for an extended period during the struggle. Since the young are always the severest sufferers under privation special attention was given to the children of the strikers, 150 being harbored by other workers' families in Leipzig, 70 in Chemnitz, and similar groups in smaller centers. During the school vacation 70 Leipzig strikers' children were given free vacations among the comrades in Wendish-Luppa, and 20 from Chemnitz were cared for at Freital.

Wherever an industrial conflict raged and the workers asked the cooperation of the I. W. A. immediate action was taken. Thus with 50 "disciplined" wage slaves of the glass factories of Bischofswerda, and likewise with the locked-out textile workers of Limback and Falkenaux were supplied with food packets and 43 children from the latter town, being cared for in Chemnitz and Limbach. The Saxon children who returned from vacations among I. W. A. members in Holland and France have done yeoman service in spreading the spirit of internationalism among the younger generation, telling of the comradely sympathy of French and Dutch workers whom they had thot were enemies.

United Front on I. W. A.

These were some of the interesting facts brot out in the state conference of the International Workers' Aid recently held in Chemnitz. There were 80 delegates representing 12 subdistricts of 59 city organizations containing over two thousand individual members, and 145 organizational affiliations (factory councils, co-operatives, unions, sport clubs etc.) with about 50,000 total membership. Labor reactionaries of various stripes had tried for a time to destroy the nonpartisan character of the organization. Here Communist and social-democrat mingle on free terms with syndicalist and non-partyite. It was shown that fully 65% of the individual membership is not affiliated with the Communist Party, and in the organizations the situation is the same. But in this proletarian active relief work there is absolute unity of effort and anyone who attacks it is shown up as an agent of the capitalists. The splendid record of everyday activity and thoroly democratic control have convinced all of Saxony's workers of the sincerity, effectiveness and necessity of this united front fighting relief organization.

The delegates were all of solid proletarian stock and went at their business with cheerful determination. After a few words in English as greeting from the American workers, a detailed report on the world and domestic political situation and the work of the I. W. A. was delivered by William Muenzenberg, I. W. A. international secretary.

Wobbly in R. T. U. I.

After the meeting a one-time American "wobblie" came up to ask about certain well known figures in the I. W. W. of his day—Ettor, Giovanitti, Gurley-Flynn and Haywood. He was astounded at the tactics of the "injunctionites" and gloried in the creation of the "Committee for R. T. U. I Affiliation." The armed struggles of 1918 and 1923 shoulder to shoulder with the Communists in the very forefront of the fight had drawn him into the ranks of the party and he left with the wish that a similar experience might be granted all his American comrades, and with similar result.

Following the reports the conference took up a detailed discussion of past work and new tasks. A hopeful militant spirit pervaded the whole delegation and its 1,000 visitors, and outside on the streets a parade of "Black-White-Red" patriots gave point to the statement that the war was still on in full force.

Cigar Workers Urged to Resist Wage Cuts; to Mobilize Sunday

NEW YORK, Oct. 30—In order to decide on immediate action to resist wage cuts, Amalgamated Tobacco Workers, Local New York, summon all cigar workers, organized or unorganized, to a mass meeting at 1 p. m., Sunday, Nov. 1, at the Labor Temple, 243 East 84th St. Prominent workers in the trade are in charge of the meeting.

Leaflets have been distributed pointing out reductions in wages already put into effect and the need of the workers in the tobacco industry to follow the example of their union brothers in Tampa, Florida and in Cuba. In both these places, tobacco workers recently fought for and received substantial increases.

Due to the fact that the tobacco trade is busy and there are not enuf workers to supply its needs, the Amalgamated emphasizes the importance of demanding better conditions now.

Painters' Hazards.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30—Hazards of building trades occupations were illustrated when a blow torch ignited parafine and set two painters' clothes aflame while they were on the scaffolding of the tenth floor of the Emigrant Savings Bank on Reade street. The men shot down the scaffolding rope, one falling the last twenty feet. Both are in a hospital.

WORKERS STORM BRITISH COURT AT RED TRIAL

Saklatvala Leads Rush Thru Police Line

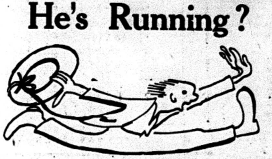
(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Oct. 30—So apprehensive is the British government of the British workers' resentment at the persecution of the Communist leaders recently put on trial in the Bow street police station, that since last Friday's demonstration by crowds of workers in front of the station, police guards has been posted in all directions, as far as half a mile from the court, to ward off marching workers parading to the scene of trial.

In spite of this, crowds gathered in dribbles and stormed the police cordon at the doors, led by Shapurji Saklatvala, member of parliament, whom Secretary Kellogg recently barred from entering the United States. Some workers fought their way past the guards and succeeded in entering the courtroom, among them Saklatvala.

When that argument begins at lunch time in your shop tomorrow—show them what the DAILY WORKER says about it.

Why D'ya Think He's Running?



It's to Save the Daily Worker!

THE little guy above, waving his life preserver in the air, is quite evidently running for all his legs are worth. In fact, he's running for his life!

The life of this breezy young militant and of all the "live wire" picture people in the pages of The DAILY WORKER, depends upon saving The DAILY WORKER—and they aren't wasting any time about it between gaps.

Of course, the "fat boys" that Gropper draws are not getting thin worrying over the prospect of losing their worst enemy. Along with O'Zim's capitalist hogs, the "poor fish," shades of Sammy Gompers as drawn by Bob Minor, and all Fred Ellis' imperialist monsters—they are belching sighs of relief at The DAILY WORKER'S plight. If they could come to life after The DAILY WORKER went out of existence—they would undoubtedly caper on its coffin.

But not a cartoon for workers, not a Communist picture, not a revolutionary design—would have a shadow of a chance to get into a newspaper if The DAILY WORKER is lost to labor. Capitalist newspapers don't print labor cartoons. They don't show the Chinese giant of labor lighting the fire-cracker of revolution; the brawny I. W. W. tying up all the ships of the sea with his single rope of international solidarity; Bill Green cracking his whip around the legs of the delegates at the A. F. of L. convention circus.

It's hard to imagine what life would be like without The DAILY WORKER. But the picture, people can't imagine it at all. It's unthinkable. And so they are running their legs off to save it.

And DAILY WORKER readers are having a hard time to keep up with them. Friday, only $244.95 was added to The DAILY WORKER rescue fund. Of this, $100.00 came from the Bulgarian branch of the Workers Party, Madison, Ill., and $50.00 from the Swedish branch of Rockford, Ill. To these two branches, The DOILY WORKER is indebted for the paper to print today's issue—three huge rolls at $50.00 each.

THE WORKERS AND TAXATION

THE greatest task of capitalism is that of increasing its rate of profit. It pursues this task with greater persistency and greater expense of effort than any other aim.

Profit is unpaid labor. Therefore, the increase of the rate of profit reduces itself to the problem of reducing the paid portion of labor in favor of the unpaid.

Capitalism is doing everything possible to increase the productivity of labor, that is, to increase the total amount of labor given by the workmen per work day. This fact brings about a mechanical reduction of the rate of wages, even tho the wages remain the same.. What really happens is that the portion of paid labor remains stationary while the total amount of labor increases, thus increasing the portion of unpaid labor. If possible capitalism also forces upon the workers the absolute reduction of the wages.

But the decrease of wages can also take an indirect form which apparently has nothing to do with conditions of employment. Such an indirect form of wage reduction is taxation.

THE capitalist state is an agency of capitalism. Ordinarily capitalism must support and maintain its agencies thru contributions made from unpaid labor which is extracted from the workers in the form of profit. But its main agency, the state (government), capitalism makes the workers support and maintain thru taxation. Thru this method the capitalists get back part of the wages they originally paid to the workers to support their institution, capitalism.

Thus we find, for instance, that thru a system of tariff, capitalism collects indirect taxes form the workers and achieves thereby, first, a support of its agency, the state, thru the workers, and second, a subsidy flowing into their pockets in the form of artificially maintained high prices for their own products. In other words, the tariff is a form of taxation which artificially extracts part of the money paid to the worker in wages, and makes it flow back into the pockets of the capitalists in the form of high profits. This example shows clearly that taxation is merely another form of wage reduction, an addition to the generally accepted method of exploitation, extracting unpaid labor.

This quality is characteristic of all form of taxation. It is for the reason that taxing the workers is a means of increasing the profits of the capitalists and their politicians insist that the main burden of taxation be borne by the exploited, that is, the workers. In all countries, the art of financing the state is in the last analysis the art of extracting the highest percentage of contributions to the upkeep of the government from the workers. The tendency therefore is everywhere: Increase the taxes of the workers, decrease the taxes of the exploiters, the rich.

THE war with its extraordinary expenses made it necessary to let the capitalist pay a portion, even tho an infinitesimal one, of the financial burden of the state. But it was clearly understood that this taxing the capitalists was merely a war measure. Since the passing of the war period there is going on an energetic struggle for the discontinuation of this practice. "Reduce the tax on the capitalists," is the slogan.

The efforts of the secretary of the treasury of the United States, the millionaire banker, Andrew Mellon, are characteristic in that respect. During several legislative periods Mellon has carried on a campaign for the radical reduction of the surtax. That such reduction could not be carried on without at the same time reducing taxation on incomes of $2,000 or thereabouts was clear. But the reduction propagated for lower incomes was practically only a nominal one, while the reduction on surtax of higher incomes was up to 40 per cent.

The reduction on high incomes was propagated on the basis that a high tax stimulates the investment by many of tax free securities. But this argument is sheer nonsense. First, there is only a limited amount of such securities. And even these are already placed in the hands of investors. High taxes and big incomes could neither reduce nor increase the total amount of such tax free securities. Second, the rate of exploitation of present day capitalism is such a high one that the rate of income of tax free securities looks ridiculous to the industrial capitalist in comparison to the one he can extract from his industrial investments in spite of high taxes.

Incidentally, big capital is constantly hollering about its patriotism. Mr. Mellon whinning about the lack of patriotism of the rich patriots shown in their endeavor to escape taxation by investing in tax free securities, throws welcome light on this patriotism.

THE Mellon plan submitted to the congress at the present legislative period provides for a radical reduction of taxes on high incomes. The proposal to eliminate completely all taxes on incomes below $5,000 is rejected by Mr. Mellon on the ground that the payment of taxes by people who derive their total income from wages or salaries gives them some sense of ownership in the government. This is a nice little joke on Mr. Mellon. The big capitalists do not need to get their sense of ownership thru taxation. Their sense of ownership is derived from the fact that their lawyers and attornies are at the same time the congressmen, the senators, the secretaries of state, and the presidents, ready and willing at any time to take their orders from these capitalists. Since the ownership of government by the big capitalists is so well established, Mr. Mellon considers it advisable not to increase this sense of ownership by making big capital pay for its property, the government.

The masses, whose sole sources of income are their wages and salaries, have no sense of ownership toward the government, not because of any lack of taxes for them to pay but because the government appears to them merely in the form of policemen, of judges or of jailers, always acting against them, never with them or for them.

Mr. Mellon proposes the following reduction:

Income	Pres't Law Total Tax	Prop'd Law Total Tax
$ 2,000	——	——
3,000	7.50	5.00
4,000	22.50	15.00
5,000	37.50	25.00
6,000	57.50	45.00
7,000	87.50	75.00
8,000	127.50	105.00
9,000	167.50	135.00
10,000	207.50	175.00
13,000	407.50	325.00
15,000	557.50	445.00
20,000	1,017.50	835.00
25,000	1,607.50	1,350.00
30,000	2,317.50	1,945.00
35,000	3,127.50	2,595.00
40,000	4,037.50	3,295.00
50,000	6,137.50	4,845.00
60,000	8,677.50	6,545.00
75,000	13,187.50	9,295.00
90,000	18,537.50	10,745.00
100,000	22,617.50	14,345.00
125,000	33,367.50	19,995.00
150,000	44,117.50	25,995.00

In incomes over $150,000 the percentage of reduction is to be the same as that on incomes of $150,000.

As against this proposal by our secretary of the treasury which, by radical reduction of the surtax on high incomes, is shifting the burden of taxation to the mass of people whose sole source of income is their wages or salaries, we, the Communists, propose a progressive scale of income tax. Incomes up to $5,000 are to be completely free of taxation; over $5,000 the percentage of income tax is to be gradually increased per thousand until the amount of income taxed is $50,000. The rate of tax on incomes of $50,000 is to be 50% of the total income which equals $25,000. On incomes over $50,000 the amount of tax will be 50% of the $50,-

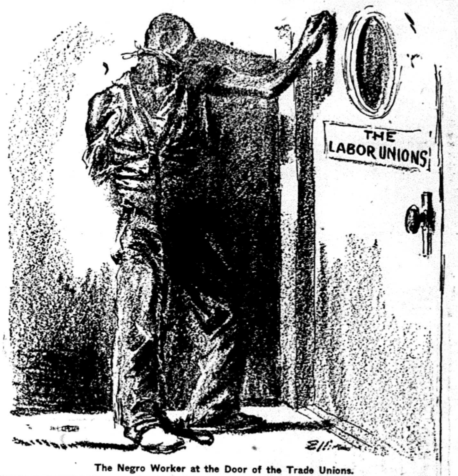
DEMANDING ADMISSION



The Negro Worker at the Door of the Trade Unions.

Call for Working Class Unity

By Richard B. Moore

The following is a stenographic report of the speech made by Richard B. Moore, delegate to the American Negro Labor Congress, from the Ethiopian Students League of New York City at the opening session, Sunday evening, Oct. 25, in the Metropolitan Community Center, 3118 Giles Ave.

BROTHER Chairman and Fellow Workers:

I deem it a high honor to be present on this occasion. We are witnessing the emergence of a class that is destined to play a significant role in the further emancipation of Negro people and also the down trodden white workers of America.

The Slave System.

You remember half a century ago when a great system of oppression ruled in America, when men were bought and sold, there appeared upon the scene that great advocate of the race, Frederick Douglass. In him the slave became vocal. When he was aroused, and when he bestirred himself, the institution was weakened, and overthrown. Tonight we are witnessing again the emergence of this race. There are many of the hirelings of the press present. They called the abolitionists all the foul names they could think of in their day. They called John Brown, Frederick Douglass and even Abraham Lincoln, altho he was not a thoro going abolitionist, they called them everything they could think of to brand them and discourage them; and now they are calling us names, and by that talk, we know that the cause we are promoting is a fair one. Well may the hirelings of the capitalist press with their inunendoes say that this is to arouse the Negro workers of the country to the true conditions that surround them; it is to arouse the white workers to the true conditions surrounding them also.

White Slaves.

May I tell you that there are white slaves in America likewise? It is true enough that white workers do not always recognize their true interests, but they will be driven to realize it. Let me tell you now, and let me tell you reporters who are here to spread the tidings of this congress to the world, that the condition of the workers is fast becoming a condition of chattel slavery like that of sixty years ago.

Must Unite.

You will only be able to free yourselves from that condition by lining up solidly as one man with the Negro workers of America. And let me tell you that the Negro group is despised, burned, discriminated against, treated as dogs, yet, when the North and the South were locked in a death struggle, it was the Negro worker who decided that struggle, who brot victory to the Union Army. And I tell you that there is a great crisis coming, for as Lincoln said, "A house divided against itself cannot stand." When Lincoln said that he was uttering a truth. Chattel slavery was destroyed. The house is again divided, and I say that the house can not stand.

The Class Struggle.

You can not build up wealth on one hand and poverty and suffering on the other and expect the house to last; there must be conflict there must be a struggle between these two extremes; between capital on the one hand and the oppressed workers on the other, determining who shall rule, and when that time comes, you white workers are not going to be able to win unless you begin now to unite with the Negro workers.

Rape Pan Handlers.

I want to say to the Negro pan handlers who are here, it is you who are willing to sell the Negro people for a mess of pottage. I want to be able to say that the Negro race can only achieve another step in the march toward emancipation by uniting with the enlightened white workers in the struggle.

You paid Negro agents who have been posing before the Negro masses as leaders, who have been selling out to politicians have caused the condition of the Negro masses to grow worse each year.

Movement from Below.

The convening of the Negro Labor Congress means that there will be a novement from below; a movement ises up out of the hearts of its peo- le. You represent the voice of the group today. It may be a small voice. The Abolitionists were small voices when they began, but a mighty movement grew out of it.

I challenge you, whether black or white if you realize the significance of this movement—I call upon you now to give your challenge to those forces that would kill and destroy this Union, bu rallying to the cause I am going to set the example myself. I am a poor young man. I am only making twenty-five dollars a week as an elevator operator in New York. I am an intelligent young man, you can see by my talk that I have intelligence; but because I refuse to sell out my interest to my superiors, I prefer to struggle with them, if necessary to die with them, rather than to aid by one little word or deed of mine the infernal program of lynching and terrorism.

Going To Fight.

I am going to fight; Out of my slender means—and I have quite some demands upon them, I am going to give five dollars to the American Negro Labor Congress. I am going to challenge every single one of you to match it. Stand up and talk turkey. I want every man and every woman in this movement who values freedom and true liberty to have a place to work in harmony. Stand up where you are—the ushers will take your collections. The forces against us are mighty and they are not going to leave a stone unturned to crush us. You remember during the war when you gave until it hurt—liberty bonds. I am challenging you now to give until it hurts.

I wonder if the press which undertook to brand this cause as Bolshevik, will go to the trouble to publish the truth about this cause, those whom they brand as Red and Communists.

During the war it was pro-German, well, this much I know that the Bolsheviks of Russia stopped lynching and other crimes of the sort in Russia and I challenge them to do the same in America. And as Patrick Henry said,"If this be treason, make the most of it."

We Want Equality.

All we want is a future; all we want is equality in every respect.

Once and for all the American Negro Labor Congress repudiates what has been said by Booker Washington in a speech he made in the South. He said "In all things purely material we are united, but in all things social we are going to be separate."

Demand Right To Live.

That is simply an erruption of the slave ulcer.

We are now demanding the rights of living, nothing more, nothing less.

Let me close with this remark, countrymen, we sue for simple justice at your hands. Naught else wil. have, nor less will take, and we know that the only way that those rights can be assured is in that union of white and black workers, which eventually will rule not only America, (this is the last country in which it will be seen), but the whole world.

I am going to quote those wonderful words of the man who was a Jew, who driven by the oppression which his race suffered investigated the causes of that oppression—analyzed the structure of the social system and discovered its driving forces and the solution for its evil—there, it is written on that sign on the wall, the challenging utterance of that greatest thinker of the 19th century—Karl Marx—"Workers of the world, unite! You have nothing to lose but your chains, but you have a whole world to gain."

Negroes Are Still Slaves

By WALT CARMON

The popular songs to the contrary, hundreds of thousands of Negro workers do NOT "want to be in Dixie"—where slavery still exists.

Today in the Southern States, where four-fifths of the twelve million Negroes in this country live, constitutional amendments restrict their right to the ballot. Tax tests, property tests, educational tests, understanding and character clauses and the famous grandfather clause, all keep the Negro working man and woman from the polls. In hundreds of cities where legal requirements are fullfilled, it would be risking his life for a Negro to approach the polls. In other cities insults and inconvenience are placed in the Negro worker's way prevent him from exercising rights of citizenship.

Jim Crowism Even in Schools

Race segregation, prevelent to a degree thruout the country, in the Southern States reaches unthinkable forms. In the trains, laws require seats, compartments and coaches for whites and Negroes. With the exception of Missouri, all the Southern States have laws separating the races in street cars. This separation extends to residential districts, parks, restaurants, theaters, etc.

To such an extent do these Jim Crow laws operate that we have a case of three white passengers entering a car marked "for whites only" in Mississippi, finding two Negro passengers in the car and suing the company for damages because the conductor would not "remove" the Negroes and being awarded $400 each in compensation for the "injury" by the Mississippi courts!

Twenty-two states requires separation of races in the public schools.

According to the Census Reports of 1920 (for the whole country), only 53.5 per cent of Negro children between the ages of 5-20 inclusive, were enrolled in school.

Though the Negro comprises one-tenth of the population of the country, reports for the same year show the Negroes as 37.3 per cent of the illiterates.

These facts are not so surprising when to the economic causes that drive Negro children into the factory and on the farm at an early age, are added the lack of schools thruout the South. The percentage of dollars spent yearly for education on a white and Negro child vary to as high as 74 to 8 dollars in Lousiana where Negro illiteracy runs to 38.5 per cent.

To these barbarities practiced on the Negro must be added 208 lynchings in the last five years.

Whether these numbers rise or fall, economic conditions take a steady toll of lives of Negro workers. Where in 1922 for whites the death rate per 1,000 was 12.1 per cent, for Negroes it was 20.5. Capitalism steps harder on the Negroe worker.

Disease Outcome of Persecutions

Disease ravages the race. Death from tuberculosis and syphilis, according to the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, (figures for whole country) reach startling figures. The numbers for the last disease show a mortality of 38.7 per hundred thousand, in comparison with only 10.5 for whites. Other diseases take heavier toll among Negro workers than among the white. White persons live nearly seven years longer according to figures of the same concern which include all classes.

The bureau of census for one section, notes that "In 28 or 33 per cent of the 84 cities with the registration by color the deaths outnumber the births among the colored people". In an article on "Negro Migration", Chas. S. Johnson says of the Negro death rate in the South: "The Negro death rate during the period of slavery was about the same as that of the white. Beginning with their independence (?), this death rate increased steadily up to about ten years ago in spite of the increase in education and some measure of health training. The Negro population has increased at a rate nearly normal. During the last decade we were surprised and shocked to learn that the rate of the increase has fallen off about 50 per cent. Making allowances for certain errors in enumeration, there is still room for some concern in these figures. This does not mean that fewer children are being born in the congested district of the South, but that actually more of them are dying.

"... Out of every hundred thousand Negro male children born alive, 9,609 more Negro boys die before they reach the age of one year than white boys, and 8,281 more girls."

Twenty-nine states in this country makes intermarriage illegal.

Peonage in the South

Peonage still exists in the South. The plantation system is not eradicated sixty-two years after release from chattel slave.

In the South as a whole, three out of every four Negro farmers are tenants and the number is increasing rapidly. Wages of farm workers range from $1 to $3 per day and more and more the Negro worker, predominantly agricultural, is being driven into the cities—and into the North, where he is ever becoming a more important factor.

The South is still the home of the most opressed worker in America — the home of slavery. Wm. F. Dunne in his article "Negroes In American Industry" in March issue of the Workers Monthly, painted this bitterly true picture:

"The slave south is not dead and slavery has not been abolished. It lives in song and story, it lives in every community where there are black and white human beings, it lives in the agricultural region of the south, it exists in the industrial feudalism of the lumber and turpentine camps of the south, it lives in the southern non-union coal fields, it lives in the columns of the capitalist press of both north and south and the prejudice and strife among the workers is fed and inflamed like a gangrenous wound by this filth that it exudes."

The A. F. of L. and the Class Struggle

ARTICLE III—PART II.

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

THIS is the third of a series of articles on the proceedings of the A. F. of L. convention, which deal with "The A. F. of L. and International Relations," "The A. F. of L. and the Unorganized Workers," "The A. F. of L. and the Class Struggle," "The A. F. of L. and the Left Wing," "The A. F. of L. and Militarism," etc. This is the second installment of "The A. F. of L. and the Class Struggle."

HE first attracted my attention in particular because HE SET HIS FACE AGAINST THE EFFORTS THAT WERE BEING MADE TO BRING ABOUT A GENERAL STRIKE OF ALL THE TRADES IN SYMPATHY WITH THE AMERICAN RAILWAY UNION STRIKE IN 1894. (Second sentence in the speech of Secretary Frank Morrison to the memory of Samuel Gompers delivered to the Atlantic City convention. Emphasis mine, W. F. D.)

WE have seen the spirit of class collaboration materialized and dolled up for public display by Spencer Miller, Jr., theoretician-in-chief for the labor agents of imperialism at Atlantic City. That spirit, embodied in a cartoon by Robert Minor recently, is indeed the spirit of Samuel Gompers as we learn from the lips of no less a personage than Secretary Frank Morrison.

According to Morrison, Gompers' first gained his attentive approbation by treason to the whole American working class in one of its historic struggles. Gompers then, gained leadership by an act of wholesale treachery.

NO intelligent worker will be surprised then, if a convention which endorsed the belly-crawling to American capitalism indulged in by Spencer Miller, Jr., in the field of education, and which spent a day deifying the kind of an individual described so well by Morrison, gave practical expression to its desire, in return for a modicum of the spoils, to act as chambermaid for the captains of industry and lords of American finance.

This is exactly what the Atlantic convention did.

One will go blind if he strains his eyes for any sign in the resolutions of the convention that it has ever heard anything of the class nature of society—the exploitation of one class by another which gives rise to the class struggle.

ON the contrary, the A. F. of L. officialdom has adopted and now glibly mouths such phrases as "group production," "personnel relations," "sustained industrial progress," "interdependence of the interests of all groups," "co-operation of employes in production"—all of which is cribbed from the gibberish of the new school of adding machine social research exponents turned out by Rockefeller endowed colleges.

These phrases are designed to veil the conflict of interests that exists, in spite of all attempts to gloss it over, between the working class and the capitalist class. They have the additional purpose of furnishing a pseudo-scientific justification for all the class collaboration schemes which are being foisted upon the labor movement.

SUCH a scheme is the "Baltimore & Ohio Plan," differing only from the outright company unions in that the machinery of the A. F. of L. unions is placed at the disposal of the bosses and the speeding-up of labor given the sanction of the union officials.

More than that, production experts employed jointly by the union and the bosses, deluge the workers with statistical data proving that they can and must "hit the ball," for the honor and glory of the union—and the profits of the bosses.

"For," say the exponents of this class collaborationist school of thot, "how can the boss pay wages if he doesn't make profits?"

THE following was adopted on the report of the executive council dealing with new economic developments:

> PRODUCTION IS A GROUP UNDERTAKING. IT INVOLVES FINDING THE BEST WAYS FOR THE GROUP TO WORK TOGETHER. This is the field of personnel relations research. It is of the utmost importance that the trade union should be adequately represented in this field in order that technicians and research workers may at all stages have their attention called to the functions of the trade union and that this necessary agency may be taken into consideration in the development of policies and not have to contest for a place after conclusions are formulated. TRADE UNIONS, WHICH REPRESENT THE CUMULATED EXPERIENCE OF MANY WORKERS AND MANY YEARS HAVE A MOST IMPORTANT CONTRIBUTION TO MAKE TO THIS DEVELOPING FIELD.

Here is the theory of the role of the trade union as one of the productive units of the modern industrial system—the other two being "capital" and "management"—baldly stated according to the gospel of Spencer Miller, Jr.

THE premise with which the A. F. of L. bureaucrats and their statistical advisers begin is that modern machinery makes industry more productive—more and more commodities are turned out with less workers.

The conclusions they draw is THAT THE ORGANIZED WAGE EARNERS SHOULD AID THIS DEVELOPMENT but not struggle to seize the productive machinery and the state power.

This amounts to complete abandonment of struggle. The theory is that only those unions which can prove their value to the capitalists as speeders-up of production will survive.

It means in practice a mad, soul and body wrecking race for "efficiency in production" for that section of the workers who are deceived by such schemes.

THE "new economic developments" which indicate unerringly the necessity for great struggles of the workers, such as the huge mergers in steel, coal, railways and automobile manufacture, the extension of the control of finance-capital over industry at home and in Europe and the colonial and semi-colonial regions—these revolutionary factors are ignored because they do not square with class collaborationist motto that "production is a group undertaking. It involves finding the best ways for the group to work together."

Gary, Schwab, Henry Ford, John D. Rockefeller, Weyrhauser, Robert Dollar—are going to work together in this "group undertaking" with the mechanics and unskilled laborers.

The obvious fact that the captains of industry can get all the cooperation they need at any time by the simple process of shutting down part of their plants and thereby increasing the competition among their "assistants," is something that the statistical advisers of the labor movement have not dwelt upon at any length.

BUT regardless of the merits of the question the Atlantic City convention unanimously endorsed the report of the committee on the executive council's report which said in part:

> Efforts to improve production methods and eliminate waste must be accompanied by reasonable assurance of regularity of employment.
> We recommend endorsement of the satisfaction expressed in the principle of the Baltimore and Ohio development and recommend the pamphlet Union-Management Co-operation by B. M. Jewell and O. S. Beyer, Jr. to the study and consideration of all trade unionists.
> We also approve the recommendations that our national headquarters keep in touch with technical experts and engineers in order that the experience of management-cooperation with trade unions may be put at the service of all concerned with production problems.

The "B. and O." plan is now part of the A. F. of L. bible. The endorsement of this practical application of the anti-class struggle education sponsored by the officialdom is extremely interesting in view of the slight reservation in the opening paragraph above:

> Efforts to improve production methods and eliminate waste must be accompanied by REASONABLE assurance of regularity of employment. (Emphasis mine.—W. F. D.)

THE dues-paying membership ought to be allowed to work a few days more per year if they look upon the interest of the boss as their own—this is the sole consideration asked by the A. F. of L. convention for its members who are being delivered to American capitalism. This reservation itself in an admission that class collaboration cannot eliminate industrial crises.

WE come now to a series of pronouncements which probably have caused more comment than any other part of the proceedings at Atlantic City—the widely heralded "new wage policy" of the A. F. of L. As finally adopted by the convention it reads as follows:

> We commend endorsement of the statement of the executive council on wages. We hold that the best interests of wage-earners, AS WELL AS THE WHOLE SOCIAL GROUP, are served, increasing production in quality as well as quantity, by high wage standards, which assure sustained purchasing power to the workers and therefore higher national standards for the environment in which they live and the means to enjoy cultured opportunities. We declare that wage reductions produce industrial and social unrest and THAT LOW WAGES ARE NOT CONDUCIVE TO LOW PRODUCTION COSTS.
> We urge upon wage earners everywhere:
> THAT WE OPPOSE ALL WAGE REDUCTIONS, AND THAT WE URGE UPON MANAGEMENT THE ELIMINATION OF WASTE IN PRODUCTION IN ORDER THAT SELLING PRICES MAY BE LOWER AND WAGES HIGHER. To this end we recommend co-operation in study of waste in production, which the assay of the Federated American Engineering Societies covering important industries has shown to be 50 per cent, attributable to management and only 25 per cent attributable to labor, with 25 per cent attributable to other sources, principally managements in industries producing commodities for any single industry under consideration.
> SOCIAL INEQUALITY, INDUSTRIAL INSTABILITY AND INJUSTICE MUST INCREASE UNLESS THE WORKERS' REAL WAGES—COUPLED WITH A CONTINUING REDUCTION IN THE NUMBER OF HOURS MAKING UP THE WORKING DAY, ARE PROGRESSED IN PROPORTION TO MAN'S INCREASING POWER OF PRODUCTION."

TO the intelligent reader this statement will at once appear as a queer mixture of sound trade union policy and the most abject sort of servile truckling to the capitalists.

And this is exactly what it is.

And it is a document of contradictions precisely because of the contradictions in A. F. of L. policy produced by the external conditions which force the workers into struggle in spite of the attempts of the bureaucrats to evade these struggles.

I have tried to point out some of the more glaring of these contradictions by emphasis in the above quotation but a better guage of the extent of these contradictions is given us by an examination of the comment emanating from the "intelligentsia," the middle class papers and the realistic upper section of the capitalist press.

THE liberals are jubilant, particularly that section referred to previously which in view of the magnificent and munificent opportunities afforded for "research" and "statistical observation" accompanied by huge stacks of beautiful graphs, curves and charts, sees itself firmly established as a serious rival to the lawyers as advisers of the labor movement.

Says Evans Clark, in the opening paragraph of an article entitled "Union Labor Takes New View of Wages":

> American labor enters a new epoch. The trade unions of this country have now officially rung down the curtain on irresponsible warfare and militant warfare and set the stage for collaboration with the employers of the nation in solving the problems of industry for THEIR MUTUAL ADVANTAGE. (Emphasis is mine.—W. F. D.)

Some of the federation officials are likewise jubilant. Says President Green:

> This action places American labor in a most advanced position on wage theories. It is a position far in advance of any position we have ever taken before.

BUT Matthew Woll is not so sanguine. In some things, where a sort of furtive cunning is required, he is much more astute than the rest of the officials. So during the debate which preceded the adoption of the statement on wages as amended by the only official with any pretense to scholarship, John P. Frey of the Molders' Union, Woll said:

> . . . . . I am led to believe that the less we have to do with theory in these matters the better off we are, because we find ourselves confronted with all sorts of conditions, circumstances and environments, and we find oftentimes that theory will lead us nowhere, while our crude judgement expressed in trade union activities has gained more for us.

Woll is a worthy pupil of his late master—Samuel Gompers.

Like all really cunning fakers he wants nothing in black and white unless it is entirely meaningless. It is extremely doubtful if under the leadership of the veteran Samuel the A. F. of L. officialdom would have been jockeyed by fell cirumstances into the "unhappy position," to quote the well-known phrase of John Fitzpatrick, in which they have been placed by pressure from above, below and by reason of their own avariciousness.

THE fears of the wary Woll have been justified. The A. F. of L. of-

To Anita Whitney

By HENRY GEORGE WEISS.

Brave womanhood in chains! America,
Hast thou not reason to be proud, be proud,
Of this wild, mad bloodlust hysteria
That bids her limbs be shackled, head be bowed
Beneath the burden of thy tyranny?
Hast thou not reason, Land of Liberty,
To prate of Freedom, Justice, the whiles she,
Who dared to stand for freedom, goes not free?

O Culture, Worth, hold out those slender hands
That dared to clasp the roughened hands of men,
So that they may be cuffed with iron bands!
O Love and Truth, go to your living grave
For daring to espouse the serf, the slave—
This land has no place for you, save the "pen."

The Communist and Socialist Platforms Compared

By SYLVAN A. POLLACK

IT is interesting to compare the mayoralty platforms of the socialist and Workers (Communist) Party in this campaign.

In the socialist party platform we find the slogan, "Win New York for the people." In contrast with the Communist slogan of "A workers' and farmers' government."

For a Labor Party.

In the socialist platform no mention is made of the labor party. To the socialist party that is a dead issue while on the other hand in the Workers (Communist) Party platform we find a readiness to withdraw their candidates at any time during the campaign in favor of a united labor ticket, as the platform says plainly:

"The Workers (Communist) Party has for the past three years been the foremost fighter for the formation of a labor party. At the earliest opportunity this year, it proposed to the workers of New York the formation of a united labor ticket for the present campaign as a first step for the complete unity of labor's political forces in a labor party. It proposed to the socialist party at its conferences in June, the calling of a convention of all labor organizations for this purpose. But the socialist party in its servility to the labor bureaucrats and in its complete heedlessness of the elementary needs of the workers, gave no answer to this proposal. Therefore the socialist party must bear jointly with the labor bureaucrats the responsibility for dividing the forces of labor and preventing the realization of a united labor ticket against capitalism.

"THE Workers Party has therefore been compelled to put forward its own candidates. But it realizes the crying need for working class political unity, and continues to call upon the socialist party and all other labor groups to joint together for a united labor campaign against the capitalist class for the immediate needs of the divided and exploited workers. THE WORKERS PARTY STANDS READY TO WITHDRAW ITS CANDIDATES IN FAVOR OF ONE UNITED LABOR TICKET AT ANY TIME DURING THIS CAMPAIGN. Workers of New York, raise this demand for a united labor ticket leading towards a labor party in all of your organizations and compel the labor bureaucrats and treacherous socialist leaders to cease dividing the workers. Out of this campaign must emerge concrete steps towards the formation of a labor party."

Child Labor

On the question of child labor we read in the socialist platform: "We pledge ourselves to maintain the New York standards and work for the adoption of the federal amendment."

So we see that the socialist party has sunk so low and has become so meek and submissive that it is SATISFIED with the child labor laws of New York. Everything is so perfect that there can be no improvement, is its line of reasoning! Very fitting indeed, for an organization that claims to represent the working class that it accepts the laws of capitalism without one bit of criticism or suggestions for improvement.

THE Communist platform demands the abolition of all child labor under the age of sixteen, and a system of compensation for those families upon whom such a law would work a hardship.

Municipal Employers

On municipal employers the socialist party writes vaguely on no political interference and speaks of adequate pay and the recognition of ability, while the Communist platform comes out openly with a proposal for the right to strike for municipal employers, the prevailing union rate of wages and the 44-hours week, all of which are ignored in the socialist party platform.

Housing.

On the question of housing the socialist party provides for the building of new apartments "these should be of a sort for which the rent should not exceed the rent of nine or ten dollars per month. Higher rents are beyond the reach of 69 per cent of our population with family incomes below $2,500.00." (From the socialist party platform.)

Even Gov. Smith's housing commission is more "revolutionary" than the socialist party for it says, "The average family in old law-houses, (these are the bulk of the working class) cannot afford more than seven dollars per room." This governor's commission also suggests that by tax exemption on buildings it will be possible for landlords to build new houses get 6 per cent interest on their money, rent rooms at $7.50 and still make a legitimate profit.

THE Workers (Communist) Party proposes the construction of dwellings for the workers by the city to be rented to them without profit and what is much more important for the immediate terrible housing situation, "the fixation by the state of a low rent scale based upon the earning's of workers' families and their ability to pay." (From the Workers Party platform.) This of course, is a revolutionary demand, whereas the socialist party does not even propose a reformist demand as moderate as that of the commission on housing, appointed by the democratic governor.

Health.

On the question of health, we see that the socialist party does not view that question from a working class point of view, their entire health program could be adopted by any capitalist legislature with a guarantee that no representative of the bosses would ever have any remorse as to have violated the interest of the class he represents. Various "practical" measures for the consolidation of hospitals, for a change in the number of bureaus of the health department; for a deputy commissioner to serve as general business manager under the commissioner; for the removal of the police commissioner from the board of health; for the relieving of the board of health from detail, and finally, "more clinics should be established where needed to deal with the cancer and heart diseases." (From the socialist platform.)

THE socialist party is so far removed from the workers that it forgets that there are specific working class industrial diseases, and when it finally mentions two ailments they are, cancer, and heart disease, that are common to all society, and therefore naturally taken care of by the bosses. They forget altogether industrial accidents, industrial diseases, the prohibition of dangerous chemicals and industrial devices, factory inspection to eliminate such diseases and special clinics in the working class quarters to treat them. Loony gas poisoning, painter's colic or lead poisoning, furrier's consuption, hatter's mercury poisoning, these dread diseases of the working class under capitalism are completely forgotten by the socialist party, while in the platform of the Workers (Communist) Party, we find planks covering all of the above mentioned, which are conspicuously absent in the socialist platform.

Unemployment.

On the question of unemployment, there is no mention of it in the socialist platform, while the Workers (Communist) Party demands the establishment of a system of unemployment insurance, maintenance of the unemployed by the city at trade union rates until work can be found for them. Also the complete elimination of the employment agency sharks thru the establishment of a city monopoly in job placements, with workers' control of the agencies thru participation in the management. It also demands two weeks' pay for all workers dismissed from their jobs.

Schools.

ALSO on the question of schools the socialist party is strangely quiet, no mention being made of it.

The Workers (Communist) Party calls for the abolition of religious and military training in the public schools, the unrestricted right of the teachers to organize in labor unions, no teacher to be expelled for holding beliefs inimical to the present system. Also the immediate increase of the teaching staff, building of new schools and full maintainance of all workers' children up to the age of sixteen, when poverty would otherwise compel such children to leave school before that time.

The Overthrow of Capitalism.

Once more the socialist party is not interested and has nothing to say on this question. The socialist party deliberately deludes the workers into believing that their interests can be realized under capitalism and neither makes such demands as expresses the crying necessities of the workers, nor points out that only by the overthrow of capitalism can they be realized. It limits itself to petty reforms—so petty that perhaps this time its program IS realizable under capitalism. It does not express the needs of the workers. Of the socialist party and its program nothing socialist is left but the name.

AS the platform of the Workers (Communist) Party says:

"In proposing the above demands the Workers Party points out that even such elementary demands of the workers can only be realized and maintained thru the establishment of a workers' governvent. We propose them, not as a complete expression of the aims of the working class, but as an expression of their most elementary needs, knowing that the workers, in struggling for these demands will inevitably come to understand that they cannot be realized and maintained under capitalism, but only thru the overthrow of the capitalist system, the establishment of a government of workers and poor farmers, and the adoption by this government of such measures as will lead toward the introduction of a Communist system of society. To this full program the Workers (Communist) Party is pledged."

A Comparison.

After reading the above comparison any working man or working women can easily see that only the Communists with Ben Gitlow, as their standbearer, stand as the representatives of the working class in this campaign, and as such, should support its candidates. More than that, they should contribute to its campaign fund, and join the Workers (Communist) Party and help actively in the struggle for a Soviet republic and the dictatorship of the proletariat. As I. Stalin, secretary of the Communist Party in Russia, correctly said, there are no Communists outside of the Communist Party! Join the Communist Party and fight for the rule of the working class!

UNITY RESOLUTION UNANIMOUSLY ADOPTED BY THE NATIONAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE Y. W. L.

Forward to League Unity!

"In the League there are no longer any differences on political questions! The League completely and unquestionably accepts the decisions of the E. C. C. I.! A decisive struggle against the right danger—against the right elements which openly or covertly lead a fight against the line of the Executive of the Comintern! The unity of the League! The consolidation and utilization of all Communist forces! The unanimous support of the N. E. C.! Real mass work! A mass League!" These are the slogans upon which the remains of factionalism generated almost two years of struggle in the League and Party and remaining after the recent Party and League conventions have finally been liquidated and complete, organic, unity established in the Young Workers (Communist) League of America.

Altho the decisions of the Comintern, the fourth convention of the W. P., and the third convention of the Y. W. L. had removed the political basis for the internal differences in the organization, the remains of the factional spirit naturally hung over and did not disappear immediately in the ranks of our League. It also began to grow apparent that the position of Comrade Foster and those who agree with him in his attitude on the relation of the Comintern to the American Party was becoming the center of crystallization of a right wing fraction and was tending to strengthen and group around itself the right wing elements of the Party. On the other hand, signs began to appear of the crystallization of an intermediate group and a new fraction. It was on the basis of the complete liquidation of the remains of factionalism, the struggle against the right dangers involved in the "position of the group that continues to follow the line of Comrade Foster after the cabled decision of the C. I.," "the decisive struggle against the formation of an intermediate group," and the consolidation of all Bolshevik elements in the League, that unity was finally accomplished in the League.

Thru the initiative of the Executive Committee of the Young Communist International, the political committee of the N. E. C. in conjunction with all the members of the N. E. C. who could be summoned considered, the situation in the League and finally came to the conclusion recorded in the unanimously accepted resolution printed elsewhere in this issue.

This resolution, providing the political basis for unity, is a registration of the fact that henceforth there are no longer any "groups" in the Y. W. L.; henceforth there will not be any "groupings" on committees and in the units of the organization. Henceforth the League is a united whole.

With the factional struggle a thing of the past, the League is now turning its face to real mass work. "The N. E. C. declares," the resolution reads, "that the first task on the basis of the accepted political line is to concentrate all efforts to accomplish real mass work by the League. The work in the mills, trade unions, sport organizations and others, reorganization of the League on the basis of shop nuclei, economic and educational work, work among the Negroes, work in the opponent organizations, etc.—these are the tasks which must be made the center of our attention."

A new page has been turned in the history of the Communist youth movement in this country. With united forces, forward to the building of a mass Leninist League of Youth in America!

Our strength lies in unity under the leadership of the Comintern and the Y. C. I.

The Unity Resolution.

The National Executive Committee of the Young Workers (Communist) League, after considering and discussing the situation in the Young Workers (Communist) League, came to the following conclusions:

1. In the League there are no longer any differences on political questions. The League completely and unquestionably accepts the decisions of the Executive Committee of the Communist International and the Fourth Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party and greets the beginning of the process of Bolshevization.

2. Considering that the right danger is great, the N.E.C. declares that it will lead a decisive struggle against all right elements, elements which will openly or covertly lead a fight against the line of the Executive of the Comintern. The position of the group which continues to follow the line of Comrade Foster after the cabled decision of the C. I. tends to

Bishop Brown Speaks at Negro Labor Congress

EDITORIAL NOTE:—The following abridged speech of Bishop William Montgomery Brown in no way expresses the views of this paper, nor the position of Communists. We emphatically repudiate the notion that there is any religious significance whatsoever attached to the struggle of the working class to free itself from capitalism. Nor can we possibly accept the extremely unscientific notion that workers are saints and capitalists are sinners. Social forces do not operate according to formulas based upon abstract morality. It is absurd to attempt to apply morality to economics or history. The speech of Bishop Brown is published in part because it is his first public utterance after his conviction for heresy. At that time a special article in The DAILY WORKER analyzed his vagaries. This speech shows that he has not learned anything since.—H. M. W.

COMRADES: This is my first public appearance since my being railroaded out of the House of Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church. Steam-rolled is perhaps the better phrase; perhaps I was Jim Crowed because I do not believe in all this supernaturalism and symbolicalism of the bible as it is literally interpreted. Gentlemen, I was put out after being tried as a heretic. Anyhow, I was not put out by trial for the crime of heresy, whatever that may be. The first nine bishops before whom I was tried described me as being an extreme and dangerous heretic, but did not define the word heresy, nor did the judge. Then I faced another judge and nine other bishops, they too, did not say what heresy is.

Living In Age of Science.

WE ARE living in a different age now, an age of science, and heresy is unknown in this age of science.

In the course of this lecture there will be several references to the unfinished case of the bishops against me.

You workers think you can get along without the bishops, but they can't get along without you They need you. They need to understand your point of view. They need to feel the great religious significance of the meetings like you do. You do not like to have me speak of these meetings as religious, but I do not come here to say pleasing things to you.

Bishops Are Sinners.

I came to tell you the truth, and that is that the bishops and other preachars are sinners and that you are the saints. They do no useful work. That is why they are sinners. You do lots of work, every stroke is a saintly act. That is why you are saints. Human acts depend upon work.

I am not at war with the church. I am simply trying to liberate it from its ruinous supernaturalisms. You know that divided masses can not get anywhere. I know that your unions that are divided cannot get anywhere. You have converted me to your view. I am now going to convert you to mine. I shall not stray from the subject of this meeting.

Workers Give Self.

IT IS human life in action, and all life is action; no action, no life. Labor is human life, from the very highest conceivable plane. For when a man goes to work he gives himself to society more completely than any mere philanthropist. A philanthropist can give his money and then go and play golf all day. The capitalist can make his investment and then start on a trip around the world, but when the worker contributes his labor he has to give himself, he can not send it by special messenger, he has to go with it himself and stand by it thru every minute of his working hours every day of every year.

The great cause of labor, then, is a cause of humanity at bottom. It is the greatest of all causes. It is the greatest of all human movements. The parasite group are generally so blinded by their beliefs that they cannot co-operate with it.

Bishop Thinks Little.

A BISHOP does but little work, they are too busy to work. They are too busy to think. I did not do much thinking until after I had resigned from my diocese. My time during the whole period had been taken up with building up the church. I had been extremely busy bringing souls to god. I did not know what the church was for, I had never stopped to ask what the church was for, I did not know anything about god, except what somebody had told me and they knew no more than I did about him. When I preached of heaven and hell, I was not a man, I was a phonograph, grinding out the dead views of the past.

Then a great war came along. I knew nothing about that. I was too busy attending to what had been told me. I was supposed to believe that a christian god had sent this war to punish the imperialists of Germany and give the world to democracy. The Germans thot that a christian god had sent the war to punish the democracy of America and to give the world to imperialism. The German bishops were right. Anyhow, the Americans came out with lots of imperialism; imperialism to burn. It has been evolved into despotism.

Begins To Think.

There is no time to tell the whole story of the war, but twenty million young lives were crushed out and the world flowed with blood before this quarrel of the gods in the sky and the capitalists on earth came to an end. Had I been busy in my religious church activities, I would have whooped it up for the church. But I had gone home to die. I didn't die, I am still living. I had a little time to think, something I had never had before and no bishop before or since has had any. I was like a boy with a new toy. I thought, and I understood. I found that neither the American god, nor the German god was real.

The gods in the skies, Jesus, Jehovah, Buddha, Allah, hadn't done anything. They didn't cause the war and couldn't stop it, or prevent future wars. And so long as we look to them for any help we shall be in a hopeless plight. I found that if these gods were real that I had been taught to worship, they were gods so cruel that a decent man would have nothing to do with them. The only criticism I could make of the christion god was that he had evolved into such a terrible god and that he was not real. He was supposed to have written the bible, but the bible was written by man.

He was supposed to have handed down revelations, but he had not. I found that the gods in the skies, Jesus, Buddha, Jehovah, Allah, all of them were only symbols such as our Uncle Sam and Santa Claus. I found that the real god is nature. The god of reality pointed out the law of evolution and revolution too. I made this great discovery that the words "evolution and revolution" go hand in hand.

The greatest movement I know of is the international labor movement. There are many theories of religion and politics and many manifestations of them, but theer is really only one human race. We are the mothers, fathers, brothers, sisters, sons and daughters of one family. It does not matter whether you are protestant, catholic or a Jew. I could be all of them. It makes no difference whether you are christian, heathen or atheist. It still remains that we all belong to the human race. That is all there is to it.

When you see this as I do it will change your ideas about everything, even as it did mine. This fact has now become so obvious that even some of the theologians are beginning to realize that it is the truth. When a theologian realizes that anything is true, it is interesting.

Religious Change.

THE big religious institutions do not readily disappear, they simply change. They adapt themselves to conditions. Even their golden rules are not the same. The Jewish golden rule used to be "An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth," which was replaced by the christian golden rule, "Whatsoever ye would have man to do unto you, do ye even so unto him." Presently we find them supporting the cause which they were so bitterly attacking before. The church has supported Negro slavery until Negro slavery was overthrown—supposed to be overthrown, I mean. At present the churches are supporting capitalism against the enlightened working class. Friends, I can fully understand why, with some of your comrades imprisoned and your civil rights denied, you have come to deny religion.

As I said the labor movement should have a place for bishops and a place for Darwinian and Marxian schools to encamp.

Capitalism is politically bankrupt and the churches that support capitalism are religiously bankrupt. The people of the earth are looking for a classless, raceless, warless world and capitalism is always stirring up enmity between nations and the races. The church is busy questioning if they believe literally in the virgin birth, as if that, or any of their other supernaturalisms could have anything to do with the needs of the world. They cannot trade any longer on the fall of Adam and the blood of Jesus. They cannot appeal to a twentieth century earth with a tenth century hell. We have lots of real hells of our own, and we want to get rid of them, among them are: the hells of unemployment, disfranchisement, lynching and all the other kinds of hell that the church holds up to—real hells, I know as well as you do, which should claim our attention.

You workers are saints outside the church, and the unbelievers and the sinners and owners inside the church.

Down with imperialism!

Down with capitalism!

Long live Communism!

Down with race hatred.

Long live the universal brotherhood.

Down with wars.

Long live the Riffs and the Syrians and the Chinese.

And now, down with Jim Crowism.

Long live the American Negro Labor Congress on the same footing with American Caucasians!

The Y. W. L. Unity Resolution

strengthen the right elements of the Party and to the crystallization of a new fraction. The N. E. C. completely supports the present Central Committee of the Party and calls upon all units of the League for energetic support. The N. E. C. thinks that it is necessary to combine all elements in the Party which honestly want to follow the line of the C. I. The N. E. C. thinks it is necessary to strengthen the work for winning and attracting all vacillating comrades for united work. The League will carry on a decisive struggle against the crystallization and formation at the present time of an intermediate group. The N. E. C. thinks that the logic of the struggle must inevitably bring such a group to a bloc with the right wing elements in the Party and destroy the line of the E. C. C. I.

3. In regard to the League situation, the N. E. C. thinks it is necessary to fight against the remaining factional spirit which seriously prevents the development of the League. The N. E. C. greets those comrades of the former majority who began the fight against the right wing elements and have now taken the logical step towards the complete unification of the league. Complete unanimous united work is possible and necessary. The unity of the League, the unanimous support of the N. E. C., the utilization of all Communist forces—these are the fundamental prerequisites for successful development of the American Communist movement of the youth.

4. The N. E. C. declares that one of the biggest failures of the last convention of the Young Workers (Communist) League was complete neglect of the problems of the Communist movement of the youth.

5. The N. E. C. declares that the first task on the basis of the accepted political line is to concentrate all efforts to accomplish real mass work by the League. The work in the mills, trade unions, sport organizations and others, reorganization of the League on the basis of shop nuclei, economic and educational work, work among the Negroes, work in opponent organizations, etc.—that is the task which must be made the center of our attention. As a first practical accomplishment along this line, the N. E. C. considers it necessary to organize quickly the campaign amongst the striking miners.

A United League! Decisive end to the factional fight! Fight against right dangers and for the line of the E. C. C. I. and for the Central Committee of the Party! Real mass work, a mass League, these are the fundamental slogans upon which the N. E. C. calls all the units of the league to activity and accomplishments.

Herbert Zam, Nat Kaplan, Will Herberg, John Harvey, H. V. Phillips, John Williamson, Al Schaap, Max Schachtman, Max Salzman, Valeria Meltz, Jay Lovestone.

This resolution has the support of the E. C., Y. C. I. and the Central Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party.

Workers and Taxation

000 plus 100% for every thousand dollars over that.

This proposal will leave untouched most of those incomes which are based exclusively on wages or salaries and will at the same time limit all possible incomes to $25,000 income per year. This system of taxation will place the major portion upon high incomes and will thus make those pay for the expenses of government who own it.

In connection with this tax question it must be made clear that the government is not a power which is over and above all classes and in which every inhabitant has an equal share but that it is an instrument in the hands of one class, the capitalists, and used against all other classes who are exploited by the capitalists.

Teaching and Workers' Education

By A. G. Bosse

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—The problen of teaching adult workers in nigh school classes is a technical and organisational question that agitprop directors and teachers of our classes all over the country are up against at the present time. Educational work is beginning, altho slowly, due to the convention, and the reorganization of the party. But our educational work is going to be one of the chief means of achieving the Bolshevization of the party. Unless we politicalize our teaching, it becomes not merely useless, but positively dangerous.

Working Class Education.

Our aim is not to help the worker coming to our classes to make up for a lack of culture. Our party member or sympathizer hasn't a selfish aim to urge him on, such as hope for advancement, love of learning for its own sake, or the like. The difficulties facing him and us are very great, and it is almost a miracle that we accomplish as much as we do. I shall enumerate but a few of the difficulties we must consider.

After a hard day's work, the worker-student is too tired for very effective studying. His vocabulary is often poor, courage and self-confidence are lacking. He hasn't had a change to develop the habit of studying, and abstract thinking comes with some effort. The difficulty of summarizing rapidly, of getting the central thot of a page or a discussion, of taking notes, of reviewing, etc., must be taken into account by the teacher or class leader. Most workers have no facilities for home study (a quiet corner, time, books, and the like), especially if they are active in the party, their shop, and their union. And we must remember that most of those coming to our classes are at the same time among the most active members in the movement. The small amount of general education most workers have, and the "natural" disinclination on the part of adults to exert the mental effort needed for study, help to increase the difficulties facing the instructor. These are but a few of his troubles, and yet they are enough to put teaching methods on the order of business for special consideration and for radical revision.

Lecture Method Faulty.

Our teaching methods (and these thoughts are not only for the teacher; the student who sees in them a way out must insist on the teacher of his class giving some thought to them, and some trial) must consider whether the old lecture method is not ready for the discard. It is a fine way for the teacher to learn his subject. Our purpose is not to provide a laboratory for the perfection of the teacher's art. We don't dispense knowledge; we try to help our comrades use their brains, think out problems for themselves and finally to put their thoughts into clear language. Therefore the lecture method should be used sparingly, if at all. Cut and dried lectures poured into the brainpan don't germinate and bear thought. They result in the mouthing of glib phrases and stereotyped formulas, which disable us in a new situation or an unexpected attack.

When the lecture is absolutely necessary, (and it sometimes is, to give information not otherwise easily attainable), it should be short, informal, and must permit interruptions in the way of questions, brief, relevant discussion or disagreement, etc. The argument that it breaks the train of thought of the teacher, that it prevents him from making a beautifully rounded and polished oration, must be given short shrift. The lecture should be self-contained, giving only the necessary facts and should not overflow into a complete handling of the subject. Discussion by the case should take up most of the time, the instructor only directing its relevancy, preventing verbosity and showing-off, and encouraging the shy or backward students to participate.

The Discussion Method.

Instead of telling, the teacher should ask questions, even if often they must be leading questions, such as, "Isn't it a fact that. . . .?" or "Why do you think it happened hat. . . .?" "You know that such and uch was the case. What would be your explanation for it?" For those who might disagree as to "telling versus asking," I recommend John Dewey's little book on "How We Think." Or the following remark by A. Fichandler, "Never give any information that some one else can give, and never draw a conclusion that any one else in the class can draw. . . . The student who answers a question or draws a conclusion before the teacher is filled with an electric joy which makes that work really worth while. . . . The teacher who answers the question for the class without giving them a chance commits a crime."

Just a few more suggestions,—and it is the duty of the student, to himself and to the class, as well as of the teacher, to see that a cut-and-dried class is vitalized. The teacher should be simple and patient in presentation, proceeding step by step, and not going to the next one till the previous ones are understood by most of the class. It is often difficult to know when this is so, but it can be done by questions, watching the class, etc. He should watch the students for interest and attention, and when these lag, should renew them by a new attack, a lively touch, a change of voice (pitch, rapidity, etc.), a provocative statement, a "heresy," etc.

Titles should be made interesting. "Where do profits come from?" popularizes "surplus value," and "Why and when do we have unemployment?" does the same for "periodicity of crises." A last point—the teacher should begin with and constantly recur to points of contact in the student's own life and activities, especially in the branch, shop nucleus, shop, union, etc. The constant aim of every course must be bolshevization and politicalization, even in English, in literature, and in art courses.

In closing, a short sample of how the discussion method, as differing from the lecture method, might be used.

1. Brief review of previous lesson, with students doing most of the explaining.

2. Short talk by teacher, with use of maps, charts, and blackboard. Questions discussion should be permitted to interrupt, not relegated to end of lecture, when most will be forgotten or the point have become hazy.

3. Questions by class, with students answering as many of them as possible.

4. Discussion, with teacher as guider, not monologist.

5. Questions by teacher—to ensure that silent students got points of lesson; to fill in gaps; to further clarify understanding and add to knowledge on a point; and to apply conclusions (especially to the working conditions, hours, wages, profits, propaganda possibilities, etc) to workers in the class.

6. Students make outline of lesson, for future review, reference, etc. The fact that they make it means they are likely to understand it better, and to remember it. If they can't do it, mimeographed outlines and notes should be given them, and carefully gone over with them.

Extra Aids Essential.

Some extra aids are the library, visits to museums, shops, and exhibitions, plays, lectures, talks by specially qualified persons, correlation with English, courses, etc., recourse to reference books, files, clippings, indexes, etc.

The problems are great and varied, write in to the paper and to the national agitprop dept. their experiences, failures and successes with special methods and devices, and the like, we shall be able to compile a body of experiments, experience, and tested methods that will make our work easier every term, and will enable us to put advanced and qualified students into the work of teaching. To raise the level of the whole party, and to penetrate with our agitation, propaganda and education to every party member and sympathizer—that is our task, and proper methods will in large measure enable us to succeed.

ficialdom has succeeded only in satisfying the amorphous liberal group which has no economic power.

The big bosses who speak thru the Wall Street Journal, The New York Times, The Brooklyn Eagle, etc., accept willingly enough the sections of the statement on wage policy that have to do with increase of production and elimination of waste, but those sentences dealing with increases in real wages, reduction of hours and resistance to all wage reductions are interpreted correctly by them as an encouragement to the rank and file of organized labor to go out and raise hell—and therefore a violation of the "union-management co-operation" company union polciy endorsed by the big bosses and blessed by Green, Woll and Co.

WHAT the A. F. of L. officialdom set out to do was to demand a larger return for the aristocracy of labor as a further reward for its support of the Dawes plan, war on the Communists and the left wing in general, opposition to the recognition of Soviet Russia and world trade union unity and the betrayal of the Mexican labor movement to Wall Street. Fakerdom was going to take steps to get a larger share of the loot—nothing more.

But the entire absence of theoretical knowledge which characterizes the American labor leadership, led them into making a grave error.

EVEN the usually comatose Milwaukee Leader is able to see the implications involved. It says editorially:

> If labor succeeds in its efforts to enforce a general eight-hour day or shorten it, keep up real wages, raise them with productivity, and attain to a voice and vote in the management of industries, it will amount to an economic and political revolution.

CAPITALISM HAS REACHED A STAGE IN WHICH EVEN A PURE-AND-SIMPLE TRADE UNION DEMAND CAN SET OFF REVOLUTIONARY RESULTS. THIS IS DRASTICALLY ILLUSTRATED BY THE SITUATION IN GREAT BRITAIN, WHERE THE SIMPLE DEMAND OF THE MINERS FOR A MAINTENANCE OF THE OLD WAGE SCALE THREATENS TO START A GENERAL LOCKOUT OR A GENERAL STRIKE.

The New York Times says that

> The circumstances that gave rise to this declaration somewhat dampen optimism . . . . . Organized labor has not hitherto co-operated to make economies of production. Yet it demands a full share in the proceeds . . . . . the process will be delayed unless labor takes seriously and very intelligently its promises of co-operation.

THE Brooklyn Eagle, a militant advocate of the open shop, is even ess encouraged by the new A. F. of L. official policy:

> General extension of the use of automatic machines and general extension of the use of electric power were cited in the council report, advocating such a new wage policy . . . Trade unionism formulates and puts forth a fierce defiance . . . . . What impresses us most in the formulated defiance is the intransigeancy of the language—"in proportion to man's increasing power of production." Literally applied it would take away from the employer any motive . . . . for using new devices . . . . . He would be no better off for his new investment . . . . in many fields they (the employers) have found that shorter hours are not producing as much per worker per hour as did the ten-hour day . . . . Also aggression on one side causes aggression on the other. Employers may stand on the principle that labor should get less in return in proportion to the slacking it is doing . . . . Logic would come as close to justifying the one position as the other.

THE Nation characterizes the convention as "optimistic and aggressive."

B. C. Forbes, financial writer for the Hearst papers, has his article on the convention headed:

> American Federation of Labor Wage Policy Should Meet Approval of Bosses.

He concludes by saying:

> American labor leaders have acted much more sensibly at their convention than British labor leaders have been acting at their recent conventions.

THE chop suey mixture of opinion from the American press and labor officialdom is a result of the conflicting interests in the economic and political structure, but it is also probable that the labor bureaucracy has been stung by repeated criticism that it has no theory to guide its actions either on the industrial or political field. In attempting to correct this error it has thrown the doors wide open for the class conscious elements in the unions.

WHAT better slogans could any left wing want, when the relentless pressure from every side brought on by the crisis in which world capitalism finds itself, forces the bosses to war on labor, than "No Wage Reductions," "Cut Down the Hours of Labor," "Increase of Real Wages," etc.

ATTEMPTING to deny and avoid the class struggle, the A. F. L. bureaucracy has shown to every conscious worker the futility of such a policy. Hardly are its verbal attempts to turn the class struggle into class collaboration made than the alert section of the capitalist press declares war because by the very fact of being a labor organization the A. F. of L. had to deal with the wage question from the standpoint of the wage earners if its officials were to maintain their following.

WHAT the left wing has to do now is to further expose the double-dealing of the officialdom—to show that even their truckling to the imperialist masters by repudiating Purcell, the British and Russian unions and world trade union unity, by expulsions of Communists and war on the left wing, by refusal to endorse and work for a labor party, by betrayal of the German workers to the Dawes plan, by vilification of the workers' and peasants' government of Russia, by eulogies of American capitalist democracy, by their fight against industrial unionism and their perpetuation of 107 warring unions—all have failed to alter one hairsbreadth the undying attitude of hostility to the most elementary demands of the workers in the form of higher wages, shorter working hours and better living standards.

THE absolute minimum of all these things that can be forced upon the workers, coupled with a negation of the class struggle by the workers themselves, are upon what the life of capitalism depends.

Forcing down the standards of the workers intensifies the class struggle. It is for the left wing leadership to give it conscious direction in spite of the A. F. of L. officials. The Communists in the left wing must and will direct the whole struggle against the state power—that power which has murdered so many of William Green's fellow unionists, but in which he claims we are all "sovereign."

"Increase in Real Wages," "No Wage Reductions," "Shorten the Hours of Labor" and "Organize the Unorganized," these are the immediate slogans for building up a left bloc which can be developed into a real revolutionary force.

The Finnish Section of the Workers Party

By HENRY PURO.

In order to understand the necessity of reorganization of our party, we must examine the past relations of the party and its various language sections.

The Finnish section being the largest language section of our party, is presenting the most typical picture about these relations. We now turn our examination principally toward the relations of the Finnish section and the party. The organizational structure of our party, founded on the federation form, is such that we find in it parties in the party, each having its own autonomy and each one living its own separate life.

In many localities the relations between various branches is such that joint membership meetings have been held very rarely if at all. So far as the holding of meetings have been attempted it has been found that members of the language branches have not been willing to take part. This is especially true as far as the Finnish members are concerned. Not only have we had difficulties to have language branch members take part in joint membership meetings but we have had very much difficulty in getting members to attend general mass meetings of the party organizations.

The various city central committees have had difficulties in getting a full quota of delegates from the Finnish branches. We have found very few comrades who were willing to take active part in city central committee activities. When some comrades, in different localities, have tried to remedy this deplorable condition general excuses have been offered; for example, the inability to speak the English language. But language difficulties are not real reasons to prevent comrades from taking an active part along with other comrades speaking different languages. The real reasons are a lack of interest and enthusiasm to take an active part in our party work.

The results fo these relations have been that our party has been unable to mobilize the whole membership into action, even in its most important campaigns. This is why our party work, compared to its membership, has been comparatively weak.

The fault of these conditions is not, however, solely of the language section membership. Besides the organizational reasons which will now be abolished by the reorganization, there are other reasons. First, on the part of our party leaders. Our party leaders have not approached the membership of the language sections in the proper manner and have not tried to draw them closer to the party work and to its campaigns and activities.

The language section members have been left to take care of themselves and to work their own way. Not even in the big centers of the party have the members of the language sections known more than two or three leaders of the party and have seen the latter only once or twice a year when they have come to address in the big mass meetings. Only during the last few months leading comrades of the party have written articles to the language section press explaining our party viewpoints to members of the language sections.

Even the ideological contact has been very limited and incidental. The party leaders have not had actual and direct contact with the membership of the language sections, and only very few district organizers have been paying occasional visits to the language branch meetings. The very fact that party leaders have not had dircet contact with the membership of the various language sections, not even with leading comrades, is a potent reason for these sections being so separated from each other. That is why the mobilization of the membership of the party for action has rarely been successful.

But the leading comrades are as much and as seriously responsible for this condition. We have lived and acted in language sections as if they were autonomous republics, which have only foreign relations with the party. We have felt that it is not our duty to acquaint ourselves and become an integral part of the party. In our meetings, we have discussed mainly our social and entertainment affairs. Sociological, political and party discussions have become minor matters and often have been left out altogether from the order of business of the branch meetings. And to the extent that we have discussed party matters, we have done that at the end of the meetings, when the greater part of the members had already left the meetings. Our Finnish district committees have had only in casual cases contact with the party district committees, not to speak of having continual relations.

We have spent so much of our time and energy for the maintenance of our halls and social affairs that our part in various campaigns of the party has been very insignificant. Even in the financial campaigns where we have considered ourselves as the leaders, the Finnish section membership has often taken small part compared to its membership strength. In the Soviet Russia and DAILY WORKER foundation campaign in which we took conspicuous part, we were not able to fill our quota. It is true that many comrades and many branches distinguished themselves in these campaigns, but in proportion to our big membership we were not able to do our share in the campaign to organize The DAILY WORKER. Some other language sections, especially the South Slavic section, did better. In the Labor Defense campaign we have been trying to do our share.

But in the political campaigns of the party and also in the trade union activities the membership of the Finnish section has been very indifferent, and has been taking a very small part in spite of the fact that these activities constitute the main work of the party. Indifference to these most important activities of the Communist party is in itself a living example of how we have been ideologically, as well as in action, fully in accord with social-democratic indifference and inactiveness.

Federation automomy is deeply rooted in our membership. They look upon a party campaign as if it did not concern them. Of course there are many exceptions. There are localities and branches where our Finnish comrades are in close contact with the party organs, but the general situation is as above mentioned.

Responsibility for the existence of this condition of affairs falls upon the leading comrades of the language sections. I will quote a letter from a certain well-known comrade of the New York district, which he sent me the other day. After making a reorganization tour thruout the district, he writes the following:

"I met so much hesitation and faltering among the membership that the situation looks much more gloomy than I expected. We have been too negligent since we left the socialist party. We have not emphasized enuf in our propaganda in our press and speeches the necessity for the Communist organization forms and activities. And now when we have to start to build up a Communist form of organization and to get more clearness of the ideological views of the party we find the masses, that have been under our influence and who should now become the best elements of our party, unripe. Even those comrades whom we have considered the vanguard of our federation, we find hesitating and faltering; not to speak of the masses who have been with us only for social purposes." This same comrade writes that in his second meeting in the New York Finnish branch, when he was elaborating such an important question as the resolutions and proceedings of the national convention of our party and also the question of reorganization, only twelve people were attending, altho the New York branch has a membership of about 400.

Comrades, this letter speaks a serious language about the situation we now find ourselves in. It shows to us, as this comrade rightly admits, how seriously we have neglected the Communist education of our membership. The more cheerful phase of this letter is that the writer realizes the situation and admits it openly. To that extent we admit our negligence we are able to remedy it. A serious struggle, however, is bound to rise from the fact that too many leading comrades are not willing to admit our negligence and errors. On the contrary, in their words they as much as confess that something has been neglected, but in their deeds they hold tight to their former methods and viewpoints, and are trying to make the members believe that those comrades who are now demanding a fundamental remedy, are disturbers. For personal motives they want to interrupt the peace in the Finnish federation and to sow discord.

However if the situation does not, in the light of foregoing analysis, look very bright, there is no need to be pessimistic, as far as the relation of the Finnish members toward our party is concerned. If we become pessimistic towards the working masses we might as well cease to believe and speak about the coming proletarian revolution. It would also be a wrong idea to believe that the Finnish workers are naturally conservatives. Among our Finnish members there are excellent proletarian elements whom our party must and can win to the American proletarian revolutionary party, by approaching them in the proper manner, making clear to them the purpose of the Communist Party and the duties of its members. We must abolish the present federation form of organization and build our party on the basis of shop nuclei. This new form of organization tears away the national division lines and at the same time makes possible the unification of the ideological views of the whole membership.

This same condition that now exists between the Finnish section and our party, also exists more or less between other language sections and the Workers Party.

In the next article I will deal with the question of how our party can win over in this crisis of Bolshevization and reorganization the Finnish and other national proletarian elements in this country. I consider it necessary to put the whole situation as it exists before out entire party. That is a proper approach to correcting the errors we have made and to remedy the present situation.

Research Department Book Reviews

A Book for the Worker's Shelf.

"Social Struggles and Thought," by M. Beer, Boston. Small, Maynard & Co. 1925, $2.

It is not often that a book from the flood poured forth from capitalist publishing houses can be highly recommended to the workers. This is one of those rare exceptions. Within a brief 200 pages, Beer has concentrated a picture of social struggles in England and France (and their reactions upon Germany), from 1776 to 1848 together with concise statements of all the schools of social criticism and programs of social change, that arose out of these struggles. It is without doubt the best work of its kind available, at least in the English language, and it is a valuable addition to the working-class library.

The large field covered may be indicated by mentioning the names of those dealt with by Beer—writers and thinkers who influenced social thot in that period:—Adam Smith, Bentham, Ricardo, Wallace, Spencer, Godwin, Hall, the Physiocrats, Lange, Dolivier, Buonarotti, Babeuf, Wieland, Weishaupt, Lessing, Cetinger, Fichte, Fourier, Saint-Simon, the Luddites, Owen, Combe, Gray, Thompson, Morgan, Bray, the Chartists, Blanqui, Proudhon, Pecqueur, Cabet, Leroux, Blanc, and many lesser lights. Beer has accomplished the seeming impossible in giving not only the essence of the ideas of each of these writers and leaders, but also the social and economic setting, the background and significance of each, in a manner which is thoroly in the spirit of the modern revolutionary worker, all within the compass of one small book.

Of particular interest are the brief pages in which Beer shows that the demand for "democracy" in the early revolutionary movement, and in the Communist Manifesto of Marx and Engels, had nothing in common with the sickly conception of the present-day social-democrats — the Bergers and Hillquits. The demand for the "rule of the people" was demand for the dictatorship of the proletariat. Thus Beer quotes Louis Bland ("Historie de dix ans"): "The people is the whole of the citizens who, possessing no capital, are completely dependent upon others for the necessities of life." And Charles Beranger (in a petition to the Chamber of Deputies, Feb. 3, 1831): "The people is the whole of those who work, who are robbed of their social existence, who possess nothing; you know whom I mean: the proletariat." And Enfantin's criticism of the July revolution: "the people or the proletariat fought on the barricades, but after the victory the bourgeoisie armed against the proletariat."

Beer goes on to say:

"The establishment of this fact is important for the following reason. If the people and the proletariat were at that time synonymous ideas, the rule of the people or democracy would actually signify proletarian rule or the rule of the working class, and not, as democracy is understood today, the rule of the whole nation in opposition either to oligarchy or personal monarchy. In the years 1831-1848, democracy signified the rule of the people in opposition to the bourgeoisie."

"It is only by virtue of this historic background," continues Beer, "that we can understand the otherwise incomprehensible—because apparently contradictory—passage in the Communist Manifesto: 'The first step in the labor revolution is the elevation of the proletariat to the position of ruling class, the struggle for democracy.' Democracy in the sense of the Communist Manifesto accordingly means the rule of the working class."

The above quotations are but one small example of the richness of Beer's book, of its value to assist the working class reader in obtaining a clearer idea of the historical background of the labor movement. More than a hundred years ago the clear note of proletarian revolution was struck by the first working class fighters, whose glorious tradition was to be incorporated by and brot to fruition under Vladimir Lenin.

Verdict May Save Finnish Worker from Deportation

The United States circuit court of appeals of the eighth circuit of which the district of Minnesota 's a part, handed down a decision in two cases involving the same question of law as the Sanna Kannasto case holding that the so-called wartime passport act is a wartime emergency legislation and that it is no longer in effect.

This decision is expected to compel the court to release Mrs. Kannasto from criminal prosecution for an alleged violation of this notorious lwa. Mrs. Kannasto is of Finnish nationality and her arrest was brot about thru the efforts of white guard Finns, who hated her because of her activity in behalf of the workers. Her deportation is sought by the federal authorities.

WASHINGTON ORGANIZES DRIVE TO ASSIST THE DAILY WORKER

SEATTLE, Wash. Oct. 30.—The Seattle district organization has responded to the call of the organization department to get on the job mobilizing the party membership to save The DAILY WORKER.

The following appeal has been sent to the entire membership in the district:

"To Members and Branch Secretaries

"Dear Comrades:

"A call to Communist duty has been issued by our Central Executive Committee for the mobilization of our party forces and every Communist and loyal member must and will respond immediately and join in our efforts to help save our greatest medium of education and the most formidable weapon we possess against the common enemy.

"Surely, comrades, no Communist and loyal member of our party would dare even think of remaining indifferent, silent or fail to do his or her duty when our DAILY WORKER is threatened with extinction. We, after having spent so much energy and effort and made tremendous sacrifice to bring The DAILY WORKER into existence and were successful in keeping it going ever since, certainly cannot afford to allow its publication to be suspended. This must not happen and will not happen so long as every member answers this most urgent appeal to duty.

"It is therefore evident that unless we can mobilize our entire membership and money rushed to The DAILY WORKER, we shall have cause to regret our failure to perform our duty as it becomes Communists and the loss of our paper which has been fighting our battles and served us as an inspiration ever since it came into existence.

"Every branch secretary is called upon to follow immediately these instructions:

"1. Immediately call a special meeting of the branch membership and endeavor to have all members attend.

"2. The meeting shall at once elect a Help Save The DAILY WORKER committee who will immediately start raising funds from the members present by the sale of Help Save The DAILY WORKER stampts and rush the full amount to The DAILY WORKER as an advance of the membership quota.

"3. Every member should be given a set sheet of Help Save The DAILY WORKER stamps and urged to sell same to friends and sympathizers and turn in to the committee of which the secretary should be a member, the amount from the sale, and contributions, as speedily as possible.

"4. The Help Save The DAILY WORKER Committee shall visit subscribers of The DAILY WORKER urging support, renewal of subscriptions, visit friends and sympathizers and members who have failed to attend the meeting and urge them to contribute and assist in the rasing of funds. This committee shall keep up a vigilant campaign and see that funds are rushed to The DAILY WORKER until full quota has been sent and if possible exceeded.

"The acting District Organizer and any available speakers will endeavor to cover all meetings of branches possible. In the meantime Comrade Secretary and comrades do not wait act at once we must not lose time.

"Comrades, The DAILY WORKER is our greatest propagandist, news conveyor, educator and the inspirer of class consciousness, hope and aspiration to the thousands of members of our class. It is the only medium that can and does reach thousands of workers with the message of the vanguard of the proletariat, every day and night and ever so often, in their homes, hovels and places of abode, in most distant parts at times and places when and where no one and no other medium will or can.

"Comrades, let us demonstrate that we Communists not only can save The DAILY WORKER, but make it the greatest Communist and workers' paper in America.

"Rush funds—much or little—to The DAILY WORKER.

"Secretaries are urged to keep in touch with the acting District Organizer informing him of funds sent and progress made, etc.

"Fraternally yours,
"Aaron Fislerman,
"Acting District Organizer 12."

PITTSBURGH DISTRICT PROCEEDS TO REORGANIZE PARTY INTO NUCLEI

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 30.—The District Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party of District 5 at its last meeting decided to proceed with the reorganization of the party without delay. A special reorganization committee was appointed and the reorganization in the various cities will proceed under the direct supervision of this reorganization committee.

Pittsburgh was the starting point. A membership meeting was held which was attended by at least 75 per cent of the membership. After the district organizer outlined a detailed plan for the reorganization the registration was taken. It is worth while noticing that the Finnish branch in the city proved to be in the lead both in attendance and in the percentage of comrades registered. The Finnish branch has registered practically 100 per cent.

The reorganization committee is now classifying the results of the registration and about 6 or 7 functioning nuclei will be formed within the next few days. The rest of the comrades will be organized into international branches.

75 Per Cent Attendance.

The second city to begin the reorganization was McKeesport, which is owned and controlled by the steel magnates. Here, too, about 75 per cent of the membership attended the meeting and filled out the reorganization registration blanks. The Finnish comrades again were well represented but the South Slav branch was in the lead. Committees were appointed both in Pittsburgh and in McKeesport to secure the registration of those members who failed to be present at the membership meetings.

The registration in McKeesport shows that practically all members will be organized into shop nuclei and there will be no need for any street nuclei.

Work Continues.

It is worth while mentioning that while the registration is being taken and the reorganization is taking place the party work is not being hindered in any way. Quite to the contrary, the organization shows signs of new life everywhere in the district.

COMMUNIST SCHOOL IN LOS ANGELES IN FULL SWING

By WM. SCHNEIDERMANN

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 30.—The school conducted by the league and the party is one of the first steps we are taking toward Bolshevization. The four classes, conducted every Sunday afternoon, are now in their third week, and we have between 30 and 40 comrades registered and enthusiastically participating, also many outsiders have been attending the classes and taking advantage of the educational opportunities offered.

The class include the History of the Labor Movement, Public Speaking, Marxian Economics, and History of the Three Internationals. The members are beginning to realize that "without a revolutionary theory there can be no revolutionary movement," and not only are the classes well-attended, but the members are taking an active part in the discussions. So far the lure of pleasure has not yet been able to diminish the attendance, and altho the courses will only run for six weeks and thus will not be able to go thoroly into the subjects discussed, they will lay the ground work for the correct theoretical background necessary for all Communists to have if they expect to carry on their revolutionary tasks among the workers. At the end of the four courses, there will be another set of courses prepared on Communist policies, tactics, and strategy in all phases of the class struggle, which knowledge we will be able to utilize to good advantage in the various activities of the party and the league. Members wishing to attend, register any Sunday afternoon at 224 S. Spring street, Room 200, Los Angeles.

PITTSBURGH FINNISH COMRADES ADOPT GOOD SYSTEM TO ASSIST PARTY ORGAN, THE DAILY WORKER

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct 30.—At the last meeting of the Pittsburgh Finnish branch of the Workers Party, considerable attention was given to the needs of The DAILY WORKER. Upon the recommendation of the branch executive committee the following proposition was adopted: To rush immediately to The DAILY WORKER $30 and to set aside another $30 to be spent in "free subscriptions."

Several names of workers were submitted by the comrades to whom The DAILY WORKER should be sent for a certain period of time free of charge. The branch will pay The DAILY WORKER for these "free subscriptions." In this way The DAILY WORKER will be benefited financially and will increase its circulation at the same time.

Other branches of the party should follow the example set by the Finnish branch of Pittsburgh.

SOVIET WAR COMMISSAR FRUNZE DIES

AMERICAN NEGRO LABOR CONGRESS OUT TO ORGANIZE

A. N. L. C. Lays Basis for Future Work

The first American Negro Labor Congress has closed its sessions with the adoption of a permanent plan of organization, which is to carry out the plans for work laid down by the delegates during the past week.

In spite of the attacks of William Green, head of the American Federation of Labor, and other reactionary labor heads, in spite of the slander of the whole capitalist press, in spite of the conspiracy of silence on the part of most of the Negro papers, this congress has attracted the attention of colored workers and farmers all over the United States.

It has passed resolutions analyzing the relations of the colored workers with the white workers, the relations of the colored races with one another, the influence of imperialist policies on the Negroes in various parts of the world.

It has pointed out the path that must be followed if the Negro is to gain admission to the trade unions, and, finally, it has shown that it is the present system, with its policy of dividing the workers among themselves on the lines of racial and religious differences, that is the real cause of the virtual enslavement of the darker races.

To Carry Out Plans.

But the American Negro Labor Congress has now laid down a plan for future work, so that the organization may become more and more influential among the Negro masses, and so that it may take steps to carry out the plans which it has discussed.

The constitution adopted at this first national convention of the American Negro Labor Congress declares that "the purpose of this organization shall be: To unify and strengthen the efforts of all organizations of Negro workers and farmers, as well as organizations composed of both Negro and white workers and farmers, and sympathetic organizations, and also individuals, for the protection from discrimination, persecution and exploitation, of the Negro race and the working people generally. And, with this aim, it is especially our purpose to bring the Negro working people into the trade unions and the general labor movement with the white workers, and to remove all bars and discriminations against Negroes and other races in the trade unions so that all races may have complete equality in the labor movement. And further it shall be our purpose to aid the general liberation of the darker races and the working people thruout all countries."

International Solidarity.

That the congress is looking forward to work of a world-wide scope is shown in a passage in the constitution which gives the executive council (the "majority of whom must be composed of working people") the

U. S. MINISTER TO 'OBSERVE' IN NICARAGUA

Election to Sanctify Armed Revolution

WASHINGTON, Nov., 1.—Secretary of State Kellogg, while denying any information that Wall Street bankers are back of the Chamorro militarist seizure of the Nicaraguan government has modified his first impression that he could consider the new regime regular and constitutional.

He has been reminded that the treaties between the United States and the Central American republics pledge non-recognition of a government based on just such a coup. If regularity can be saved by merely taking a president prisoner and forcing him to act as a puppet for the enemy party at risk of immediate execution, then the whole scheme of forbidding military seizure of political power collapses.

The American minister at Managua is to "observe" the new regime until it shall go thru the motions of an election and sanctify the armed seizure of power by an appeal to "democratic" governmental processes.

ROCHESTER AMALGAMATED CLOTHING WORKERS BOARD PROTESTS USE OF AMERICAN AVIATORS AGAINST RIFFS

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 1.—The following resoluion, unanimously adopted by the Rochester joint board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, representing 10,000 organized workers, protests the participation of American aviators in the war of French imperialism against the Riffian peoples struggling for an independent Morocco:

"Whereas, A war is being conducted by the imperialist French government in Morocco against the Riffian tribes; and

"Whereas, The government of France, in its attempt to subjugate the Riffs to its rule and oppression, are using American aviators who are spreading fire and destruction by bombing the villages of peaceful people; therefore be it

"Resolved, That we, the Rochester joint board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, representing ten thousand organized clothing workers of this city, be placed on record registering our emphatic protests against the participation of American aviators in the imperialist attempts of the French government to crush the liberation movement of the people of Morocco; and be it further

"Resolved, That this resolution be forwarded to the state department of the United States government, and be given full publicity in the press of the country."

TELEGRAPHERS BLAZE TRAIL FOR SOUTHERN RAIL UNIONS' STRIKE AGAINST WAGE CUTS

By J. E. McDONALD

(Worker Correpondent)

TAMPA, Fla., Nov. 1.—Despite the fact that employes in all other railroad departments have stayed at work in the camp of the enemy, the second week of the strike of the Order of Railway Telegraphers on the Atlantic Coast Line railway finds all but passenger traffic at a complete standstill.

Refusal of the Seaboard Air Line telegraphers to handle Coast Line trains or business balked an attempt of the company to detour over Seaboard lines.

What passenger service there is, is maintained by armed guards, in some instances, pressed into service along with officials and "would-be" officials with a smattering of telegraphy. Little effort has been made to restore freight service.

Capitalist "Truth."

Nonetheless, the capitalist press declares in flaming headlines that conditions have returned to "normalcy." But the truth is that since 4 p. m. Oct. 24, when the operators walked out, only two freight trains have entered and left Tampa over the Coast Line roads.

One job visited by The DAILY WORKER correspondent and advertised as "restored to normal," is an example of the kept press "truth." No less than seven men were found making a poor showing at filling the place of one striking telegrapher. These consisted of one general freight agent, three assistants without previous railway experience, and three guards.

Other Crafts "Sympathize"

Altho employes in other railroad crafts have stated themselves as being of the opinion that the telegraphers are pioneers in a fight that all railroaders must make eventually against bad conditions and that all rail workers should now be fighting along side of the telegraphers, nevertheless, they remain in the "ranks of the enemy," as one switchman put it, and help the companies whip their brother unionists into line.

They declare as well that the result of this strike, as in the case of the shop men's strike, will be the basis for future negotiations between different unions and the railroad managers. But they remain inactive except for expressions of "sympathy."

It is generally conceded that the few cents an hour increase and the break-up of the present 365 days a year system asked by the telegraphers is not the struggle's real issue.

All over the south, but especially in Florida, fanned by real estate and tourist booms, living expenses have increased nearly 100 per cent in the past year. Rents in most cases have trebled.

Labor Board Aids Bosses.

Only splendid team work and skillful maneuvering on the part of the railroad labor board and the owners have postponed the inevitable fights for wage increases. And workers have been held down equally by the lack of policy on the part of the railroad unions, which amounted in practice to surrender.

Hence, the most militant workers were left to make the fight alone, altho having the sympathy of all other rail employes in the entire east and south. This includes even the union officials, whose salaries are bound to be effected by decreases in those of the rank and file.

KLUXER BOASTS HE IS LAW AT MURDER TRIAL

Revolting Details of Girl's Slaying

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NOBLESVILLE, Ind., Nov. 1.—Revolting details of the attack upon Madge Oberholtzer, the girl whom the prosecution claims was murdered by former grand dragon of the ku klux klan, D. C. Stephenson, and two other klansmen, were bared today at the trial.

The sensation of today's proceedings was the introduction of the deathbed statement of the girl. The defense lawyers trying to save the ku kluxers objected to almost every sentence in the document, except the last part dealing with the swallowing of poison by the girl.

The state is trying to prove that the inhuman treatment, including rape, accorded the girl, drove her to desperation and to save herself from further torture she swallowed poison. The defense is trying to prove it was a plain case of suicide.

The Statement of the Girl.

Part of the statement follows. Parts were deleted as unprintable:

"I, Madge Oberholtzer, being in full possession of my mental faculties and conscious that I am about to die, make as my dying declaration the following statement:

"I first met David C. Stephenson at a banquet given for the governor at the Athletic club early in January, 1925.

"After the banquet, he asked me

Soviets Lower Taxes of Peasantry, Making Increase on Imports

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Nov. 1—The Russian budget outlined by the finance ministry for the fiscal year 1925-1926, estimates the receipts and expenditures at 3,780,000,000 rubles (a ruble equals 52 cents). Only 2,000,000,000 rubles will be derived from taxes and duties. The remainder will come from state industries, communications and the exploitation of natural resources.

Farm taxes will be lowered by one-third while the indirect taxes on production and imports will be increased.

I. L. D. PICKETS MARCH BEFORE HORTHY CONSUL

Chicago Workers Demand Rakosi Release

Several hundred workers responded to the call of the International Labor Defense and conducted a successful picketting of the Hungarian consulate in Chicago as a protest against the threatened execution of Mathias Rakosi and 100 other victims by the American-made and financed Horthy white terror.

From the hall which the workers used as a concentration point Saturday afternoon, they marched thru the busy loop district to the Hungarian embassy at 440 South Dearborn St.

Pickets bearing signs protesting the attempted legalized murder of Mathias Rakosi and 100 other workers by the Hungarian government, walked up and down the street in front of the Hungarian embassy for a number of hours.

As the pickets were marching thru the loop district, many spectators stopped to watch the procession and wanted to know the reason for the demonstration. The marchers carried leaflets published by the International Labor Defense which they handed out as they proceeded along the street.

A committee of three was sent in to see the Hungarian consul at 440 South Dearborn street. The consul not being in his office, the following statement by the International Labor Defense was handed to the consul's secretary:

October 31, 1925.

"To the Hungarian consul,
"J. S. Schefbeck,
"Chicago, Illinois.

"In the name of 250,000 workers and liberals affiliated with International Labor Defense.

"We, the Chicago representatives of this organization demand the immediate release of the recently arrested Hungarian workers, and especially of Mathias Rakosi, former peole's commissar of Hungary.

"We demand that the persecutions and tortures of the 100 workers arrested with Rakosi shall immediately be stopped.

"We demand that all death sentences imposed on these workers shall immediately be dropped and they shall be freed.

"New persecutions and executions by the Hungarian government will cause great indignation among the American people and the cries of the tortured prisoners will be heard at the protest meetings which International Labor Defense is organizing thruout this country.

"We request that this protest be sent to the Hungarian embassy at Washington and to Prime Minister Bethlen of Hungary.

"(Signed) Chicago Delegation,
"International Labor Defense."

The punctilious secretary, affable as diplomatic secretaries are supposed to be, went to some pains to "prove" that the pickets who were alarming his office force and, indeed, the whole neighborhood, were entirely "mistaken." He went thru his files until he produced a document sent out by the Washington legation that de-

U. S. IMPERIALISM IN 'INDEPENDENT' PANAMA DEPORTS 16, JAILS 10

PANAMA, Canal Zone, Nov. 1—The soldiers of Yankee imperialism having done their work well, the Panama labor unions are at the mercy of the tool of Wall Street occupying the government of the "independent" nation of Panama. This is shown by the deportation of 16 "undesirable aliens" and the imprisonment in the medieval prisons of Panama for long terms of ten citizens of Panama.

SOME CRIMES BY THE DEFENDERS OF THE HOME, STATE AND MORALITY

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Wilson Johnson, 40, formerly superintendent of the baptist orphanage, in Brooklyn, was held in $25,000 bail for the grand jury when he was arraigned in court as a result of an investigation into conditions among the girl inmates of the orphanage.

Johnson was specifically charged with criminal assault by Elizabeth Sullivan, 14, of the orphanage.

Attacks Twenty-One Girls.

Twenty-one girls of the orphanage were attacked by Johnson. These girls are to be called to testify before the grand jury.

Labor Defense Aids Jailed Workers with Monthly Contribution

I. L. D. News Service.

In the month of September the International Labor Defense commenced to carry out its plan to send $5 monthly to each of the more than 100 class war prisoners in America. Yesterday checks totalling more than $500 were sent by the International Labor Defense to prisoners in the various penitentiaries state and federal for them onth of October. These checks are sent to all class war prisoners regardless of affiliation. Where other committees are in charge the money is sent to those committees in a lump sum for distribution. Where there are no special conditions the checks are forwarded to the prisoners directly by the International Labor Defense.

The International Labor Defense is also beginning to give regular and systematic relief to dependents of class war prisoners. Checks are being sent monthly to all the dependents whose needs have been brought to the attention of International Labor Defense. This organization is collecting funds to put the relief of class war prisoners and their dependents on a regular oragnized basis. Those who wish to contribute to this fund are invited to send contributions to International Labor Defense at 23 So. Lincoln St., Chicago, Ill.

IMPERIALISM TRIES ANEW TO OVERTHROW CANTON GOVERNMENT

SHANGHAI, China, Nov. 1.—Reports from the south indicate that the imperialists are financing the new drive to overthrow the Canton Kuomintang government. General Wai, who operates quite openly under the protection of the British at Hongkong, has raised an army of mercenaries, some white guard Russians among them, and is leading it against Canton. He has captured Shiuhing, 50 miles west of Canton and Kongmoon, 70 miles south, and Heung-shan, about the same distance, on Maccao Island. British traffic up the river assured Wai of assistance to his post on Macao Island.

Mexican Miners Die for the Profits of the Guggenheim Co.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 1—The state of Chihuahua, Mexico's busiest mining section, and especially the Parral sector, is in great excitement on account of the cavein of the roof of the principal tunnel in "La Pietra" mine. Three bodies have been recovered and other dead are expected to be found when the debris in cleared away. The accident occurred nearly 1,000 feet below the surface. Many properties belong to American capital, the Guggenheim Co., chiefly.

Party Unity Demands G. O. P. Left Wing Be Allowed to Come Back

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1. — Old guard republican senators have advised President Coolidge that the case against Senator Wheeler should be quashed, in the interest of the party success in senatorial elections next year. Wheeler is still a "democrat" but his followers in the G. O. P., among them young LaFollette, must not be antagonized, is the view.

OVERWORK KILLS SOVIET UNION'S MILITARY CHIEF

Was One of the Old Bolshevik Guard

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Nov. 1.—Gen Mickhail Frunze, commissar of war of the Union of Soviet Republics died here today, following an operation yesterday for a stomach complaint of several months duration. Tho but 40 years of age, Comrade Frunze's revolutionary record dates back more than twenty years, beginning in 1904 with his participation in student circles in the polytechnic school at St. Petersburg and ending as successor to Leon Trotsky in the position of Soviet military chief.

The death of Comrade Frunze came as a distinct shock to the public, tho to those closely associated with him it was not unexpected, as his serious condition had been known for several days. In a last desperate attempt to save the life of the brilliant military leader, an operation was decided upon, but to no avail.

Overwork Hastened Death.

Like most of the prominet leaders of the revolution, Comrade Frunze was a tireless worker, devoting himself exclusively to the tasks assigned him by his party. When his health began to fail he was advised to relax from the extremely strenuous work and place some of his burdens on others, but he felt a keen sense of responsibility in carrying out the task of keeping the war department up to a high mark, as the nefarious designs of the imperialist nations culminating in the Locarno conference proved that the hope still smouldered of some day again invading Russia by armed force.

Announcement of his death was

KALININ AGREES TO EXCHANGE OF ALL POLITICALS

Amsterdam Silent on Prisoner Exchange

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW—(By Mail)—Sept. 27.—Questioned by a "Tass" representative about the attitude of the Soviet government towards the proposal of the German labor delegation, which recently visited the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, to exchange political prisoners languishing in the prisons of several European countries for mensheviks and socialist revolutionaries now confined in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, Kalinin, president of the central executive of the Union of Socalist Soviet Republics, declared that this proposal in his opinion is worthy of a serious consideration on the part of the Soviet government. The latter cannot reman indifferent to cruel persecutions of workers and peasants in European countries, especially in Bulgaria, and is ready to do anything compatible with the interests of the peoples of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics to liberate prisoners in foreign countries.

Second International Silent.

On the question whether the Soviet govrenment agrees to effect exchange of prisoners on terms offered to the Second International by the International Association for Assistance to Victims of Revolution which proposed at the time to exchange leading mensheviks and socialist revolutionaries in the Union of Socalst Sovet Republics or revolutionary workers in European prisons, Kalinin said that he regrets that this proposal was left unanswered by the Second International which did nothing to influence those governments in which they have representatives. This gives reason to think that the Second International is interested in a prolonged confinement of revolutionary workers, especially Communists, in European prisons and does not care to free mensheviks and socialist revolutionaries from Soviet prisons.

Wait for Answer.

Kalinin considers it premature to discuss further any practical measures of the Soviet government in connection with the offer of the German delegation before the Second International gives a clear declaration and certain governments agree in principle to affect the exchange of prisoners.

AMERICAN NEGRO LABOR CONGRESS OUT TO ORGANIZE

power "to call or to join with any other appropriate organization in issuing a joint call for world congresses of such a kind as would in its opinion serve the interests of the Negro masses. It shall have authority to negotiate and to make friendly arrangements for co-operation with other Negro organizations of economic or political character, but not with any organization or persons antagonistic to the Negro race or to the working people as a whole, nor shall any negotiation or arrangement or co-operation be made with any political organization of any person for political purposes, except with a political organization of the working class or farming class."

In another passage, the congress expresses its attitude of friendliness towards other organizations working in good faith for the interests of the Negro race: "The American Negro Labor Congress is not a rival organization as against any other existing organization wishing to serve the Negro people, nor a rival to any labor organization. On the contrary, the congress wishes to give co-operation and brotherly help to all bona fide organizations having the interest of our people at heart. The congress invites the affiliation of all such organizations. Especially the American Negro Labor Congress will not be a rival to any trade union or labor union, but will do all in its power to build up and strengthen all bona fide organizations of the working people.

"Our attitude toward any bona fide labor union is—we want our people to join it; we want our people to strength it; if any labor union excludes persons of our color we demand that it shall let them in for the mutual benefit; if it will not let our people in, we will encourage the formation of unions of our people, not as rival unions, but as unions demanding to be joined together with the former union in a single organization for all races without discrimination. We favor that all labor unions shall affiliate with the American Federation of Labor wherever this is reasonably practicable and create a larger unity of labor. Otherwise—that is, where the general labor organization in a given field is not affiliated to the American Federation of Labor—such independent union will receive our support, altho our influence will be used in general to bring all labor organizations into the American Federation of Labor."

Attitude on Company Unions.

The attitude of the congress is stated as follows: "In all cases where the word 'union' is used, it is understood and specified that the many existing so-called company unions (organized or controlled by employers), are not considered as unions. However, any minority within such a 'company union' may, upon organizing as a minority and declaring its purpose to attain the quality of a real labor union, be entitled to representation in the local council and also to the national congresses."

The congress has provided for a number of local bodies, to be composed of Negro labor unions, mixed labor unions not having any rules or customs discriminating against Negroes, groups of Negro industrial workers organized for the purpose of obtaining admission into existing unions, organizations of Negro agricultural workers, delegates elected by groups of three or more Negro workers (or mixed Negro and white workers) who work together in a workshop, factory or farm.

For Inter-Racial Committee.

Plans for the formation of inter-racial committees to unify the workers of all races and show the similarity of interest between them are laid down in the constitution. The congress charges the local councils with the duty of negotiating with trade unions and race organizations, "in the endeavor to establish in each locality an inter-racial labor committee to be formed of delegates from Negro workers' organizations and white workers' organizations. These inter-racial labor committees are to have the purpose of organized co-operation of the working people of both races to establish between them harmony, understanding, and good will; to bring all Negro workers into the trade unions on equal footing, with equal conditions, equal pay, equal rights to all kinds of employment, so that there will be no more conflicts between the working people of the two races, but that all can strive together to improve their condition."

The character of the national committee elected to direct the work of the congress during the coming year is in keeping with the working class character of the organization. The small committee of nine includes Roy Mahoney and William Scarville, both workers in steel mills; C. W. Fulp, a miner and head of a miners' union; Edward L. Doty, a plumber; Douglas, a street sweeper and C. Bills, a member of the Longshoremen's Union. The other members are Bertha Lomax, head of the students' organization of Howard University, H. V. Phillips and Lovett Fort-Whiteman.

The following excerpts are from a resolution presented by the Young Workers League delegate, Corienne Robinson, to the congress as the demands of the young Negro workers in America:

Militarism and Young Negroes.

"The militarists of the country, at the same time that they discriminate against the Negroes in the army, bend all efforts towards using the masses of young Negroes as a reserve for their struggle against the labor movement of the country. Special colored units of the national guards are built and sometimes only colored troops are used by the government for strike-breaking purposes. Experiences in France during the war, when Negro troops were used as cannon fodder in the most dangerous situations and treatment received by Negro troops on returning to the United States, as in the Houston riots, have helped to convince many young Negroes that they have no place to serve in any of the militaristic adventures of the white bosses.

"Especially, today when American militarism is being developed for the purpose of maintainng the American empire, young Negroes have no place participating in such an organization which will be used to keep their colored brothers in the colonies in oppression.

"The firm stand taken against compulsory training in the schools by the students at Howard University is a fine example of the position that our race should take towards militarism, which is the armed force of the U. S. imperialists by which they maintain their rule over the colonies and which is used to keep down the workers at home.

The Ku Klux Klan.

". . . thru the state legislature and the schools, the ku klux klan carries on a campaign to control the educational policies of the public schools and to force a certain kind of compulsory religious education upon all students. Thru this control of the educational apparatus, the klan hopes to instill its religious and racial prejudices into the minds of the youngest children."

The resolution made the following demands:

"Equal pay for equal work for young Negro workers and other workers.

"A minimum wage.

"Complete abolition of child labor.

"A six-hour day and a five-day week for workers under 18.

"No discrimination against young Negroes in the schools. No segregation. Equal educational opportunities for Negro and white children.

"Against the use of Negro troops in strikes or imperialist expeditions. Against segregation in the army.

"Abolition of corporal punishment of young Negro workers on the farms, plantations, and in the mills.

"For admission of young Negroes into unions at lower initiation fees.

"A week-end rest of 44 hours for all young workers."

Negro Housing.

In a resolution from which the following excerpts are taken, adopted by the American Negro Labor Congress, the congress declares itself opposed to all forms of race segregation and calls upon all Negro workers to fight all attempts made to segregate the Negro:

"The American Negro Labor Congress declares, itself unalterably opposed to the segregation of our people in separate residence districts. We declare the discrimination against Negroes in regard to which part of the city they may live in and which part they may not live in, is a political question and must be dealt with just as we deal with discrimination in voting. The time has come when the living accommodations of the public cannot be left to the private control of a few wealthy parasites who decide where the colored man live and where he may not live, or whether he can have a house to live in at all."

The following resolution was adopted encouraging the struggle of the Haitians in their fight against imperialist invasions:

Against Imperialist Domination.

"The peoples of Hiati, San Domingo, the Virgin Islands, Hawaiian Islands, Porto Rico and the Philippines, are now by violence and oppression being denied their right of self-determination by the United States government; therefore "Be It Resolved, That the American Negro Labor Congress sends its fraternal greetings and encouragement to the peoples of the insular possessions of the United States who are struggling for their independence; and that we endorse their brave fight and promise them all possible aid; and

"Be It Further Resolved, That any permanent directing body that may be chosen by this congress stands instructed to enter into communications and to establish relations with all representatives of those struggling peoples so as to make our help to them a vital reality, and to invite them all to send their delegates to our next congress."

The Friday evening mass meeting which wound up the series of mass meetings the American Negro Labor Congress has been holding, sent the following cablegram to Abd-el-Krim, congratulating him in his fight against French imperialism and calling upon Krim to attend the world race congress to be held in the near future:

"American Negroes greet you as hero commending your gallant struggle. Invite you to attend world Negro congress next year.—American Negro Labor Congress."

In another telegram the congress called upon the Senegalese troops, now fighting on the side of French imperialism to join the Riffians to achieve their independence. The cablegram appears in full:

"To the Senegalese Negro Troops in the French Army in Africa:

"American Negroes appeal to all our brothers in Africa to refuse to fight against the heroic people of the Riff, but to join with Abd-el-Krim to free African soil from imperialist invaders."

The congress also sends the following cablegram to the Chinese strikers in Shanghai:

"We greet you as brothers fighting for a common cause and urge you to drive imperialists from your soil."

The congress is also sending a protest to President Coolidge in behalf of the members of the 24th Infantry who are at present in Leavenworth prison for their participation in the Houston race riots, when Negro soldiers showed their resentment to the criminal assault of a white policeman on a Negro woman. In the following protest the congress demands that the president of the United States immediately release these imprisoned Negroes as honorable and heroic men.

"President Calvin Coolidge,
"Washington, D. C.

"Delegates assembled in first annual convention of the American Negro Labor Congress voted today unanimously to protest against continued imprisonment of former members of the 24th Infantry now confined in Leavenworth penitentiary. The imprisonment and summary and unfair hanging of members of the 24th Infantry represent a shameful stain upon the history of this country. The trouble arose out of effort to protect a woman of our race from cruel assault by a white policeman and these Negro soldiers should have been honored for their motive and courage. The colored soldiers were absolutely blameless for bloodshed which resulted from attack by white mob. All thinking Negroes demand that the remaining prisoners be immediately released as honorable and heroic men and not merely pardoned as criminals receiving leniency."

The congress also sent the imprisoned soldiers the following telegram telling of the action taken by the congress in protesting to President Coolidge against their imprisonment:

"American Negro Labor Congress in session here by unanimous vote protests against your imprisonment. We have sent a telegram to President Coolidge to this effect. The imprisonment of members of your regiment and the summary and unfair and brutal execution of others represents a shameful stain upon the history of this country. The trouble arose out of your effort to protect a woman of our race from cruel assault by a white policeman and we honor you for your motives and your courage. We hold you absolutely blameless for the blood that was spilled as a result of the actions of the mob which attacked you. Therefore you are entitled not to leniency as pardoned criminals, but to immediate honorable release as heroic and innocent men."

The gathering also sent a telegram to Marcus Garvey, imprisoned leader of the Universal Negro Improvement Association:

"American Negro Labor Congress opening here today sends its deepest sympathy for your sufferings in prison. Your imprisoument is an act of persecution and an attack against all of our people. We demand your unconditional and immediate release and urge you fight against deportation from this country only by a united action of all organizations of Negro people and farmers can such persecution be brought to an end."

War Commissar Frunze Dies

made at one p. m. Saturday, and immediately the entire city went into official mourning and the black-bordered red flags were raised at half mast over public buildings, and in thousands of private houses the blazing emblem of the revolution, bordered in black was raised.

An impressive state funeral is being planned by the government.

Son of a Peasant.

Mikhail Vassilievitch Frunze was born in 1885, at Pischpek, the chief town of the district of Semirechinsk (Republic of Turkestan). His father, a Russian Moldov, was a peasant from the district of Zakharievsk, in the government of Odessa; his mother was a peasant from Voronesh. After his father finished his term of military service in Turkestan, he became a hospital attendant in the municipal service.

Frunze began his studies in a primary school, subsequently entering the college of Vierny (now Almata), where he proved an excellent student. His father having died, leaving the family in poor circumstances, the young Mikhail at the age of twelve took to giving private lessons as a means of livelihood.

Expelled from Capital.

Entering the Polytechnic Institute of St. Petersburg (now Leningrad) in 1904, Frunze began to take part in the revolutionary movement, working first in the student circules, then in the workers' circles, as a social-democrat. He took part in the November demonstrations in St. Petersburg, which led to his arrest and subsequent expulsion from the capital.

At the beginning of 1905, Frunze worked in Moscow, then in the Ivanovo-Voznessensk factory in Vladimir.

During the party split into mensheviks and Bolsheviks, Comrade Frunze deliberately took the side of the Leninists. In December, 1905, he took part in the insurrection at Moscow. In 1906, as a delegate from the party committee of Voznessensk, he participated in the Third and Fourth Congresses of the party at Stockholm.

Faces Death; Prison; Escapes.

In 1907, he was arrested at Chovia, where he had been working under the name of Arsene, and sentenced to a long term of imprisonment. Brot before the magistrates for belonging to the social-democratic party, he was accused of having offered armed resistance to the police, and sentenced to four years hard labor.

After being tried five times in connection with this affair, during which two verdicts declared for the death penalty, Frunze was finally condemned to an additional six years' hard labor. He served five and a half years in the central prison of Vladimir, then for two years in the prison of Nikolaev, and finally in the Alexandrovsk prison.

Goes Into Army.

Liberated in 1915, but sent to the district of Verkholensk in Irkutsk, Frunze was soon arrested again for creating an organization of the deportees. He succeeded, however, in escaping, and towards the end of 1915, turned up at Chita under the illegal name of Vassilenko. Here he collaborated on the editorial staff of the Bolshevik weekly, The Oriental Review. Discovered by the police, he escaped into European Russia, where, under the name of Mikhailov, he entered the Pan-Russian Union of Zemstvos, and worked on the western front until the revolution of 1917. During his sojourn at the front he spent his time principally working to create revolutionary organizations in the szarist army.

After the revolution of February, 1917, Comrade Frunze became a member of the Workers' and Soldiers' Deputies of Minsk, a member of the army committee of the western front, chief organizer and president of the Soviet of Peasant Deputies of White Russia. During the Kornilov mutiny, he was elected commander of the revolutionary troops in the sector of Minsk. Soon afterwards he returned to Ivanovo-Voznessensk, where he was elected president of the Zemstvo in the district of Chovia, president of the municipal council, and of the Soviet of the district.

Defending the Revolution.

After the October revolution, Frunze became president of the executive committee of the Russian Communist Party in the government of Ivanovo-Voznessensk. It was at this time that he began his military career as military commissioner for the government of Ivanovo-Voznessensk. Following the insurrection of Jaroslav, he was named commissar for the military district of Jaroslav, a post which he occupied until the end of 1918. In December, 1918, he was sent to the front as commander of the fourth army, which operated in the Urals.

Defeats Koltchak; Wounded.

At the height of the Koltchak offensive, Frunze assumed command of the four armies of the southern group of the eastern front, and inflicted on Koltchak's troops the first defeat, which led to a decisive revival in our position upon the oriental front. During the advance he was wounded by an anti-aircraft bomb. At the end of June, 1919, Comrade Frunze was appointed to be commander of the whole eastern front. With the advance of the Red Army troops of the oriental division towards the Siberian and Turkestan fronts, he was then appointed commander of the Turkestan fronts and rapidly cleared the country of white troops, annihilating Koltchak's southern army.

Smashes Wrangel Forces.

In August, 1920, during the Wrangel offensive in the south of Russia, and the Ukraine, Frunze was appointed commander on the southern front, and directed with energy the operations which resulted in dislodging the whites from their last refuge in the Ukraine and in the Crimea. For his military services, our comrade received several decorations, two of these being the order of the Red Flag, and a Sword of Honor.

After the liquidation of Wrangel, Frunze became commander of the troops in the Ukraine and Crimea, and plenipotentiary delegate of the revolutionary military council of the U. S. S. R. to which is attached the Soviet Republic of the Ukraine. In April, 1921, he was nominated vice-president of the revolutionary military council of the U. S. S. R.

Frunze was a member of the central committee of the Communist Party of Russia, of the central committee of the Communist Party of Ukraine, and of the presidium of the Central Executive Committee of the U. S. S. R. When Comrade Trotsky fell ill, Comrade Frunze became commander of the Red Army, and, on January 26, 1925, he was formally nominated chairman of the Revolutionary Military Council.

Baldwin's Tory Cabinet Ordered the Attack On British Labor's Left Wing

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, detailed news arrives by mail of the British government's attack on revolutionary workers in that country. So-called liberals in the United States, who believe that "free speech" and the other alleged guarantees of the constitution are possible for militant labor under capitalism, often refer to Great Britain as their ideal land of "democracy" where speech is untrammeled, in Hyde Park for instance, and where a Karolyi would not be gagged. It is not expected that the present development will change their mind in the least. But millions of British workers are realizing, gradually but surely, that they are living under an exploiters' fist just as brutal as any in the world.

• • • •

It is important to know that the attack on British labor's left wing was decided on at a cabinet meeting of the Baldwin tory government, at which Sir William Joynson-Hicks, the home secretary, received "fullest support in any action he might deem necessary."

The result was not only a raid on the Communist Party headquarters, with the arrest of six of the party's leading officials, but also an attack against the Young Communist League and the Minority Movement in the trade unions, that developed great strength and scored brilliant victories in the recent Scarborough conference of the British Trade Union Congress. The viciousness with which the raids were carried out is seen in the report appearing in the London Herald (Labor) in part as follows:

• • • •

> Every room was invaded and every scrap of paper and all the files, including the cabinets, were removed in two lorries, which returned several times.
> "The office was absolutely cleaned out, even the pictures being taken off the walls. The whole of the books, periodicals and other publications were removed in 20 vans to Scotland Yard. All the back numbers of the Workers' Weekly, as well as those for publication today (a whole issue), and other Communist publications were also confiscated."

• • • •

In the words of a declaration issued by the British Communist Party's political bureau, "the raids and the arrests had not come as a surprise." The success of the Minority Movement among Great Britain's organized workers was but the forerunner of new attacks on labor's most militant section, just as the American department of justice, during the widespread militant strikes of 1922, opened its war on the struggling workers by first attacking the gathering of the Communist Party being held at Bridgeman, Mich. Yet these attacks were, nevertheless, assaults on the whole working class.

In Great Britain the last attack on the Communist Party, was on May 8, 1921. But that attack did not destroy the party, as the government had predicted and hoped. So now, in the words of the reply to Baldwin's government, "The party cannot be smashed."

It cannot be smashed because its increasing strength grows out of the present industrial crisis that demands greater and more intensive struggles by the workers, that find their hope of success in its leadership. This governmental onslaught against the British Communists is another confession by Baldwin's tory rule of the seriousness of the present dark outlook for the empire. The British imperialist lion roars in agony, but the workers press on to end his career forever.

"Too Free With Hands."

THOMASTON, Maine, Nov. 1.—Charges that Rev. Percy J. Clifford, former chaplain of the state prison and one of those to bring complaints of moral laxity, was "too free with his speech and his hands" when talking privately with women prisoners were made by three women who have been in solitary confinement, in a letter to Warden Lester D. Eaton.

The women demanded to be allowed to appear before Governor Ralph O. Brewster, his council and the state prison board at hearings into alleged conditions at the prison were resumed.

Evangelist Put in Jail.

A warrant charging non-support of his wife put Charles Sturtevant, traveling evangelist, in a cell and sent Elmer McKee, wealthy farmer from Valley City, S. D., to federal authorities with a request that Sturtevant's alleged relations with Ethel McKee, his 22-year-old daughter, be investigated.

Sturtevant was arrested in Lansing, Mich., and Miss McKee, ill in a hospital, arose from her sickbed and came back to Chicago with him and two detectives.

He Hires "Secretary."

The detectives found in the minister's belongings a card in which he and Miss McKee pledged each other undying love and a diary purporting to be a record of their travels together for the last two and one-half years. They met, according to the diary, when Sturtevant addressed students at the Valley City normal school. Miss McKee left her studies to become his "secretary."

KLUXER BOASTS HE IS LAW AT MURDER TRIAL

for a date several times, but I gave him no definite answer.

"On Sunday, March 15, 1925, when returning to my home about 10 o'clock in the evening, I was informed by my mother that there had been parties calling for me.

"Soon a Mr. Gentry, whom I had never seen before, came for me, and said he was from Stephenson's. I walked with Gentry to Stephenson's home. I saw Stephenson had been drinking. His chauffeur, whom he called Shorty, was there also. Later a man whom he called Klinck came in.

Forced to Drink.

"Immediately they took me into the kitchen and some kind of drinks were produced. Stephenson and the others forced me to take a drink. I was afraid not to do so, and I drank three small glasses of the drink. This made me very ill and dazed.

"Stephenson said to me about this time, 'I want you to go with me to Chicago.' I remember saying I could not and would not. I was very much terrified and did not know what to do. 'O, yes, you are going with me to Chicago. I love you more than any other woman I have known.'

Armed to Teeth.

"These men took me up to Stephenson's room and he opened a dresser drawer filled with revolvers. He told each of the men to take one.

"Later, Gentry called the Washington hotel at Stephenson's order and secured reservations in a drawing room for two persons. They all took me to the automobile at the rear of the house and we drove to the Union station.

"I Am the Law."

"I was dazed and terrified that my life would be taken. Stephenson said he was the law in Indiana. We got onto the train and altho I cannot distinctly remember, I think only the colored porter saw us. They took me at once into the compartment. I cannot remember clearly everything that happened after that. I know Gentry got into the top berth of the compartment."

Here Miss Oberholtzer related in detail the fiendish assults of Stephenson. She said her body was badly lacerated.

"I remember I heard a buzz early in the morning and the porter called us to get up for Hammond. Stephenson flourished his revolver. I said to him to shoot me, but he put the gun in his grip. I heard no sound from Gentry during the night. Afterwards Gentry and Stephenson helped me to dress and I was able to walk to the Indiana hotel, where he registered for himself and wife.

"Stephenson laid down on the bed and slept. Gentry put hot towels and witch hazel on my head and bathed my body to relieve my suffering. We were in room 416. Breakfast was served in the room."

Miss Oberholtzer's statement then told of her asking Stephenson for money to buy a hat; how she purchased poison tablets, returned to the hotel room, and swallowed six of them; how the men then hurried her back to Indianapolis in their car, how she was held in the garage all night, and then permitted to go home, where she died later.

Conviction Not Expected.

Stephenson sits and smirks at ku kluxers who flock to the court room and when the part concerning his boast that he is the law in Indiana, were read, he laughed out loud. Street talk is to the effect that at least three of the jurymen are members of the moron gang constituting the hooded order and that a conviction is utterly impossible in Indiana.

COMRADE PURO ON REORGANIZATION TOUR

Comrade Henry Puro, editor of the Eteenpain and reorganization director of the Finnish section, will start an extensive tour thru the eastern states.

After directing the reorganization work from the national office by writing special articles which have been published in all the Finnish dailies and after mobilizing many speakers with the assistance branches now and the Finnish Federation convention, which will be of Finnish district organizers, Comrade Puro will address fourteen branches now and the Finnish Federation convention, which will be held in Chicago beginning November 29.

HEARST-HYLAN OUTFIT BACKS TAMMANYITE

New York City Election on Tuesday

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Tammany, as as last minute grandstand play, is making much over the fact that the scullions of William Randolph Hearst and Mayor John H. Hylan, have come into the camp of Walker.

Hearst exchanged pleasantries with Gov. Al Smith, chief of the Tammany wigwam, during the primaries last fall. Smith called Hearst a liar and said he was beneath contempt. Hearst came back with proof that Smith's candidate, "little Jimmy" Walker, was a lawyer for the food trust at a time when it was endeavoring to sell polluted meat in New York markets.

Finally, when Walker defeated Hylan, Hearst and his newspapers openly charged Tammany with stealing the primaries.

Waterman's Chances Wane.

Tammany Hall, thru its ability to mobilize all the criminal elements in New York, both the lower, upper and intermediate strata, and backed by finance capital, has waged a strong drive with its own well-known methods. It has long been conceded that Walker, a pin head with no brains nor ability of any sort, would win. His last-minute endorsement by the Hearst-Hylan combination makes his election certain.

His principal opponent is the republican candidate, Frank D. Waterman, manufacturer of fountain pens that bear his family name. Waterman, in the campaign now closed, was exposed as a scab-herder, a strikebreaker and apostle of the open shop. It was revealed that his promised "business administration" would have as its objective throttling every move of the workers, just as Tammany smashes workers' organizations. And just as Al Smith, governor of the state and leader of Tammany Hall since the death of the notorious Charles F. Murphy, used the state troops against the striking steel workers at Lackawanna, N. Y., in 1919, his man Friday, "little Jimmy" Walker, can be depended upon to crush the workers if they menace the profits of the masters.

Mr. Rev. Dr. Norman Thomas.

True to their record, the socialists are playing the game of capitalism by standing against unity of labor's forces in this campaign just closing. Norman Thomas, sky-pilot out of a job, and political adventurer is the candidate of Abe Cahan and Morris Hillquit who thinks so much of the workers' struggle that he has made his last trip from Europe in a scab-manned boat. Just as Hillquit serves, for lavish fees, the big corporations and the labor fakers in New York thru his occupation as a lawyer, so he serves the same gang in his position of political leader of the socialist party.

So openly reactionary and vicious were both candidates of the two old parties that a splendid opportunity was at hand for an effective labor drive.

Communists Propose Unity.

Realizing this the Communists proposed unity of labor's forces on the basis of a united labor ticket. This proposal was sabotaged by the socialists, who realized that if they entered into such a united front they would be forced to fight for the elementary demands of the working class or stand exposed as the contemptible traitors that they are.

This sabotaging of the demand for unity of action on the part of those groups claiming to represent labor placed the burden of defending the interests of the workers solely upon the shoulders of the Communists and they have just concluded a campaign that reached to every part of greater New York.

In spite of the Tammany election board removing the name of Comrade Ben Gitlow, Workers Party candidate for mayor, from the ballot, thousands of workers will write his name on next Tuesday, proving their loyalty to the only party in the election that defended the interests of their class.

The wind-up of the Communist campaign came this morning with final distribution of literature in every part of Greater New York, following final "Red Night" drives in Williamsburg and downtown New York, and two indoor meetings in Brownsville and the Bronx.

Two tag days with "Gitlow for Mayor" buttons, also featured the close of the campaign that has brought the message of Communism to countless thousands that never before heard of the party.

Detroit Notice!

All members of the English branch of the Workers Party of Detroit are instructed to mobilize at the House of the Masses, 2646 St. Aubin, for the purpose of distributing our quota of "Defend the Soviet Union" leaflet. This instruction applies to ALL members of the branch.

The A. F. of L. and Militarism - -

By William F. Dunne

ARTICLE IV.

ONE resolution denouncing militarism found its way into the Atlantic City convention.

It was introduced by the delegates of the Cloth Hat, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union pursuant to the instructions of the union's fifteenth biennial convention.

The most important parts of this resolution, which placed the issue of the trade unions and militarism squarely before the convention, are as follows:

> "Whereas, The citizens' military training camps are run jointly by the employers thru the Military Training Camps Association and the war department, for the purpose of giving military training to and developing a spirit of militarism in the working people, so that they may be used as cannon fodder to promote the imperialists' ambitions of Wall Street, many of whose leaders include labor hating open shop employers who are on the advisory board of the Military Training Camps Association; and
> "Whereas, The Military Training Camps Association practically determines the policy of the training camps and uses them in an attempt to foster its open shop campaigns, and is trying to bribe the workers by offering them a months' vacation for the special purpose of attending these camps, because they consider the military training as a good investment to undermine organized labor; and
> "Whereas, The American Federation of Labor is pledged to promote international peace and good will among the nations upon the basis full and unqualified national self-determination for all the peoples of the world; therefore, be it
> "Resolved, That this 45th annual convention of the American Federation of Labor again goes on record as vehemently opposed to any attempt to foster the spirit of militarism, whether it be thru the citizens' military training camps or thru any other means."

THE record of violence in the United States against striking workers is unparalleled by that of any other capitalist nation. The use of troops, federal army units and later the "national guards," because a common practice coincident with the rise of concentrated and centralized industry.

It is significant that the use of federal troops on a large scale, under the command of General Miles in the American Railway strike of 1893-94, marks at the same time the beginning of those huge mergers which brot into being powerful corporations like United States Steel. With the enactment of a huge tariff law such gigantic combinations sprung up almost over night and the record of American political life for this period is one of unexampled corruption.

But corruption soon gave place to settled policy and since 1894 bayonets and machine guns have blazed a bloody path thru the ranks of striking workers—north, south, east and west.

THE struggle of the American workers against militarism in all forms is predicted, therefore, not only on the basis of the danger of new imperialist wars but on very practical reasons bound up inextricably with the life of the labor movement.

To any worker who reads the capitalist press (and what worker in America does not?) the extensive preparations for militarizing the masses are too well-known to need further proof.

The boy scouts, military training in the schools and colleges, youths in uniform in ever bloc of the streets of the large cities, nation-wide campaigns for "defense," broadside after broadside in the press urging additional appropriations for all branches of the military service, skeleton units of the armed forces established parallel with industry and citizens' military training camps as the last link in the chain with which the masses are being tied to the war machine of American imperialism.

YET at Atlantic City not a single delegate spoke in favor of the anti-militarist resolution, not even the delegates of the Hat and Cap Makers who introduced under instructions from the rank and file members of their union.

But Matthew Woll, reporting for the resolutions committee, gave voice to the sentiments of the A. F. of L. officialdom.

The Federated Press correspondent reports the proceedings at this point as follows:

> Woll's committee's reply began by saying that the A. F. of L. had a well defined position on militarism, that it opposed military forces larger than the skeleton on which an army for defense could be built but that it has never opposed training "INTENDED AND DESIGNED TO BUILD UP STRONG BODIES, HEALTHY MINDS AND PATRIOTIC SOULS." But pacifism, he read, quoting an El Paso convention declaration, is obnoxious. The report ended with a violent denunciation of those who call themselves pacifists but preach the overthrow of government. These, the committee asserted, never utter a word of condemnation against the army of Soviet Russia, numbered by the committee at 1,750,000. The report was adopted.

THE usual confusion between pacifism and class conscious, militant opposition to armed suppression of labor and resistance to imperialist militarist enterprises is evident here. It is not remarkable either that Woll parries an attack on American militarism by a counter-attack on the workers' and peasants' government of Russia whose successful struggle against the mercenary armies of world capitalism are an inspiration to intelligent workers everywhere. This is a tactic of the misleaders of the workers in every country and the Woll, who in the debate on wage policy sneered at theory, is not too much averse to it to put in practice the capitalist theory of armed force as the arbiter of questions at issue between capital and labor.

THE words of Woll are found in the mouth of the social-democratic betrayers of the workers in France, Germany and Great Britain.

> Training intended and designed to build up strong bodies, healthy minds and patriotic souls.

This is exactly what the capitalists want and their interpretation of this sentence differs in nowise from that of Wall—"strong bodies" which can give the best of service to the bosses before they are thrown on the industrial scrap heap or torn to pieces while trying to slaughter other workers, "healthy minds" unable to understand the necessity for loyalty to their class that slavery may be banished, "patriotic souls" with but the desire to die a horrible death that the golden stream of profit may continue to flow unchecked.

This indeed is imperialism speaking thru the mouth of American labor's general staff.

THE American legion, that organization of ex-officers which has been blessed by every spokesman of capitalist industry and state from Gary to Coolidge, is the militant propagandist for universal conscription and the widest possible extension of military training camps. Between the legion and the A. F. of L. labor aristocracy is the close bond, made at San Francisco, tightened at Portland, strengthened at El Paso and cinched up a notch or two at Atlantic City.

TO Atlantic City came Major George L. Berry, army intelligence officer who enlisted the day before the armistice was signed, strikebreaker par excellence and a character so notoriously hated by honest labor men that even Tammany Hall was forced to explain in the recent election that its candidate of similar name was not the "Major Berry of national reputation." Berry is head of the Pressmen's Union, vice-president of the A. F. of L., ex-vice-chairman of the American legion and represented that body as fraternal delegate to the Atlantic City convention. Said "the majah":

> Second, the question of Americanism. The American legion joined with the American Federation of Labor and you, in turn, in saying that it proposes to bring home to the American people the truth with reference to America. The legion believes that there is nothing wrong with America. WHATEVER THERE MAY BE WRONG IN OUR COUNTRY IS THE RESULT OF THE PEOPLE, AND NOT OF THE FORM OF GOVERNMENT.

BERRY, like all real demagogues, blames "the people." This is a cardinal principle of fakerdom. Never blame the bosses; it might make them angry but "the people" are more or less inarticulate and long suffering as witness the reign of Berry in his union.

Further:

> We all know that there is not that state of perfection in America that we would have, but we do know that we have the instrumentality of free men, with a great economic power back of us to remedy, in the course of time, any defects of which we may complain, and the American legion joins with you in the proposition that it will associate itself with every forward looking American to the end that THERE SHALL BE NO REVOLUTION IN AMERICA THIS DAY, TOMORROW, OR ANY OF THE OTHER DAYS DURING THE LIFE OF THE AMERICAN LEGION AND OF THE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

THE cat is out of the bag. After all, it is a difficult task to convince the masses that America is in danger of attack by foreign powers in spite of the Hearst press and its myriads of Japanese airplanes. "The enemy from within" is the target toward which the Wolls and Berrys direct their fire.

A few words about "the enemy from within" our gates.

Who makes revolution? The workers.

What makes the workers make revolution?

Oppression—economic, social and political.

Has there ever been a revolution where no oppression existed? No.

What is a revolution?

It is an armed strike of the decisive sections of the working class against all the bosses and their government.

A counter-revolutionist is a strikebreaker and strikebreakers are counter-revolutionists. They could have no more appropriate spokesman than "majah" Berry.

WHOEVER aids the extension of militarism in the United States either by failure to fight it in every form or by praising it because it is alleged to build up "strong bodies, healthy minds and patriotic souls" is a strikebreaker and an enemy of the labor movement.

At Atlantic City, insofar as the convention was composed of labor officials who accepted Woll's report for the resolution committee in favor of militarism, and applauded the speech of Berry, was held a convention of enemies of the labor movement.

DAILY WORKER "FORD SPECIAL" GETS WIDE DISTRIBUTION IN FRONT OF FORD'S FACTORIES

The success with which the special DAILY WORKER issues exposing Henry Ford met can easily be judged by the following three letters sent by some of The DAILY WORKER agents who handled the distribution of the daily at the Detroit, Philadelphia and Kansas City plants of the Ford Motor company:

Detroit Distributes Daily.

"The Ford special was fairly well distributed here in Detroit, but not as well as we had expected, at the Ford factory. The police knew about the distribution and were watching us distribute the papers at the plant.

Police Arrest Distributors.

"Four of us were arrested and taken to the police-station where the chief delivered a 'talk' to us, making the statement that he doesn't care what is written in the paper as long as its publication is sanctioned by the government, but he doesn't want it to be distributed around the streets. He gave as an excuse that many people might not like it and they would throw it on the street. We were released.

"The next day, another attempt was made to distribute the papers and one of the comrades was arrested and taken to the police station. He was also released.—Sarah Victor, Detroit, Michigan."

Philadelphia on Job.

"I can inform you that the first day distribution of the special Ford edition was a success. We distributed all the papers to the last one and we will go again today to distribute the other thousand and if we are as successful with these as we were with the first thousand then I will try to find some means of continuing the sale of The DAILY WORKER near the Ford factory and then follow them up by trying to get subscriptions. Whatever results we have I will inform you about them."—Lena Rosenberg, Philadelphia.

Kansas City Wants More.

"The thousand copies of The DAILY WORKER arrived O. K., each day at the office in time for distribution at the Ford plant.

"The plant is located in the eastern industrial district with workers leaving work at three different times. The committee was able to take care of the 3:30 and 11:30 p. m. shipts as each day comrades in an auto went from the party office to teh plant and distributed the daily.

"The copies were taken with the best of feeling altho the workers resemble a herd of contented cows.

"The second day more interest was shown and in all I think this was an excellent plan of propaganda if it was carried out at all of the Ford plants in the country.

"Any time special issues are printed let us know and I will do my best to see that we distribute as many as is possible."—E. Hugo Oehler, Kansas City, Mo.

Reactionaries Prepare to Employ Syndicalism Laws Against Workers

(I. L. D. News Service)

The action of the United States supreme court in dismissing without opinion the appeal of Charlotte Anita Whitney from a conviction under the California syndicalist law coming on the heels of the decision in the Gitlow case proves conclusively that the reactionaries have now forged the legal weapon with which they can outlaw the labor movement when the opportune time presents itself. At the present time they are devoting their main attentions to the radical wing of the movement but they mean to destroy every organization of the workers that interfere with their rule.

Anita Whitney was sentenced to serve 14 years in prison for attending an organization meeting of the Communist Labor Party in 1919.

Recently the same supreme court over which the Carnegie pensioner, William Howard Taft presides, upheld the constitutionality of the New York criminal anarchy law on a test case made by Benjamin Gitlow. These actions emphasize the necessity for the building up of a powerful defense organization.

California Bosses Out to Hang Ford

(I. L. D. News Service)

Twelve years ago Richard Ford and Herman Suhr were sentenced to serve life terms in prison after being convicted on murder charges arising out of the killing of the district attorney of Yuba County, California, during an outbreak among hop pickers on the Durst ranch in the same county. Tho the prosecution did not even accuse the defendants of having advocated violence not to mention having committed the actual killing they were sent to jail by a jury inflamed to a frenzy by stories of the Chicago anarchist trial retailed by the prosecution.

After twelve years Ford was paroled by the board of prison directors but no sooner did the news of his release reach the press than the reactionaries were again barking at his heels thirsting for his blood. The situation now is that Ford will be again prosecuted and charged with the murder of Deputy Sheriff Reardon. Every reactionary bloodhound in California will cry for his head and the workers from one end of the country to the other must rally to snatch another working class life from the gallows.

BIG NOV. 7TH MEETINGS SEEN FOR THIS YEAR

Celebrations to Surpass All Others

From reports received by the national office of the Workers (Communist) Party indications are that this year's anniversary celebrations on November 7 in honor of the Russian revolution will surpass all those that have been held heretofore.

Meetings from Coast to Coast.

Tremendous demonstrations and meetings in every important center in the country from coast to coast are assured by district organizers in their reports.

The following districts have already arranged for meetings:

District No. 1.—Boston, Mass; Springfield, Mass.; Worcester, Mass.

District No. 2.—New York, N. Y.; Newark, N. J.; Jersey City, N. J.; Bayonne, N. J.; Paterson, N. J.; Yonkers, N. Y.

District No. 3.—Philadelphia, Pa.; Washington, D. C.; Baltimore, Md.

District No. 4.—Rochester, N. Y.; Buffalo, N. Y.; Utica, N. Y.; Jamestown, N. Y.; Binghamton, N. Y.

District No. 5.—Pittsburgh, Pa.

District No. 6.—Cleveland, Ohio; Canton, Ohio; Warren, Ohio; Cincinnati, Ohio. m : nati, Ohio; Bellaire, Ohio; Conneaut, Ohio; Youngstown, Ohio.

District No. 6.—Mass. Mich, Detroit, Mich.

District No. 8.—Chicago, Ill.; Waukegan, Ill.; E. St. Louis, Ill.; Milwaukee, Wis.; Frankfort Hts., Ill.; South Bend, Ind.; Kenosha, Wis.; Pullman, Ill.

District No. 9.—Minneapolis, Minn.; St. Paul, Minn.; Duluth, Minn.

District No. 12.—

District No. 13.—San Francisco, Cal.; Berkeley, Cal.

District No. 15.—Hartford, Conn.; New Haven, Conn.

National Office Territory.—Denver, Colo.; Kansas City, Mo.

Agricultural District.—Omaha, Nebr.

There are many other meetings which are not listed above.

Bar Child Exploiters.

MOLINE, Ill., Nov. 1.—Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, of Chicago, appearing before the seventy-fifth anniversary celebration of the first Swedish methodist episcopal church here expressed desire of barring from the church mill owners charged with stunting the growth of children "by employing them to increase already inflated pocketbooks."

"There are one million children employed in America, some of them working as many as 18 hours a day," declared Bishop Hughes.

CAN'T TELL WHERE GOVERNMENT LEAVES OFF AND STEEL TRUST BEGINS UNDER CAPITALIST RULE

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Consolidation of the entire steel industry to boost profits by limiting production and raising prices will be resumed, to judge by the inner meaning of Judge Gary's semi-annual address to the American Iron & Steel institute. The refrain of his remarks is "Cal's in his heaven, all's right with the world of steel." This means that big business won't be molested if it gets together, Gary even suggesting that the department of justice sit in now that the government is all in the family.

Competition, that's what Gary doesn't like. All competition that brings lower prices and consequent lower profits is unfair in his eyes. So he promises the entire industry satisfactory profits on its' hugely over-expanded capitalization if the steel producers will get together and stop pushing "competition to the point of accepting unreasonably low prices for our commodities."

Merely "Reasonable."

"Reasonable prices," he says, "bring the greatest good to everyone. Everyone should keep away from getting another's business by unfair methods. We would make more dollars and cents in the long run if we took our share of business at a fair profit."

Gary means to re-establish the informal gatherings, known as Gary dinners, thru which the steel barons eliminated competition and paid big profits on heavily watered capitalization before the Roosevelt-Wilson anti-trust period. He says:

"As a suggestion for consideration by the iron and steel industry would it be advisable to make another effort to stabilize the business? If meetings should occasionally be held by the manufacturers for the discussion of business on the lines pursued in 1907 and a representative of the department of justice should be designated to attend and listen, and whenever necessary and appropriate to advise concerning the law, what would be the effect upon the steel business, and perhaps other lines."

Wants Government Sanction.

A cautious feeler, but significant, for Gary's suggestions are apt to be taken as the soft voice of a dictator. The last of Gary luncheons on this model were in 1908. Are they now to be resumed under the beneficent sanction of the government?

This return to covert combination in restraint of trade will be the natural fruit of the supreme court's decision in the maple flooring and cement cases. Commenting on these decisions The Wall Street Journal said:

"The decision of the court permits manufacturers, thru their associations, to gather and disseminate information on practically every phase of their business but makes it plain that any agreements between them to fix prices, restrain production or allot territory are in violation of the law."

"Nothing Illegal."

This sounds as if the Sherman act were still to be enforced. But the Journal shows that the court left a door open wide enough for any combine to, drive thru when it adds, "If the trade association finds overproduction and its members, uninfluenced by any agreement but acting each individually on the information distributed, curtail output there is nothing illegal in their course."

The supreme court as now constituted refused to accept the position that the gathering and dissemination of information inevitably led to agreements and understandings restraining trade. And as the smaller steel producers know that U. S. Steel can wreck them whenever it chooses, it will require less than a hint to end cutthroat competition. It will not be an agreement, it will be obedience to a dictator.

RUTHENBERG TO ADDRESS WORCESTER WORKERS AT NOV. 8TH CELEBRATION

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 1.—C. E. Ruthenberg, executive secretary of the Workers Party, will address the workers of Worcester on the eighth anniversary of the Russian revolution, Sunday, Nov. 8, at the Belmont Hall, 54 Belmont street, at 7 p. m.

Even "Missing Links" in Evolution Benefit for Minneapolis Labor

By FRANCES M. DICKEY
Worker Correspondent.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 1.—Scarcely a dozen of the 143 local unions supposed to be organized here turned out for the parade staged Saturday night by the A. F. of L. as part of the "Evolution Show" being held to raise funds for the erection of a labor temple.

Managers of the affair tried to hide the lack of unions by letting fly huge American flags over each section of marchers. The only hint of working class spirit about it came when a group of on-lookers unexpectedly shouted, "All hail to the Red International of Labor Unions."

But at any rate, the evolution show is put on for a good purpose, both practically and ideologically. Baby monkeys, adult monkeys, and apes as well are on exhibition to demonstrate the various links from brute to man. Even some "missing" links are there. The exhibition is held in the state armory and the animals have been loaned by the Longfellow zoological gardens.

I. W. A. CONGRESS ON NOV. 8TH AT HALLE, GERMANY

Million and Half Workers to Be Represented

By WM. F. KRUSE.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN (By Mail).—An all-German conference of the "Friends of the International Workers' Aid" will be held on Nov. 8, at Halle. One hundred and eight delegates representing four hundred organizations in all parts of the country, with 30,000 individual members and one million and a half collective members, will be represented at this conference.

The organization was formed on a membership basis in March, 1924, and has consistently maintained itself as a non-political proletarian relief organization despite the most bitter attacks on the part of the old line social-democratic political leaders.

From the beginning the large number of left social-democrats have been active shoulder to shoulder with the Communists and non-party elements in this important phase of the class struggle. The bureaucracy of the German trade unions, the A. G. D. B., opened a vigorous attack against the I. W. A. as a Communist connection, and the social-democratic press joined in the hue and cry, and the party convention instructed its members to withdraw. Some of them did so but many others, openly or under cover, continued active support of the work.

Workers Cannot be Drawn Out.

While party pressure compelled the more prominent members to sever official connections, large numbers of proletarians continue to maintain their activity and many local organizations protested against this effort to split the working class on this field. On top of this the active trade union members of the I. W. A. committee in England declined to receive the false spy charges with which the German reactionaries tried to mislead them. In several instances the executives of the national organizations threatened local bodies with expulsion if they did not cease their support of this relief work but always with the result of making the local membership the more determined to support it and make it successful. In some cases reports of the withdrawal of organizations were published in the newspapers and afterwards proven to be entirely false.

It is expected that the coming conference will result in the further extension of the organization and its growth in strength and influence.

Atty. Gen. Sargent, Hailed by Liberals, Proves a Reactionary

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Attorney General Sargent has at last been smoked out by criticism of his long silence on the issue put up to him by the Nugent-Thompson minority of the federal trade commission—as to whether the rules adopted by the Humphry-Hunt-Van Fleet majority that the senate or house alone cannot order an investigation, is legal.

He finds that the rule is unsound, and that the senate resolution demanding a probe of the bread trust, and the senate resolution ordering an inquiry into the General Electric power trust, must be obeyed.

However, Sargent saves something for Coolidge and Mellon. He says the commission need not inquire into the question of the use of funds by the General Electric combine to discredit municipal ownership of power, as demanded in the Norris resolution.

And Sargent remains silent as to his own willingness to begin prosecution of the Mellon aluminum trust, which was promised by Stone, his predecessor. Sargent claims there is "nothing on the records of the department" to show that any prosecution of the aluminum trust was ever considered.

Socialists Get Police to Arrest Communist

By SILVAN A. POLLACK.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 1.—The socialist party, fearing that the workers of New York City would learn of their anti-working class character, called upon the police to arrest J. Cuttner, a member of the Workers (Communist) Party, who had asked a question of the speaker at a socialist open-air meeting which was being held at Madison Ave. and 104th St.

When Comrade Cuttner asked the socialist his question, the socialists not being able to answer it, called upon the police to arrest the worker, who was roundly cheered by the assembled workers when he was being taken to the station house.

If you want to thoroughly understand Communism—study it. Send for a catalogue of all Communist literature.

I. L. D. PICKETS MARCH BEFORE HORTHY CONSUL

nied that Rakosi had been tortured.

In fact the document, unsigned and unauthenticated pretended to quote Rakosi as saying he had "been amazed by the kindness and gentleness of the police," etc., which was a bit thick for American workers to believe who have had their own experience with police.

But there was one section of this document which was significant. It did not deny that Rakosi and his fellow victims were being tried by court martial. It even stated that such courts were justified in exercising jurisdiction, while at the same time admitting that there was no revolutionary situation and the court martials were being held under cover of laws passed several years ago during times of turmoil which did not now exist.

The consul, said the secretary, would not be in until Monday, and then "He will be busy. He is a very busy man,"—the secretary protested.

"The consul may, indeed, be very busy," retorted one of the I. L. D. committeemen, "but it is not to be forgotten that 100 workers are in prison and facing unjustified execution, and we are more concerned with this fact than the occupation of Mr. Schefbeck." This took the urbane secretary rather by surprise, that the convenience of his chief was ignored by a committee of rude workers who put the life of other workers in a dis-agent of Horthy, the assassin. He promised, volubly, to bring the matter to his excellency's attention.

The origin of the statement purported to be made by Rakosi was exposed in a recent issue of The DAILY WORKER as part of a "confession" that the police had drawn up and handed to the newspapermen in Budapest in an attempt to justify their tortures of Rakosi.

Following the picketing of the Hungarian embassy, the pickets marched to the Ambassador hotel, where Gustav Gratz, foreign minister of the Horthy government, Hungarian delegate to the interparliamentary union congress at Washington, D. C., and now attempting to negotiate a loan in this country, had established his quarters.

The delegation sent by the International Labor Defense were told that the foreign minister "had just left."

Picketing was kept up before the hotel much to the displeasure of the hotel management who tho protesting to be "100 per centers" had a Hungarian flag sttuck out on the flagpole with no sign of the "dear old red, white and blue."

Watchers Needed for Polls in New York Municipal Elections

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—It is absolutely necessary to get as many party members and sympathizers as possible to act as watchers on election day.

For every member qualified to do so, it is a party duty.

Report at 5 p m., Tuesday, Nov. 3, to Comrade A. Trachtenberg, at 108 E. 14th street. You will receive all instructions and be sent out immediately to your assigned election district.

To Save THE DAILY WORKER

Comrades of Providence, R. I., Pittsburgh, Pa., and San Francisco, Cal., rushed in enough money to The DAILY WORKER Saturday to guarantee print paper for Monday's issue.

And as for the thousands of dollars of overhead expenses besides print paper? These are waiting upon the successful completion of the $40,000.00 drive, only $16,403.18 of which has yet been raised.

But in the meantime possibilities for the eventual triumph of The DAILY WORKER over debts and running expenses, are strengthened by various activities that WORKERS PARTY branches are taking besides donating money.

One of the means adopted to aid The DAILY WORKER is that of ordering bundle orders for distribution at union meetings in order to increase circulation. The Finnish branch of Diamondville, Wyo., is responsible for ordering 50 copies weekly to be sent to Wyoming locals of the United Mine Workers of America all next month. And the San Jose, Cal., English branch has ordered a weekly bundle which they will use for distribution for the next six months in the effort to get new subscribers.

Such means for helping The DAILY WORKER, if carried out by all Workers Party branches, would soon put it on a self-sustaining basis! If The DAILY WORKER had 50,000 subscribers, there would be no need for $50,000. As it is . . . . .

FITZPATRICK GETS $2,900 FROM NELSON

Saklatvala Resolution Is Defeated

The officialdom of the Chicago Federation of Labor lived up to their reactionary traditions at the meeting yesterday when they turned down the resolution protesting against the exclusion from the United States of Saklatvala, the Communist member of the British house of parliament.

The resolution, protesting to the state department at Washington, was presented at the last meeting of the federation and referred to the executive committee. When the executive committee reported yesterday they recommended non-recurrence in the resolution.

Delegate Schusler, of the photo-engravers, was the only delegate who took the floor against the recommendation of the executive. He asserted that when the resolution was referred he thought the executive council intended making it stronger, but never thought for a moment that it would be non-concurred in.

The motion to endorse the report of the executive council was carried, thus killing the resolution.

Nelson Rewards Fitz.

Oscar Nelson, for years leader of the reactionary forces in the federation, arose and read a resolution lauding Fitzpatrick. So elaborate was the eulogy that at first some of the supporters of Fitzpatrick thought Nelson had broken with him and was making fun of him. But at its conclusion it referred to Fitzpatrick's "20 years' service" to the movement, and as Nelson finished reading it he handed up a wallet made by the leather workers, which contained the sum of $2,900.00, collected from various unions, delegates and others thruout the city.

The blushing, gentle, modest, retiring president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, in his speech of acceptance, stood before a cake that had been conspicuously placed in front of him, and said that he thought the cake was quite enough, that he was surprised at the resolution, and completely overwhelmed by the presentation of the wallet. He added, however, that he would use the money for the purpose for which it was intended—leaving the delegates guessing as to what he meant.

Why the $2,900?

The donation of such a sum of money to a labor official arouses considerable interest, and rases the question: Just why was this donated thru Oscar Nelson? Is it a reward for the treachery of Fitzpatrick in pretending to be in favor of a labor party and then, instead of going thru with the organization of such a party, sabotaging it and crawling back into the camp of the professional grafters and politicians of the Governor Len Small type? Is it because Oscar Nelson and other cheap political shysters were permitted to get control of the Chicago federation?

It is too bad indeed that someone in the delegation did not rise and hurl his record into the brazen face of Fitzpatrick as he greedily clutched the filthy thirty pieces of silver handed to him as a token, not of what he did for labor, but as a reward for playing the part of the enemy of labor.

Biedenkapp Tours Ohio for Intl. Labor Defense

Fred Biedenkapp who is touring the of Ohio in behalf of the International Labor Defense reports that considerable success is attending his efforts in the organization of new branches and stimulating activity in those already organized.

In Dayton, a branch of the I. L. D. was organized. After electing offiecrs the branch decided to hold a mass conference on November 16 to which representatives of working class organizations will be invited.

Seventeen members joined up in Mansfield and $12.50 in dues was collected on the spot. Great enthusiasm prevailed and a mass conference was arranged to be held on November 15.

In Columbus, a branch with nine members was organized after listening to Fred Biedenkapp explain the aims and objects of the International Labor Defense. A tentative date—November 17 or 18—was set for the calling of a mass conference.

Russ Nail Another White Guard Yarn

PEKING—(Tass)—Nov. 1.—In connection with communication of some white guard newspapers in Harbin alleging that a Soviet diplomatic courier was arrested at Pogranichnaia with explosives in his luggage, the correspondents of Echo and Novosti Jizni at Harbin applied to the consulate general and were told that there was no diplomatic courier at Pogranichnaia and that no diplomat was arrested. No diplomatic courier with the name of Burlakov was ever sent from Vladivostok. Thus, this sensational communication alleging that Soviet diplomatic couriers are transporting explosives is a pure fabrication.

CHINA'S TARIFF CONFERENCE NOT QUITE A SUCCESS

Japan Depressed Over the Prospects

TOKIO, Oct. 1.—From reports arriving here concerning the Peking tariff conference, the whole thing seems likely to blow up or result in a superficial shell of an agreement with no one so poor to do it reverence once it it signed.

A Japanese statesman puts it in another but equally apt way:

Not Optimistic.

"When you get the pulse of the bankers' consortium, possibly you will be in better position to foretell the outcome of the 'cubist' conference now in session in Peking, while outside the walls of that city armies numbering more than 500,000 await its decisions in order to determine whether battles shall be fought now or postponed."

Despite all propaganda boosts for the conference, it seems that it is already more or less dead. Chingwang, the biggest Chinese leader there, is supposed to be in approximate agreement with all the enemies of the provisional president, Tuan Chi-jui, and all these are carrying their armed forces ready for action and all demand a new administration. Moreover, Ching is said to be dealing with the Soviets on tariffs with Russia.

There is little hope in Japan that the conference will miss disaster, the Japanese statesman referring to the consortium as the far-fetched hope that an agreement for greatly increased tariff would allow Tuan Chi-jui to buy off some of the militarist governors to support his government.

America Splits.

That American imperialism is going to look out for the little old banks of Morgan and company first, and will play to get Chinese favor above Britain and Japan, seems evident with the attitude of the American commissioner at the whitewash inquiry going on at Shanghai, where the Yankee openly denounced the attempt of the British and Japanese to cover up the responsibility and crimes of the Shanghai municipal police, who were mostly British troops, in the massacre of last May.

Millionaire Dodges Taxes.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 1.—Preparations were being made today to go into court to collect taxes from the reputed $100,000,000 estate of the late John I. Beggs, Milwaukee traction magnate, who it is said, avoided payment of taxes in Wisconsin for several years by declaring a legal residence in Missouri, and in turn dodging Missouri taxation by making an affidavit in that state that his lawful residence was in Wisconsin.

Arrest Picture Magnate.

LOS ANGELES, November 1.—King Baggot, prominent motion picture director was arrested by police on charges of being intoxicated, after his wife complained to the authorities. William Desmond, screen star, placed $20 bail for Baggot but police said the director would not be released from jail until later in the day.

ROCKEFELLER-McCORMICK SHEET, THE CHICAGO WORLD, ATTACKS AMERICAN NEGRO LABOR MEET

A few days ago, The DAILY WORKER reported the statement of Lovett Fort-Whiteman, national organizer of the American Negro Labor Congress, made at the opening session to the effect that "the subsidized Negro press has been part and parcel of that conspiracy of silence designed to prevent the success of this congress."

The Negro Labor Congress now finds itself faced with another sort of op position from the capitalist Negro press. While the Chicago Defender, the Chicago Whip, and other papers which pretend to have the interests of the colored workers at heart, have attempted to kill the congress by ignoring it, the Chicago World has become venomously articulate. In its edition of Thursday, October 29, the World runs a story of the American Negro Labor Congress, from which one gathers that the most important fact about the congress is that it is being carefully watched by a score or more of secret service men—or, as the World puts it—the labor congress is convening under Uncle Sam's eye. The fact that a number of spies are among the audience at the congress affords the editors of the Chicago World boundless satisfaction.

In reporting the story of the congress, the World resorts to a number of cheap tricks. For one thing, since it can't avoid mentioning the place of the meeting, and since it doesn't want to aid any wage worker find the congress, it gives an incorrect address!

What is the Chicago World? Why is this paper attacking so bitterly a group of men and women of the Negro race, who are meeting with the avowed intention of improving the conditions under which the Negroes live, and of doing away with some of the burdens under which the Negro workers are being crushed?

The Chicago World is a new paper. Its editor is Roscoe Simmons, nephew of Booker T. Washington. Roscoe Simmons is well-known to men and women of the race in Chicago. He is well-known as a frequenter of fast cafes and dance halls. He is notorious as a debtor. Never is he seen at a public meeting without a top hat, evening clothes and a monocle.

To the republican politicians Roscoe Simmons is known as the man who can pile up and deliver to the republican party large number of votes from colored working men and women.

We last heard Simmons speak a year and a half ago, when the Association of Colored Women was meeting in Chicago. Once or twice during the sessions of the women's convention, there was a flare-up of militancy, of real rebellion against the conditions under which these women had to live. These delegates, it is true, were not representatives of the Negro women of the country. The Negro women of the United States are workers. Most of these women were of the middle class. So it was not to be expected that this convention would do very much for Negro women. Nevertheless, because a Negro woman suffers under the double burden of oppression as a woman and oppression as a member of the race—and because the few working women there suffered also the burdens of workers— it was inevitable that one or two attempts should be made to do something constructive for the group this convention was supposed to represent.

It was always at such times that Roscoe Simmons was called upon. With skillful demagogery with ridiculous arguments, and with many irrelevant references to Booker T. Washington, Simmons drew the attention of the convention away from constructive plans and centered it on the history of the Negro at the time of the civil war. He turned every meeting addressed into a political rally for his republican bosses.

Up to last spring, Simmons was on the staff of the Chicago Defender. Last spring he was fired, along with three members of the business staff, for common theft. An accountant going over the books found that the quartet had gotten away with something over $100,000.

This is the man who attacks the hard working group of Negroes who have started the American Negro Labor Congress. This is the man who can see nothing in this congress but "a smoke-filled room," a few "tritely worded placards." This is the man who can report nothing of the congress but the gossip that goes on in the back of the hall.

It is said that behind the Chicago World is the money of Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick, wife of the late Senator McCormick, who belonged to the party which has fooled and bamboozled and betrayed the Negroes for over sixty years.

In the same edition in which it attacks the A. N. L. C., the World runs a vicious attack on the New York Pullman porters who have formed a union for bettering their conditions and raising their miserable wages. Simmons, in his column, follows up this attack with a word of "advice" to Pullman porters.

"Porters, a few of them," says Simmons, "want to go into the union. Others, old, wise, far-seeing, want to let well-enough alone.

"Porters. Keep in mind, that you have all to lose.

"What shall we do? Ask the Pullman porters. A good thing to do, the best thing, is to get along with the Pullman company, union or no union. You have been told that your hours are too long. Your hours can't be too long when you control a job."

So much troubled are Simmons and his co-editors by the organization of the Pullman porters, that the Chicago World devotes not less than four separate articles to attacking the porters' union. There is a story on the front page, calling the union first, a plot of the "Reds," second, a plot on the part of the Filipinos to get the Negroes's jobs. Then there is an editorial, mentioning that the Pullman company paid out last year a princely sum in wages to sleeping car porters—the editorial does not say that this sum, divided up by the number of porters, comes to only starvation wages for each man. Also, there is a special article by a lawyer, attacking the "Reds who are behind this union," and last, the article quoted above, written by Simmons himself in his column, "The Week."

The American Negro Labor Congress gave Simmons his answer to his attacks upon the union when it passed a resolution strongly urging all Negro workers to get into the unions, and there to fight for the abolition of all industrial discrimination aganst Negroes. Simmons is getting his answer to his attacks upon the congress itself by the way in which this congress is going ahead, thinking, working, and laying plans for organization.

Roscoe Conkling Simmons was probably one of the men whom Richard Moore, delegate to the American Negro Labor Congress from the Ehtiopian Students' League in New York had in mind when he told his audience that "The American Negro Labor Congress repudiates forever the policy of slavish submission followed by such misleaders of the race as Booker T. Washington and others."

GENERAL LIKES COMMUNAL FARM OF NEW RUSSIA

Writes Article Praising Soviet Policy

By WM. F. KRUSE.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Germany, (By Mail).—The former General Schoenaich, well-known in world pacifist circles, contributes a leading article to the Vossichen Zeitung, in praise of Soviet agricultural policy with respect to the relations between the communal farm and the backward peasant. His article is called "From Moscow to the Tartar Republic," and deals extensively with a large social farm at Kornuchovo operated by the International Workers' Aid with modern machinery donated by workers in various parts of the world.

Impressed With Efficiency.

He tells of his trip of 23 kilometers from the Kama River by wagon over treeless rolling, light black soil thru what had been one of the poorest sections of old Russia, and that he found a capable and well-trained young Holsteiner, named Dose, in charge. He gives minor criticism on a technical horse-breeding question but declares that under the circumstances the results in horse and cattle stock is good. Then to the principal point, that of relationshp between the individualistic peasant and the social farm.

"It is highly encouraging to see how these peasants are progressing thru their contact with the social farm management. Dose is asked continuously for advice. Even the poorest farmer no longer uses his old wooden plough. . . . On the sovchos they use a stock motor plough. The small tractor was just busy at sample threshing and the introduction of new seeds and methods by the Sovchos is extremely instructive and the subject of daily speech on the part of the peasants. I saw side by side old local seeds and new, to me unknown varieties of Alpinski. The Sovchos reaps of local rye 6 center per morgen, of Alpinski 11, of local oats, 5, and of the Swaelofer 8 per morgen. (As against 4 and 3 by the individual peasant, from 50 per cent to 275 per cent increase.) In my presence a continuous stream of peasants came to try the ears and feel of the grains.

Their Social Life Improved.

"In the new farmhouse a children's home and a workers' club have been installed. In every peasant house I still saw holy pictures, to some extent even with the ever burning ikon lamp. The elders still go steadily to church. The youth meanwhile plays football. In one house there was still a picture of the tzar, and upon question the peasant laughingly said that surely he could not leave the wall wholely without decoration.

"None of the peasants were members of the Communist Party, but one thing they have clearly, and that is that the International Workers Aid is trying sincerely to help them. Anyone who would try to take from them their childrens home and workers club and re-establish in their stead the old lord of the manor, would encounter the bitterest opposition also of the non-Communist peasants. . . . Russia awakes. These economic undertakings of the International Workers Aid in Russia were founded by European and American workers who put $500,000 into productive aid to Soviet Rusia in 1921 and 1922."

Particularly at a time when every effort is being made to persuade the German masses to follow their masters into an alliance with the allied imperialists against Soviet Russia—at this time when the infamous General von Hoffman (who negotiated at Brest Litovsk with his sabre) openly offers his services to the allies, this testimony from bourgeois ranks helps to open the workers' eyes to the true state of affairs.

KUSBAS COLONY FORGING AHEAD WITH PLANS FOR BIG EXPANSION; WANTS EIGHTY AMERICAN EXPERTS

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Engineers and skilled mechanics from America who would like to try their industrial craftsmanship in the new industry that is springing up on the steppes of central Siberia under the guidance of the Kusbas Autonomous Industrial Colony are asked to communicate with the New York office of the enterprise at 799 Broadway.

Eighty men are wanted as soon as possible. There are now between eight and nine thousand workers in the colony but more experts are needed, says the manager of the New York branch of the colony—particularly experts who can give suitable instruction to apprentices as well as doing their own work.

$2,000,000 For New Construction.

This first call for a considerable group of Americans that has been made in a couple years follows the announcement by S. J. Rutjers, president of the board of managers, that two million dollars will be spent the coming fiscal year, that began October 1, on new construction. Of this one million is profits from last year's operations, the best yet. The second million is from the Russian bureau for the financing of industries.

Next year's program calls for greatly increased output. Coal is to increase from about 500,000 tons to 760,000 and chemicals to double. Opening this November of new coke ovens will double the by products. Chemical production generally doubles if the proposed figures are reached and steel will gain considerably.

The Kusbas colony is situated in the midst of the richest Siberian coal and iron fields, with fine timber and agricultural lands about, and all within shipment distance of old Russia. Coke goes largely to Ural steel plants after requirements of the Kusbas steel plants and other local industries are met.

Who Is Wanted.

List of American experts wanted includes: 2 mine foremen, skilled in machine mining; 4 expert machine miners who can teach apprentices; 4 fire bosses, 4 traffic men, 4 timber men and 4 general miners. The mechanical department calls for 4 mechanics instructors and all around machinists; 3 master mechanics capable of managing a shop; one tool maker; 2 good repair and set up mechanics; 8 moulders; 3 electricians, one of them an electric station foreman; one boiler house foreman.

The construction department calls for 2 concrete and brickwork foremen; one brick making foreman; 6 good carpenters; 2 bricklayers. Technicians wanted include 4 surveyors; 2 mechanical designers and two draughtsmen; one architect; one construction designer; one construction foreman.

UNITY AND STRUGGLE AGAINST WAGE CUTS THE ONLY HOPE OF PASSAIC TEXTILE MILL SLAVES

By LOUIS KOVESS.

ARTICLE II.

PASSAIC, N. J., Nov. 1.—In a previous issue of The DAILY WORKER dealing with the conditions of the Passaic knitters, we brought out the fact that the wage reductions, following one after another, are part of a systematic wage reduction campaign for which the workers were prepared thru starvation.

We proved that only organization can save the Passaic knitters from the present and future wage reductions, with which the millionaire textile barons are trying to reduce the already low wages.

But the question remained a question: How should the Passaic knitters start to organize themselves?

United Front for Organization.

In some cities of New Jersey different knitters' unions have local organizations already. In one place the United Textile Workers' Union has a local. In another place the Amalgamated Textile Workers' Union has a local, and in many cities there are small textile organizations scattered about, contesting with each other.

But aside from all unions there is a place where the textile workers are bound together by the chains of exploitation, and that is the factory.

With the unions already in existence and the power of the factories united, the first steps towards the organization of the Passaic and other New Jersey textile mills, must be done.

The First Step.

Most of the textile workers are aware of the fact that there is a committee functioning in America which has for its aim the uniting of all textile unions into one industrial union. The name of this committee is National Committee for Amalgamation in the Textile Industry.

A section of this committee was organized in Passaic, another in Paterson and is also functioning in other New Jersey cities.

The amalgamation committee will in the shortest possible time prepare the ground for organizing the Passaic knitters.

The first step will be the calling of a united front conference to which all unions in the textile industry, and the workers of the larger factories will be invited. The mill workers and unions will start the work together.

Two duties.

To help the Passaic and in general, all New Jersey textile workers, and to better their conditions, two steps are necessary.

First: To fight against wage reductions. Second: Organize the unorganized.

The Workers (Communist) Party of America, the vanguard of the revolutionary workers of America, will give its full support to the fight and to the organization of the Passaic knitters. Its press is open to the knitters, speakers are at the their disposal, moral support is always ready for the knitters, who have the best opportunity now for their fight and organization.

When it comes to organizing, every Passaic knitter must see clearly. He must realize the fact, that in order to escape wage reduction he must fight, and prerequisite to the fight is organizing.

But not only must the Passaic textile workers understand that the Passaic textile barons are attacking them, they must also understand that what now happens in Passaic is a part of a country-wide organized attack. Even this is not all. In order that the knitter should see clearly his condition, he must be informed of what happens in the American textile trade, and how the same or similar things happen in other countries and all these happenings have one common reason.

What this is we will speak about in the next article.

MINNEAPOLIS ARRANGES FOR RUSS REVOLUTION CELEBRATION ON NOV. 8

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 1.—A celebration of the eighth anniversary of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics will take place in Minneapolis on Sunday, Nov. 8, at the Moose Hall, 43 South Fourth street, at 8 p. m., with C. A. Hathaway, J. F. Emme of St. Paul and J. P. Cannon of Chicago, as the speakers.

MINN. WORKERS PROTEST HORTHY MURDER REGIME

Demand Rakosi and His Comrades Be Freed

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 1.—Under the auspices of the International Labor Defense, a mass meeting was held last Sunday evening at the Unitarian church protesting against the attempted expulsion of the heroic leader of the Hungarian labor movement, Mathias Rakosi, and the persecution of 105 Communists and left socialists. A telegram of protest was dispatched to the Hungarian embassy in Washington, D. C., by the meeting.

State Senator S. A. Stockwell spoke on behalf of the liberals. John Gabriel Soltis spoke as the representative of the local I. L. D. C. A. Hathaway, district organizer of the Workers (Communist) Party, spoke on behalf of that party.

Not So Nice Right Here.

Senator Stockwell, who has always distinguished himself in the defense of persecuted workers, called attention to the fact that while the Horthy regime in Hungary was a horrible thing, the fact remained that things were not much better in our own country. He cited the continued incarceration of 128 men in the prisons of America, as proof of his contention.

"While we protest against the attempted execution of Rakosi by the Horthy government, let us not forget to clean our own house, too," the senator declared.

John Gabriel Soltis analysed the struggle of the Hungarian proletariat under the Austro-Hungarian empire, up to the collapse of that ramshackle kingdom.

He pointed out that the I. L. D. was interested in the case of the Hungarian workers, as it is in the cases of all workers hounded by capitalism, for the good and sufficient reason that the blow struck at Rakosi and his comrades is also directed at the American working class.

In this connection he made an appeal for all workers to join the I. L. D. to which appeal there was a fine response.

Wall Street Backs Horthy.

C. A. Hathaway made a splendid address on the Hungarian revolution. He clearly proved that American finance is the prop which supports the Horthy white terror, and, therefore, is behind the attempted legal murder of Rakosi.

Hathaway also outlined in detail how the Hoover food commission in 1920, strangled the Hungarian Soviet government.

If you want to thoroughly understand Communism—study it.

Postmaster General Speeds Up Workers as Form of Wage Cut

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Secretary-Treas. Thos. F. Flaherty of the national federation of post office clerks announces that speeding-up of clerks in postoffices in all the principal cities is being intensified, and that a bill prohibiting this form of over-working of federal employes will be introduced in congress in December by Rep. Schneider of Wisconsin.

Postmaster General New, defeated last winter in his opposititon to a wage adjustment for the postal workers, is directing this system of compelling the men to work faster and still faster. Flaherty says the records show that the individual clerk handles more letters in a given time today, and at a less cost, than at any time in the entire history of the department.

Give Morgan's Spies Something to Report!

URGES TRAINING CAMPS TO OFFSET PACIFISM IN U. S.

Extension of civilian training camps and of reserve officers' training camps to combat "the growing pacifism of America," was urged by Wheeler P. Bloodgood before the military intelligence unit, meeting yesterday in the Palmer House.—Press Report.

What are these secret, and semi-secret military meetings, a meager account of which creeps into the press from time to time, and what is this "military intelligence unit" which convenes in a loop hotel?

Why all this furore in the capitalist press over the need for greater efficiency in all branches of imperialist butchery?

The country is at peace so far as actual warfare with other powers is concerned; why must "pacifism" be "offset?" The Locarno pact has been signed and hailed as the opening of a new era in which war will cease but if the publicity in the capitalist press is any indication, and it has all the earmarks of the "preparedness compaign" which preceded the entry of America into the world war, the American ruling class is getting ready for a war of conquest under the guise of "national defense."

The clue to the causes of the feverish militarist manifestations can be found in another section of the capitalist press—that portion wherein is chronicled the progress of the various debt settlements.

To date, Great Britain, France, Belgium, Italy, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Roumania and Ethonia have either accepted Wall Street's terms on their loans, are negotiating for settlements or are being threatened because no settlement has been made.

Huge loans to foreign governments by the U. S. treasury and state departments, huge private loans to capitalists of other countries by "private" bankers—the House of Morgan—backed by the state department, huge sums invested in Mexico and South America and China—the ever growing need, augmented by the constant flow of gold to America, for more foreign investment to prevent inflation at home, these things determine the foreign policy of the United States—a policy of imperialist expansion whose domestic expression is the militarization of the masses of the population.

These crumbs of information such as we quote are only fragments from the gigantic, bloody feast that American imperialism is preparing.

The skeleton of a huge military organism is now being formed out of college students, businessmen, lawyers, technicians and other elements aligned with the ruling class. These elements are already spying on the workers, establishing a nationwide espionage system, qualifying for the "cushy" jobs.

The working class will be forced to furnish the cannon-fodder.

No more urgent task confronts the Communist Party than the exposure of this conspiracy against the workers of this and other lands and the arousing of the labor movement to action against the growing danger.

Imperialism is the period in which a few great powers struggle for world domination. The era of peaceful competition passed with the world war.

"Imperialist war," said Lenin, "is capitalist competition carried to its logical conclusion."

The working class must make its opposition so well-known and effective that the "military intelligence units" need read only the stern faces of millions of wage earners to understand that their schemes will be determinedly challenged at home.

Hearst-Hylan Back Tammany

After months of the vilest mud-slinging in which William Randolph Hearst and his political protege, Mayor John F. Hylan of New York, proved that "little Jimmy" Walker—Tammany candidate for mayor who defeated Hylan in the primaries—and his sponsor, Gov. Al Smith, are political looters of the public funds and hirelings of the big interests, this pair has announced their intention of supporting the Tammany ticket on Tuesday.

This means that petit-bourgeois politicians in the democratic party unite with Tammany and Wall Street for the sake of party harmony and in order to get a share of the rich loot. New York City alone spends more than $400,000,000 a year. The modern pirates with hundreds of millions of dollars close at hand make Capt. Kidd, who spent his piratical existence scuttling ships and cutting throats, look like a bungling amateur.

Hearst, Hylan and Smith—a combination that will win in New York tomorrow. Despite their loathing of each other they unite in defense of the interests of the class they serve. Like Dumas' musketeers their slogan in the final analysis is "All for one and one for all; united we stand, divided we fall!"

In the game of looting New York, and placing in power the corrupt Tammany machine, always ready to crush the workers at the slightest indication of determined action on their part, the unspeakable role of the socialist party should be given due consideration.

Mr. Rev. Norman Thomas and his associates, as well as those claiming to speak for labor in general were requested by the Workers (Communist) Party to form a united front in order that there might be a united labor ticket in the elections. They refused and insisted upon their own campaign, the result of which will be to divide the working class forces on election day. Paid agents of the capitalist class could not be expected to render better service to Tammany.

Emile Daeschner, French ambassador to the United States, is to be recalled and his place filled by Senator Victor Henry Berenger, who is reputed to be a noted financial authority. Caillaux who went down to ignominous defeat was also a financial authority, but his wisdom did not avail against the grim fact that the House of Morgan wants complete domination over France. The latest "authority" will meet the same fate.

If that sensational defender of the nordic race, Mr. Lathrop Stoddard, who writes much of the "Rising Tide of Color" in the colonies, were in Chicago, he might find material in the American Negro Labor Congress for another hysterical book

Why A Labor Party? - - - -

By J. C. THOMPSON.
State Pres. Arkansas Farmer-Labor Union.

POLITICAL parties are not mere accidents. They do not just happen to be.

The history of all governments, based on the suffrage of the people, has been that when a respectably large group of its citizens become conscious of the fact that within that group their material interests were harmonious, but were antagonistic to the material interests of other groups they organized for themselves a political party, that they might use that party as a means to capture the political powers, to the end that such powers might be used to protect and further advance, the material interests of the group in power.

To state it another way. Political parties are but the political business agents of groups, or classes, the members of which have been drawn together by a mutuality of interest.

Political parties are, always have been, and always will be, class organizations so long as classes conflicting material interests exists.

Governments administered by political parties are therefore necessarily class governments.

A GOVERNMENT of all the people, by all the people, for all the people, is a myth. It is a beautiful but impractical and impossible dream and will remain so as long as our methods of production of the material things of life divide the people into groups or classes with material interests antagonistic one to the other.

So long as the farmer produces a bale of cotton for which he can get only $100 or $150 and the wage workers make the bale of cotton into overalls for an aggregate wage of less than $150 and then farmers and wage workers are compelled to pay more than $700 for the overalls back—so long as this method of production and distribution obtains there will be a conflict of interest between those who produce and distribute overalls and those who gather profits from overalls.

Both the democratic and republican parties are owned bodily and controlled completely by these groups, or classes, that profit by exploiting the labor of both farmers and industrial workers. Their platforms are written and their campaign funds are furnished by these people. Labor has practically no voice in their councils and can expect no relief from their administrations.

THE quarrel between the democratic and republican parties is a family quarrel within the ranks of the exploiting classes, over the manner of dividing among themselves the profits they have wrung from hte sweat and toil of the working class. We have reached a time in the economic struggle of the working class when a political party of the working class is an imperative necessity.

So long as we leave in the hands of our economic enemies, the political powers they can and will nullify any advantages that we may gain thru our trade unions or our farmers cooperative organizations.

As an example of how this can be done, we have only to cite a concrete example of two in the state of Arkansas.

Let us suppose that every union farmer in the state of Arkansas should receive by virtue of his being a union man $20 a bale increase for his cotton this year, it would not begin to pay the interest on the road bonds levied against the farms of the state by a democratic administration.

If they saved a dollar a barrel on every barrel of flour they used for a year, by buying it collectively, they would not save enough to pay the excessive profits handed to the school text book trust by the present democratic administration.

I would not for one moment minimize the importance of the workers building their economic organizations. These are necessary to even a semblance of economic freedom; but without a political party of their own, with which to safeguard ther victories won in their struggles on the economic field, these victories will be of questionable worth and of doubtful permanency.

OUR economic enemies—those who live and grow rich upon the profits of toil—have their economic organizations, such as the bankers' association, the merchants' and manufacturers' associations, and others too numerous to mention.

In the council chambers of these associations, the men who live, not by labor, but off it, work out their political programs, these programs are carried to the state and national conventions of their political parties and are there used as material for the construction of the state and national democratic and republican platforms.

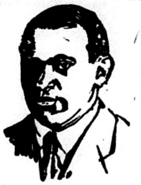
The workers are not invited into these council chambers. They have no voice whatever in preparing the material out of which old party platforms are made. It is only on rare occasions that a working man is found in a state or national convention of these parties, where the platforms are finished.

Let us then, as workers, learn a lesson from those who live off of our labor and build for ourselves a political party to be used by the working class as a means by which we can sweep ourselves into political supremacy, to the end that we may write the laws of state and nation in harmony with the material interests of those who work.

Mathias Rakosi Must Not Die! - -

By Bela Kun

Mathias Rakosi



Chained, physically exhausted, yet firm and steady stands Comrade Mathias Rakosi before his jailers, hirelings of Hungarian landlords and capitalists. The steadfastness of this revolutionist, strong in body and soul, ready to sacrifice himself to the people's cause, calls forth all over Hungary an unlimited enthusiasm of the working class and even the Hungarian bourgeois press writes about him with a strange mixture of respect and hatred.

Comrade Rakosi belongs to that leading staff of the labor movement which rose out of the war and revolution. However, his participation in the labor movement dates from the period before the war.

He was born in 1892 of a petty bourgeois family in Southern Hungary, belonging now to Jugo-Slavia. He made an early acquaintance with want. From 1909 he became one of the leaders of the radical student movement sympathetic to the labor movement. After having finished his education in the Academy of Commerce, he worked from 1912 until the beginning of the war in Hamburg and later in London as an official of a private firm. Here Comrade Rakosi takes an energetic part in the activity of economic and political labor organizations. From 1913 he was a member of the "social democratic federation" of England.

At the beginning of the war Comrade Rakosi was mobilized in the Austro-Hungarian army. In 1915 he came to Russia as a war prisoner and was sent to Chita in Eastern Siberia. The revolution set him free. When at the beginning of the revolution he returned again to Hungary, he was charged with the instruction of the repatriated prisoners of war. At that time Comrade Rakosi was busy with revolutionary propaganda in the army, which far surpassed the limits of the pacifist anti-militarism. He was spared from courtmartial only by the crash of the Austro-Hungarian empire and the outbreak of the revolution.

In the autumn of 1918 the Hungarian Communist Party was organized. Comrade Rakosi was one of the first who presented himself to the central secretariat of the party asking for work. He became an organizer and agitator of the Communist Party incessantly making a tour of most of the provincial towns, agitating amongst the masses, creating organizations. He was undoubtedly one of the best and most diligent workers of the party. With a boiling energy Comrade Rakosi manifested a sharp sensitiveness and the cold calculating mind of a politician, quite uncommon at his age. The arrest of the leaders of the Communist Party on Feb. 20, 1919 included Comrade Rakosi.

In the council of the people's commissars of Soviet Hungary he was assistant commissar of commerce. During the revolution he was at the disposition of the Soviet government for every kind of commission. Where any difficulties or dangers appeared, Comrade Rakosi was the first to be. Were we in need of a disciplined, calm politician, we always applied to Comrade Rakosi. When the Czecho-Slovakian army threatened the only coal mine district that remained in possession of the Soviet republic, Comrade Rakosi with several hundred workmen, whom he had succeeded in organizing in military bands, held the front for a few days and while coal was being loaded, led the work in the mines so that the transportation of troops was made possible and the existence of the Soviet republic was saved for at least a short period.

After the fall of the dictatorship of the proletariat, Comrade Rakosi fled to Vienna. They put him, together with other leaders of the Communist Party, in the concentration camp of Carlstein, where he directed the whole organization work including the keeping of connections with the outer world. When set free he took part in the second congress of the Comintern, as delegate of the Hungarian Communist Party. He won a general sympathy and respect by his statements concerning the role of the party. Shortly he became secretary of the executive committee of the Comintern, the third congress elected him again to that post. Even in the Comintern Comrade Rakosi was working in most instances, in the most responsible positions. Finally the Hungarian Communist Party requested Comrade Rakosi to go back to lead the political and organizational work at home.

The difficult, dangerous work that was laid upon him in Hungary Rakosi performed with enormous enthusiasm, steadfastness, calmness and practical knowledge. He enjoyed the general respect, the love of his comrades and their unanimous support. He succeeded in uniting the best elements of the old and new generations of the revolutionary workers.

The Hungarian Communists believe that the cause for which Comrade Rakosi fell into prison and for which a death sentence is threatening him, will not remain without international support, as in the period of the struggle of the Hungarian Communists for the Soviet republic. The Comintern has become stronger since then and this must be a guarantee that Comrade Rakosi will not fall the victim of Horthy, the hanger.

THE YELLOW DOG

By FRED HENIG.

"HELL, Jim," Rowland began, as he reached for his cigarettes. "I wouldn't mind your black eye nor the gash in your head, if it got me the 'rep' you got. Every member of the union in town is talking about you!"

"It'll be all over the country in a week," added "Spike" Hennessey, "and everyone in the crowded hall of the local nodded their heads in admiration.

"Ya kin run f'r president, if the election was on, and win hands down," Morowitz heaped further laurels on the hero of yesterday's battle with the police.

"Christ—but wasn't Chippoliin yellow—the dirty dog!"

BUT Jim Pasco—the Jim Pasco—who "ruined" three cops and mauled a "Fink;" about whom the papers were printing long stories with seven-column heads—the strike leader—"A Modern Spartacus," one headline hailed him.

The gang stopped to listen. Jack Minski spat unerringly into a distant receptacle and shifted his tobacco. "Spike" lit a cigaret without taking his eyes off Jim Pasco. A chair scraped—the local gave their ready ears. Jim had "guts."

Weakly he raised his hands to adjust the bandage on his head and turned to the last speaker.

"Chippolini wasn't yellow," he began, "he just didn't know any better. "Yes," he waved aside the protest, "he beat it from the scrap alright but don't forget you guys forced him into the union."

"Well, it got him wages, didn't it?" "Spike" protested.

"Yes,—sure,—but listen—

"ABOUT five years ago, a guy landed in Pittsburgh—broke. He was young, about twenty-five—and he'd just been knockin' around, workin', readin' some, livin' in flop-houses—when he had the price—you know the kind!"

Jim drew a cigaret from his vest pocket without lighting it.

"He got a job—new in the trade—bluffed it. Sure he joined the union—had to."

"Spike" offered a light and after a "drag" at his cigaret Jim continued:

"The business agent didn't give a damn—something like Jack Walsh in Local 38—just makin' a soft livin' outa it!"

Someone muttered under his breath.

"NOBODY else gave a damn neither! The guy just worked, never attended a union meeting and nobody else cared if he did. He'd a never known there was a union if the business agent didn't come around for his dues.

"And then the strike broke out. The business agent tried to stave it off but the gang was out for more 'dough' for a long time and this trip they meant business!

"The poor say who'd just started workin' wanted to keep on workin'."

"I know them birds . . ." Morowitz interrupted, but warning glances cut him short.

"Well, they were out for about three weeks—the new guy too—until one day they run into trouble.

"There was a big meeting on and the cops tried to break it up. One of them got killed, two o' the boys got shot and a wagon full o' them was taken to the hospital."

"The old story," someone added, but Jim kept on.

"Everybody was in it, 'n everybody got hurt—all but the new guy. They saw him sneakin' off when the fun started."

"Why the dirty yellow dog!" "Spike" blurted out.

"That was me!" Jim answered and struck a match to relight his cigarette.

"Cut it out!" "Spike" growled skeptically, "You!"

"Yes, Spike—me!" Jim continued. "And it would o' still been me if it wasn't for old Frank Lister—you know, large family, killed last year workin' overtime when he was all in.

"After that Pittsburgh strike, I hatta beat it. Couldn't work in that town anymore. Not that I gave a damn for the union. That didn't bother me—nor the strike. I wasn't much interested.

"I landed in Chicago and got another job in the trade again—and met old Frank. He'd recognized me.

"But he didn't say a word. One day he took me to a union meetin'. And often at lunch he'd talk. Why we needed a union, why the workers oughta stick together—and he gave me papers to read—all kinds. You know old Frank was one o' them radicals. But he was strong for the union—would o' give his life for it!

"Well, to make a long story short, it wasn't long before I'd realized what a piker I'd been—and I got busy in the union.

"That was me five years ago—that's Chippolini today!"

No one had anything to say. "Spike" moved uneasily and turned to the crowd:

"I think we oughta send somebody out to visit this Chippolini guy," he suggested. "I don't think much o' this bird myself, but maybe he don't know better."

"I'll go," Rowland volunteered, "but if he can't see a good argument, I'll knock his "can" off!"

"That's a good committee," Jim said laughingly, "they'll either convince or bury that bimbi.

"Now you guys 'd better see they get relieved on the picket line!"

'APPEARANCES'

A REVIEW
By SYLVAN A. POLLACK

NEW YORK.—The first play written by a Negro playwright to find its way to Broadway can now be seen at the Frolic Theatre, New York.

The author, Garland Anderson, a former bell-hop in a California hotel and latter a elevator runner in the New Amsterdam Theatre of Flo Ziegfeld, has written a play which, while it has many flaws in it, and has a sort of religious basis, is never the less a worth while achievement. The topic is an attempt to frame up two Negroes, charging them with assaulting a white woman.

Three Negroes are in the cast and give a good account of themselves, especially one named Doe Doe Green, who shows how the persecution by the white man is the past reacted on him while he was on trial.

When asked by the district attorney, why, if he was innocent, did he attempt to escape from the mob that wanted to lynch him. To which he replied, that being innocent would not help him very much after the mob carried out its desire to string him up to a telegraph pole.

The play, the first that Mr. Anderson ever wrote, shows that he has much potential ability which might be developed in a future play by him, if he ever writes another one.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30—Army aviators established a new record for bombing proficiency at Langley Field, Va., the war department announces.

From a height of 5,000 feet, Lieut. C. S. Shankle, bomber, and Lieut. Levi Beery, pilot, dropped nine 10-pound practice bombs on a ground target, scoring 100 per cent.

Seven of the bombs struck the target and the other two were near enuf to be classed as constructive hits.

Portrait of a Big Business Man

Reviewed by Leland Olds.

P. A. L., by Felix Riesenberg. Robert M. McBride & Co., New York, $2.

THE millionaire parasite energetically coining money out of other people's pockets thru catch-phrase educational campaigns stands before you in P. A. L. Tangerman. Tangerman, the leading character in Felix Riesenberg's very interesting novel, P. A. L., reflects in some degree the Wrigleys, etc., who have elbowed their way into the ranks of the rich by clever salesmanship in unscrupulous exploitation.

TANGERMAN'S Cudahey Vacuum Dome, his Vim Vigor pills, Glandula, Blue Bird Cigarets, Mont Healy institute and countless other enterprises seem uproarious burlesque and yet they provoke strangely similar echoes from the real world. East Grapenuts, Chew Spearmint for Digestion, Chesterfields for the Discriminating Business Man, not to mention the blurbs of LaSalle Extension University, all these slogans are not means for providing the public with valuable goods but for achieving some predatory business man's ambition for money leadership.

P. A. L. whirls you into the rush of this likable, energetic, vulgar American's enterprises. When he succeeds in coining dollars everything is his, credit, fellowship and fawning publicity—yet P. A. L. generally glimpses the underlying fraud.

"ETHICS," he remarks early in the story "are elastic. My people back in Iowa believed it wrong for one man on a raft, let us say, to hog all the available provisions. But as the raft bets bigger, about the size of our earth, it becomes highly respectable to grab off tremendous blocks of the common sustenance, namely money."

"YOU see, Mark," he says later as he slides out from under a failing business leaving stockholders to hold the bag, "we incorporate our activities and at the same time decorporate ourselves. If the job in hand busts up, it's the corporation that's in bad. The legally decorporated man walks away and leaves the corporation in the hands of the stockholders where it belongs."

EXPLAINING why he bothered to put some sheep gland in his worthless respirative glandula he recalls the experience of Lafax with his 2c ground baked crusts called Fig Jewels, retailing for 15 cents thus: "The cover of his original package contained a marvellous story of dextrine, p[illegible]ne and fig-sugar solvents. Later on the unimaginative government made him take this humorous descriptive matter off the labels; and then he annexed vitamins."

THE author is P. A. L.'s confidential partner, useful but understanding little of all the high tension activity, except for a growing sense that it is all fraud. He comes up against the founder of the American Patriotic Chamber of Commerce with its "Whoop-up week" and attends banquets given by the "influential national organization of business men," the Reciprocating Club. He considers how rich men endow the word of Christ and draw perpetual interest in holy works, how even the church is glad to be seen walking with Standard Oil on Sunday. He reflects, "Take away the mails and 90 per cent of these people would have to earn their living by honest work." He touches the wheat pit "where maniacs gamble in terms of food and hunger, staking the product of an empire of grain against the need for bread, increasing the price per loaf in distant villages across the sea."

WITH the author, you both like Tangerman and despise him, but you stick to him right up to the minute when his career is suddenly terminated by a bullet from a woman's gun. You are aware of the boundless insincerity, yet baffled by the complete conformity to modern business ethics, the bankers behind the scenes encouraging him and sharing the spoils. His wife who is hardly his wife realizes that this business magnate is "a milker, a full grown man pulling at the teats of life, always taking the real work of others, shouldering a burden on others, that is passed along. What he takes leaves a void, and so on down to the bottom where we find the helpless and the sstarving. All parasites, mark, subsist on the poor. Without men like Pal, and the thousands they create and support, we would have no slums, no starving children."

Western Bank Fails.

SPOKANE, Wash., Nov. 1.—With deposits amounting to $240,000, the First National bank of Davenport, Wash., failed to open yesterday. Whether there are any assets is doubtful. This bank is in an exclusive wheat country and went into bankruptcy thru financing wheat farmers. There are loans to renters as high as $20,000, where the securities are chattels such as machinery and horses, of hardly any value.

LEFT WING WINS NEW VICTORY

HOW THE ANTHRACITE STRIKERS ARE BEING BETRAYED, WILL BE TOLD BY PROGRESSIVE LEADER

Readers of The DAILY WORKER will be interested to read the following article, the first one of a series to be written upon the anthracite miners, their strike, its significance, and the proposals of the Progressive Miners' Committee for the miners, by the secretary of the committee, Alex Reid, a miner who has spent 29 years working in the mines and who, while speaking for the Progressive Miners' Committee in the anthracite region, was framed up on by treacherous union officials and local capitalist authorities and railroaded into the Scranton jail where he remained for a full month before release a week ago. Other articles will follow daily.

By ALEX REID

(Secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee.)

(Article I.)

The anthracite coal fields of America situated in three counties in the eastern section of the state of Pennsylvania comprise the hard coal industry of this coutry and employ 158,000 mine workers.

It is doubtful if anywhere on the face of the earth there exists another 450 square miles of territory with political and economic corruption to equal that which exists here.

The Hell Hole of the Mines.

Truly, the anthracite region has been referred to as the hell hole of the American mining industry where the miners are politically and economically enslaved. Here today we have 150,000 mine workers on strike for a ten per cent increase in wages, full recognition of the union, and a few minor changes in working conditions.

All these are members of the United Mine Workers of America, while thousands of members of the same organization have been loading anthracite and repairing and maintaining the coal companies' property, thereby aiding and contributing to their own defeat, and this with the active support of the mine workers' union officials, who seem to be entirely incompetent or traitorous to the coal-diggers' cause.

Caring for Bosses' Property.

I will return to the question of starvation wages and hellish working conditions in a future article. The present article deals with a condition in the anthracite region that calls for the immediate attention, not only of the hard-coal miners, but the bituminous miners as well, namely—stock coal loading, and washing, and maintaining and repairing the coal companies' property.

Thruout the anthracite field the miners are slowly awakening to the fact that the strike is being mismanaged and the coal-diggers are com-

U. S. CUTS OUT OTHER POWERS AT PEKING MEET

Willing to Go Beyond Washington Pact

PEKING, China, Nov. 2.—That the diplomats are weakening under the pressure of Chinese demands for complete autonomy, and particularly America, with its desire to cut out the influence of Britain and Japan, is shown in the statement of Silas H. Strawn, U. S. delegate to the tariff conference, in the meeting Friday of the sub-committee on tariff autonomy.

America, said Strawn, is ready to go beyond the limits set by the Washington conference and discuss freedom of China to set its own tariffs. He wished, however, that the interior tariff or "likin" be abolished coincidentally with the institution of autonomy.

The Japanese, thru Delegate Hoiki, tried to save his position by insisting on the Japanese proposal of delaying serious steps for five years, in the meantime China to be "content" with two and a half per cent tariff allowed by the Washington conference.

Reports from the war front between Chang Tso-lin and Wu Pei-fu, say that Chang's soldiers have stopped the northward advance of General Sun Chuang-fang, Chekiang leader south of Hsuchow in northern Kiangsu.

TWO GREEK COMMUNISTS ELECTED AS MAYORS DURING MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS DESPITE MARTIAL LAW

ATHENS, Nov. 2.—In the recent municipal elections held in all Grecian cities, Communists were elected as mayors of Xanthi, the biggest industrial center of Thrace, where the American Tobacco company has its largest warehouses and factories, and Saloniki.

In Saloniki, the labor unions controlled by the Communists formed a united front with the refugees and put up a Communist on a united labor ticket.

The royalists were defeated in most cities with the exception of Patras and two or three other municipalities. The republicans carried practically the entire nation, due to the martial law prevailing with the republicans controlling the forces of the state.

Due to the Greek Communist Party being declared illegal, and suppression of the Greek Communist papers, it is hard to say whether any other Communist candidates were elected.

PURCELL VISIT WELCOMED BY N. Y. UNIONISTS

Labor Crisis Demands World Unity

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Representatives of over 100,000 trade unionists meeting at Beethoven Hall Sunday afternoon laid the final plans for the big reception planned for A. A. Purcell official representative of the British trade unions in this country. Mr. Purcell is to address a mass meeting here on Tuesday, Nov. 17, at the New Star Casino, under the auspices of the trade union committee for organizing the Purcell meeting.

The conference was addressed by Alfred J. Boulton of the Stereotypers' Union and a prominent figure in the local labor movement, in reference to Purcell's visit Boulton said:

Labor Crisis Demands Unity

"We are glad to have him here to speak on world trade union unity. England instead of going forward, has gone backward since the world war, altho the sun never sets on the British empire, according to an old byword, we can now say that wages never rise. The crisis in England demands trade union unity."

Mr. Boulton then went on to contrast conditions in England with those in Russia. According to the report of Col. Haskell, of the American relief administration, Moscow is one of the busiest centers in Europe. Conditions in Russia today as compared with those of four years ago, are nothing short of a miracle. Russia is the only country in Europe, where day by day conditions are growing better. For the first time in history, Russia has a workingman's government.

Insist on Investigation.

After two hours discussion, Washington and Hamilton decided to recognize the revolutionary government of France, while the reactionaries refuse to recognize Russia altho she has been established for eight years. We want a scientific investigation of Russia. We are going to hear both sides in spite of Coolidge and the other reactionaries.

The conference is planning a midnight banquet for Purcell. The next meeting will be held Sunday, Nov. 15.

OAKLAND UNIONS PLEDGE SUPPORT IN MINE STRIKE

California Workers Get in Action

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 2.—Four local unions in the neighboring city of Oakland, Cal., have adopted resolutions pledging support to the miners on strike in the anthracite region of Pennsylvania., They are Carpenters' Local No. 892,. Carpenters'. No. 36, Sign Painters' No. 878 and Machinists' No. 284.

This action of the four local unions shows that the coast workers, who once played an important part in the labor movement of the country, are beginning to get in action again. This action by the Oakland locals will probably be an incentive for other unions in the vicinity to take anction in favor of supporting the struggle of the strikers in the anthracite fields.

Following is the text of the resolution adopted by Carpenters' No. 892. The other unions adopted resolutions of a similar nature:

Resolution on the Anthracite Strike.

Whereas, more than one hundred and fifty thousand members of the are on strike in the anthracite fields, and

Whereas, these workers are demanding an increase in wages, full recognition of their union and better working conditions against the efforts of the coal operators to reduce wages and enforce worse working conditions, and

Whereas, the successful resistance of the miners in this struggle, will stiffen the resistance of the workers in other industries to similar effort and aid in creating a general fight of the workers against the attempt of the capitalists to reduce the standard of living of the workers, and

Whereas, the federal and state governments have in the past strikes in the coal fields intervened by the use of the governmental power in the interest of the coal bosses, notably President Wilson thru securing an injunction against the miners' union in 1919, President Harding thru calling upon the governors to fill the mines with soldiers in 1922, and both the federal and state government in the anthracite strike of 1923, now therefore,

Be it resolved, that we the members of this Local Union, pledge our support both morally and financially to the anthracite miners in their strike, and be it further

Resolved: that we demand that both the federal and state government do not intervene in the anthracite strike, and that neither in any way use the governmental power against the struggling workers of the anthracite field, and be it still further,

Resolved, that a copy of this resolution be sent to the press, and aleo to the congressmen representing this locality.

K. K. K. DRAGON SHOWN SADIST IN MURDER TRIAL

Murdered Girl's Body Mass of Bruises

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NOBLESVILLE, Ind., Nov. 2.—The sadistic character of Grand Dragon D. C. Stephenson, of the Indiana ku klux klan was revealed here today when Beatrice Spratley, English war nurse who attended Miss Madge Oberholtzer in her last illness, took the witness stand. Stephenson and two other klansmen are on trial for the brutal assault including rape upon Miss Oberholtzer and are charged with torturing her with such fiendish cruelty that rather than endure the agony she took poison, dying from the results of the abuse and poison.

The nurse, IMss Spratley, testified regarding the condition of the patient's body when Miss Oberholtzer was brought to her in a dying condition.

Bruises Cover Body.

"The patient was cold and blue, said Miss Spratley. "She had lacerations and bruises all over her body and was in severe pain."

"Did any those lacerations become infected or had they healed before she died?" asked the prosecutor.

"The lacerations on her breasts became infected and there were marks on her thighs and legs when she died," was the reply.

Earlier in the day Judge Sparks overruled a motion of the defense to halt the trial, recalled the jury and ordered the tria lto proceed.

The usual motley gang of curiosity seekers an dku kluxers, who obviously sympathize with Stephenson, despite the damning testimony piling up against him, swarm the court room. So degraded are the members of the hooded order that they defend anything one of their own gang of degenerates does.

MILITANT PRESSERS OF LOCAL 35, I. L. G. W. U., SMASH REACTION IN ELECTION BY NINE TO ONE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 2.—The left wing of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union has won another sweeping victory in the election held for the Cloak and Dress Pressers' Local 35, hitherto a stronghold of the arch-reactionary nest of gangsterism.

The left wing elected the entire administration, consisting of the manager, the chairman and twenty-four executive members, carrying also the entire delegation of ten for the coming convention at Philadelphia of the I. L. G. W.

For the First Time in Years

This is the first time in the last six or seven years that the pressers had an election of their own under the supervision of a rank and file election committee elected by themselves. Being led by the militant group of progressives, they have succeeded in the course of a short period in ridding their union of the most vicious clique—Breslau and company—who was made to resign.

The election that took place Saturday was the culminating point of this militant left wing struggle. For five long hours the pressers stood in line for blocks, anxious to cast their vote for the left wing. They were determined to complete the job of exterminating strong arm rule and misrepresentative officials, and the results are evidence to this determination.

Of the twelve hundred ballots cast in the election, the left wingers J. Goreabky and H. Gerchikoff, the candidates respectively for manager and chairman, polled respectively 917 and 821 votes, while the opposition candidates who were supported by Sigman and company, polled respectively 121 and 105 votes.

The left wing has won Local 35 of the I. L. G. W. U. pressers, by an overwhelming landslide of nine to one.

STRIKE-BREAKING CAL NOT READY YET FOR A DRIVE AGAINST MINERS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Despite pressure from New York and New England states, where the shortage of anthracite coal is most effective, there was little indication today that the government will abandon its "hands off" attitude in the hard coal strike, now in its ninth week.

LABOR CONGRESS URGES NEGROES TO JOIN UNION

Denounce Use of Race as Strikebreakers

The American Negro Labor Congress which closed its sessions Saturday, Oct. 31, at the Metropolitan Community Center, 3118 Giles Ave., in one of its last sessions passed a resolution urging the American Negro workers to join the American Federation of Labor wherever possible. Where the unions maintain color bars that bar the Negro worker from the union, the Negro is urged to form unions of Negro workers and then attempt to join the American Federation of Labor.

In the following resolution adopted by the congress, the use of the Negro as a scab is condemned and the congress promises to fight any attempt to use the Negro as a strikebreaker to break the strikes of other workers:

The Negro and Organized Labor

"The Negro workers, who constitute one-seventh of the workers of America, are today an important factor which must be incorporated within

THOUSANDS PAY TRIBUTE AT THE BIER OF COMRADE FRUNZE IN THE FACE OF MOSCOW'S BLINDING SNOW

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Nov. 2.—Undaunted by a blinding, biting snow storm, thousands stood all night in the streets waiting for dawn when the bier of Comrade Mikhail Frunze, dead Soviet commissar of war, was opened to public view.

Long lines passed respectfully before the body of their dead comrade, in a tribute that almost equalled that paid Lenin. It is estimated that half a million people will have paid their respects before the funeral tomorrow.

Cleveland Communists Call for Fight for the Interests of the Workers

The statement by the Workers (Communist) Party of Cleveland, Ohio, on the municipal elections follows:—

THE workers of Cleveland are participating in the municipal elections without a party of their own. There are several trade union candidates nominated as non-partisans, who, however, are not taking a clear stand on the issues that affect the working class of this city. These trade unionists are asking for the support of the workers on election day on the basis that the workers can be represented by trade unionists regardless of whether they have a working class platform or not.

The Workers (Communist) Party, owing to technical reasons, has not been able to put any candidates on the ballot. As a working class party, the Workers (Communist) Party asked the trade union candidates where they stand on real working class issues for this campaign. The Workers (Communist) Party asked several of these candidates the following questions:

1. Whether they were ready to form a labor group in the council distinct from the other capitalist and progressive groups, to fight for the interests of the workers.

2. Whether they were prepared to aid in the creation of a labor party based upon the trade unions, labor political and fraternal organizations, and to fight for amendments to the city charter which would enable the labor party to place labor party candidates on the ballot in the municipal elections.

3. Whether they would fight for better housing conditions for the working class and against the high rents.

4. Whether they would fight against the rising cost of living, for municipal ownership of all public utilities with workers' control; for the use of organized labor in all public utilities.

5. For strict enforcement of the child labor law.

6. Against religious and military training in the public schools.

7. Against the use of injunctions and police in labor disputes and for the unrestricted right of all workers to organize.

8. Against the persecution of and discrimination against foreign-born workers.

9. Against discrimination and segregation of Negroes.

10. Against religious intolerance, especially as expressed by the ku klux klan.

11. Against a new imperialist war and against support of any government which engages in any war of this nature.

12. For recognition of and trade relations with Soviet Russia.

These are working class issues that will benefit the workers of Cleveland and the whole country. These should have been the issues of the campaign as far as the workers are concerned—but there is no worker who stands on this platform.

The inquiries that we sent to the trade union candidates were answered by only one trade union candidate. This brother endorsed most of the issues presented to him; but on the most important questions—the question of forming a labor group in the council and of aiding in the creation of a labor party—he was silent. By refusing to commit himself on the question of a labor group, this brother demonstrates what the Workers (Communist) Party contends, viz., that these trade unionists do not wish to differentiate themselves from the elements and groups representing the employers' interests in the council and government. By not stating their position on the labor party, all the trade union candidates are acting against the workers' interests.

The other candidates, by remaining altogether silent, give tacit support to the capitalist parties. Their endorsement by citizen leagues, capitalist newspapers etc., demonstrates that the capitalists have no fear of them as long as they do not openly and unequivocally espouse the workers' cause on a working class platform.

The Workers (Communist' Party declares that the workers of Cleveland will get real working class representation in the council and other departments of government only when they have a party of their own. This is the real issue that cannot be evaded.

The Workers (Communist) Party, however, believes that the workers of Cleveland have faith in these trade union candidates and believe that they will act in the council in the interests of the working class. The Workers (Communist) Party points out to the workers that they cannot rely upon promises as long as these trade union candidates are free—that is to say, are not elected on a labor party platform, drawn up and supported by the labor party. They cannot be relied upon to do their duty by the working class of Cleveland as long as there is no party of labor to control their activities, and compel then to fight for the interests of the workers.

The Workers (Communist) Party warns the workers of Cleveland to be on guard. They must not trust promises. In the union, the organized workers, speaking for the masses of workers of Cleveland, should formulate demands which they must compel their representatives in the council to fight for.

They must call upon them to form a labor group in the council to fight for these demands. And above all, if they are elected to the council, they must take steps, together with the trade unions, labor political and fraternal organizations, to lay the basis for a labor party.

The Workers (Communist) Party points out the defects in the position of the trade union candidates and, altho it cannot endorse the platform on which these candidates are running, calls upon the workers of Cleveland to support them—but with the warning: Force the trade union candidates, if elected, to form a labor group in the council distinct from the other groups! Force them to fight for a labor party! Force them to fight for the real issues before the workers of Cleveland, as expressed in the demands above enumerated. Every union should watch the work of these men and insist that they carry on a struggle in labor's interests.

DELEGATION OF NORTH AFRICANS LAUDS RIFFIANS

Pledges Allegiance in Moroccan War

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TARGHEEST, Morocco, Nov. 2.—A delegation of French Moroccans, headed by Abd-el-Kader Tazi, presented a declaration of allegiance to the Riffians, fighting for the independence of Morocco, in the name of the "oppressed millions of the Sheriffian empire."

In this declaration of allegiance, which is considered one of the most important developments of the Riffian war for independence, it states that the "oppressed millions in the so-called French protectorate look to Abd-el-Krim for their salvation and their liberation."

Fight for Freedom

In another section of the declaration, Abd-el-Krim is admonished in the name of the Islamic religion and the common cause of Moroccan freedom, not to make peace with Europe until Morocco is totally evacuated by European troops and the French protectorate is definitely surrendered.

The delegation that presented this declaration of allegiance was met with great enthusiasm by the Riffians who have successfully fought the combined forces of France and Spain.

French Line Stationary

The French army has been unable to make any advances. On one or two fronts they have been forced to retreat by the attacking Riffs. The bombing planes of the French failed to accomplish their purpose, when dropped a number of bombs over the Riffian headquarterss here, as the dugouts, built by captured Senegalese and French troops, are built so that air-raids accomplish but very little.

COMMUNISTS CONTEST MANY ELECTIONS IN TODAY'S BALLOTING

Today municipal and state elections are being held in various parts of the country. Three large municipal elections and one state election are of particular attention to the working class. Of first importance is the New York election, where Comrade Ben Gitlow heads the Workers (Communist) Party ticket against the republicans and democrats (Tammyites) and the labor-baiting socialist party. Cleveland also has elections and a ticket endorsed by organized labor receives the support of the Communists, with reservations and demands that they favor a labor party. In Detroit local labor and its official organ, the Labor News, endorses the same candidate for mayor who is endorsed by Henry Ford, the notorious "open shopper." In New Jersey the Communists are fighting in the state campaign against the Frank Hague (Tammany) machine of Jersey City, trying to elect its candidate, and the republican party that is running a ku klux klan candidate.

The outcome of these contests will be published from a working class standpoint exclusively in The DAILY WORKER.

plaining bitterly that their officers are doing nothing to bring their strike to a successful conclusion. Hunger is now being felt in many of the antrhacite valleys, while stock coal has been washed, loaded and hauled to the market from many small washeries.

Appeal in Vain to Officials.

The mine workers' officials have been appealed to in many meetings of the union to bring out all the maintenance men and stop the washing and loading of stock coal. The workers realize that as long as the union permits the coal companies to load the enormous stocks of inferior coal, the longer will victory be delayed.

The union officials have as yet made no effort to bring out the maintenance men, while the coal owners are happy with the knowledge that they are receiving monumental profits from the inferior stock coal, and that the union is keeping their property in excellent working condition.

Suspect a Sell Out.

This condition of affairs thruout the valley has brot about extreme bitterness against the miners' officials, and many miners informed the writer that it was their belief that some of the union officials were being paid by the coal operators to allow the small washeries to operate. Be that as it may, the miners have become disgusted with this condition to such an extent that many of them feel that if any success will attend their efforts in this strike they—the militant miners themselves —must have more to say about its conduct.

The miners who worked at a mine near the city of Troup, have day after day since the strike commenced, watched the mine washeries in operation. The inferior stock coal washed and loaded by their own union brothers and sent on to the market, every pound of coal being used to defeat them in their strike for a living wage, and this with the full knowledge of their officials.

Use Direct Action.

Time and again the miners have appealed to the officials about this condition, but nothing was done by the officials to stop it, and finally the miners themselves, accompanied by their wives and families, marched to the mine and washeries, and chased the workers off the premises.

Those miners were goaded to desperation by the lack of interest in their behalf by the union officials, and were forced to act themselves, which act resulted in victory. The union officials at that particular time, instead of looking after the miners' affairs which they were being well paid to do, were busy in corrupt local politics, and could be seen in the court room of the city of Scranton aiding in an attempt to railroad progressive miners to jail.

Progressives Urge a Fight.

This condition of affairs must be met with extreme opposition from the progressive miners thruout the anthracite region. The progressive miners demand that their officials stop all washeries from washing coal and stop any coal from being loaded in the anthracite region of any nature or grade until the conclusion of the strike.

The soft coal miners must pass resolutions in their local unions calling on John L. Lewis to take immediate steps to remedy this situation and fight with a real one hundred per cent strike.

PRINCE OF WALES EXPOSURE GALLS BRITISH NABOBS

Royal Family Held in Open Contempt

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Nov. 2.—The heir to the throne of Britain and offspring of that unspeakable embodiment of nameless diseases known as King George, the "fairy prince" of young girls' dreams, is causing a furore in influential circles and exclusive clubs in London because of the publication of photographs showing him impersonating a young lady in a farce presented by his entourage on a British warship during return from his latest trip.

Wales impersonated a female in the one-act farce bearing the salacious title "The Bathroom Door," wore girl's clothing, a wig of curly hair, used rouge and lip-sticks, and wore dainty ribboned slippers similar to the ones worn by his father, King George, in the portrait that recently caused a scandal as it tended to expose the real character of the family and the effeminate habits of the rulers of nominal Britain.

Countrymen Know Him.

The press is taking up the matter and most of the comment is very critical of permitting such actions to become public. There is a strong demand for changing the publicity department for the prince.

Here in London most people know the queer antics of the royal family and look upon it as a part of the prodlem of maintaining a worthless ornament as the figure-head of the government. But the fear expressed is that other parts of the world, particularly India and the colonies, may come to hold in contempt the royal crown and decide that they will not remain in the humiliating position of being ruled by one with the debasing character of a female impersonator

Among the workers of the east end of London the very name of Wales has become an epithet of degradation.

BREAD MERGER GETS VIRTUAL O. K. FROM U. S.

Trade Commission Not to Prosecute

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 1.—The supposed "investigation" of the federal trade commission, as expected, has resulted in a report that there is "no basis" for action by the government against the $400,000,000 merger of the General Baking company, the Ward Baking corporation, the Continental Baking corporation and the Southern Baking company.

M. F. Hudson, the examiner of the commission, reports that "newspaper reports are not well founded," concerning the merger, adding that William B. Ward, of the Ward corporation, tho stating that "nothing had happened" but the organization of a holding company to take over the stock of the General Baking company, also stated that "it was not possible to say what might take place in the future."

GREEK FUR WORKERS IN BIG STRIKE

Left Wing Executive Leads Struggle

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 2.—Unexampled courage and determination has marked the strike of the hitherto unorganized Greek fur workers of New York.

These workers from 1,000 to 1,500 strong, toiling in over 200 open shops for the last few years, have been ruthlessly exploited beyond the belief of almost anyone, because of their lack of organization.

The former right wing reactionaries in charge of the administration of the New York joint board of the Furriers' Union never even attempted to organize the Greek fur workers.

Four weeks ago, however, the new union administration, led by Ben Gold, left wing manager of the joint board, began a vigorous campaign to bring to these oppressed workers the power and aid of the Furriers' Union. Mass meetings were called, leaflets printed and the joint board determined to organize the Greek shops at all costs and enforce union conditions.

To aid the Greek furriers in joining, the joint board reduced initiation fees for them to only 20 per cent of the regular charge and in addition spent thousands of dollars to make the organization drive a success. No energy was saved and full speed ahead was the word passed down the line.

On Tuesday October 27, the call for the general strike in the Greek shops was announced at a big mass meeting of Greek fur workers. The next morning the workers in the fur district witnessed a magnificant demonstration of the Greek furriers on the picket line.

Pickets Show Splendid Spirit

Several pickets were clubbed by the police and several were arrested, but their enthusiasm for the strike swept on over all obstacles. The police clubs and arrests acted like oil thrown on flames. So splendid was the spirit of struggle among the Greek furriers that even the bosses were forced to express their admiration.

Nothing can be compared with the courage of these workers who see before them the goal of victory and behind them the backing of the union's joint board, for the first time seriously interested in their welfare and led by militant unionists fully trusted by the rank and file.

Picket Day and Night

Shops are being picketed day and night. The manufacturers as usual spread false rumors and used threats and every means to break the workers' solidarity. The bosses formed an association of their own, but the fight of the strikers has overwhelmed the bosses.

Conferences between the bosses and the union representatives were held on October 28 and October 31. On Wednesday November 4th, the meeting of the Greek Association is to be held and the final answer given to the union representatives the next morning. The fight goes on though a truce is supposedly established.

The demands of the union are as follows:

1. The 44-hour week instead of 49-hours.
2. Pay for ten legal holidays.
3. Time and a half for overtime.
4. Only union workers to be employed.
5. Minimum scale of wages.
6. Right of union representatives to inspect shops.
7. All other union conditions prevailing in the industry.

The left wing joint board, thru Manager Ben Gold, has stated that it means to carry on the struggle as long as necessary and money will be no object in making the Greek fur workers a organized power in the industry with their fellow workers, mostly Jewish, but who are standing shoulder to shoulder with the Greeks.

League Session Comes to End.

PARIS, Nov. 2.—The league of nations extraordinary session came to anend when the special committee of military officers appointed to supervise the Bulgarian and Greek evacuations in the Balkans, reported that the Greek soldiers and the Bulgarian soldiers had withdrawn to their respective boundaries.

Before closing the sessions the matter of formulating a Balkan pact similar to that which the great powers had formulated at Locarno was discussed. Sir Horace Rumbold, British ambassador to Spain, was placed at the head of a commission to investigate the Greco-Bulgar controversy and report his findings to the December or March sessions of the league of nations commission.

The league has also discussed the possibility of declaring an international zone between the two nations. This procedure is objected to by the Bulgarian reactionary government as well as the military dictatorship of Pangalos in Greece, as it means a loss of territory to both.

British Exploiters Are Finding Enjoyment in Jailing of Communists

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, even the plaintive pleas of George Lansbury, pacifist laborite editor, who has some sympathy for the Union of Soviet Republics, fails to cover the ugly hag of British "democracy" with even a thin veil of pretense that the workers of "the empire" have any right to the enjoyment of civil liberties.

This very transparent shroud has been ripped off this dead thing in the colonies, especially in India, Egypt, and South Africa, where the king's rule jails and kills workers fighting for their class. But it remained for the attack on the British Communist Party, the Young Communist League and the Minority Movement in the trade unions, to help shatter a little more the idea that revolutionary workers in the British homeland have the right to speak, write and meet freely.

• • • •

Poor Lansbury, however, tries to help keep up the sham. He appeals to the great capitalist newspaper owners, for instance, to fight for the rights of the workers as follows:

> "Without any proper authority, and without any order issued on printer or publisher, the whole of the London edition of this week's Workers' Weekly (Communist) has been confiscated and carted off.
> "No one could have known what the paper contained, yet the police exercise their brute force, of course acting under orders, to suppress a newspaper.
> "What becomes of the freedom and liberty of the press? And what is the Newspaper Proprietors' Association going to do about it? I suggest to Lord Burnham and Lord Riddell that if they allow this precedent to pass without protest, they cannot complain if, when labor comes to power, the organized workers insist on the suppression of all papers advocating tory, or, as I would prefer to put it, seditious views."

• • • •

Growing numbers of revolutionary workers in Great Britain cease to worry about the future complaints of a capitalist class in distress. They cheerfully let George Lansbury do it, if his many bitter experiences in the labor movement have not taught him differently. Yet he sticks his toe into the cold waters of the revolutionary struggle in England sufficiently to come forward to furnish bail for the arrested Communists. Thus Lansbury at least gets near to the fight.

• • • •

Some interest attaches to the fact that the two Communists, Thomas Bell and William Gallacher, arrested in Scotland, were escorted from Glasgow to London by 20 "special branch detectives," on the same train that Prince Henry traveled. Since Lansbury holds out a feeler for the suppression of the capitalist press after the workers' revolution, perhaps he might start a discussion in his paper as to how many workers it would take to escort a fallen "Prince" Henry back to London, from some outlying province, after labor had established its own Soviet power. The number would certainly fall under 20.

• • • •

In the meantime the British fascists, in and out of official power, are conducting unceasing attacks on labor's left wing. The American detective, William J. Burns has his counterpart in Sir W. Joynson-Hicks, the home secretary, who requested Baldwin's tory cabinet to approve the raids on the Communists. Joynson-Hicks is stumping the country demanding the conviction of the eight Communists arrested, even before they have been brot to trial. In one speech he declared:

> "I believe the greater part of the audience will be pleased to hear that warrants were issued, and in the majority of cases have been executed, for the arrest of a certain number of notorious Communists."

Of course, it all depends on the make-up of the audience. It would be easy to assemble a large gathering of workers in London today who would be highly pleased with and applaud any number of arrests that might be carried out in Buckingham Palace, among the king's household, or in the houses of parliament, among the capitalist politicians. Even that pleasure will be realized in time, just as the British imperialists today claim enjoyment in the jailing of workers loyal to their own class interests.

GRECO-BULGAR CONTROVERSY MAY FINISH AMBITIONS OF PANGALOS TO BE MUSSOLINI OF GREECE

ATHENS, Nov. 2.—Despite the optimistic assurances of the Pangalos military dictatorship that the league of nations will render its verdict in favor of Greece because the commission to investigate the controversy is headed by Sir Horace Rumbold, who has strong Grecian sympathies, the Greek drachma dropped four per cent on the bourse.

The attempt of Premier Pangalos to fill the well-nigh empty treasury of the Greek government thru the invasion of Bulgaria and the demand for 6,000,000 drachmas for the death of two Greek soldiers and his attempt to make for himself a career as the Mussolini of Greece may end with a demand from the league of nations, which will empty the treasury, to pay Bulgaria for the 16 lives taken and the cities destroyed in the Greek invasion is the fear that permeates the Greek bourse.

Premier Pangalos has aspirations to become the Mussolini of Greece, and he had hoped that thru this display of militant patriotism he would not only fill the treasury, but also establish himself as a great Greek patriot. He also planned to become absolute dictator of Greece and to make his position more secure he was going to re-establish the monarchy. His ambitions have more or less hit the dust.

It is intimated in financial circles that if the league of nations makes a demand on the Greek treasury for loses suffered by the Bulgarians, pressure will be brought to bear on Pangalos for his resignation of the premiership of the country for the hasty invasion of Bulgaria.

China and the World

The Far East is today the storm center of world imperialism. The great powers are gathered at the Peking Conference where vital decisions affecting not only Chinese—but all workers are being made.

The analysis of the situation—the interests of America, England, Japan and France—and the part that Soviet Russia plays—are keenly analyzed in series of articles beginning in tomorrow's issue of The DAILY WORKKER. Be sure to read—

FOLK SONGS ARE FEATURE OF S. P. PHILLY MEETING

Small Audience Greets Singing M. P.'s

By LENA ROSENBERG,
(Worker Correspondent.)

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 2.— Three hundred very well-dressed people parked among row after row of empty seats was the outstanding feature of the recent meeting here under socialist party auspices at which the Honorable Morgan Jones and Rhys Davies of the British labor party, spoke.

Morris Hillquit was advertised by the Forward but did not appear. George H. Goebel and B. Charney Vladeck spoke officially for the S. P.

The Honorable Rhys Davies was lavish in his praise of the Americans and their hospitality, but informed the audience that the American labor movement is 25 years behind their fellow workers of Great Britain and that it would be preposterous for any English labor man to propose the endorsement of a candidate of the liberal or conservative parties.

He was careful to state that the British labor party is not a revolutionary party, that it aims to convince the majority of the people by peaceful methods and does not entertain any intention of overthrowing the present capitalist government by force.

"His Majesty's Party."

"When we began our work we first were just a 'labor group,' then we became 'his majesty's opposition,' but when we came into power we were considered 'his majesty's party.'"

The audience seemed pleased by this proof of the non-revolutionary nature of the British labor party under its present leadership.

The meeting was so lifeless and lacking in enthusiasm that Goebel had to introduce what was evidently intended to be a gladsome note. He asked everyone in the audience to "get up and stretch."

Everyone was glad to comply with this request.

Sings in Welsh.

Goebel then announced that "the Honorable Rhys Davies will sing my speech," whereupon the honorable member of parliament obliged, not with the International, but with a Welsh folk song.

Morgan Jones joined in and the audience showed its first sign of interest.

Vladeck Performs.

B. Charney Vladeck was brought forward and after lauding the distinguished guest, explained that the Auditorium was empty because "the socialist party deals with ideas."

The opinion of your correspondent, based on a knowledge of the Philadelphia labor movement, is that the auditorium was empty because the workers here have decided that the S. P. does not represent them but the middle class elements who were present at the meeting.

Collection Cheers Vladeck.

Vladeck emphasized the difference between the British and American workers' living standards and then took up a collection of $127.00. As the audience began to contribute Vladeck grew more optimistic and announced that there was hope for the socialist party in America yet. The sight of even small sums of money seems to have this effect on most socialist party speakers.

The Honorable Morgan Jones spoke of peace on earth and good will to men after the best fashion of the nonconformist evangelical school from which so many leaders of the British labor party have come.

The meeting was not raided by the police as has been the case with so many meetings of the Communist Party here in the City of Brotherly Love.

PASSAIC AND GERMAN TEXTILE BOSSES ARE THE SAME PEOPLE; CUT WAGES IN BOTH COUNTRIES

By LOUIS KOVESS.

ARTICLE III.

PASSAIC, N. J., Nov. 2.—The first step in the attack to cut the wages of the Jersey textile workers was taken by the Botany Consolidated Mills, when the Botany Worsted Mills and the Garfield Worsted Mills, reduced the wages by 10 per cent and the 25 per cent overtime bonus to 10 per cent.

The Botany knitting mills are in the hands of the so-called "Sthoer" group. Max W. Sthoer is the president of the Botany Consolidated Mills.

Max W. Sthoer was in Germany not long ago, where he attended the annual conference of the Kamingarnspinerei Sthoer and Co. of Leipsig and the Eberfelder textile works of Eberfeld. These two companies are among the largest textile mills of Germany and have a reputation for exploiting the workers.

What did Mr. Sthoer want at the German textile congress?

The answer to the question is this:

The Passaic Botany mills, which are under the presidency of Sthoer, have invested four million dollars in the above-mentioned German mills. The investment is on a 50 per cent profit-sharing basis.

Forstman and Huffman Exploit Germany.

Forstman and Huffman own large textile mills in Passaic and Garfield.

The rumor was spread in the press already, that Forstman and Huffman will follow the example of the Botany mills, and will also cut down the wages.

No doubt this news did not come to the press without the knowledge of the company. This is how the company wants the workers to get used to the idea of wage reductions. The rumor was denied by the company, but we know that the reason for not enforcing the wage reduction at present is that they fear a united action by the workers if the wage reductions follow each other too frequently.

Now this Forstman and Huffman not only exploit the Passaic and Garfield knitters, but they exploit the German knitters, too.

The Rheinland Werken Forstman and Huffman textile mills were united in April with the Kamingarnspinerei of Augsburg, Germany's largest textile works. The president of this corporation is Mr. Julius Forstman.

United Exploitation, United Defense.

These two examples are enough to enlighten the workers why the Communists are fighting for international trade union unity.

Let us say that the workers of the Botany and the workers of the Forstman works will start a fight against their exploiters. Alone they can hardly break the compay, for in case of a strike both companies will get the bulk of their manufacture from their German works.

The united fight of the equally exploited German and American textile worker is required in order to wage a victorious battle against the world-wide power of capital.

Why do they cut the wages of the knitters?

At the same time when the American wage reductions are going on we see similar reductions going on in many European countries. It looks as though a plot on an international scale is going on—we see everywhere attacks to reduce the standard of living of the textile worker.

With this question we will deal in detail in our next issue.

Soviet Russia Places Large Order for Textile Machinery in England

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW—(Tass)—(By Mail)—According to the Isvestia, the delegation of the Soviet textile industry that is now visiting London has placed a big order with the very well known firm in Manchester of Platt Brothers, the biggest factory in the world producing machinery for the textile industry.

The order can be executed in 12 or 14 months

The managing director of the firm said that it the biggest order which was ever given to the firm. Representatives of the Soviet trade delegation in London declared that so far they have placed in England orders for 1,000,000 pounds out of the whole sum of 15,000,000 pounds sterling assigned for equipment for the textile industry in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

CHEMICALS PERIL WORKERS' HEALTH IN PRODUCTION

New York State Report Shows Great Danger

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Health hazards are greatest to workers in the chemical industry, the bureau of industrial hygiene reports in the New York state industrial commissioner's annual survey of department of labor work. "The chemical industry is one which leads all others in the proportion of compensation cases arising ont of casualties caused by poisonous and corrosive substances and occupational disease," the report says.

"In no other industry are perils to the body and dangers to the health of the workers so many, so insidious and so deadly. The workers in the chemical industry come in direct, close and daily contact with lead, arsenic, phosphorus, antimony, mercury, chromium compounds and other powerful poisons. Injurions gases and harmful fumes are evolved in hundreds of its various processes. Irritating dusts, excesively high temperatures, burning and spurting liquids, dangerous explosives and many other open and hidden, sen and unseen dangers lurk at every step.

New Poisons Injure Workers.

Attention is called to the rapid evolution in industry where new poisons are being exchanged for old in the arts, the lungs are called upon to inhale new and strange irritants, the muscles are forced to new movements, and the nerves to new sensations and strains. The chief of the industrial hygiene bureau declares that doctors must give more attention to industrial medicine, to occupational diseases.

That workers must themselves be alert to new industrial hazards to health and life and take all possible safeguards personally, by getting best conditions from their employers and by demanding state legislative protection and adequate compensation for all industrial accidents and all occupational diseases has been emphasized by many.

More Protection Needed

Types of machine guards, dust and gas exhausts and other devices designed to lessen dangers to workers' bodies and lives are pictured in the report. The main need indicated is for greater use of safety and protective guards by employers. There were 66 fatal and 936 lost-time accidents investigated by the bureau during the year.

'CREAM OF THE GARMENT TRADE' GOES LEFT WING

I. L. G. W. Designers Go Entirely with Left

By J. P.

(Worker Correspondent)

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 2.—The cleansing process in the labor unions is on. The revolt of organized labor against the organized bureaucrats and gangsters in the unions is rising high.

The fact that the revolt began at the lowest stratum of labor is the best guarantee for its success. Now the revolt is reaching such "upper strata" as have been until now considered too conservative, impenetrable for the left wingers' propaganda, and invulnerable.

One of such "invulnerable unions" was of the United Designers of Ladies' Wear in New York, I. L. G. W. U. Local 45.

What Used To Be

Until the last $2,000,000 fake strike, staged by the notorious Sigman-Feinberg machine, the membership of the designers' local were staunch supporters of this ill-famed gangster machine and often shouted down any progressive and "left winger" who attempted to expose the crooked deeds of the union bureaucrats.

There were times, when a mere report of proceedings written by a left winger and appearing in the Communist daily Freiheit was bitterly condemned, and promises of bodily harm were dealt out openly by the agents of the machine inside the union.

Like in all other unions, where reactionary bureacrats rule with iron hand for the benefit of the master class, so in the Designers' Union, this docile spirit was built on two facts.:

Firstly, on the ignorance of the membership about the true character of the bureacrats, and secondly, on the gangster organization and tactics used at the membership meetings.

Designers Wake Up

Sigman, the president, and Feinberg as manager of the joint board, were handing out promises which they never kept. In the meanwhile, hundreds of designers were walking the streets of New York unemployed.

The one time "cream of the trade" is beginning to feel the sledge-hammer of capitalism that is pounding them irresistibly into the general mass of the proletarian class. Gradually the class feeling developed among them.

But the complete change of spirit came only when the old agreement of the Cloakmakers' Union with the bosses expired and was to be improved and renewed. The designers rekoned on inserting into the new agreement a special clause, which should protect them on the job, as it protects workers of other locals of the great International Union..

. When the news broke thru, that the Sigman-Feinberg-Hillquit machine double crossed them, and by fixing a secret agreement with the bosses betrayed every branch of the garment workers' organization, the spirit of wrath was steadily mounting and the membership falling off.

Finally a resolution was adopted, condemning the crooked, old, bureacratic Sigman machine and fully endorsing the left wing militant joint action committee.

When later, with the victory of the joint action committee, the New York joint board was reorganized, the designers immediately took advantage of the new situation to send a special committee to the joint board, demanding full cooperation of the joint board in its organization drive, as well as a full fledged recognition of the designers' demands in all future dealings with the bosses.

Logically, the joint board accepted these demands as self evident.

So the one time "cream of the trade" which is separated from the bosses by only one step, went entirely left, and in their last meeting at the Hotel Pennsylvania elected only such members as delegates to the convention of the I. L. G. W. U., who had an unbroken record of "left wing activity."

The elected delegates are: Brothers Chack, J. Prokop and Slackman. As alternates; Brothers F. Moss and Mitchell. Watch the local grow!

Framed-up Railroader Tells Negro Congress of Unorganized South

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—(FP)—Trade unions, except on the railroads, have a hard time in the southern states, says Arch Lingan of Autobus Drivers' Local 243, Houston, Tex., who dropped in at the American Negro Labor Congress in Chicago this week. He says unorganized Mexicans and Negroes do much of the work that is done by union labor in the north and much of the other work is done by unorganized white workers.

Lingan still carries his card in the Order of Railway Conductors but was dismissed from his job by the railroad for progressive political activity. Two company detectives got on his train and later falsely swore that they had given him cash fares which he had not turned over, as an excuse for dropping him.

COMPANY UNION HEAD FIRED OFF PULLMAN CO. JOB

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 2.—In line with its traditional policy of ruthlessly smashing all attempts of its underpaid and overworked porters to get a fair and square deal, the Pullman company yesterday summarily discharged Ashley L. Totten, chairman of Local No. 5, Pullman Porters' Benefit Association and grievance committee member on the employe representation plan (the "company" union), for "insubordination."

Totten, a very militant, outspoken and courageous man, had been a thorn in the side of the czaristic company officials because of his espousal of the cause of the men. For many months he had attempted to inject a modicum of justice and democracy into the investigations of porters accused of misdemeanors, real and imaginary.

These investigations are nothing but star chamber proceedings with the company always right and the accused parter always wrong, even when, on occasion, he is restored to duty. Totten aroused the anger of the company officials by his insistence on justice, and accordingly, they swore to "get" him.

He was in Chicago at the time of his discharge, having been recently elected a delegate to the P. P. B. A. convention. It was suspected that he would raise the question of hours and wages—a question always taboo at these "benefit" association meetings—so the company took steps to prevent him from doing so.

Totten had been in the Pullman service six years and his record was perfectly clear. He is the third man to be discharged because of his defense of the men—the other two being Roy Lancaster and S. E. Grain, general secretary-treasurer and field representative respectively, of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

Mr. A. Philip Randolph, general organizer of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, who, with Roy Lancaster is conducting a series of membership meetings in Chicago, states that indignation ran high among the porters when the news of Totten's discharge was broadcast. He adds that this action of the company alone brought over fifty men into the new union inside of four hours.

Miami Rents Higher Than Printers' Wage

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Many New York printers have gone to Miami, Fla., to try their fortunes for the winter but reports coming back to the Typographical Union show that exhorbitant rents and the dizzy height of living costs generally take the substnce out of the attractive looking wage scales there.

Newspaper rates at last accounts there were $62 and $68 for day and night work respectively, with the minimum for job work at $53—the latter being the New York minimum also.

LABOR CONGRESS URGES NEGROES TO JOIN UNION

the organized labor movement if a genuine and successful effort is to be made to maintain and improve the standards of the worker, black and white. The world war, the migration of the people from the farms to the cities, the industrialization of the South, and the stoppage of European immigration, have established the Negro workers as an indispensable and powerful labor force.

"In order to improve the conditions of the Negro workers and to insure the standards of the white workers also, it is absolutely necessary that the workers of both races be organized in the trade union movement. Trade unions are the organizations which are created by the workers to prosecute their fight against the employers for higher wages, better conditions and a proper standard of living.

"Only by the effective organization of the Negro and white workers in the unions is it possible to avoid union competition and recutting between these workers which will result in their common degradation. This was clearly demonstrated by the great steel strike of 1919 which was defeated because the steel barons could draw upon the vast army of unorganized Negro workers pitting them against the whites to the great injury of both.

"This perilous situation demands that white and black workers must be united solidly in the union and demonstrates that trade unions which fail to effect the unity of all workers, regardless of race, sex, nationality, religion of color on the sole basis of their common interests as workers, fail in the most necessary task for the protection and advancement of the workers.

"The unions, therefore, should neither exclude Negroes or wait until they are out on the picket line to start the necessary work of uniting them but should begin at once to conduct a thorogoing, efficient nation-wide drive to organize the colored workers. They must forever break with the vicious and suicidal policy followed by many white unions in the past and still persisted in by some of the most highly skilled labor aristocrats who bar the Negro workers either by open clauses in their constitutions or by secret understandings and must throw the doors of the union wide open to the Negro workers welcoming them upon a basis of full equality.

Remove All Bars.

"The American Negro Labor Congress calls for the immediate removal of all bars and discrimination within the unions and demands equality of treatment in wages, opportunity for employment and representation in union administration and instructs its members to fight energetically to effect this in all unions.

"This congress condemns all scabs, Negroes who improperly recruit strikebreakers, and whites who dis-ment. It resents the branding of Negroes as strikebreakers and points to the fact that where Negroes have been fairly treated they have made as loyal and aggressive union men as any other group of workers.

"This congress further condemns all efforts from whatever source to segregate the Negro workers in seperate unions and demands that all such discrimination be abolished immediately.

"Any divisions in the trade unions and all dual or seccession movements will be firmly opposed by this congress, but it declares that the Negro workers must organize their own unions to protect themselves and to fight their way into the unions as equals.

"The American Negro Labor Congress hereby instructs its officers and members to unite with all progressive bodies in the American Federation of Labor to eradicate the various evils of race discrimination in the unions and to achieve that unity of black and white workers which alone can insure their elevation and emancipation is absolutely necessary."

NEEDLE TRADE UNIONS' PUBLICATIONS BOOST FOR PURCELL MEETINGS

NEW YORK, Nov. 2—(FP)—Both Advance, organ of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union, and Justice, of the International Ladies' Garment Workers are advertising the fact that A. A. Purcell, chairman of the International Federation of Trade Unions, will speak in New York about the middle of Nov.

Advance calls Purcell's speech to the A. F. of L. convention: "one of the most enlightening addresses on the international relations of organized labor thruout the world ever heard at a labor gathering."

AVERAGE WAGE FOR WOMEN IS $16.70 IN MASS.

BOSTON, Nov. 2.—Average earnings in Massachusetts factories in September amounted to $24.05, according to the monthly report of the state department of labor.

For male workers the average was $28.95 and for women $16.70. The report shows a gain of 1.8% in the number of workers on the payrolls as compared with August establishing a level 4½% above September, 1924.

The report shows a slight falling off in the amount of full time operation. In September 37.9% of the workers covered by reports were in factories working part time schedules.

Altho in 43 of the 39 industries a majority of the workers were on full time, part time was prevalent in the manufacture of boots and shoes, cotton goods and wool, the three leading industries of the state.

Displacement of Men by Machine Shown in Iron Mining Industry

HIBBING, Minn., Nov. 2—More machinery and fewer men will be the rule on the Messaba range and the job outlook will get worse from year to year, in the opinion of mining company officials who attended an unemployment conference in Hibbing.

The present surplus of men and the threatening winter were discussed by representatives of the towns on the range, of the companies and of civic organizations.

Production of ore was well over the average in the past year, the mining men stated, but the labor required was smaller.

The president of the Hibbing commercial club's solution of the unemployment problem was the suggestion that it would "eventually readjust itself on the basis of the survival of the fittest."

Professional Dance Partners Form Union

SEATTLE, Nov. 1—Fifty charter members constitute the newest Seattle union, known as the Women's Dancing Entertainers, which has received a charter as an American Federation of Labor organization, thru its affiliation with the Associated Actors and Artists of America. The newly fledged unionists are employed by dance halls as partners or instructors for men who come without girls. A membership of 400 in Seattle is anticipated.

SUB-DISTRICT 7 OF ILLINOIS IN REACTION'S GRIP

But Manage to Protest on Saklatvala

By ANDREW YOUNG

(Special to The Daily Worker)

O'FALLON, Ill., Nov. 2.—The Sub-District No. 7 convention of District 12, U. M. W. of A., came to an end without anything accomplished for the rank and file.

All committees were appointed by D. L. Thompson, president of the sub-district. The resolution committee brought in the following recommendations: "That Frank Farrington and Harry Fishwick be invited to come before the convention to explain why they made separate agreements in violation of the Jacksonville agreement."

The recommendation was adopted. A motion was then made to invite Freeman Thompson and John J. Watt to address the convention. This caused much uneasiness in the convention hall. In the discussion on the motion, vice-president Bill Jocks accused Watt and Thompson of running all over the state "destroying the union."

Not Afraid, But Just Scared.

He also said that he was not afraid to meet Thmopson and Watt, but at the same time he showed his reluctance by not being willing to have them come to address the convention.

Another delegate exclaimed that if Watt and Thompson came to address the convention that Farrington and Fishwick would refuse to come.

After the assassination of the characters of Thompson and Watt, these unflinching, militant fighters in the interest of the workers in the U. M. W. of A., the question was called for and debate closed before the mover or the seconder had the privilege of the floor. Delegates were on their feet demanding the floor—and Bill Jocks was in the chair—enuf said.

A resolution was adopted which reads as follows:

Saklatvala Resolution.

"Whereas, Secretary of State Kellogg has instructed the consul general to revoke the visa granted to Shapurji Saklatvala, a member of the English parliament representing the organized labor movement of that country, to visit the interparliamentary union at Washington; and

"Whereas, Shapurji Saklatvala has carried on a valiant struggle on behalf of the exploited masses against English imperialism in the Far East, in China, Egypt, India and Ireland; therefore be it

"Resolved, That this Sub-District 7 of District 12, in annual convention held in Collinsville, Illinois, Oct. 28, 1925, vigorously protest the action of the secretary of state in excluding Shapurpi Saklatvala, as an act of unauthorized and unjustifiable discrimination against the foreign-born workers, and as a high handed attempt to limit the freedom of speech in the United States, and be it further

"Resolved, That we demand the immediate admission of Saklatvala into this country, and be it further

"Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to the secretary of state at Washington, D. C., and to Senator Borah and to the workers' press for publication."

NEW YORK DAILY WORKER BUILDERS BUSY RAISING MONEY AT ALL PARTY AFFAIRS TO SAVE DAILY WORKER

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—The Brownsville English branch has officially voted to donate five dollars per member to Help Save The DAILY WORKER. That will make over four hundred dollars. Nearly half of this amount has already been brot in by Comrade Lillian Michaels, the very efficient DAILY WORKER agent of the English Brownsville branch.

Harlem English branch has taxed its members two dollars each for the benefit of The DAILY WORKER. This is to be paid by each member personally in addition to what is raised thru collection of donations, sale of DAILY WORKER stamps, etc. At its first meeting the branch turned in $66, at the next they raised $89, half for The DAILY WORKER and half for the New York campaign fund. The DAILY WORKER agent, Comrade Louis Hirschman, never lets a meeting pass without relieving the members of whatever cash they may have along.

Comrade Kawashima, of the Oriental branch, has just brot in a dozen cans of Japanese rice cakes which will be sold to the highest bidders at DAILY WORKER Rescue Parties.

One DAILY WORKER Builder always on the job is Comrade Leo Kling of English No. 1, Bronx branch. He is a big help as member of the board of directors of The DAILY WORKER Builders' Club. He has just brot in an additional $38.50 and says he's only just begun.

DAILY WORKER on New York Stands.

Gradually but surely The DAILY WORKER is winning a place for itself on the news stands of New York. More than three times as many copies were sold and paid for during October than during March, when the present system of handling The DAILY WORKER on the news stands was adopted.

The papers are sent from Chicago direct to the news dealers by mail, but all collections are handled by volunteer workers under direction of the New York manager, so that the total cash realized from news stand sales goes to The DAILY WORKER and this circulation is on a paying basis.

The New York news stand sales can be developed as additional comrades volunteer for this work. About twenty-five are helping now; twice this many could be used. Several are needed at once. All who are willing to help regularly from one to three hours each week are invited to call on L. E. Katterfeld, manager of the New York office of The DAILY WORKER, at 108 East 14th street.

Office Workers Wanted.

Volunteers are wanted to help with all kinds of office work in The DAILY WORKER New York office—typewriting, bookkeeping, filing, addressing, etc. Comrades who write a good plain hand, or who are competent at various kinds of office work, can Help Save The DAILY WORKER by giving a little of their time each week. Apply to Katterfeld, at 108 East 14th street. (Telephone Stuyvesant 8100.)

BROWNSVILLE BRANCH TO CELEBRATE BEGINNING OF BOLSHEVIZATION OF THE WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—While the capitalist politicians and their hangers-on will celebrate the victory of one political machine over the other on Tuesday evening, the Brownsville section of the Workers (Communist) Party and the Young Workers League, in the name of the house committee, will celebrate the beginning of the bolshevization of the party and the league.

The celebration will take the form of a good program to be given by the Young Workers League and the Juniors It promises to be highly entertaining. There will also be a speech by a member of the district executive committee and the evening will vanish into the morning to the strain of an excellent jazz band that will furnish music for the dance lovers. Thus all tastes, (except reactionaries) will be satisfied.

The place is Workers' Hall, 1844 Pitkin Ave., the date is Tuesday, Nov. 3 (election day) and the time in from 8:00 o'clock in the evening until we get ready to quit the affair.

The admission is only 35c. Come and bring the workers in your shop with you.

REPORT FENG YU-HSIANG TROOPS IN FIELD AGAINST RUSS WHITES

PEKING, Nov. 2.—With Fengtien (Manchurian) and anti-Fengtien forces alleged to number 200,000 men, preparing for battle between Hsu Chow and Peng-Pu, 500 miles down the Tientsin-Pukow railway, martial law was proclaimed in Tientsin late this afternoon.

The Fengtien forces belong to the army of Marshal Chang Tso Lin, Manchurian war lord, while the opposing troops are part of the forces of General Feng Yu-Hsiang, former supporter of Marshal Wu Pei Fu, north China militarist and stormy petrel in Chinese politics. Marshal Wu was virtually shorn of all his governmental authority recently when he objected to the influence being wielded in Peking by the Manchurian marshal because Chang was openly supporting imperialist domination in China.

The Fengtien forces are said to include a brigade of "white" or anti-Soviet Russians, tanks, aeroplanes, and modern trench mortars.

BAKERS' UNION DONATES $100 TO BUY PAPER

TWO GOTHAM MEETINGS ON ANNIVERSARY

Frunze Memorial Part of Program

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—The celebration of the eighth anniversary of the Bolshevik revolutoin here will be a combined celebration of that event and a memorial to Comrade Mikhail Frunze, war commissar of the Union of Soviet Republics, who died last Saturday in Moscow. The story of his deeds, his long service to the revolutionary movement and his career as military leader will be recounted by Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg, general secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party of America.

Soviet Russia's Advance.

The economic victory of the Russian workers, which is now becoming apparent before all the world, is proving a tower of strength for the revolutionary proletariat of other countries. As the workers' delegations of Germany, England and the Scandinavian countries see with their own eyes the splendid accomplishments of workers' Russia and come back to their own workers to report, the masses of those countries are taking great strides to the left. The Scarborough convention of the British trade unions, the united front of the Berlin social-democratic workers with the Communist Party, the victory of that united front in the Berlin elections, the move for world trade union uity—these are all due in a large measure, to the recent visit of workers' delegations to Russia.

The Locarno Pact.

The eighth anniversary of the Russian revolution sees the workers in possession of a sixth part of the globe and victorious in their military fight against the combined forces of imperialism and counter-revolution, victorious also in the economic fight against the destruction caused by the world war, the civil war and the famine and now, for the first time, reaching, and even at this moment beginning to pass the level of 1913 Russian economy.

A few more years and the Russian workers will have made economic achievements not to be dreamed of under capitalism. The world's financiers understand this and their answer is the refusal of American recognition of Russia and the plotting of a new and desperate intrigue at Locarno aimed to isolate, attack and destroy the government of workers and peasants before it is too late.

Army of Speakers.

The story of the wonderful political and economic achievements of the Russian workers and a warning of this new and desperate plot against Russia will be given by Comrades Ruthenberg, Gitlow, Krumbein, Manley, M. J. Olgin, S. Don, Stachel, Lifschitz Pruseka, Wolfe, Weinstone and Grecht, at the Central Opera House, 205 E. 67th St., Bronx, and Grand Assembly Hall, 318 Grand St. Brooklyn, on Nov. 6 at 8 p. m.

The answer of the workers of the United States to this new plot must be unequivocal. Demand the recognition of Soviet Russia. Pledge support to the Russian workers against American and world imperialism. Come in such numbers to these two halls that the overflow meetings will tell our financial lords in unmistakable terms, "We will not tolerate a new attack upon Soviet Russia."

A fine musical program has been arranged and admission to both the demonstration and the concert is 50 cents. Tickets are on sale at all branches and at the district headquarters.

Los Angeles Workers to Hold Celebration

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 2.—The Young Workers League and the Workers Party are combining their forces to tmake the 8th anniversary celebration of the Russian revolution a memorable one in Los Angeles. A mass meeting will be held under their joint auspices at the Music Arts Hall, 233 S. Broadway, on Sunday afternoon, Nov. 15. Robert Minor, member of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party, will be the chief speaker. A suitable revolutionary program is being prepared by the Young Workers League and its Junior Section.

AUSTRIANS SEND DELEGATES FROM SHOPS TO I. W. A.

Map Out Immediate Relief Program

WM. F. KRUSE.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

VIENNA, Austria,—(By Mail.)—The conditions of the Austrian working class were described as being the worst in present day Europe in that not only were their real wages the lowest but their social maintainence was the least effective. This was proven by extensive reference to comparative government statistics in an address delivered by Dr. Schoenhof at the first National Conference of the Austrian International Workers Aid, held at Vienna on October 11 and 12.

Wage Struggles Discussed.

It was attended by forty Austrian deleagtes and (for obvious reasons) unnamed representatives from Roumania and Jugoslavia. That these poor conditions were particularly severe upon the Austrian children and youth was proven by the statistics of the state school medical inspectors. The constant wage struggles in Austria were not merely the outbreak of dissatisfaction but rather the desperation of a proletarian class that more and more realizes its doom under the present system.

Most of the delegates represented shop committees. The national organizations of the carpenters, tobacco workers, cap makers and war veterans were represented and seven cooperatives also joined. Dr. Frishauf, a noted liberal physician, was elected chairman; Frau Dr. Adler, social democratic leader, the vice chairman; and Franz Yabusch, head of the Independent Socialist Working Class Youth, a member of the executive committee.

Strikers' Children Cared For.

Toward the end of the gathering an appeal from the Donawitz strikers was answered with an immediate collection and plans for the transport of the children of the strikers. Further extension of the struggle will be met with additional relief measures.

Soviet Scientist in Claim of Discovery for Cure of Epilepsy

MOSCOW, Nov. 2.—Leningrad medical circles are interested in a possible cure for epilepsy discovered in the laboratory of the physiologist, Professor Pavlof.

Pavlof's assistant, Dr. Speranski, announced yesterday to an assembly of physicians and scientists that as the results of experiments in the artificial freezing of part of the brain substance of dogs, the freezing provoked convulsions and falls similar to those in epilepsy, and investigation showed there had developed in the animal's organism a specific toxin, which Dr. Speranski calls altotoxin, and desponsible for the epileptic condition.

Further experiments, it is said, proved that the injection of this toxin into a healthy animal immunized the latter against epileptic seizure. Dr. Speranski concluded that it similar treatment were applied to human beings the problem of a cure for epilepsy would be solved.

Bill Green Back; Bosses Exploit More Than Ever

COSHOCTON, Ohio, Nov. 2.—"Bill" Green came home from the convention last week but he didn't give us poorly paid workers any encouragement. He didn't make any effort to organize us into a powerful union so that we could resist wage cuts and fight for better condinions. No. . . But he joined the rotary club, which is made up of the very men who are cutting our wages!

The bosses here are adopting a new policy of wage cutting. They are laying off the higher paid workers and taking on others at from 75 cents to $1.50 less. Wages in Coshocton amount to only $3.00 for an eight-hour day on the average, yet unskilled workers compose 80 per cent of the population.

But the bosses are not satisfied with just wage cutting to make more profits; they are starting a new speed-up system. In the Art Works shop here, stop watches are used. An "efficiency" expert holds the watch and if the worker doesn't come up to time requirements, he is fired.

Only one group of shop workers are organized—the pottery workers—so the laborer has no protection against such methods. He hasn't even got protection against "Bill" Green!

PURCELL TO BE INTRODUCED AT K. C. BY HOWAT

U. M. W. of A. Leader to Act as Chairman

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 2—The A. A. Purcell meeting that will be held on Nov. 4 at the Labor Temple Auditorium with Purcell speaking on "World Trade Union Unity," will have Alexander Howat, miner, former president of District 14 of the United Mine Workers of America, as chairman of this meeting. The arrangement committee finally decided that Alex Howat, militant miner of Pittsburgh, Kansas, was the logical chairman for the A. A. Purcell meeting.

The anthracite miners are on strike and the bosses intend to ship coal from Europe just as soon as there is need of such. The need of world trade union unity is manifest, and that the chairmanship should go to one representing this wing of the American Federation of Labor at this time was considered by the committee as the most appropriate, for the miners need the unity of all organized labor to win this battle.

Committees calling on unions giving five minute talks urging members to attend the meeting are met with enthusiasm everywhere. In one union our secretary, Barney McCoy after making a talk and selling tickets found that he had brot forth some other cards instead of the tickets and sold eight for twenty-five cents each. It took him some time to find these men after the meeting and give them tickets.

Some unions that are meeting on Nov. 4, intend to meet early and arjourn the meeting in time for the members to attend the meeting. The rank and file of Kansas City need such a message as Purcell will deliver and the rank and file are moving with their eyes focused on this event.

CELEBRATE THE ANNIVERSARY OF FASCIST MARCH

Monarchy, Religion and Army, Base of Policy

ROME, Nov. 2—Fascism, steeped to the armpits in the gore of thousands of workers, roared and showed its fangs in triumph yesterday at the third anniversary of the fascist march on Rome. Mussolini and his chief aid, Farinacci, secretary general of the fascist party spoke to hoodlum throngs of blackshirts while the working population, not wishing to provoke murderous reprisals, remained silent.

Fascism's Base.

The "policy of fascism," said Farinacci, will continue to be "based on monarchy, religion and the army." He was quite scornful and exultant over the crushing of the timid petty bourgeois opponents known as the "Aventine opposition," whose boycott of parliament has been broken up by the "order" to return to their seats in parliament.

Fascism would not be "ferocious," said Farinacci, "unless the opposition provokes it." He added significantly that the fascisti have no intention of ceasing their method of rule by violence. "We refuse all offers of an armistice. If we have been intransigeant hitherto, we will be even more intransigeant henceforth."

Fascism Starts More Poorhouses.

In spite of the 40,000 blackshirted ruffians mobilized for the occasion and the 300 airplanes maneuvering over the city, and all the display of force, the canker at the root of society under fascism was shown by the fact that Mussolini's activities for the day included the dedication of several new poor houses.

The socialists remain crushed by the recent order outlawing the reformist unions and all other but fascist unions. The socialists, who had been more than half way allied with the fascists against the Communists in hopes of being permitted to maintain a semblance of power in the reformist unions, feel that the Communists now have their arguments of unrelenting opposition to fascism upheld in the minds of the workers. The Aventine opposition, in which the socialists also reposed part of their faith, is scattered and crushed by fascist violence.

Baltimore Workers Busy at Campaign for Soviet Defense

By PHILIP CHATZKY,
(Worker Correspondent.)

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 2.—The nation-wide campaign for the defense of Soviet Russia, ending Tuesday, Nov. 10, in a mass celebration of the Russian revolution's eighth anniversary, is meeting with a big response from workers here. Our city has been divided into industrial sections, where thousands of leaflets, "Defend Soviet Russia," are being distributed. Workmen's circle branches and fraternal organizations are active in the work.

Rose. Pastor Stokes of New York, will be the principal speaker at the Tuesday mass meeting at the Brith-Sholom Hall, 1012 East Baltimore street. There will also be speakers in Russian and other languages.

Grigori Matusevich of New York, famous concertino player, and Brickman's orchestra are on the program for English and Russian music. Admission is fifty cents, with all proceeds going to The DAILY WORKER rescue fund.

Russian Inventor Produces New Type of High-Power Motor

MOSCOW — (Tass) — Nov. 2.—A sensational discovery by Prof. Joffe, who constructed a small motor that can be put in a pocket but is strong enuf to put in action a motor-car, has received much publicity in Russia.

In an interview with press representatives, Mr. Joffe said:

"Experiments on condensation of electrical energy in minimal size have been carried on by me already for several years and at present they have reached a stage when we can talk of its practical use. New accumulators certainly will lead to a technical revolution, because until now enormous weight of accumulators was their great drawback. The construction of accumulators of a new type is based on a physical phenomenon of polarization of certain isolators. I don't want to give exact figures now, but at any rate, new accumulators will have very small weight and size with capacity to store, at the same time, enormous amounts of energy nearly a thousand times more than motors now used. I hope that within a year I shall be able to come to final results of my work in this direction."

WORKERS' SCHOOL TEACHERS MEET FOR FIRST TIME

Organize Council to Meet Problems

NEW YORK, Nov. 2—On Thursday evening, October 22, the teachers of the Workers' School held their first meeting. The object of the meeting was to organize a permanent council to co-operate with the district agitprop department in connection with the educational work in this district. Comrade Wolfe was chairman of the meeting.

Link School With Agitprop.

A communication from the national agitprop department of the party was read, in which the object of the educational work of the party was declared to be the political education of the party as a whole, linked up with the practical problems of the party and of the working class, and which also outlined in general the method and conduct of school work in the party this year. The keynote of our educational work should be "What Is Needed in the Party."

In discussing this communication, Comrade Wolfe laid before the group the party's new conception of the educational work as a part of and subordinate to the political agitation and propaganda of the party, to be designed to definitely serve the party's needs in its major campaigns. This is the spirit in which we must approach our work. We must get away from the old social-democratic forms, not only in organization, but also in education. Our education should not be the monopoly of a select few or an abstract academic thing. The agitprop department, which will centralize all educational work of the party, is to be a flexible instrument for the major campaigns of the party. All courses are to be tied up with party campaigns in America. English classes will have definite political content. The "Marxism" course will not be "timeless and placeless," but will be "Americanized," linked up with concrete American problems. The course in Fundamentals of Communism will not only use Bukharin's text in A. B. C. of Communism, but will add material created out of our political needs here and written for American workers. These aims will necessarily revolutionize our teaching method. The lecture system must be abandoned; teachers must aim for self-activity of students. The question method is advised.

Want Student Representation.

General discussion followed, in which all teachers present gave their opinions as to the objects and functions of the projected teachers' council. Comrade Wolfe brot together most of these ideas in his summary as follows:

1. "The essential problem for the teachers' council is to bring the teachers and students together in close contact with the district agitprop department, (which is the representative of the party), we make for the best possible policy in the agitprop department." Teachers and students should be represented in an advisory capacity on the agitprop department when it is discussing school problems.

2. The difficulty of getting texts together which are suitable for our needs will make for a compromise between the "teacher as a lecturing text book" and "the teacher as a teacher." Sub-committees of the council will work on mimeographing suitable outlines for students. Out of this council can thus come outlines, and, later, texts. These outlines, supplemented by the question method, will be a suitable method.

3. The council can correlate the different courses.

4. It can gather material that can be used by other courses and be kept on permanent file.

5. Student representation on council will give teachers an idea of what students are thinking about them and their methods, and vice versa.

6. Council can perform some administrative tasks; in organization of classes, collection of fees, supervision of teachings, etc.

7. It can plan forums and correlate all party forums.

8. Most important of all—it can apply the political policy of the party to educational work. Every course can be made to serve the direct political needs of the party. In all courses, practical problems such as labor party, Loreism, bolshevization, defense of Soviet Russia, etc., can enter.

Next Meeting Nov. 5.

A committee was elected to report on the progress of organization of the teachers' council body at the next meeting. Wolfe, Bosse, Trachtenberg, Eli Jacobson were elected.

The next meeting of all teachers will take place on Thursday, November 5, 5 p. m. All teachers should attend. Come and do your share in reorganization of the educational work of the party to suit our new needs.

SCANDINAVIAN SECTION SUPPORTS COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL AND CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

At a meeting of the executive bureau of the Scandinavian federation held recently a thoro discussion on the situation in the party and the work confronting the party was had.

Support of the Comintern, and a united party behind the Central Executive Committee were stressed at this meeting.

The following resolution was adopted by the Scandinavian bureau:

"The executive committee of the Scandinavian Federation of the Workers (Communist) Party of America declares, in order that all further misunderstanding concerning the result of the latest party convention will be avoided, its full agreement with all the decisions of the convention and binds itself to utilize all of its and the federation's strength to carry out these decisions.

Importance of Bolshevization.

"The executive committee emphasizes especially the importance of the decisions concerning bolshevization of the party, reorganization, and industrial work. Concerning these questions there must be no hesitancy among the members; all party organs must immediately mobilize all their energies to put these decisions into effect.

"The executive committee declares itself loyal to the new leadership elected unanimously by the last party convention, and promises its unreserved support, especially in the bolshevization of the party. Thru the Comintern decision, communicated to the convention, party unity on a Communistic basis is assured. The Scandinavian Federation leadership calls upon all the members of the federation to support the Comintern as one man and to work for the realization of its decisions.

Condemn Factionalism.

"The executive committee of the Scandinavian Federation declares further its severest condemnation of all factionalism and confirms the abolition of the old factions as such, and will put forth all of its energy to combat the appearance of new factions within our party. Factionalism can, under no circumstances, be tolerated within a Communist Party.

"The fight against the party's right wing must be waged energetically; both the open and secret followers of Lore must be combatted. Within the Scandinavian Federation every uncertainty in relation to the Comintern must be eradicated. The same must be said of the federations, its organizations, and members' relation to the Workers (Communist) Party of America. The federation leadership establishes as binding for all the federations, organs and membership, all of the decisions by the central executive committee of the Workers (Communist) Party of America.

"Long live our unified Communist Party of America!

"Long live the Communist International!

"The Executive Committe of the Scandinavian Federation of the Workers (Communist) Party of America.

INDUSTRIAL WORKERS BELONGING TO THE WORKERS PARTY MEET IN CLEVELAND TO DISCUSS UNIONS

CLEVELAND, Nov. 2.—A membership meeting of comrades working in industry was held in Cleveland on Saturday, Oct. 24. This meeting was typical of the attitude of the comrades of the party to trade union work.

The meeting was advertised in all party papers weeks in advance of the date. All the membership was informed about it, and yet only 45 comrades appeared.

Comrade Israel Amter, district secretary, gave the comrades a talk on the importance of trade union work, on the necessity of every member of the party eligible for membership in a trade union joining the union and getting active. He laid down the basis for the organization of party fractions and for the work of the party thru the fractions building up the left wing movement in the American labor unions.

Reads C. I. Letter.

Comrade Amter read the letter of the executive committee of the Comintern and the executive bureau of the Red International Labor Union to the comrades, which insisted that "disciplinary measures must be employed" to force the comrades to do their workin the labor unions.

There was earnest, serious discussion of the issues. The comrades present demonstrated that their interest in the trade union work is sincere and each one of them deplored the fact that the party membership as a whole both ignored the membership meeting and pays in sufficient attention to trade union work.

Half Belong to Unions.

A registration was taken, and it was discovered that of the 45 comrades present only 23 belong to labor unions, while at least 19 can join. The district executive committee has made a decision that the comrades must join a labor union within two months. The comrades present not belonging to unions will be instructed to join. A beginning must be made to break down the indifference and lethargy of party members in regard to trade union work. More meetings of the kind will be hed, till the party membership at last recognizes the importance of this "the foremost task of the American party" as the Comintern pronounced it.

DISTRICT SIX PREPARES WAY FOR PARTY REORGANIZATION

CLEVELAND, Nov. 2.—The membership of the district is preparing for the reorganization of the party as the first step in the bolshevization of the party. Membership meetings have been held in Cleveland and Warren. In the last week Comrade Amter, district secretary of the party, has held membership meetings in Ballaire, Steubenville, E. Liverpool, Youngstown and Canton. These meetings were well attended, and the interest shown demonstrates that the membership will support the Central Executive Committee wholeheartedly in the reorganization of the party.

The questions asked and the discussion that arose after the questions were answered, show that the membership is keen to the idea and will do everything possible in carrying on the work.

Lays Stress on Union.

Comrade Amter especially laid stress on the trade union work of the party, and insisted upon the decision of the Communist International being carried out, viz., that all comrades eligible to membership in a trade union must join the union, become active in it and together with the other comrades in the union form a party fraction.

He pointed out that a great part of our work is done among the organized masses, or at least should be done there. By the reorganization of the party we will come into contact with the 24,000,000 unorganized workers in this country. But in the trade unions, where the workers have already grasped the concept of organization, we will lay the basis for much of our work, work for building up the party today and for preparing the forces for the revolution.

Must Join Union.

The district executive committee has decided that the comrades must join the unions within two months or discipline will be asserted. The district executive committee takes the trade union work seriously and believes that the decision of the first convention of the Workers Party must at last be realized.

Further meetings will be held in Toledo on Wednesday, Oct. 28; Akron, on Nov. 15, and Conneaut and Fairport on Nov. 22.

At all the meetings already held, a resolution was adopted unanimously endorsing the decision of the Communist International and party convention on the question of bolshevization and reorganization.

COMMUNISTS IN CITY CAMPAIGN IN NEW HAVEN

Many Shop Meetings Held at Noon

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 2.—The Workers Party is conducting an energetic campaign in the city elections of New Haven. Already several noon shop meetings have been held at the largest factories.

The distribution of 10,000 election leaflets is under way, with a well-organized squad of comrades, working under the direction of Campaign Manager Ben Marks. No other party in the campaign has printed any platform.

Other Parties Spill Bunk.

Our party has held two noon meetings, at which Comrade Simons pictured the condition of the worker in the shops of New Haven, and outlined our program on injunctions, high cost of living, housing, schools, etc. At both meetings, the workers listened attentively. But the democratic party meeting before the Clock shop, addressed by the leading candidates of that party indulged in the usual platitudes, bright aggregation of citizens, honesty-service, born in this ward, ad nauseum. At today's meeting, the difference between our campaign and the democratic campaign was pointed out. The republican candidate, Mr. Tower, makes his chief issue the assessment of property and the local rate of taxation. The democrats stand on their record of building streets and bridges, of "efficient, honest" government. But not a word about what they have done for the working class of the city. At the Clock Shop meeting the chairman of the democratic meeting was the town chairman, Mr. John W. Murphy, also president of the Trades Council of New Haven. But from what he said, no one would have known he had anything to do with labor. He charged that their opponents had not shown any examples of inefficiency; referred to some candidates as having sprung from the "pee-pul;" claimed that the small taxpayers' interest should be protected, that the city was doing eight million dollars worth of business, and no scandal had been raised over it. And to sum up, in urging the re-lection of the democratic ticket, he asked plaintively: "What would happen to the Clock Shop if the superintendent, the president, the foremen and sub-bosses were fired?" What a horrible calamity! And he also reminded them that with these office-holders, others might also lose their jobs.

Mr. Murphy, if you protected labor a bit more, went out and organised the workers in the huge prison shops of this damnable city, instead of pleading for the return to office of a gang of cheap politicians, living off the backs of the workers, things would be a damnsite better.

Communists Challenge Socialists.

The socialists have not held one street meeting, no shop meetings, in the present campaign. They are dead from the neck up. The only figure they cut is among those to whom the socialist movement is a bit of sentiment, old timers who have not moved ahead with the years. The new stream moves with Communism.

The Workers Party challenged the socialist party of New Haven to a debate on the present city campaign, but the socialists are as silent as a clam. They prefer to go before such bourgeois organizations as the league of women voters to present their views, rather than meet with working class representatives. They evidently are more at home among such an eminently respectable gathering.

RUSSIANS WILL CELEBRATE EIGHT ANNIVERSARY.

A mass meeting and concert in honor of the eighth anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution is arranged by the Russian Branch of the Workers Party for Sunday, Nov. 8, at 6 p. m., at the Workers' House, 1902 W. Division St. Admission free. Come and bring your friends. Russian speakers, a musical program.

Comrade Mikhail Frunze

The story of the life history of another of the Old Bolshevik Guard is now ready for definite telling. One by one the outstanding figures of this magnificent array are passing and will pass from the stage of action. But they leave behind them in their passing the richest heritage ever bestowed upon mankind for all the ages that are to come—the proletarian revolution.

Comrade Mikhail Frunze was not one of those spectacular revolutionaries that flash upon the scene of history in a period of elemental upheaval as a comet flashes upon the horizon. Like his great teacher, Lenin, the leader of the Bolshevik wing of the old Russian party, he devoted himself tirelessly to forging in the storm and stress period preceding and during the revolutionary upheaval of 1905, and the disheartening reaction following, the party that was to mobilize and lead the proletariat to final victory over czarism and the bourgeoisie of Russia, and to lay the foundation for the International whose destiny it will be to lead the world revolution.

His life is a lesson and an inspiration to the younger comrades of today, to some of whom the routine, and many times obscure, work of the party becomes irksome.

The Old Bolshevik Guard taught the revolutionaries the essential lesson that without a party steeled in the conflict, with a strong Marxian leadership, there can never be any revolution.

Just as Comrade Frunze carried out the work of the party when it was struggling to make its impress upon the working class, just as he devoted his powers to every post assigned him in the illegal days of preparation for the revolution, so he took the post assigned him after the revolution and with tireless energy covered himself and the cause he served with glory.

After filling party and government positions in places removed from the center of the revolutionary movement, he began his military career as commissioner of the government of Ivanovo-Voznessensk, he soon became military leader of the district of Jaroslav, from whence he went to the eastern front as commander of the fourth army operating in the Urals. In 1919, at the height of the Koltchak offensive, he became commander of the whole eastern front and cut to pieces the white guard forces of Koltchak. In quick succession he participated in offensives against other paid military adventurers of the allied powers, and in 1920 headed the red army that drove the forces of Baron Wrangel into the Black Sea. He then became military commander of the Ukraine and Crimea. Other important posts followed until he became vice-president of the revolutionary military council of the Union of Soviet Republics.

His long devotion to the party, extending back to his student days in 1904, his military achievements and his sterling ability to work anywhere and under any conditions circumstances imposed, made him the logical leader of the red army, which position he achieved when Comrade Trotsky became ill.

Outside of Russia, and the leading circles of the Communist movement in other countries, few knew of the career of Frunze until he became chief of the red army, but his contribution to the revolution is so big that as long as there is a recorded history of mankind the name of Frunze will occupy a luminous place on its pages.

As the celebration of the eighth anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution approaches, our joy will be eclipsed by the sombre thought that this loyal party comrade and brilliant leader of the army of the Union of Soviet Republics fell at his post while still a comparatively young man.

But as we mourn his loss we must remember that the best way in which we can show our devotion to his memory and the cause for which he gave his life, is to seize with a million hands the sword that he so valiantly carried and march onward to the final conquest of the capitalist system.

Progress Against Reaction

According to the Detroit Labor News the issue in today's elections in that city of Ford despotism is progress against reaction. Not the class struggle, not the striving to create a mass labor party against the capitalist parties, not a fight against use of police, injunctions and terroristic methods in strikes, but just progress against reaction. How perfectly delightful!

It is still more illuminating when we learn that the Labor News supports the present mayor of the city for re-election, it also supports a candidate for a minor office who received in the primaries the support of the ku klux klan. These are the heralds of progress, according to the official organ of the Detroit Federation of Labor. Henry Ford supports the same mayor.

In apologizing for its vile betrayal of labor in this election the Labor News also says: "Their actions in office have shown them to be fair to all elements in society."

Mr. Dennis E. Batt's name flies at the head of the editorial column of that paper. At one time he claimed to be a revolutionary and Marxian and today his paper speaks of those who have been fair to all elements in society. This rot is a complete negation of the class struggle and repeats the dull monotony of the phrases of the philistine apologists of capitalism. Those who talk thus and do not know better are simply unconscious apologists for capitalism, but when people who have received training in the revolutionary movement repeat such imbecilities it amounts to deliberate prostitution. Rather than quit the gang of labor fakirs in the Detroit Federation of Labor who regularly play the filthy game of capitalist politics rather than go to work to earn an honest living, Batt prefers to remain close to the pie counter and repeat the drivel that appears in the Saturday Evening Post, Colliers and other scab sheets.

Surely Lenin knew how to choose apt quotations when speaking of this identical type, he asked, "Tell me, what is a philistine?" He answered it by the quotation:

> "A philistine is an empty gut, filled with fear, who hopes that god will have mercy on his soul."

Lenin and the Anthracite Strike -

By William F. Dunne

"EVERYTHING is peaceful in the anthracite," says the capitalist press.

Four or five workers, suspected of membership in the Communist Party, who tried to point out to the miners that their interests are being betrayed by the Lewis machine in that soft and hard coal miners are not called out together, have been arrested and two of them sentenced to six months in jail. But thruout the anthracite district there is a great passivity—the miners are awaiting with pathetic patience the outcome of the strike. No violence of any kind has been charged against the strikers.

BUT—

At one colliery alone 110 special policemen have been sworn in. The coal capitalists and the state are getting ready—

For what?

To "protect lives and property," of course.

But whose lives? And whose property?

Not the miners, we may be sure.

THE American working class is far from being class conscious, but the most ignorant worker would laugh in one's face if one told him that these specially organized and accredited thugs mobilized by the coal owners and their hand-picked local governments were brot into the anthracite district to protect the lives and hovels of the miners.

The most backward American worker knows better than this.

But the great majority of the workers are not prepared to continue the line of reasoning suggested by the concrete facts cited and the premise which they acknowledge as correct.

OF all the capitalist democracies America has been the most successful in maintaining popular support. Nowhere is the right of franchise more revered or the catch words of the medicine men of the ruling class swallowed with greater gusto. The reason for this we will not go into here. It is enough to say that because city, county, state and national government are looked upon as expressions of the popular will that the enlistment of armed forces against the workers is not resented more bitterly.

THE growth of military and semi-military organizations in America is one of the outstanding phenomena of the last five years. Even before the world war the use of force against the workers in strikes was a commonplace. Today, an all-embracing net work of patriotic, militarist, fascist organizations — official and semi-official—covers the country. They are directed against the working class as is proven in every period of local or national crisis.

The socialists and liberals find it hard to explain this contradiction within the frame work of American democracy. Generally they come to the conclusion that "corporation control," "Wall Street agents in government," "official corruption," or some other phrase-mongering veil for the class struggle is the cause.

THEY write and speak endlessly against the Communists because the latter point out that force is inseparable from the state, and that the present democracy is a democracy for one class—the ruling class and its hangers-on. These misleaders of the masses are the most ardent defenders of American democracy and believers in the franchise as a weapon for the elimination of all inequalities.

They have either never read Engels, they do not understand him or they do not want to understand him.

> Universal suffrage, said Engels, is an index of the maturity of the working class; it cannot, and it will not, give anything more, in the present state.

BUT it was Lenin who punctured the iridescent bubble of capitalist democracy so beloved by the social-patriots. Where is there a better description of the processes by which armed assaults make a myth of the boasted democratic freedom for minority opinion in the United States than in the following passage in Kautsky, the Renegade and the Proletarian Revolution.

> The fundamental laws of modern states, take their internal administration, take the right of meeting and the freedom of the press and the so-called equality of all citizens before the law and you will see at every step evidence of the hypocricy of bourgeois democracy, with which every honest and intelligent worker is familiar. There is not a single state, however democratic, which does not contain loopholes or limiting clauses in its constitution which guarantee the bourgeoisie the legal possibility of dispatching troops against the workers, of proclaiming martial law, and so forth, in case of the disturbance of public order, that is, in case of "disturbance" by the servile class of its servile condition, and of attempts to strike up a non-servile attitude.

LENIN mentions America as one of the countries where this aspect of capitalist democracy mentioned above is glaringly evident and there will be no voices of dissent from this among the working class.

Yet the social-reformists and liberals continue to stand as fatheadedly upon the "constitutional rights" of minorities as tho the pages of American history contained no record of aggression against the workers and national minorities such as the Negroes instead of being filled with such incidents.

"We strive for a higher form of democracy," say the middle class apostles of parliamentarism. Their expressed view is that it is because of defects in the democratic structure of American capitalism that workers in strikes and demonstrations, even in election campaigns, are visited with prison and bloodbaths from time to time.

THESE slippery misleaders are careful to speak of democracy in the abstract and not of its class character—the factor which accounts for the launching of armies of professional murderers upon striking workers—incidents which they account for by branding them "as perversions of America's democratic traditions," etc.

To all the American workers who are puzzled by what seem to be contradictions between the theory and practice of American democracy, we commend the following sentence by Lenin:

> The more developed democracy is, the nearer at hand is the danger of a pogrom or a civil war in connection with any profound political divergence which threatens the existence of the bourgeoisie.

THE reason for this is plain. Universal suffrage being the index of the maturity of the working class, and universal suffrage being the hall mark of capitalist democracy, "disturbance of the public order" under such a system, when based on deep-seated social grievances cannot but involve wide masses of the population.

To the striking anthracite miners who see one coal company alone marshall 110 armed deputy sheriffs against them, we say that it is not only a "peaceful strike" they are engaged in, but in the eyes of the coal capitalists and their bloodsucking kindred, a widespread "disturbance of the public order."

The anthracite miners are committing the crime of crimes against American capitalist democracy—they are in an action which disturbs "the servile class of its servile condition, and of attempts to strike up a non-servile attitude."

The Communists who told them these and other things have when thrown in jail—"the protection of minorities" again, but before long the miners will have to begin to think seriously of these and other matters and translate thot into action.

The Sharpening of the Class Struggle in Japan

By G. VOITINSKY.

II.

AS a result of the situation in Japan, there is to be seen a general worsening of the situation of the working and peasant masses, as well as of the millions of middle bourgeoisie and of the intelligentsia.

The most characteristic feature of the impoverishment of the peasant masses is the influx of peasants into the towns in quest of work, which made itself evident during the past year. Unemployment in the towns, however, deprives the young peasants of any chance of being absorbed in industry, and, according to the reports of the Japanese chamber of commerce, there are at present in the whole country about three million unemployed.

The strike movement in Japan in 1924, is regarded as a record since the time of the world war. According to the inexact returns of the Japanese government, in the year 1924 there took place more than 700 strikes involving more than 100,000 workers, whilst in the year 1919, when a strike wave set in in Japan for the first time after the war, the number of strikes amounted to only 497 and the number of workers involved to 64,000.

UNEMPLOYMENT among the intellectuals in Japan is at present very great, altho there are no figures available regarding the exact number.

The economic crisis in the country has created a political situation in which the governing clique is feverishly turning from one measure to the other in its attempts to save the situation. The Japanese cabinet, with the leader of the bourgeois-agrarian party Kensekai, Vicomte Kato, at the head, consists of a coalition of three parties: Sejukai, Kenesekai and Kakuschin-Kurabu. The coalition government, which was formed in May, 1924, as a result of a political crisis after the collapse of the strongest party in Japan, Sejukai, which represented the interests of the financial oligarchy, the court bureaucracy and the big agrarians, is laboring under a chronic crisis. The seceded section, Sejuchonto, which has close social connections with the above mentioned groups, constitutes the opposition against the government from the right.

And in spite of the fact there exists no organized opposition from the left the coalition is full of elements of decay, as on the one hand the policy of the government runs counter to the interests of the middle and petty bourgeoisie, not to mention the sharp antagonism of the small holders and workers, while on the other hand it is calling forth great bitterness on the part of the monopolist big capitalists, the agrarian aristocracy, the higher officials and the militarists.

SINCE the earthquake, that is within the space of about eighteen months, four governments have succeeded one another in Japan (the cabinets of Admiral Kato, Jamamoto and Kiura), which have been wrecked between the financial oligrachy and the government bureaucracy on the one hand and the social groups of the rest of the bourgeoisie on the other hand.

The entry into power of the coalition government of Kato was regarded in Japan and in other countries as indicating a certain era of liberalism in the country, as a means for smoothing over the differences between the monopolist bourgeoisie and the remaining bourgeois classes, and as a means of decreasing the revolutionary mood among the peasants, workers and petty bouregois.

The cabinet, which on the one hand employed and still employs, cruel repressive measures against the labor movement, the movement of the small peasants and the intellectuals, who are continually becoming more revolutionary, was compelled on the other hand to extend the franchise, to set up the institute of agrarian inspection in order to allay the constant conflicts between the smallholding peasants and the big landowners .. and to propose arbitration courts for the workers without, however, formally recognizing the trade unions.

BUT as is to be seen from the recent events in Japan, these measures have brought about results contrary to those which the government expected. The congress of the small holders and peasants which recently took place decided to boycott the institute of agrarian inspection, and meetings and demonstrations of workers which protested against compulsory arbitration and demanded labor legislation and the abolition of exceptional laws against "dangerous ideas," demonstrate the correctness of our assertions. The demonstrations and the collisions of students' meetings with the police, as an answer to the measures of the government to militarize the high schools, are arousing indignation against the government in almost all sections of society.

Sullen and bitter resentment has been aroused against the government among the working masses and the revolutionary intellectuals by the execution which recently took place of a young revolutionary named Namba, who made an attempt upon the life of the crown prince.

The inequality of the development of capitalism in Japan, which was historically determined by the economic ripeness of feudalism in the country at the moment of the revolution in the year 1868, after the military clique came into power, which developed industry chiefly on the basis of war production (especially after the Japano-Chinese war in 1895 and after the Russo-Japanese war in 1904) appears at present to be the chief cause of the growth of the revolutionary tendency in the country.

BUT the character of this development of capitalism in Japan showed itself especially after the earthquake, when monopolist capital and the ruling bureaucracy were faced with the proposition which had never previously existed in the history of the country of "rationalizing" industry. The advance of the process of the swallowing up of the little banks by the big banks, the bankruptcy of many middling commercial and industrial firms and banks, and the simultaneous increase and extension of the enormous Mizui and Mizuibischi concerns are extremely characteristic pecularities in the present economic life of Japan.

The introduction of male suffrage some weeks ago was an enforced concession in view of the ever increasing hate of the mass of the people; and in order that the working masses and the revolutionary organizations shall not be able to make use of even this mutilated franchise (the law provides that only people over 25 years and possessing at least 2,000 yen will be able to vote, while only people over 30 can be elected), there has been introduced at the same time the law against "dangerous ideas," under which membership of an illegal organization is punishable with 10 years years hard labor.

There exists no doubt, however, that even this franchise will serve to rally the forces in the country against the existing governing clique and against the monarchy itself. Among the 10 to 11 million new electors who, under the newly passed law, will participate in elections, there is a considerable number of small-holders, poor peasants and workers, and these will undoubtedly promote and expedite the process of the creation of a workers' and peasants' party which had already commenced some years ago. We must here call attention to a very important question in the development of this movement: up to now there exists no capitalist and petty bourgeois parties in Japan.

THE radical intellectuals, who constitute the most active political factor in the country, are beginning to penetrate more and more into the trade union movement and into the small-holders' leagues in order to gain ideological influence there. The idea of a workers or a workers' and peasants' party, which was first promulgated some years ago by the Communists, has now been taken up by these elements and there exists the danger that they will play too great a role in the organizing of the workers' party. The trade unions and also the small holders' leagues, however, are in favor of collective membership in the coming workers' and peasants' party, which will prevent the petty bourgeois intellectuals from penetrating in more or less considerable numbers into the party. It is, of course, the task of the Communists to enter this party for the purpose of combatting the petty bouregois ideology of intellectuals of the type of Kagava and others, who wish to convert this party into parliamentary party of democracy.

During the past year the working masses have organized themselves in trade union which numerically surpass the trade unions which were destroyed as a result of the earthquake. Thus, to quote an example, in the past year there has been created for the first time a union of shipbuilding workers (Kaikun Renmei) with 42,000 members, as well as a union of tramway workers, etc. In this labor movement, which is fully organized, a considerable revolutionary minority has made its appearance, which in cities like Tokio and Kioto and in the centers of the metal industry constitute the overwhelming majority. In all the more or less big towns of the country there is a tendency on the part of the trade unions towards centralization and amalgamation.

AT the same time the small-holders and the poor peasants are organizing themselves more and more. The peasants' league for the whole of Japan already has organizatory connections with the trade unions. The organizing of the radical intellectuals is following after the model of the Fabian societies, of circles and leagues, which aim at democratizing the country.

There exists no doubt that the revival in the labor movement will produce new revolutionaries and that the young Communist Party will succeed in penetrating into the depths of the working class and to leading in the struggle against absolutism.

R. R. Strikers Stick as Maryland Line Is Blocked with Freight

BALTIMORE, Nov. 2.—Reports received at strike headquarters of the Locomotive Engineers and Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, in Baltimore, for the Western Maryland railway dispute, show that traffic at main points on the road is badly crippled.

The strike began Oct. 15. On Oct. 19 the Hagerstown division reported 300 cars moved in five days, compared with an average normal daily traffic of 800 cars. At Cherry Run an average of one train a day has been handled during the strike, compared with a normal average of 600 cars a day.

Cumberland is the second largest city in Maryland. The struck road has moved only one freight train out of Cumberland since the fight began. The yards at Shomoc, which is the junction point of the Western Maryland with the Norfolk & Western, was reported jammed with cars which the Western Maryland was unable to move. At Hillen the normal 50 to 75 cars daily traffic has been reduced to a total of 23 in 5 days.

The company issued denials of this success. It claimed all yards were functioning perfectly.

What Will We Gain From Reorganization?

By ISRAEL AMTER

The American worker is not so different in psychology from the European worker. Whatever difference does exist is due to the development of the capitalist system in its concentrated form in the United States and to the capitalists and the government employing their own peculiar measures in order to keep the workers doped. "Americanization" is having a stupifying effect on the psychology. The American worker — even the foreign-born, who has been somewhat acclimatised — does not regard himself as a worker. He is ashamed of being a worker, and does everything in his power to conceal the fact. He dresses as the bourgeoisie does, he polishes his manners in conformity with the bourgeoisie. Americanization has as its motive to make the worker forget that he belongs to a class, and to instill in his mind the false idea that he is a citizen of the United States with rights and oportunities equal to any mans.

Not to "rise in the world" — which means not to escape from the condition of a worker — is a demonstration that the man is stupid. And a man fears nothing more than to be considered stupid. Therefore the moment a worker leaves a shop — after taking off his overalls and washing his hands — he considers himself not a worker but a citizen.

With our present social-democratic form of organization we approach the worker after they have taken off their overalls—and have become "citizens with rights the same as Rockefeller." The result is that they do not listen to us — for they have forgotten, or are trying to forget the class struggle.

When the party is reorganized on the basis of nuclei, we will do our work work at the place where a worker must be conscious that he is a wage slave. He is driven by the foreman of the boss. he silently revolts against the conditions that he must work under. His mind is open to every kind of suggestion. It is the function of the Communists to nourish this discontent, help to crystallize it, point the way out, formulate the policies and lead the struggle against the system.

For some years the party has issued the slogan of "organize the unorganized." It was a slogan worthy of a Communist Party; but to every party member it seemed an insuperable task. How could the party with a membership of about 20,000 conceive of organizing 24,000,000 unorganized workers in this coutry? This was a stupendous task, and remains one. But it was inconceivable particulary because, altho the party members are working in the shops where the other 24,000,000 are employed, nonetheless, they were not working in an organized manner in carrying on the general work of the party among the masses in the shops, factories and mines, and particularly in achieving the task of organizing the unorganized.

It was an idle task that the party set itself until such time as the party itself was organized in such form and at the proper place to carry out the work. The shop nuclei offord the only possibility of accomplishing this task.

For some years we have spoken of organizing shop committees, and thru these committees, aiding in revolutionizing the labor unions. But how could we organize shop committees effectively if we, the Communists, were not organized in the shop, in order to systematically perform this work? The shop nucleus made up of the party members affords this possibility.

Since the time of Karl Marx, we have been telling the workers that the working class is robbed at the point of production. What should have been more natural than that the Communists who wish to end this robbery of the working class, should organize at the point of production? Instead, owing to the ideas basic to the socialist movement outside of Russia where the shop nucleus system obtained from the very beginning, the parties were built in such form as to enable the workers to "capture" the state by means of parliamentary elections. The Communist movement arising out of the real struggles of the workers in the period of imperialism, has made it clear that the culmination of the class struggle will not be thru turning the tables against the oppressors. Hence, in order to do this work, the Communists must be organized at the point of production, in order, from the point of production, to lead the workers into the struggle for power.

The immediate tasks of the party—and the development of the struggle for power—demand that the reorganization of the party take place as quickly as possible. There is no danger of the party losing any of its real Communist elements. Disgruntled, apathetic members of the party, who have regarded the party as a social institution, or as an adventure, will drop out. The party will weld its forces together and begin to do real Communist work.

At the present time some of the branches meet each week, every two weeks and some even once a month. The class struggle goes on day by day, and our comrades meet at the end of the seventh, fourteenth or even thirtieth day to reflect on it!

Again, comrades are given tasks to perform — tasks essential for the whole party organization — and only at the end of seven, fourteen or thirty days, can one ascertain whether they have performed their duty. When the party is reorganized, discipline and control will become possible for the first time. Coordinated action of the party membership in the real struggle will become possible.

What has the party to gain from reorganization? The party has everything to gain — for the first time it will be able to become a Communist Party not only in name, but in substance and action.

POLICE POWER BACKS MINE OWNERS

COLONIAL WARS MAY WRECK NEW FRENCH CABINET

Strike and Revolution Spreads in Syria

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, France, Nov. 3.—After a stormy session of the socialist council here yesterday a motion to give a vote of confidence to the Painleve government was defeated by the narrow margin of 1,431 to 1,228. This party forms a powerful bloc in the government and if the policy is carried out it indicates an early fall of the Painleve cabinet, possibly precipitating the first crisis today when the cabinet presents the new program to the chamber of deputies.

At a conference between Painleve and a number of the socialist leaders the principal question discussed was the continuation of the colonial expeditions in Morocco and Syria. At the socialist congress at Marseilles a decision was reached against the further granting of credits for colonial warfare.

Socialists Puzzled.

The government socialists realize that in order for France to maintain her colonies—"her prestige"—in Africa and the Near East, she must continue the colonial wars. The socialists are endeavoring to devise a means of straddling the issue so that they will not have to openly challenge this imperialist policy. At the same time pressure from the membership of their party that is wavering under the terrific assaults of the Communists upon the whole governmental policy makes such a move dangerous, as it may alienate large numbers of their supporters, who will go into the Communist camp. The parliamentary leaders of the socialists mobilized every ounce of their strength and the large vote in favor of the policy of colonial despotism was the result of their efforts.

New Syrian Dictator.

The new Syrian high commissioner, who replaced Gen. Sarrail, whose storming of Damascus was carried to such excess that vast Islam hordes are arising against colonial savagery caused his removel, is a journalist, Henri de Jouvenel, former minister of public instruction in the bloc nationale of Poincare. The government hopes that this change will pacify the rebel bands that are increasing in numbers and daring.

Information received at Jerusalem reveals the spread of the revolt between Dasmascus and Homs, 80 miles north of Damascus, where four towns are besieged and French control of the mandated area is seriously threatened. Other dispatches describe the complete rout of French forces. One thing is certain and that is that French rule is tottering and cannot be re-established on the old basis without a tremendous standing army that will impose still heavier burdens upon the French military budget, already overburdened.

The Arab workers of Palestine are on strike as a protest against the massacre of thousands of inhabitants of Damascus and the anti-imperialist sentiment is spreading like wild fire thruout the immense vastness of the Mohammedan world.

Painleve Unyielding.

"There is no question of giving up the French mandate in Syria or evacuating that territory," said a prominent member of Painleve's cabinet, as the crisis became menacing to the government. It is not unlikely that the continued fall of the franc and the colonial wars may bring about the fall of the second Painleve cabinet within a short time, possibly today.

ELECTION RETURNS WILL APPEAR IN TOMORROW'S ISSUE

The DAILY WORKER goes to press too early to obtain the full election returns from New York, Boston, Detroit, Cleveland and New Jersey. Reports of the outcome in these places will be published in tomorrow's Worker, with an analysis of the contending forces. Early returns indicate a complete Tammany victory in New York, the probable victory of the Hague democratic machine in New Jersey, while in Detroit the re-election of the candidate endorsed by Henry Ford and the Detroit Federation of Labor is still in doubt.

PALESTINE ARAB WORKERS STRIKE AS PROTEST AGAINST MASSACRE OF NATIVES BY FRENCH IN SYRIA

PALESTINE, Nov. 3.—The Arab workers of Palestine have declared a strike as a protest against the massacre of Arab workmen in the French bombardment of Damascus.

Revolt Spreads.

DAMASCUS, Syria, Nov. 3.—The bombardment of Damascus by the French in which thousands of men, women and children were killed, has united many of the divergent groups in Syria to a realization that French rule must go. Revolutionary activities against the French have started in the northern parts of Syria where bands of natives have armed themselves and are preparing to raid the French lines.

The outbreaks of the natives in the Aleppo, Hama and Homs districts has the French worried. General Sarrail has again sent an urgent demand for more troops.

General Sarrail, who engineered the attack on the city of Damascus, is now being called to Paris as a gesture to appease the anger of the capitalists and missionaries of other powers who had French shells burst over their heads, due to the "carelessness" of General Sarrail who forgot to let the citizens of other nations know that a bombardment was to take place and give them the same chance that he gave French subjects to escape the shells that destroyed parts of the city.

French Plunder Village.

Following the French bombardment of the city, French officers and soldiers and their Senegalese troops raided the city, plundering the shops and homes, stealing whatever took their fancy. A number of women that had not fled the city, but had hid in corners were dragged out and outraged by drunken soldiers.

The estimates as to property losses, not counting the plunder of French soldiers, range from 1,000,000 to 2,000,000 Turkish gold pounds or $4,374,000 to $8,748,000.

K. K. K. DRAGON CHARGED WITH DEATH WOUNDS

Evidence Is Piling Up Against Trio

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NOBLESVILLE, Ind., Nov. 3.—Infection caused from wounds inflicted upon her body by D. C. Stephenson, Earl Gentry and Earl Klinick, had as much or more to do with her death than the mercury which she took in a suicide attempt to escape the torture of her assailants, according to testimony given today by Dr. V. H. Moon, in the trial of the three klansmen charged with the murder of Miss Madge Oberholtzer.

Day by day the evidence proving the diabolical character of these creatures is being produced, until in any other part of the world except a ku klux stronghold they would unquestionably be found guilty.

Medical Demonstration

A demonstration in open court of the rapidity with which bicloride of mercury tablets dissolve was staged by the defense today.

The demonstration was given as part of a severe cross-examination of Dr. V. H. Moon, pathologist of Indiana state university.

The same bottle of mercury tablets Miss Oberholtzer bought preliminary to a suicide attempt as the result of ill-treatment at the hands of the defendants was used in court.

On direct examination Dr. Moon had testified that mercury in tablet form was slower in its action than when powdered.

FASCIST DEBT ENVOYS AROUSE WORKERS' IRE

Smuggled in Under Heavy Guard

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 3—Battery Park yesterday was turned into an armed camp for the purpose of protecting the Italian fascist debt mission from the open hostility of thousands of workers who had gathered to express their contempt for the blood-streaked bandit government represented by the mission.

The mission, headed by Count Giuseppe Volpi di Misurata, fascist minister of finance, came on the Italian liner, Duilio. When the crowd gathered the representatives of the United States state department, treasury officials and someone from the Italian embassy, who were at the pier got busy on the radio and had the ship stopped out in the harbor, while a cutter of the coast guard pulled along side and the mission left the ship and entered the cutter which rushed madly down the bay at full speed.

Armed Guard on Job

Smuggled into a waiting auto, with drawn curtains, and surrounded on all sides by other autos full of armed policemen, coast guards, detectives and federal operatives, many of them riding on the dashboards of the cars with drawn revolvers the craven poltroons were taken to the Pennsylvania station where a special train was waiting to rush them to Washington where they will try to beg the government for liberal financial terms so that Mussolini may be able to continue the murder of the working class and the wholesale terror against his political enemies.

UNITED FRONT COMMITTEE IN PASSAIC MILLS

Mass Meeting Rouses Much Enthusiasm

By ALBERT WEISBORD.

PASSAIC, N. Y., Nov. 3.—The Passaic textile workers are determined to fight the wage cuts which the bosses have forced upon the workers. In response to leaflets given out by the united front committee of textile workers, a big mass meeting was held Friday evening, October 30, at Nibaurers' Hall.

The speakers at the meeting were Albert Weisbord, secretary of the central bureau, united front committees; Kovess, editor of the Hungarian paper, the Uj Elore; Silansky, of the Slavic Federation of the Workers Party; Radwanski, editor of the paper, the Novy Mir, and Benjamin Gitlow, candidate for mayor of New York City on the Workers Party ticket.

Gitlow Speaks.

The speakers, Kovess, Silansky, and Radwanski, spoke in Hungarian, Slavic and Polish respectively and were well received. Then Weisbord introduced Benjamin Gitlow and pointed out that Gitlow and the Workers Party thot this meeting far more important than the different very important election meetings which a candidate for mayor was supposed to attend at this time.

The chairman pointed out that only a few days ago when the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union left wing decided to break the injunction that the capitalist judge had handed down, Benjamin Gitlow was to be found on the very front lines of the picketers and that when the workers decided to strike and picket the plants of the Botany Mills Consolidated Co. and the other plants of Passaic that Benjamin Gitlow would be ready then too.

Benjamin Gitlow then spoke on the need for organization and the fight against the wage cut. His speech was received with tremendous enthusiasm and cheers that lasted for some time. And with this the workers decided unanimously to organize themselves behind the united front committee of textile workers.

Enroll Members.

The united front committee has opened headquarters at 35 Dayton avenue, Passaic, and at once at the meeting over a hundred paid the initiation fee of fifty cents and enrolled into the organization.

The organization drive will be continued all next week by means of meetings in several languages. There will be Italian meeting, Hungarian meeting, Polish meeting and Slavic meeting. These meetings will be announced later. Efforts will be made to get the various nationalist workers' clubs into the united front against the textile bosses.

CAPITALIST VIOLENCE RULES IN ANTHRACITE TO CRUSH MILITANT MINERS; LEWIS MACHINE AIDING

The following article is the second of a short series upon the strike of 158,000 miners in the anthracite region of Pennsylvania, written by Alex Reid of the Progressive Miners' Committee, who while speaking to mass meetings of strikers was set upon by combined capitalist authority and corrupt union officials and sentenced to six months in the Scranton jail, from where he is just released.

● ● ● ●

By ALEX REID

(Secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee.)

The armed state of capitalism is well represented in the anthracite mining field. Thruout the coal field the plainclothes men are crowding each other, so numerous are they. Every arm of the capitalist state is in evidence, among them being the federal representatives of the departments of justice and labor, state troops, sheriffs, deputies, local police, plainclothes men, coal company thugs, and gunmen, and last but not least, and more treacherous and contemptible than all the rest combined, are the labor fakers in the anthracite.

Wall Street has entirely covered the anthracite with its protectors. The miners are prohibited from speaking or meeting unless the meeting is sanctioned by the labor fakers and then only with an agreement that only certain subjects will be discussed. The labor fakers are mixed up with the coal company politicians, and can be seen in company with them thruout the valley.

The whole foregoing forces are combined and are ruling the anthracite with an iron hand. The labor fakers, co-operating with the police power, have broken up the progressive

COMRADE FRUNZE IS BURIED IN MOSCOW NEAR LENIN TOMB

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Nov. 3.—Gen. Mickhail Frunze, minister of war of the Union of Soviet Republics, was buried today in the revolutionary martyrs' cemetery before the walls of the Kremlin while crowds stood in impressive silence in the streets.

All Russia mourned the passing of the young military leader whose untimely death on Saturday shocked the country. At the time of the lowering of his coffin into the grave behind the tomb of Lenin, every garrison within the vast domain of the Union of Soviet Republics fired a salute of 50 guns.

All branches of the government, including the army and navy were represented at the funeral, while the Communist organizations and the trade unions were conspicuous. Members of the foreign diplomatic corps occupied prominent places.

MINERS FINED FOR STRIKING BY FARRINGTON

Labor Czar Helps Boss to Crush Union

By S. MASULEO
Worker Correspondent

COLLINSVILLE, Nov. 3—Coal miners of Local 685, United Mine Workers of America, at the order of Frank Farrington, president of the District 12 unions, were forced to turn back $25.00 from their pay this month to the Lumaghe Coal Co. as a fine for protesting against bad working conditions.

The fine came as a punishment of the miners for two attempt to remedy evils of continual docking of pay and dangerous transportation. In both cases, Farrington took the part of the boss.

The miners first "crime" was a 14-day strike, resulting from their refusal to ride in motor cars provided by the bosses, following the electrocution of one of their fellow workers.

In the effort to get safer transportation to and from the place of work, after reaching the mine the strike was called. Farrington, however, ended it by forcing the men to ride again on the life-endangering transportation.

The second offense of the miners was their protest against having their wages docked for not loading four cars of "clean" coal daily. If the coal was "dirty" and if the tonnage was under that of four car-loads, the bosses took a good slice off their wages. In opposition to this, the miners agreed among themselves to load no more than one car load daily. This load, however, was to be 100 per cent "clean." By this means, they hoped to force the operators to eliminate the system of "docking."

Here again, Farrington interfered in behalf of the company, after the men had carried on their fight for seven days. He commanded that they load four car-loads daily of clean coal or lose their full pay check. Not content with giving the victory to the boss and allowing them to keep the men working in dangerous conditions with continual deductions from their pay, Farrington went even so far as to impose the $25.00 additional fine.

FEAR CHINESE AUTHORITIES MAY EXECUTE ARRESTED LEADERS OF SHANGHAI TRADES UNION COUNCIL

SHANGHAI, Nov. 3.—Fear is expressed in Shanghai for the lives of the members of the Shanghai Trades Union Council that are under arrest on a charge of participating in the Communist movement.

A reward of $10,000 is offered by the Chinese authorities for the arrest of Li-li-Sian, the president of the trades council and a still higher reward is offered by the foreign municipal council of Shanghai for the arrest of the secretary of the central executive committee of the Chinese Communist Party.

But despite the attempts at persecuting the workers, the strike movement is spreading.

In several of the Japanese mills new strikes have broken out as a rseult of the violation by the employers of agreements concluded with the workers.

Trade Unions Illegal.

The trade unions, whose dissolution was recently decreed, are still in existence, altho they are forced to work underground.

All the nationalist organizations of Peking have issued a joint circular demanding that the government should re-establish the trade unions of Shanghai.

Gov. Small Fearing Impeachment, Refuses to Call Legislature

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 3—Governor Small will not call a special session of the legislature to discuss the matter of traction legislation, due to the impending case against him in the supreme court in which the state treasury is suing him for $1,000,000. Attempts have been made at a number of sessions to impeach the governor and the special session can ouly discuss the matter it was called to discuss. He fears that legal means may be discovered by which his impeachment can be brot about and will not call a special session.

In the meantime a special committee will work on the matter of traction legislation for the 14 months period, until the next session of the assembly meets in January, 1927.

CHICAGO POLICE FIND "HOT TIP" ON DURKIN "DUD"

Terrorize South Side Standard Oil Worker

After spending an entire night on a prairie near Whiting, Ind., watching the entrance of a small shack nearby in an attempt to "get" Martin Durkin, who slew the red-baiting prohibition "enforcement" Officer Shanahan and one of the Chicago police sent to "get" him, 40 policemen and federal operatives armed with shotguns, bombs and steel shields, realised that the "hot tip" they received was a "dud."

Police Raid Worker's Home.

Another army of police and federal operatives raced in autos thru the south side to 126th and Scharge avenue, home of Herbert Mattingly, a Standard Oil Co. employe, where armed with shotguns, rifles, tear bombs and carrying thick steel shields, they surrounded the house.

All they found in the house was Mattingly's wife and two small children huddled in one corner looking on wondering what had happened and Mattingly, who they claimed has a resemblance to Durkin, fast asleep in his bed.

As the police were coming back to the city after their hopeless all-night vigil, the relatives at the funeral of Austin, the stool-pigeon used by the police to trace Durkin, accused the police assigned to "get" Durkin of being so scared that in their fear that Durkin would "get" them they shot without letting him have a chance of finding protection.

Can't Use Shotgun.

Sergeant Gray who was also killed in the battle with Durkin accused Sergeant Michael Naughton of not being able to use the shotgun and in his last words said:

"O, if Naughton had only known how to use a shotgun, or if he had let me take it."

They're Not Handling Pickets.

Chicago police are very "brave" when it comes to handling girl strike pickets in the garment trades district, but when it comes to "getting" gunmen and gangsters, that have been imported by politicians to help them win Chicago elections after some "mix-up," the heroic policemen develop acute chills that make their knees rattle and hands tremble, as the delirium tremens possessed them, so that their bullets hit their own stools instead of their quarry.

Cloakmakers' Ball to Be Held by Local 52 of Los Angeles, Nov. 7

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 3.—"To dance," said one of the Greek gods, "if only for the gods and the cloakmakers. But dance ~~in~~ joy, means for the cloakmakers to become like gods themselves."

This rather apt quotation fits in well with the dance of the cloakmakers of Los Angeles I. L. G. W. Local 52, which is to be given at the Co-Operaitve Hall on the night of November 7, anniversary of the birth of the first workers' republic. Also the union's inner crisis has been put on the road to settlement of the right sort, or the "left" sort—better said, so why shoudn't the cloakmakers be joyful? It will be a masquerade ball, and all workers are invited.

Two Illinois Miners Killed at Pana Mine

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PANA, Ills., Nov. 3.—The death of Peter Mitchell, 45, today brought the death toll to two in the explosion late Monday in the Pana Coal company's mine number 1. William Broskey, 47, was instantly killed.

The men set their explosive and retired from the room. Mistaking the blast in an adjoining room for their own, they returned just as the dynamite ignited. Several tons of coal were hurled upon the two men whose bodies were badly mutilated.

miners' meetings thruout the valley and every effort is being made to keep the facts of the strike from the rank and file miners.

Capitalist Dictatorship at Work.

A campaign of misrepresentation is being carried on thruout the coal district by the capitalist press. Each day in each city in the valley, screaming headlines are carried by the kept press denouncing the progressive miners and reds. The yellow papers carry cartoons representing the progressive miners and their leaders as dogs and picture them as only such degenerated capitalist tools can, while the labor fakers write to the police congratulating them for breaking up the workers' meeting, and do their utmost to railroad miners to jail.

No effort is spared to keep the miners in ignorance of the class character of the struggle going on in the hard coal fields. I am conservative in stating that if one-tenth of the effort was made by the officials of the union to teach the miners the real cause of and remedy for the dictatorship that is being used to keep them in ignorance, the anthracite miners would respond in a manner that would guarantee a brilliant victory in the near future.

Mines Filled With Gunmen.

Everything is practically "peaceful" in the valley of hard coal at this time. The authorities see to it that it may not be otherwise. In spite of this seemingly peaceful strike, the coal owners have engaged armies of private guards to surround their property. Some of the owners have engaged as many as 120 private guards, and these are guarding the property, nosing around the cities and making all kinds of inquiries among the miners.

The question naturally arises, why are the coal companies employing this provocative force? Whom are they directed against, and why? The miners have ample proof from past experience that this provocative force of guards is placed there for the same reason that guards were placed in every striking district in America when an attempt was to be made to dig coal or load stock coal and ship it to the market during a strike.

Prelude to Open Shop Mines.

Thruout America—in West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Oklahoma, Illinois, Nova Scotia and Alberta—we see the crimson stain of human blood of the miners who gave up their lives in protest against the importation of scabs, and against the coal companies' guards. They know from bitter experience why the guards are there and whom they will be used against.

The question is being asked thruout the hard coal region, why are the maintenance men not brought out? And in many places the demand is being made to bring them out. Why are no union mass meetings being held thruout the anthracite?

Union Officials Don't Act.

Why has the union permitted union men to wash and load coal during the strike? This inferior coal is being sold in Ne wYork City at $25.00 per ton, an increase of 100% since the beginning of the strike. The miners are now beginning to feel the pinch of hunger and discontent, and concern is plainly discernable with many miners thruout the valley.

A state of mind is developing in the anthracite miners that brooks no importation of scabs, and the neglect of the miners and their interests is beginning to arouse their fighting spirit, hence the stocking of the mine properties with private gunmen sanctioned by the capitalist state.

BRITISH ADMIT THEY FOMENTED PERSIAN REVOLT

Boast of Girdling the Soviets with Enemies

LONDON, Nov. 3—Now it is quite openly admitted by boastful attaches of the British foreign office that British money and arms were behind the recent coup d'etat by which the former premier of Persia, Riza Kahn, now the new king, overthrew the young shah, backed by the reactionary religious element and the equally reactionary capitalists and landlords.

It is also openly boasted that this British engineered revolution in Persia is only part of a far greater and more menacing plot to girdle Soviet Russia around with hostile governments preparatory to a probable armed attack on the workers' republic at an opportune time.

British diplomats are greatly pleased with themselves over the Persian reactionary revolution which they supported as the next best trick in the anti-Soviet conspiracy since the Locarno pact was supposed to have won Germany to join the British-built alliance against the Soviet power.

The British government are hopeful that Tchitcherin, Soviet commissar of foreign affairs, will even be rebuffed by France when he visits Paris in a week or two to talk over the old Russian debt.

JOBLESS ARMY FILLS CITY OF SCABHOOD FAME

By A. T.
Worker Correspondent.

KENOSHA, Wis., Nov. 4.—Kenosha which recently won the recognition of being the most prosperous industrial center in Wisconsin, is now overcrowded with an army of unemployed. Many mills are being operated part time, while some are closed down indefinitely. Besides, many jobless are there from other states, attracted by the "prosperity" advertisements.

Those shops that are running pay so little that it is hard for even a single man to exist on the wage. "If you don't like the wages, you know what you can do about it!" This is the reply of the boss when workers complain.

Kenosha's "prosperity" has been linked up with the fact that it is an "open shop" town. The bosses here have kept the workers from organizing for longer than in any other towns in the southern part of Wisconsin.

Court-Martial to Let Mitchell 'Defend' Self Before Guilty Verdict

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—The army courtmartial that is trying Col. Wm. Mitchell for "conduct prejudicial to good order and military discipline," decided to give the flying colonel opportunity to present his views before bringing in the verdict.

After promptly over-ruling a motion to dismiss the whole case, and indicating a verdict of guilty, the jury of generals granted him an adjournment until Monday in order to obtain the numerous witnesses thru whom Mitchell will endeavor to prove that his charges of "criminal negligence" and "almost treasonable" administration of the army and navy air services were fully justified.

The jury of generals felt that to deny Mitchell the privilege of calling witnesses in his own behalf might create an unfavorable impression against the court-martial.

Unable to Find Work as Male Stenographer He Dons Woman's Garb

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 3.—Edgar Landman of Kansas City, 19, was held by police charged with impersonating a woman. He was arrested following a "date" Landman and a girl stenographer had "with two fellows" at a party at which his "fellow" insisted upon a kiss and wanted to "rub cheeks."

"Four years and a half ago," Landman told police, "I decided to become a stenographer because I wasn't physically able to do hard work."

After finding it hard to obtain employment as a male stenographer, young Landman declared he decided to dress as a woman.

"I had no trouble at all getting work then," he said.

"I have since then associated with girls as a girl."

"If that fellow I had a date with last night hadn't tried to kiss me no one would have found out I was a boy," young Landman lamented. "My fellow insisted on necking. I guess he must have got suspicious when my beard tickled his face."

Bituminous Miners in High Production Mark Help Break Big Strike

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 3—Proof that the bituminous miners are, under the Lewis administration, being compelled to go on working and even increase the output to be used in scabbing the anthracite miners now on strike out of their well-earned victory, is seen in the fact reported by government statisticians that during the week ending Oct. 24, broke all previous weeks' records, or a total of 12,104,000 tons. Anthracite production for the same time was given as only 13,000 tons.

Wants Money for War Department in Spite of All "Peace" Pacts

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—The war department cannot make further cuts in its budget without seriously crippling the military service of the country, President Coolidge was informed today in a letter from Secretary of War Davis.

Davis' letter was in reply to a communication from the president asking the war department to attempt greater reductions in its expenditures. It can be suspected that Davis "reply" was written before Cal's request.

ENGLISH LABOR PARTY MAKES GAINS IN THE MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Nov. 3—Reports from yesterday's municipal elections show that of the eighty points reported the labor party has made substantial gains, capturing 50 seats in the provinces and 40 in London from their opponents and losing 20.

Era of Greater Trusts Must Face An Era of Greater Labor Unions

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, any attempt to criticize the growth of greater monopolies meets with immediate resentment. Twenty years ago trust busting was the favorite sport of "reform" politicians, while the magazines piled up huge circulations by exposing the iniquities of great wealth, consolidated in giant corporations. Now the Bank of America comes forward and says:

> "Today, after mature consideration of the combination question, the public mind has come generally to approve and endorse large scale methods in business as typical of the modern era of economic organization. 'Big Business,' it is now realized, is no longer synonymous with 'bad business'."

• • • •

One of the most ardent propagandists for the viewpoint of the Bank of America is Arthur Brisbane, of the Hearst press, who never misses an opportunity to put in a good word for organized dollars. Brisbane's most recent attack is on those "queer Americans, interfering with moving picture development, seeking to prevent American concerns from becoming 'too big,' as tho it were possible for any American concern, honestly managed, EVER to become too big," the capital letters being Brisbane's own.

• • • •

Since Brisbane is now a millionaire, and has the utmost respect for others more times a millionaire than himself, it becomes a question what he means by "honesty" in business The Hearst press was once most vicious in its attacks on "corporate greed." But now the Hearst magazines are given over to salacious sex stories, while his dailies are filled with murders, robberies, the domestic difficulties of the upper class and the varied doings of the bootleggers. Such news is perfectly safe.

• • • •

Yet business is not less corrupt. It has not become more honest, even from the bourgeois point of view. William Randolph Hearst himself, in giving some of his views on this week's muncipal election in New York City, admits this when he declares that:

• • • •

> "The crooked inner workings of Tammany are likely soon to be exposed to public view and public criticism. The tiger has not changed his stripes, and I imagine the history of machine politics will repeat itself. It has done so at intervals ever since the days of Tweed."

If Tammany Hall and the democratic party in New York City and state are corrupt, then big business whose political agents they are must be corrupt. Which should flatten out the hypocrisies of Brisbane and the Bank of America about "honesty in business."

The American business man has but one goal and that is to increase his profits. If the weaker or less resourceful business pirate fails in this, then some one else with greater ingenuity will succeed and crush him to the wall.

The government in approving of the era of greater merger aids the biggest business bandits.

Coolidge's administration has winked an eye at the consolidations in the meat packing industry, while it is actually forcing the merging of railroads. The bait held out, of course, to the gullible public is that economy in management will result in cheaper rates, and to the workers' higher wages.

But the workers in Chicago's "Packingtown," for instance, know that the $10,000,000 saved annually in overhead expenses alone thru the merging of the Armour and Morris packing organizations, has not resulted in increased wages. It has brought only higher profits to parasite stockholders.

• • • •

Workers must recognize the era of greater mergers as a capitalist development that cannot be turned back, but as creating a problem that labor alone can meet and solve. Government endorsed monopolies help solidify the strength of the capitalist class, develops its unity in the "open shop" war against labor's organizations, and makes victories for the oppressors easy unless the workers realize that they, too, must effect their consolidations, all-inclusive industrial unions thru the amalgamation of the present craft organizations.

• • • •

This will of course lead to more aggressive struggles, to the final struggle for all power, when labor must take over the great industries as the property of its Soviet state, dispossessing the capitalist class and abolishing the profit in production. In that day of labor's triumph, the bigger and more centralized the capitalist monopolies are, the easier it will be to continue industry for the benefit of all, not to maintain it as now for the enrichment of the owning few.

TOLEDO MEMEBERSHIP DISCUSSES PARTY REORGANIZATION ISSUES

TOLEDO, Ohio Nov. 2.—A successful membership meeting was held here on Wednesday, Oct. 28, to discuss bolshevization and reorganization of the party. Comrade I. Amter, district secretary, gave a lengthy talk on bolshevization of the party, the primary condition of which is reorganization of the party on the basis of shop nuclei.

As a party of action, however, Comrade Amter pointed out that mere reoganization will not take us far on the path of bolshevization. The party members must understand the principles and policies of the Communist International and of the party. Without this understanding, the party membership will be unable to conduct their work.

Comrade Amter then analyzed the important tasks before the party at the present time: the campaign for a labor party, work among women and among Negroes, work to build up the Young Workers League, of which there is no branch in Toledo, defense etc. Comrade Amter dwelt at length on trade union work and repeated the decision of the district executive committee that every comrade eligible for membership in a union must joint in two months or be disciplined.

Reorganization of the party on the basis of shop nuclei was presented in minute details. Comrade Amter not only gave the comrades the technique of reorganization, but also described how they would conduct their work.

Many questions were asked after the talk, which showed that the membership is alive to the question of reorganization The registration will be carried out and Toledo will enter 100 per cent into the new form of party organization.

A resolution was adopted pledging the membership to assist the Central Executive Committee in the important tasks before the party. The resolution was adopted unanimously with the exception of one comrade abstaining "because he had not received instructions from his branch and did not wish to offend his branch members." Surely, a remarkable point of view on such a non-factional issue!

MUSSOLINI'S DEBT MISSION IS IN NO HURRY TO DEPART

Volpi Says He Will Stay to Finish

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—After an hour and a half passed yesterday in preliminary discussion, the Italian and American debt commissions have adjourned until tomorrow to give the Americans time to study the 24 monographs submitted by the Italians.

The representatives of the bloody Mussolini terror seem confident that a settlement will be reached. The heavy investments of American money in Italian securities indicates that the favored capitalists have already received assurances from both governments that an agreement will be reached.

American capitalism is deeply concerned and is desirous of aiding the Mussolini government because it hopes to win that nation against Great Britain in the struggles for world domination.

Third Largest Debtor.

Italy is the third largest debtor of the United States.

The theoretical total of the Italian debt is $2,138,543,852. Actually, the negotiations starting today will revolve around a figure considerably less. Of the gross amount $1,647,869,198 represents principal, actually borrowed. The rest is accrued interest at 5 per cent. Following the practice established in the British, French and other negotiations, this interest charge will be substantially reduced. In Italy's case it will bring the total amount to below $2,000,000,000.

Unlike Joseph Caillaux, the French finance minister, who airily came to Washington announcing he could stay only ten days, and then departed at the expiration of that period without settling, Count Volpi, head of the Italian mission, stated today he was here "to stay until an agreement is reached."

New York Police in Preparation for War; But Against Whom?

NEW YORK, Nov. 3—New York police have borrowed a page from the great war and are arming for struggle against some unnamed foe. Nine high-powered armoured automobiles, each carrying a machine gun and tear gas bombs, will soon be patroling the city, Police Commissioner Richard Enright announced today.

The crews will be equipped with rifles, shot guns and special caliber revolvers. Signal rockets will be carried. The rumor that all these preparations are to suppress "crime" might be credited more were it not for the reputation of the police themselves. Who is to guard the guards?" was a question asked by Juvenal in ancient times. It still seems applicable.

Treasury Clerk Gives Lie to "Andy" Mellon

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3—The senate ways and means committee which has been carrying on investigations as to how to revise the income tax law, have adjourned their public sessions and are now preparing to draw up a new bill.

In the closing public session of the committee hearings A. W. Gregg of the treasury department gave the lie to Andrew Mellon, head of the treasury department who insisted that it did not take any extra effort to audit and care for the accounts of the "small fry who pay income taxes," when Gregg introduced evidence showing that there were 2,100,000 disputed cases before the treasury department demanding settlement and that most of these accounts are from those who filed small income tax returns and whose settlement demands considerable auditing.

RAIL WORKERS TO DEMAND 12 PERCENT RAISE

Demands May Involve 2,000,000 Workers

At a meeting of the Chicago Local Chairmen's association held at the Great Northern Hotel where preliminary arrangements for the forthcoming gathering of the officers and general chairmen of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainment and the Order of Railroad Conductors on all western roads to the Western General Chairmen's association conference was made, a demand that railroad wages be restored to war-time level was decided upon to be presented to this coming conference of union heads representing all the western roads.

Restore War-Time Wages.

This morning the union heads on the different western roads will take up the matter of demanding the restoration of the war-time wages since the contracts they had made with the railroads will expire on Dec. 31. In 1921 the United States rail labor board slashed their wages 12 per cent and the men are now making moves to regain their former scales.

It is expected that the Order of Railroad Telegraphers will join the trainmen in a demand for an increase. It is also expected that similar demands will be made by the four other train service bortherhoods including the Switchmen's Union. Shopmen and mechanics are also determined to get an increase. The wage demands would then affect 2,000,000 organized rail workers in America.

It is understood that the Southern General Chairmen's association which meets Nov. 10 and the Eastern General Chairmen's association meeting Nov. 17 will follow the lead of the Chicago meeting in demanding the restoration of war-time wages on all roads.

Firemen and Engineers Next.

A meeting of the General Committees of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen will be held in Chicago on Nov. 19 when 359 delegates from all sections of the United States and Canada will come to decide upon the demands they will make upon the bosses that run the railroads.

The A. F. of L. and the Left Wing

By William F. Dunne

TWO ARTICLES—PART I.

OPPOSITION to the program of the left wing of the labor movement masked itself in Atlantic City as opposition to Communists and Communism. In Atlantic City the officialdom followed the tactics of the capitalist propagandists in not discussing such a basic demand as world trade union unity on its merits but simply announced that it was a Communist plot with the aim of "capturing" the American trade union movement.

The speech of Green in reply to Purcell is a masterpiece of jesuitical evasion of fundamentals altho Green is a baptist and ideologically, at least, a klansman.

Green protested that the A. F. of L. had "never been unmindful of situations thruout the entire world."

> "Our sympathies," he said, "go out to the working people of India, of China, of Asia, of Africa, of Europe, in every remote section of the earth."

He cited the protest of the A. F. of L. made to Pres. Coolidge "against the inhuman treatment accorded Chinese working men and women" as an example of the manner in which the A. F. of L. officialdom dispenses the milk of human kindness.

THE report of the executive council on this point, however, is somewhat franker than the speech of Green. On Page 76 of this document we are given a delightfull peek into the motives which prompted the protest to Coolidge. After a more or less accurate description of the Chinese situation the following sentence occurs:

> Appreciating that the SITUATION WAS OF THAT NATURE WHICH COULD BE UTILIZED BY RADICAL PROPAGANDISTS IF CONSTRUCTION AND HUMANITARIAN ORGANIZATIONS DID NOT OFFER A HELPING HAND, President Green addressed the ... letter to President Coolidge. (Emphasis Mine—W. F. D.)

THE letter itself is too long to quote here but as a whole it conforms to the policy of American imperialism in China—the "open door." It makes but two requests:

(1.) That the United States government take the initiative in calling a conference which will make plans "to abolish extra-territorial rights in China."

(2.) That "representatives of wage-earners" take part in the conference.

American imperialism desires the abolition of extra-territorial rights in China. It is its principal weapon against Britain. France and Japan.

The "labor representation" clause merely means that Coolidge is asked to appoint some A. F. of L. bureaucrat who will try to destroy the militancy of the Chinese labor movement as was the case in Mexico. The labor agents of American imperialism long to get busy in China where the Red International of Labor Unions receives the allegiance of the rapidly growing Chinese unions.

This somewhat lengthy examination of the differences between words and action of the A. F. of L. officialdom furnishes us with a good picture of the manner in which A. F. of L. policy towards the left program parallels that of Wall Street. Even its formal support of workers of other nations, as in the case of the Chinese, is predicated on a desire to prevent the rise of class consciousness.

THE left wing movement in the A. F. of L. is built around the Trade Union Educational League. The league includes all elements that want and are willing to work and fight for a militant trade union movement and who repudiate in its entirety the class collaboration policy of the A. F. of L. leadership.

The T. U. E. L. has as the central demands of its program, amalgamation of the craft and occupational union into industrial unions, a labor party based on the trade unions, recognition of the Union of Soviet Republics and world trade union unity. These are elementary demands. No trade union movement which consciously perpetuates and encourages craft divisions can combat effectively the giant industrial corporations which dominate American economic life.

No trade union movement which oscillates between one or the other parties of capitalism can wage an effective struggle against the centralized government which is the state power of the great industrialists and financiers. The trade unions, including the organized and therefore most decisive sections of the workers, must have a political party of their own—a labor party. World trade union unity and Russian recognition have been dealt with in previous articles.

THE two propositions stated above have long been accepted by the trade union movements of every other capitalist nation.

At Atlantic City they are dismissed with the statement that they express only the Communist attempts to "disrupt the trade unions."

Said President Green:

> We know that here in America that influence emanating from Moscow is seeking, as it has always sought, not to cooperate with us but to capture and control us. They are frank in their declarations, they call the officers and the representatives of the American Federation of Labor "fakers, crooks and scabs." They declare frankly that they do not believe in collective bargaining; THEY CALL COLLECTIVE BARGAINING CLASS COLLABORATION. THEY DO NOT SEE IN ANY STRIKE AN OPPORTUNITY TO INCREASE WAGES, TO SHORTEN HOURS, TO IMPROVE THE CONDITIONS OF EMPLOYMENT OF THE WORKERS, BUT THEY SEE IN EVERY STRIKE AN OPPORTUNITY TO PROMOTE REVOLUTION. They assert that revolution is the only way the dictatorship of the proletariat can be established and our republic overthrown. (Emphasis Mine—W. F. D.)

IT will be noticed that Green became somewhat incoherent in the last sentence quoted. Even he doubtless agrees that "revolution is the only way the dictatorship of the proletariat can be establish and OUR republic overthrown."

But this is beside the point. The phrases emphasised constitute complete falsification of the Communist position on the daily struggles of workers and are typical of the cuttlefish methods by which the labor agents of imperialism cover up their betrayals, and the real basis of Communist opposition to them, by an inky cloud.

THE Communists who take part in the left wing struggle in the trade unions say precisely that the proof of the anti-labor character of the trade union officials is shown by the fact that they even do not fight honestly and militantly for such immediate demands as higher wages, shorter hours and better working conditions. Communists do not hold that "collective bargaining" is a betrayal of the workers but they say that it cannot be substituted for the collective class struggle without the labor movement degenerating into a mere agency for class collaboration.

THESE questions become easily understandable if we begin by asking:

Where is the labor movement headed for?

Is it, as Green would have us believe, a movement concerned solely with salving over some of the more hideous ulcers of capitalism or is it a basic organ of struggle for the whole working class against capitalism?

The answer is found in the fact that in the present imperialistic period the demands of the workers for higher wages, shorter hours and better working conditions precipitate tremendous crises during which the workers must choose between a program of conflict with all the agencies of capitalist industry and the state—or surrender.

LABOR movements which accept the capitalist system, labor movements which have been poisoned by social-patriotic leadership, always choose the path which leads to surrender.

There is no othor alternative for them once they reject the class struggle. To the apostles of class collaboration like Green the interests of the capitalist state are more important than those of the working class on whose backs it rests.

AS capitalism has developed into imperialism, and as imperialism imposes ever heavier burdens upon the workers, it becomes harder for such demands as the left wing puts forward to be opposed on their merits. This, coupled with the genuine fear of Communist activity, Communist influence among the masses and of Communism itself, dictates such statements as the following made by Green in reply to left wing demand for unity with the British and Russian workers against world imperialism:

> The Trade Union Educational League here in America, which is the creature of the Communist Party, controlled and directed by a man who at one time was active in the trades union movement, frankly announces that its policy is to bore within the labor movement, to destroy it and substitute for our philosophy, the philosophy of Communism. We are not ready to accept that, and we wish that our friend who has so kindly advised us and has offered us such frank suggestions might take back to the Russian Red Internationale this message, that the American labor movement will not affiliate with an organization that preaches that doctrine or stands for that philosophy.

THE convention minutes state that "at this point the delegates arose and vigorously applauded the statement of President Green."

No left winger nor any Communist need be alarmed by such a demonstration. The delegates to an A. F. of L. convention are less representative of the membership than even the most pessimistic radical thinks but there is much evidence that even these labor leaders with the salaries of bankers can be moved by pressure from below as we shall see later.

Green's speech in reply to Purcell and the resolution adopted on world trade union unity was, as we have seen, in essence a sneering denunciation of any attempts by labor movements of other countries to influence American labor.

BUT the A. F. of L. has no scruples when it comes to interfering in other labor movement on the side of reaction.

It is well-known to every worker who is at all informed on the British labor movement that the Seamen's Union in that country is headed by the conscienceless reactionary Havelock Wilson. He has consistently refused to lead the struggle of the underpaid British seamen and has sabotaged every attempt of the rank and file to better their conditions.

The seamen recently took matters in their own hands and called a strike which tied up shipping thruout the ports of the empire. The strike was "unofficial" but it received the support of every honest section of the British labor movement.

HAVELOCK WILSON, on the other hand, went so far as to issue handbills calling George Hardy, one of the leaders of the strike and a former member of the I. W. W., who served a sentence in Leavenworth for his loyalty to his class during the war, "a German spy." Wilson also cooperated with the shipowners to break the strike.

Enter the A. F. of L.

A resolution, of which the following are the important sections was introduced and passed at Atlantic City:

> WHEREAS, The real purpose of these so-called radicals is to sabotage transportation by sea and to turn the seamen into carriers of such revolutionary propaganda as cannot be sent thru the mails, and
> WHEREAS, The officers and members of the National Sailors' and Firemen's Union of Great Britain and Ireland, the legitimate trade union of British seamen, are now successfully opposing the same sort of an attack from persons masquerading as radicals under much the same leadership as conducted the attack upon the International Seamen's Union of America; now, therefore be it
> RESOLVED, That the American Federation of Labor in convention assembled in Atlantic City, N. J., hereby TENDERS ITS HEARTY CONGRATULATIONS TO THE OFFICERS AND MEMBERS OF THE NATIONAL SAILORS' AND FIREMEN'S UNION OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND FOR THEIR FIRM STAND against the destructionists who have been seeking to scuttle that organization by the so-called "boring from within" policy.

THE A. F. of L. convention records itself as opposed to "aggression by propaganda" but it has no hesitation in taking up the cudgels in any country in the world for those elements which, as it does in America, fight every effort of the left wing and the broad masses which rally around it, as in Great Britain, to oust the friends of capitalism at the head of labor unions. No trade union reactionary is too crooked, treacherous and discredited to find the staunchest support in the conventions and in the executive council of the A. F. of L.

No measure calculated to divide and weaken labor but can get support of this wrecking crew.

NOT ALL HAPPY IN LEAGUE SAYS BRAZIL'S AGENT

Why Keep Seat Open for U. S. Only?

PARIS, Nov. 3.—Not all is harmony in the league of (capitalist) nations, in spite of all the peace talk at Locarno and since. This fact is expressed in the demand inherent in the so-called "study" of the Brazilian representative on the league, Dr. Mello Franco, concerning how the league is related to the Americas.

Dr. Franco rejects the idea that if trouble such as war comes between South American states, that the league has any business there. Settling such affairs, he says, "Would be fulfilled by other Latin-American states without calling in European and Asiatic forces.

"It is to the interest of Latin-America that the United States shall some day occupy the chair at the council table left vacant for her," says the doctor, ambiguously leaving the reader to infer that the doctor implies that he thinks the league will restrain the U. S. from further gobbling of Latin-America.

Dr. Franco proceeds to say that "altho 19 Latin-American countries are members of the league, they have not even one permanent seat on the council, altho Europe, with 26 countries, has three such seats." He adds that the "only permanent seat reserved for the American continent is that held open for the United States."

Then he winds up with the parting shot that while Locarno's "peace pact" was important, so was the Pan-American "security pact" signed at Santiago.

YOUNG WORKERS TO HOLD MEETINGS TO FORM FRACTIONS IN UNIONS

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—The industrial department of the Young Workers League has decided to carry on a three week campaign for the purpose of organizing our members into youth fractions in the trade unions; and to prepare them for real trade union activity.

The question of organizing the unorganized will also be a very important factor during this campaign.

The following is a list of the trade union fractions and the nights they are to meet. All meetings will be held at 108 E. 14th St.:

Cap and Millinery—Wednesday, Nov. 4, 6:30 p. m.

Furriers—Thursday, Nov. 5, 6:30 p. m.

Shoe workers—Friday, Nov. 6, at 8 p. m.

Building trades—Monday, Nov. 9, 8 p. m.

Pocketbook makers—Tuesday, Nov. 10, 8 p. m.

Amalgamated C. W. of A.—Wednesday, Nov. 11, 8 p. m.

General workers—Thursday, Nov. 12, 8 p. m.

Clerks—Friday, Nov. 13, 8 p. m.

Printers—Saturday, Nov. 14, 8 p. m.

All comrades who work in any of the trades mentioned above must attend these meetings regardless of whether they are members of a union or not.

Comrades must bear in mind that the youth fractions play a very important role in the young Communist movement and that they must give active support to this work.

DON CHAFIN ON WAY TO PEN AS A MOONSHINER

Assassin of Workers Gets Two Years

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Nov. 3.—Don Chafin, feudist, gangster, highwayman and bootlegger former sheriff of Logan county, is on his way to the federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., to begin serving the two-year term imposed upon him for making and selling moonshine booze.

For years Chavn was a bandit with authority in Logan county committed every conceivable crime, including murder, against the miners in that county. He was one of the participants in crushing the Logan miners after their famous march a few years ago, and was the one who appealed to the government for airplanes which rained bombs from the air upon the marchers.

Should Be Hanged.

For his wholesale crimes against the working class of Logan county he richly deserves to be hanged. He was given free reign to commit his crimes, until his bootlegging activities aroused the envy of other bootleggers, and the subsequent gang war became so flagrant that action was finally taken, resulting in his conviction.

RUSSIAN BRANCH, Y. W. L. ARRANGES BALL OF THE RED YOUTH FOR NOV. 28

Ku Klux Klan Grand Dragon is Charged with Death Wounds

Opening cross-examination, Inman, lawyer for the defense, handed him the vial of tablets and a glass of water and invited him to dissolve a tablet.

At the conclusion of the demonstration Dr. Moon admitted that but a few seconds had elapsed and that a tablet's dissolution would be accelerated by the heat in a human stomach.

"What was the immediate cause of Miss Oberholtzer's death, doctor?" abruptly inquired Inman.

"Infection carried in the blood stream and localizing in the kidneys," was the reply.

"You believe, then, she would have recovered after 25 days if complications had not set in?"

"That is my opinion."

HILLCREST MILL STRIKERS BUILD MILL COMMITTEE

Have Five Demands to Fight For

By ALBERT WEISBORD

PASSAIC, N. J., Nov. 3.—The workers who have called a strike against the owners of the Hillcrest Silk Mill are fighting for the following demands:

1. The same two loom and price conditions as before.
2. 10 per cent increase over the day rate for all night workers.
3. No more than two shifts in the mill.
4. One quarter cent more per yard for every two picks more than forty-six per inch.
5. Recognition of the mill workers committee.

Acting upon the suggestion of Albert Weisbard, secretary of the united front committee of textile workers, the workers decided to organize themselves permanently into a Hillcrest Silk Mill Workers' Council.

All of the strikers greatly feel the need of organization and they are determined to strive to bring about one union in the textile industry rather than allow the present unorganized and chaotic state of affairs to continue to exist.

They are behind the united front committee of textile workers in the slogans of: Amalgamate all textile unions into one union in the textile industry, organize the unorganized, establish real workers' mill committees with power.

All efforts will be made to extend the united front in Hudson county and all textile workers' organizations will be invited to attend the united front committee meetings and help carry on the work.

storm of protest against the French methods in the Syrian war, has caused the Painleve cabinet to consider the establishing of a civil governor in place of a military governor.

General Sarrail is being recalled to Paris to answer many charges as to the "incompetent" way in which he handled the Syyrian war and General DuPont is to wage the campaign until matters are settled in Paris as to what steps the French government will take in the future in the Syrian war.

To Send Socialist.

France is sending 10,000 more soldiers into Syria. Most of these 10,000 soldiers will arrive from the Moroccan front equipped with tanks, airplanes, artillery, etc., to use every method known to modern warfare to crush the independence movement in Syria.

Rumors are current in Paris that the socialist deputy, Paul Boncour, who has supported the government policy of holding Syria as a French mandate, may be appointed as the civil governor of Syria.

League of Nations Makes Demand.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The permanent mandates commission has demanded that France make a report on her mandate to cover the period from the time that she took over the league of nations mandate for Syria until the last day of October, 1925. The previous request by the league commission had called for a report up to October, 1924, but since the "blunders" made by General Sarrail, the league wants the report up-to-date. This request was decided upon by a secret session of the mandates commission.

ENGLISH WIRELESS MEN STRIKE AGAINST FIRING NINE; CUTS OFF ISLAND

LONDON, Nov. 3—A strike of 150 wireless operators and receiving clerks in London, Liverpool and Manchester has cut off the Marconi wireless communication from England to the continent and overseas. The men are striking to restore to their jobs nine workers who were discharged, supposedly for reasons of "economy." The government wireless is the only one working in England today.

PITTSBURGH MEMBERSHIP GIVES HEARTY RESPONSE TO WORKERS PARTY REORGANIZATION CALL

Comrade Jakira, the newly elected district organizer in the Pittsburg district, is on the job working overtime and mobilizing all available energies to complete the reorganization of the Pittsburgh district on the basis of shop nuclei as soon as possible.

It is significant to note that the Finnish comrades in the Pittsburgh district have turned out practically one hundred per cent for the reorganization registration.

October 26th, the organization department received a report on the constructive activities of Comrade Jakira, reading, in part, as follows:

"This is to inform you that a membership meeting of the party was held yesterday in McKeesport. Thirty-six members were present and registered. Committees were appointed to visit the absent members so that the registration may be completed within the next ten days.

"We are now classifying both Pittsburgh and McKeesport registration blanks and we expect to have about eight or ten nuclei formed this week. The reorganization committee will meet tonight and take final action on the matter. The meeting in McKeesport was very enthusiastic, lasted over three hours, and was considered one of the best held so far in that city.

"We also participated actively in helping to form a defense organization. $30 was contributed to the district office and the city financial secretary informed the meeting that they sent $30 to The DAILY WORKER after he had received a wire from Chicago. The action, of course, was approved, and further efforts will be made to help The DAILY WORKER. A city DAILY WORKER agent, as well as branch agents, were appointed at the meeting so that this work will be carried on more successfully than before. Also many other decisions were adopted, and it will lead to the revival of the organization in that city which was practically dead until now."

America Sending Big Gun to "Defend" Coast

As a huge cannon 14 feet in height, 95 feet long, and ten feet wide, capable of throwing 14 inch projectiles weighing 1,560 pounds 25 miles, is being transported to the Pacific coast to be used as part of the coast defences, army officials are using the opportunity to "put hope into the faithful and dread into the hearts of the disloyal."

The gun which is the latest and most modern designed by the ordinance department of the army is being exhibited for days at a time with military officers on hand to give "1007" talks, at every city along its way of travel has just visited Chicago.

Special crews are sent ahead of the train that is carrying this gun to test the rails and see to it that the bridges are in excellent condition as this monster gun which is mounted on a railway carriage weighs 365 tons and is heavier than the largest locomotive.

This is an American testimonial that the Locarno peace pact and Washington disarmament conferences were a "success."

DETROIT, MICH., LABOR FAKERS FOR REACTION

Official Labor Organ Endorses Ku Kluxer

By WORKER CORRESPONDENT

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 3. — City elections are to be held here next Tuesday. The elections are supposed to be non-partisan, and in the primary elections held some time ago the field was left exclusively to the agents of the capitalist class.

Labor has no candidates in this election in Detroit, because of the manipulation of the election machinery, which eliminates working class candidates unless they are able to make the major campaign in the primaries.

Denny Endorses Plutes.

The fact that labor has no candidates does not prevent the notorious Detroit Labor News, edited by a renegade radical, Dennis E. Batt, coming out for the re-election of John W. Smith, a republican politician, and present mayor of the city of Detroit. This creature, Smith, is not a member of a labor union, nor has he ever defended the cause of labor in any other sort of working class organization.

Another candidate receiving the endorsement of the Detroit labor fakers is Fred W. Castator for city councilman, who has held that position for some years, and who graduated from the inner machine of the strikebreaker Mahon, head of the street carmen's union. He works the game from both ends, and gets the workers going and coming.

A bourgeois pill pusher, Dr. Broderick, is another of the candidates supported for common council by the Detroit Labor News. On the list of labor's candidates is one Robert G. Ewald who received the endorsement of the ku klux klan in the primary elections. He is already a member of the city council and is seeking re-election. Some time in his life he worked and managed to get a card in the bricklayers' union.

No intelligent worker in this city will bother to go to the polls, as it makes no difference which gang of fakers gets elected. Any and all of them will do the bidding of the scab bosses of the city and in case the workers object they will be jailed and beaten and shot by the minions under one group as well as the other.

CZECHO-SLOVAK BUREAU ISSUES STRONG APPEAL FOR DAILY WORKER

The Czecho-Slovak bureau of the Workers (Communist) Party of America called a special meeting for October 24, 1925 to consider the appeal of the organization department in behalf of the DAILY WORKER. The following resolution was unanimously adopted by the bureau:

"The Communist press is one of the most effective means for Communist education, agitation and propaganda. No Communist Party can prosper and strengthen its ranks without a powerful and insured press. That counts for all the Communist papers in this country, of which the Workers Party publishes a great number, in about eighteen different languages. The most powerful and important of these papers for the party is The DAILY WORKER, published in the English language.

"Altho the foreign language papers are very helpful and of great service to the party, a necessity, they cannot be compared in meaning and importance to the central organ of the party, published in the English language, which organ be believe is indispensable

"We know that none of the language papers are insured financially and that all of them are in constant financial need, and that time after time have to appeal to the class conscious workers for financial help In this The DAILY WORKER makes no exception; on the contrary, it is going thru a very severe financial crisis just now. Only the workers, and no one else but the workers, can and must help The DAILY WORKER to overcome this crisis, for The DAILY WORKER is their organ, fights their battles. and consequently depends upon them for financial help.

"Realizing the difficulties of The DAILY WORKER, we call upon all our membership, our sympathizers, and also upon all readers of our papers to help us to insure and strengthen our Communist press, which fights the battles of all workers, but especially to help us to insure and strengthen our central organ, The DAILY WORKER, which fights these battles more successfully than the rest.

"Comrades! Friends! The capitalist press of this country is kept up by the mighty trusts, big department stores and all sorts of financial aristocracy, whose interests it serves and defends. Furthermore, the capitalist press gets its big profits from advertisements, two-thirds of which makes up every issue of the paper. Needless to say, nothing of this sort is seen in The DAILY WORKER. The DAILY WORKER does not take this kind of help. The DAILY WORKER is the spokesman of the working class, and consequently when in need, it turns for its help to the working class only. Will the help come?

"Our answer must be: Lets insure The DAILY WORKER, let us give it all possible and necessary support, whether financial or moral. Let all of us subscribe to it and read it and let all of us try to secure new subscribers for it. By securing new subscribers for The DAILY WORKER we will not only help the DAILY WORKER financially, but we will also gain more influence and prestige among the working masses of this country. This kind of help would be the best of all, worthy of any Communist.

"Long live the central organ of the Workers (Communist) Party—The DAILY WORKER.

"Czecho-Slovak Bureau, Workers (Communist) Party."

This resolution was also unanimously approved by the general membership meeting of the Czecho-Slovak branches in the Chicago district.

He Made His Boodle

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 3. — George Remus of Cincinnati, "bootleg king" recently released from the Atlanta penitentiary to which he was sentenced and fined $10,000 for liquor law violation, it is said was testifying for the government in the investigation and that his evidence would result in starting disclosures when the jury's finding finally become public. Ramus, understood to have amassed a fortune thru liquor operations, openly declared he was "thru with booze running."

He is being protected by federal agents from possible harm at the hands of St. Louis gangsters understood to be on the scene "to get the squealers."

Workers Party Holds Successful Rally at Boro Park, Brooklyn

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 3—A successful campaign rally of the Workers (Communist) Party was held at Workers Hall, Boro Park, Brooklyn, in spite of the fact that the first snow of the season had hit New York City, and kept many workers home hugging their firesides.

Sylvan A. Pollack was the speaker, substituting for Ben Gitlow, who was unable to attend due to important industrial matters of immediate importance. Comrade , J. Doroshkin acted as chairman, speaking a short time in Jewish in opening the meeting.

Comrade Pollack in the course of his speech briefly pointed out the records of James J. Walker, and Frank D. Waterman, democratic and republican candidates for mayor, and then before going into details about the socialist party and its candidate, Rev. Norman Thomas, showed how its brother parties have and are acting in other parts of the world, pointing out such cases as the position of the French socialist party, on the war of the French government in Morocco, the support of the Bulgarian socialists of Zankov, the Polish socialists of Grabski, and many other examples of working class betrayal. He then pointed out the socialist party's recent adherence to the league of nations, and Thomas' letter in favor of the world court, which he signed jointly with Thomas F. Lamont, the banker, partner of J. P. Morgan.

Gitlow was described as a real working class representative, a trade unionist, a fighter in the front ranks of the working class struggle. All the workers were urged to support the Workers (Communist) Party in this campaign.

Laborers Get 50c Raise.

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—Salary raises for city workers included in the 1926 budget of New York include 50 cents per day for city laborers, a $100 annually for street sweepers. A total of $5,000,000 is added for wage raises with another $1,000,000 set aside for emergency increases to bring mechanic's wages from time to time up to the prevailing rates for their categories in private enterprises.

Filipinos not Yet Conquered.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3. — Independence is as much the determined aim of the Filipino people today as when their little army was being crushed by the American armies, according to Sen. Sergio Osemna, head of the independence mission, speaking at a Filipino flag meeting in Washington.

Clyde Kelley Disputes New.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3—Rep. Clyde Kelley of Pittsburg denies the claim of Postmaster General New that postal rates will have to be increased again in order to meet the increased wage scale which congress gave the postoffice workers at the last session.

LITHUANIANS DIG DEEP FOR FUNDS TO RESCUE DAILY

Bureau Sets Example to Language Sections

By V. ANDROULIS.
(Worker Correspondent)

The bureau of the Lithuanian section at its last meeting, again took up the financial question of The DAILY WORKER. The branches of this section are contributing their share. Also many branches of the Lithuanian educational and fraternal organizations are responding to the call for help for The DAILY WORKER. That, of course, proves that the Lithuanian comrades understand the importance of our Communist daily and work for its maintenance. But even then the bureau of the Lithuanian section is not satisfied.

While we have our Lithuanian Communist press and have to work hard to support and maintain it, we also know that The DAILY WORKER is the chief organ, not only of our party, but also of all the American workers. The bureau, therefore, again issues a call to all Lithuanian Communists and workers in general to increase their efforts for the support of the English Communist daily. Not only that, the bureau itself scraped together a few dollars as a donation to The DAILY WORKR. To be sure our treasury is empty. In that case, of course, the bureau could hardly afford to contribute $10. But every bureau member dug his hand in his pocket and pulled out what was there. Comrade Bacevicius, for instance, pulled out a ten dollar bill and said, "The treasury of the bureau is empty, but The DAILY WORKER must be helped and enabled to continue its fight against all enemies of the workers as it did up to now. The DAILY WORKER is the chief organ of our party and it is an organ of the working class of America. It is our duty to maintain its life and make it strong."

Three bureau members followed him with $3 each, one with $2.50, then followed $2, then a dollar and some more dollars. Non-bureau members present also followed the example. Comrade Krasnauskas with $2, others one dollar each. The total was $35.50.

All these comrades have already contributed in their branches, some did even twice, but seeing the necessity they again responded.

We have again and again to come to the support of our own language Communist press, and our comrades know the importance of the Communist press, more so the importance of the Communist daily in the English language.

Comrades, let us increase our efforts to help our daily!

SHOP NUCLEI REORGANIZATION GOES OVER IN CHICAGO SECTION TWO

By MARTIN ABERN

The formation of five shop nuclei, four potential shop nuclei and two street nuclei was the outcome of the section reorganization meeting of Section No. 2 (Pullman) Chicago, Workers (Communist) Party on Wednesday, October 28, 1925.

Nearly 50 members or two-thirds of the membership in this section were present when Comrade Martin Abern, district organizer took up the party reorganization.

After the preliminaries, actual work of reorganization took place. One shop nucleus, having at present 19 members, was organized in the Pullman Car company. In the Ford automobile works a nucleus of eight was formed and then two housewives and a meat dealer were attached to function with the automobile nucleus. In one of the railroad shops, six members were found to be working together.

Additional Shop Nuclei Being Formed

The remaining comrades were found to be working either alone, at the moment, or were at occupations such as domestic work, etc. There were placed into street nuclei.

One street nucleus which was formed has 13 members and Street Nucleus No. 2 has 11 members. Both of these street nuclei have many comrades working in steel, railroad plants and other industries where possibilities of shop nuclei organization are excellent and these comrades are expected to get on the job to form shop nuclei as quickly as possible. As soon as the formation of additional shop nuclei by members now organized in street nuclei is achieved, the remaining street nuclei members will be attached to other shop nucle ito aid in shop nucleus organization. This has already been done in the case of the Ford nucleus.

Absent Comrades to Be Reached

Comrades are being assigned to reach those members who were absent from the meeting so that they can be registered and organized into shop or street nuclei.

Shop nuclei organization in the Pullman section of Chicago should meet with marked progress and success, when the comrades have acquainted themselves more with the shop nuclei work.

This section is highly proletarian and the vast majority of members work in the basic industries, such as steel, railroad and automobile industries The comrades in the Pullman Car nucleus have been organized for some time and are now proceeding to draw in new blood. Similarly the Ford plant nucleus has been organized and also one of the nuclei in the large steel plant. Possibilities for developing larger units in the railroad shops appear good.

Membership in Basic Industries.

The registration revealed that 45 members are steel workers in steel plants; manufacturing, general steel implements, but for the most part builders of railroad cars. Eight are automobile workers, five are carpenters on the railroad; one air-brakeman, a street car worker, three machinists; one janitor in a hotel; two doing general work in hotels, a cement finisher, a real estate broker, one bridge worker, one firemen in a hospital, a barber and a barber student, one working in a tack factory, two unemployed steel workers and a number of general laborers, one stenographer, one tinner and five housewives.

From this classification it is plain that potentialities for Communist work are very good. A revolutionary proletarian viewpoint prevails and this can be developed into mass Communist activity in Pullman.

The steel corporations and the Pullman Car slave-driving outfit have done everything in their power at all times to crush any attempts at union organization and they have been successful despite the strong resistance at many times by the workers in their attempts to organize.

The registration showed only four members belonging to the unions in this steel bulwarked open shop town. These belong to the barbers, carpenters and Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Need to Unionize Members

In the Pullman Car company the employee plan of representation has prevailed. This has been nothing but a company union of the vilest and worst sort, and at all times organized in the interests of the corporation.

There are many comrades, however, who are now in a position to join a union and one of the tasks of the party organization is to get these comrades wherever possible to join unions and to lay a basis for greater unionization later.

Each of the units organized either on the shop or street nuclei plan, immediately elected temporary officers and organized a provisional section committee.

This provisional section committee met Sunday morning to take up some of the immediate organizational tasks.

Develop Leaders Immediate Necessity

An immediate task will be to develop a few leading comrades who can take over the technical direction of the various shop nuclei. Meetings mus tbe held regularly if the nuclei are to function and to live.

In the section meeting last night, a number of points of activity were discussed, such as the need of getting more comrades to write of their experiencts, the lives of the workers in the shops and at the earliest moment to issue a bulletin. In a number of smaller nuclei, the first order of business must be the recruiting of more new members. Higher party units must give constant help and direction to the work of the shop nuclei in order that they may swiftly feel confident of their ability to carry on genuine Communist work in the shops and build the party.

Comrades present at the meeting felt satisfied with the change and strongly believed that the reorganization will benefit the party greatly, however difficult the work may be at the beginning. A few members may be lost, but their loss will not be felt and the new members gained will more than make up.

Nuclei Take up Campaign

The Pullman comrades are organized in a number of steel nuclei which makes many of their problems common, altho organized in different shops. The same holds true for those working in the automobile and railroad shops. This will make the planning of the work much simpler than in other sections where industry is much more diversified.

The Pullman comrades are taking up some immediate party campaigns, such as building International Labor Defense and preparing for the eighth anniversary meeting of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics to be held in Pullman on Nov. 8th.

Section meetings in Local Chicago have now been held in Section No. 1 and Section No. 2. Section No. 5 (North Side) meet the day following the Pullman meeting and will be reported on at a later date. Following the North Side Section (No. 5) meeting, Section No. 3 (the Stockyards territory) will hold its meeting on Wednesday, Nov. 4th in Vilnis Hall, 3116 So. Halsted St.

SOME MORE NUCLEI ORGANIZED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA. DISTRICT

The organization department is in receipt of a report from the Philadelphia district on the reorganization in Philadelphia.

It reads, in part, as follows:

"The work of reorganization is progressing. A shop nucleus of five in a clothing factory was organized last night, with three Italian, one English, and one Jewish comrade. In the same shop there will be organized a Young Workers League nucleus of five.

"In registering a branch last night I ran across the first possibility of a building nucleus.

"There will be about six or seven comrades in it. Steps will be taken to organize it on the early part of next week."

The Philadelphia comrades are surely proceeding with all their energy in the matter of reorganization.

WORKERS' SCHOOL TAKES CARE OF NIGHT WORKERS

Will Conduct Classes in the Afternoon

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—Wokers in New York City are showing keen interest in the Workers' School which is conducting classes every night in subjects of interest to the working class.

In addition to the classes in the evening special courses in English and other subjects will be started for night workers. These courses will be given during the afternoons. Registration for these courses are open now as the number of applications received will determine the starting of these classes.

Visit the Library.

The school conducts a library which is open both day and evening to students and others interested. The library contains an excellent collection of books on economics, politics, sociology, etc., and is known as the Brower Memorial Library.

Conduct of the School.

All classes will start promptly at the hour set for beginning. Lateness is not only detrimental to the student but to the entire class. Come on time.

Regular attendance is obligatory.

Students are expected to prepare for their class beforehand whatever material was assigned.

The system of teaching by lectures will not be used in the Workers' School. It is good for the teacher but not for the student. Questions, discussion, study and self-activity on the part of the student will be the basis of instruction in all except special lecture courses.

Many additional courses will be started this winter. Your name and address on file in the school office, room 34, 108 E. 14th street, will keep you in touch with all new developments.

The school committee consists of Comrades Moissaye J. Olgin, Anton Bimba, Jacob Mindel, Samuel Don, Rebecca Grecht, Julius Codkind, and Bertram D. Wolfe.

When that argument begins at lunch time in your shop tomorrow—show them what the DAILY WORKER says about it.

PARTY REORGANIZATION PROCEEDING RAPIDLY IN PITTSBURGH DISTRICT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 3.—The Pittsburg district is proceeding rapidly with the party reorganization.

The district organizer, Comrade Jakira, announces that among the several shop nuclei already organized, one has been formed in one of the biggest steel works in the district. The members in the nuclei have already discontinued their connections in the old branches, directly functioning in the shop nuclei, as definitely organized units of the party.

Tailor Shop Nucleus

Another nucleus consisting of four comrades was organized in a tailor shop. This nucleus is also functioning very well.

A shop nucleus No. 4 has also been organized in factories in Pittsburgh, and has already secured four new members.

International Branch

Pittsburgh is holding a meeting Tuesday night of all members who cannot be attached to any nuclei and a street nucleus (international br.) is to be formed. Two other international branches are to be organized during the coming week.

The entire city of Pittsburg, as well as the district, will soon be reorganized entirely on the basis of shop and street nuclei.

Chinese Envoy Arrives.

General Shu-Tsang Hsu, former governor general of Mongolia has arrived in Chicago and has engaged a suite at the Drake Hotel consisting of eleven rooms.

PHILADELPHIA GOES FORWARD WITH SECTION REORGANIZATION

Comrade Alex Bail, assistant district organizer No. 3, has notified the organization department of the systematic way in which reorganization is proceeding in Philadelphia.

In a recent letter to the organization department, Comrade Bail reports:

"Section No. 1 (Downtown) will meet on Monday, Nov. 1, at Amalgamated Center, 431 Pine street. The following branches are called to this meeting: Central Jewish, Italian No. 1, Lithuanian No. 76, and Finnish.

"Section No. 2 (Central) will meet Thursday, November 5, at party headquarters, 521 York Ave. The following branches are called: Central English, Lithuanian No. 12, Ukrainian, Russian, Lettish, Armenian, Scandinavian, Uptown Jewish, Camden South Slavic and Hungarian.

"Speakers for both meetings will be assigned and the reorganization committee ready to proceed with the work.

"Suggestions from you on conduct of work at section meetings are welcome. I read the report of your Chicago section meeting and this gives me some leads."

MUSSOLINI IN SPEECH BOASTS OF TERRORISM

Workers Preparing to Challenge His Power

ROME, Italy, Nov. 3.—The bombastic arch-demagog, Benito Mussolini speaking in commemoration of the third anniversary of the fascist march on Rome before an audience of blackshirts that filled the La Scala Opera House, declared that his regime would never be overthrown except by force, and defied the political enemies who imagine they can use parliamentary machinery to dislodge him.

"This regime cannot be overthrown except by force. Our opponents believe themselves able to overthrow us with little groupings of lobbyists, with little rivers of more or less dirty ink, but they are fooling themselves. Ministries pass, but a regime born of violence realizes all its conquests." After this piece of arrogance, the bloody dictator said that fascism had certainly suppressed its enemies and imposed a "rigid discipline" upon the nation.

Then with the demagogy typical of his utterances he boastfully asserted that "fascism would vanquish international plutocracy warring against Italy's interests as it has crushed the internal enemy."

This is a veiled threat to Britain for taking a stand against Mussolini on the question of Jugo-Slavia, which government Mussolini has been threatening.

Century of Power.

"The last century was the century of our independence; this century must be that of our power, power in every field. Every one of you must consider himself a soldier, a molecule, feeling and pulsating with the entire organism," concluded Mussolini.

Against this vain boasting of the half-insane dictator, the workers are steadily strengthening their forces toward the time when they can accept Mussolini's challenge He boasts that he can only be overthrown by force and that a government that rode to power on violence can only be replaced by violence. The suffering proletariat of Italy is preparing for the day when it can inaugurate a civil war that will drown Mussolini in the blood of his blackshirt hordes and hurl the puppet king from his throne, clearing the way for the democratic dictatorship of the proletariat in place of the Mussolini despotism.

GENERAL REORGANIZATION MEETING TO BE HELD AT DAISYTOWN, PENNA.

DAISYTOWN, Pa., Nov. 3.—A reorganization general membership meeting of all Workers Party branches affiliated with the Daisytown city central committee will be held Sunday Nov. 15, 10 a. m., at the Home Theater in Daisytown.

Comrade A. Jakira the district organizer, Comrade B. Ljutic the organizer of the South Slav Federation, and Vaino Finberg of Warren, Ohio representing the Finnish Federation, will be present at the meeting to help in the reorganization of the party on the shop nucleus basis.

Reorganization of the party in this mining section is of vital importance to the movement and no comrade should fail to attend this meeting which will be the turning point in our party work in this territory.

The reorganization of the party will be completed in Pittsburgh and McKeesport during the first week of November It is expected that the reorganization in the other parts of Dist. No. 5 will be completed before the month of November is over Let us show that Dist. 5 will be the first one to complete its reorganization on the shop nucleus basis.

New York Unions Contribute to Campaign Fund

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—Some of the latest unions to contribute to the Workers (Communist) Party campaign fund are:

The Amalgamated Metal Workers, the Amalgamated Food Workers, Structural Iron Workers, Bakers' Local No. 1, Protective Shoe Workers' Local No. 33, Window Cleaners' Local No. 8, Furriers' Local No. 5.

These contributions are important not so much for the funds that they bring to the party's campaign, but much more because they show that the organized workers of New York are beginning to understand the message of the Communists and the meaning of the labor party and the workers government slogans that have been the central feature of this political campaign.

Sargent Wants to Stick.

PUBLIC SERVICE UNION OF N. Y. MEETS SUNDAY

Calls Building and Power House Labor

By P. J. McCLELLAN.

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 3. — The Amalgamated Public Service Workers' Union, departments of power plants and building maintenances have arranged a series of open mass meetings to be held in different sections of Greater New York.

These meetings are for the purpose of educating both the organized and unorganized to the principles of industrial unionism and the need of unity among the various crafts in the industry, and particularly to explain the need of one general organization covering the entire industry.

Meeting Next Sunday.

The first meeting will be held at Labor Temple, 243 East 84 St., Sunday, November 8, at 8 p. m., and among the speakers will be P. P. Cosgrove, Chester W. Bixby, Thomas Barker, J. O. Bentall and others prominent in the labor movement, P. J. McClellan will be chairman.

Thousands of leaflets are being distributed inviting all engineers, firemen, superintendents, repairmen, elevator operators and all other workers employed in factory and office buildings, power plants, apartments and public and private buildings and institutions to attend.

Any questions concerning the union or the industry will be answered by the speakers and the chairman.

Growing Steadily.

The Amalgamated Public Service Workers' Union, which has grown steadily despite unfavorable conditions in the industry, expects to create thru the medium of this series of mass meetings the sentiment necessary to unify all crafts for action.

The drive of the bosses for lower wages and longer hours, the break down of the spirit and loss of membership of the craft unions, and the growth of the Amalgamated Public Service Workers' Union in the meantime makes this the opportune time for concentrating on educating and organising the mass of the workers in the industry.

The union is confident that a more powerful union will result from these activities, and all interested workers should get in touch with the committee, 350 East 81 street, or phone Lenox 6878.

Announcements for this and future mass meetings will appear in both the labor and general press.

Red Light Longworth Speaks

Congressman Nicholas Longworth, speaker of the house of representatives, unburdened himself yesterday before the Women's Roosevelt Republican Club. Aside from the customary dithyrambic eulogy of the president of the United States, the usual platitudes about tax reduction, an assault on the LaFollette insurgents for trying to introduce bloc government in place of party government, the speaker thrilled his audience of bourgeois females by proclaiming that he favored deporting all reds in this country to the land from whence they came. We have no foreign enemies, only domestic ones, says the sagacious Nicholas:

> "As I survey the situation here and abroad I am convinced that we have no foreign enemies. . . . If we have any foreign enemies I am not aware of them, but I am aware of domestic ones. They consist of those who go about preaching class hatred and distrust of our government, stirring class hatred under the flag of Bolshevism. I would take every one of the reds in this country, and take every ship in every port and ship them back home."

What convincing argument! What superlative statesmanship! He is Sir Oracle and when he speaks let no dogs bark!

He is speaker of the house, yet he does not know the most fundamental fact of international politics today, the world conflict between the two imperialist giants, the United States and Great Britain. A conflict that manifests itself in a dozen parts of the world. Surely the British agents of imperialism must complacently smile when they read such gibberish as this emanating from the "titular leader of the majority" in the house of congress. Such utterances as these contribute to make American statesmanship the standing jest of European capitals.

Concerning Mr. Longworth's laudable desire to deport all the reds to the land from whence they came, we take the greatest pleasure in informing him that the vast majority of the prominent reds in this country, with all of whom we are quite well acquainted, were born here, not thru any choice of their own, but quite by accident, as was unquestionably the case of Mr. Longworth.

Not all of us, however, were born in Cincinnati of a family that made its fortune out of the pathetic women of the red light district of that benighted city, as was the case of the Longworth family. If Mr. Longworth wants all inhabitants in this country to remain on the identical soil from which they sprang, or the soil from which they derived their sustenance he, himself, would be forced to spend his life in a Cincinnati brothel, instead of appearing before the elegant, if somewhat antiquated, ladies of the Women's Roosevelt Republican Club and drooling inanities about the vanguard of the working class in this country.

This twaddle of this foppish husband of Roosevelt's daughter, the "Princess" Alice, may be indicative of impending assaults upon our movement. Again we laugh at them and defy them, because we have been attacked before and we have learned in the realities of the struggle how to sink the roots of our party into the very life of the working masses of this country, from whence not all the craven creatures from all the red light districts of the country that make up the motely crew of government agents and stoolpigeons can drive us.

In the work of reorganization of our party, the organizational part of the Bolshevisation process that is proceeding apace, we have created a machine that will exist in spite of and against the Longworths and all their kidney.

Mr. Longworth is opposed to Red agitators, but where would he and his wealth be if it were not for Cincinnati red lights?

Libeling the Legion

The supreme court of the state of Illinois has upheld a conviction in a lower court to send to jail for six months the editor of a Chicago German newspaper for the crime of libeling the American legion. We do not know what the German editor said about the legion. Rather than view it as a crime we think it should rank as an achievement. It may be possible to libel them in the German language. But no epithet of degradation that has yet been coined in the English language can adequately describe most of the leading lights of that organization. Concerning the rank and file, they are just deluded individuals following the pack in obedience to the herd instinct cultivated in the army camps.

Simultaneously with the announcement of the court decision in the case of the editor, there appeared the following dispatch from Omaha, Nebraska, the scene of the last legion convention:

> Liquor conditions at the recent American legion convention were the subject of federal grand jury investigation today, police officers, legion officials, prohibition agents and investigators being on the list to be heard. A film man alleged to have furnished movies for the "40 and 8's hospitality hut," depicting risque French scenes, was one of those subpoenaed.

Surely the bootleggers, impressarios of filthy shows and others of that gentry, knew the type of men comprising the delegations to the convention otherwise they would not have made special trips to Omaha with their commodities.

The persistent exposures of the anti-labor character of the officials of the legion have done much to alienate honest workers from its influence. Its forte at present is aiding the sinister machinations of the military clique that has grown up in this country adequately to defend the rapacious greed of Wall Street abroad and to crush the workers at home. We do not assail it by resort to scurrilous language, but by analyzing its motives and exposing them to the working class.

Mr. Hearst, at the eleventh hour, supported Al. Smith's candidate for mayor. Then on election day he announced that he supported the Tammany candidate because he was to carry out Hylan's (Hearst's man) policies, but considered Gov. Al. Smith dishonest. The political reasoning of Mr. Hearst is complicated, to say the least.

"Soviet Gold" for the Peasants - - By ANISE

Soviet Primers.—What the Soviet government tells its own folks in little three cent booklets about government, finance, taxes, cotton goods. This one is about peasant credits.

THE little booklet on Peasant Credit costs four cents, for it is a thick one with a colored picture of modern ploughs on the cover. It also is one of the best sellers, to judge from the first edition of 100,000 copies. It starts right in by calling a spade a spade, and telling the peasant what he is in unflattering language.

"It is known to all, and especially to our peasants, that peasant husbandry in Russia is still very weak, dark and backward. . . It is known to all, how the robber policy of the czar and the landlords strangled peasant husbandry. . . And the long war and the heavy struggle of the workers and peasants against the generals and landowners impoverished the land still further.

"What does the peasant need?—The workers' and peasants' government knows well. He needs everything—seed, working cattle, machines, and tools, and every other means of production. . . The government would like to help in all these, but it also is poor from the war, and needs money for re-establishing all the husbandry of the country—the railroads, the industry, the schools, the posts and telegraphs, and many other things.

"But altho the government has very little, and the peasant has very little, still, if we put these two littles together it is possible to give help to the peasant, even if not very quickly, along the lines of peasant credit."

The Credit Organizations.

IN the center is the Central Agricultural Bank of the Soviet Union, with forty million rubles from the government and an equal sum from the State Bank to use for peasant credit. All the united republics have each their Agricultural Bank, and in many of the separate states are also agricultural credit associations connected with the central bank, drawing their funds partly from the center, partly from the local governments and co-operatives and partly from the peasants themselves.

But it is quite obvious that these central banks cannot investigate each peasant's household and make him a loan; they are too far away and the cost would be too much. In order to have cheap credit, there must be a credit association in every village, or at least in every other village. This local credit association, acquainted with every peasant locally, makes loans to him, and itself gets loans from the state banks which get theirs from the Central Agricultural Bank.

The aims of the whole peasant credit scheme are these:

1. To give help for strengthening peasant husbandry.
2. To give it cheap and on easy terms.
3. To give help first to the poorly equipped peasant.
4. To direct the help so that peasant husbandry may improve as rapidly as possible.
5. To draw peasant deposits, even if only by kopeks into the credit funds.

Along with credit there must go into the village knowledge, and agricultural teaching, and reading and writing and libraries.

Where to Get the Credits.

IT is clear that the twenty million peasant households in the Soviet Union can't all go to the central bank to get credits. Even the provincial banks cannot handle them. There ought to be in every township a little township bank to do this. But we are still far from such conditions. So peasants needing loans run from kulak to kulak and he puts on them enslaving conditions.

Now every peasant can get a loan thru a credit association. If there isn't one, he should start one. Or if there are now enough households to start a credit association, which needs at least 50 persons, then he should join some other collective organization, either a producing artel, butter-making, wood-working, hand-industry, or a little consumers group, for buying machinery, tractors, irrigation, or a general agricultural co-operative. Any one of these organizations can become members of a central credit association and can receive loans for its members.

The best form of organization will be when there is a township credit association in every township, and when all the smaller collectives, artels and co-operatives are members of this township credit association.

To organize a credit association you must have not less than fifty members. But it is better to have many more, and if it is organized on a township basis, then you will have several thousand families belonging thru their various organizations. In making out your plan, you must consider how many individual peasants, how many artels, communes, collectives you can get in, how much deposits these organizations themselves can make and at what times of the year, how much credit you need from the center.

For What is Credit Given?

THE peasant needs everything. His house is old with broken windows; the poorer peasants have neither horse nor cow; as for tools, they have a Russian wooden plough, a barrow, a bad cart, and no shoes. But the first needs for which credit is given are those which can re-establish the peasants' work. For this we may boldly say that the chief need thruout the land is cattle. For these were destroyed in war and famine, until now there are villages where in 100 houses there are 25 to 30 with a horse, and the rest without any.

But how is the peasant to buy his horse? If he is merely given a loan by himself, and goes to market with it he will perhaps be buying horses where they are dear. It is necessary for the credit association of the collective to buy horses together, sending to the best districts, and securing also the help of a veterinary. This is the way in which credit will be given for horses.

Credit is also needed for good seed, and for metal ploughs, and other implements, and for re-districting land in those places where the peasants desire to move to the land itself, instead of farming dozens of small pieces in different places. The peasants of the northern districts need credit for draining swamps, and those of the southern districts need it for making ponds and wells and irrigating ditches.

Finally, if the peasant is to secure the best returns from his work, he must not merely sell his raw products in the market, but must work them up locally, by creameries, flax cleaning factories, vegetable oil factories. For these also credit may be given.

On What Conditions is Credit Given?

THE first condition of any loan is to fix the time of repayment. Every peasant and every collective must remember that, if they have loans for too long a time, it prevents other peasants from getting help. On the other hand, if the time is too short, they cannot repay the loan. If the loan is for seed, or fodder, or small tools, it should be repaid after the first harvest; but if it is for general needs, or a horse, obviously this cannot be so quickly done.

In general every collective and every peasant must consider this principle, that loans are given for those things which will enable the peasant's husbandry to become quickly profitable and so repay the loan, and stand on its own feet. This differs in different districts and must be carefully considered by the local credit organizations, in order to build up good husbandry.

Take, for instance, a northern region, Leningrad, Novgorod. Here it is known that the income from rye is much less per acre than the income from flax, or clover, and that it is best of all from cattle. So the credit associations in these districts should strengthen the peasant household in these profitable directions, giving credit for flax seed, clover seed, fodder, for implements for potato culture, for a community bull of good breed, for dairy utensils or special fodder, for implements which improve meadows.

Conditions should be made in these loans: if a loan is given for a horse, it should be understood that it is used to plough for more profitable cultures. If a loan is given for a cow, a condition should be made that she goes to a good bull; if credit is given for seed; conditions may be made that most of it be flax or clover. None of these conditions should be arbitrary, but should be in the interest of the peasant's own advancement.

The influence of these credit associations may be very great. Thru their pressure, aided by their help, many improvements may be made in the district, such as: a many-field rotation; widening of profitable crops; increase of stock-raising; improvement of machinery; fire-proof buildings; fight with pests. Hand in hand with credit must go instruction.

When the peasant gets a loan, he should pay it off as fast as possible. Thus, if he gets a loan for seed in the autumn, and then makes a few rubles in the winter by hauling wood, he should not wait till next fall to begin paying his loan, but should pay part of it at once. This will enable more peasants to be helped, and will make the final payment easier for him. . . If at the time of payment, he cannot pay, and wants an extension, he must make a very definite statement why he cannot. Perhaps he got too large a sum or for too short a time or for wrong purposes, in which case both he and the credit association are much to blame and their credit suffers in the future. Perhaps he was careless, and treated the money like government money for which he was not responsible. Measures even to punishment must be taken in these cases. But if he can show that a fire, or hail or a drought have made it impossible certainly the credit organization must go halfway to help him.

What Peasants Must Get Loans?

MANY committees think they should give loans chiefly to the well-to-do peasants, because they're surer to pay back. But this is wrong. There are sometimes even committees where the mangagement is composed of kulaks, which gives out loans chiefly to its friends or even takes a little graft for giving loans. If any peasants know of these, they should complain to the township government, or to the county Soviet, or to the provincial credit association, or even to the central bank, till they get these people cleaned out.

But these are also sincere committees which think loans are safer to well-to-do peasants, while the poorer peasant—who knows whether to trust him? But it is just to these poorest ones, whose last horse died, or whose wooden plough is worn out, or whose harvest was destroyed by hail—these must first of all be helped First, because they are in most need. And second, because this is more to the interests of the workers' and peasants' government, not only because these poorer peasants fought hardest to establish the revolution, but also because a very little loan, only twenty or thirty roubles, will give them what they need to begin to stand on their own feet.

But of course there are also poor peasants who love only to live at another's expense and don't care to work, and who, getting a loan, use it not for equipment, but for clothes, or a wedding, or even for drink. That is why a credit association must know personally the peasants, or else give to a collective which guarantees its members, and sees that the loan is used for the purpose given.

On the other hand, the credit association itself may be at fault, if it gives a loan insufficient for the purpose. If a man needs 90 roubles for a horse, and has himself 45, and asks for 45, and if the credit association gives him only 25, then he cannot buy the horse. In the best case, he buys a cow and adds to his husbandry, but he may spend it for general expenses. Or he may buy a poor horse that dies soon, and does not enable him to repay the loan.

All these things must be considered. And a credit association can only work properly if (1) the committee knows the lives of the persons getting loans; and (2) the peasants getting loans themselves take part in the work of the association; and (3) the head of the committee is a man whom the peasantry trusts.

Peasants' Mutual Aid.

WHEN there is no nearby credit association, the peasants' mutual aid committees may also handle loans, themselves becoming members of a more distant credit association. Letters about these mutual aid committees appear constantly in our papers, and we know they are of all kinds.

One of the best committees we have discovered was down in Tsaritsin province. Its head is Chebotareva, a peasant woman, who is also a member of the Central Executive Committee of the Soviet Union. It organized a home for 60 orphans and secured five cows for them. By starting a collective of peasant women, it established a vegetable plantation and with this supported the children for a whole year. It also ploughed and seeded all the lands of widows and red soldiers.

This mutual aid committee has a tractor which ploughs first for the poorest peasants free and then for the well-to-do peasants for money. With the money thus received, an energetic cultural work is carried on. A reading hut has been opened, in which are newspapers, journals and a good library with agricultural literature.

Alas, not all mutual aid committees are like this. Some work badly, and in some no one works at all. In some a president cannot be found, because no peasant will do the work. A sad and characteristic letter from a peasant reports that his mutual aid committee wants five per cent a month for a loan, which means 160 roubles by next harvest in return for 100 roubles now. He has heard that there are mutual aid committees which ask less, and he wants the address of one! But this is not a mutual aid committee, it is a robber band!

Peasants Must Help Themselves.

TO take a loan, if they give it to you, needs no cleverness. But to take part in building up a credit association—that is harder but very necessary. From the workers' and peasants' government help may be and should be expected, but its means are small. But by uniting all our strength the peasant himself must help the peasant.

Every peasant where there is no co-operative, must take pains to get one. Then he must see that his co-operative, or his producing collective, joins a credit association; or, if there isn't one near and convenient, he must help to form one. He must deposit his own small savings there, even if only by kopeks, and see that his co-operative does the same. He must take an active interest in its affairs and see that it elects a president who can be trusted, and that its loans are made soundly.

Only the united strength of the workers' and peasants' government, and the co-operatives, and the peasantry itself will bring this difficult and important work to success.

The Trial of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Bulgaria

By V. KOLAROV (Moscow)

THE crbss-examination in the trial of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Bulgaria, which is accused of having prepared the September revolution in 1923, has begun before the district court of Sofia. All the members of the Central Committee as it was constituted at that time are before the court as accused: of these, Comrades Blagojew and Todor Petrov have died. Comrades Kristo Kabaktschiev, Anton Ivanov, Nikola Penev, as well as our Comrade Tina Kirkowa have been in prison for a year and a half. It has been communicated to us that one of them, Comrade Anton Ivanov, has been tortured to death in prison in the most brutal way, and as regards the others, no one knows whether they are now in the prisoner's dock or have been murdered. Comrades Georgi Dimitrov, Todor Lukanov and Vassil Kolarov are out of the country and are being tried in their absence.

The Central Committee is accused of having, in 1919, begun working systematically towards the overthrow of the existing order of society in Bulgaria and of having issued the call to immediate action in Sept., 1923. Furthermore Georgi Dimitrov and Vassil Kolarov are accused of having directly taken part in the insurrection for which they have twice been tried and twice condemned to 15 years penal servitude. The acts of which they are accused are punishable by penal servitude for from ten years to lifelong duration.

ON September 12, 1923, the White Guardist government, according to a pre-arranged plan, took action for the destruction of the Communist Party and of all mass organizations of workers which were under the leadership of Communists, on the pretext that the party intended to declare an insurrection on September 16. Of course, the government had absolutely no proofs of this, and its campaign was nothing more nor less than a bloody provocation which had been previously prepared against the party and against the masses under its guidance.

A year and a half have passed since that time. The public prosecutors have industriously collected evidence by studying the material and the facts of all the numerous law suits which have taken place thruout the country in connection with the September insurrection. But they did not succeed in proving anything, apart from the fact that after the provocation from the government, the Central Committee took the side of the masses who had been so abominably and brutally attacked, and that it took the lead in their armed defensive.

The accusation framed in this way only serves however, to confirm our statement that the government deliberately provoked the insurrection. This is why the government's faithful public prosecutors were compelled to defend it by declaring that the whole activities of the party were criminal from the moment of its joining the Communist International and accepting its program and its tactic onwards. Not only the members of the central committee but also the whole Communist Party of Bulgaria and the Communist International whose aims and tactics are dealt with in detail in the bill of indictment were in this way brot before the court of Sofia.

THE "defenders of the law" in Bulgaria took not less than a year and a half to discover what was "criminal" in the program and activities of the Communist Party, tho these had been carried on before the eyes of the whole people. This "enlightenment" was only vouchsafed then when the Zankov government of generals and professors gave the signal for a general attack on the masses of workers. By this, however, they only showed once more that they are the thralls of the ruling fascist capitalist crew.

Of course, we have no objection to the basis of the accusation being thus extended. Neither the accused comrades, nor the party, nor the Communist International will be disconcerted by it. The White "administration of justice," which has already soiled itself for ever by its cruel sentences on innumerable fighters from the ranks of the working masses, and has closed its eyes to the daily sanguinary crimes of the ruling bandits, is only exposing itself more than ever to ridicule.

GHOSTS!

WORKERS gathering to consider ways and means to improve their conditions have met before—yes, even Negro workers.

And yet, at the first news of a call for a Negro Labor Congress, the defenders of capitalism "got nervous." Most fantastic stories were issued in the press. The president of the A. F. of L. began to speak of "danger." Rumors, both written and spoken, told of Bolshevism creeping into the ranks of Negro labor.

And as the Negro Labor Congress opens its very first session, the Chicago "Tribune," notorious advocate of Nordic Supremacy" and responsible for fanning the flames of the Chicago race riots of only a few years ago, prints a dispatch to the effect that a district conference of the African Methodist episcopal church at Kirkwood, Missouri, passed a resolution calling on Negro labor "to discountenance all efforts at sowing Bolshevism and Communism within its ranks," it also, "We emphasize the value of our race group of standing squarely back of capital in this country."

Strange words—strange warnings! "Bolshevism-Communism-Labor-Capital," all in connection with the calling of a conference of Negro workers and all jointly made by the press, the head of the leading body of American labor—and the pulpit!

And yet these warnings were to be expected—by those who know the most simple facts of the life of the Negro worker in this country, the role of the press, the officialdom of labor and the church.

The facts of the life of the American Negro worker are appalling. You will find many of them in the Negro Labor Year Book of the Tuskegee Institute.

The press is the spokesman of that class in society which owns the means of production and suppresses the workers both Negro and white, and keeps from them not only what they produce but also their most elementary rights.

The church—has always "stood squarely back of capital," to dope the workers with contentment on this earth (despite miserable conditions) and to promise him compensation in "heaven." Religion, with unfortunately such a heavy hold on the Negro workers, has long been known as the "opium of the people" and is only too generously dispensed thru the 47,000 Negro churches and 46,000 Sunday schools in this country.

The press, the pulpit, officialdom of labor, disregarding the facts that willy-nilly force workers regardless of color to seek promotion of their interests thru organization, have joined to decry this effort of Negro workers and attempt to frighten them with the bogey of Bolshevism.

But oppressed workers are not so easily frightened. Despite the popular conception, "ghosts" do not frighten Negro workers—not even Bolshevik ghosts.

The Negro Labor Congress is not Communist. But Communists believe it is a step forward. And Communists bid it welcome!

FEAR ILLINOIS MINERS MEETING

NEW TRICK TO BE PUT OVER ON THE CHINESE

Autonomy Delayed Till 1929; Soviet Barred

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEKING, China, Nov. 4.—The so-called "freedom" permitted to China on tariffs as proposed by the American delegate, Silas H. Strawn, and accepted by all the imperialist delegations as the basis for discussion in the main conference, turns out to be merely another trick used by the imperialists for dominating China by delaying any real autonomy until 1929.

The imperialists hope that this promise will satisfy China for a while, during which they hope to have the movement for national liberation worn down by waiting and suppressed by their reactionary Chinese agents.

Strawn Wins Point.

Strawn won his point of both obeying the narrow limitations of the Washington conference and at the same time putting forth a proposal that would sound good to Chinese ears and go beyond the limitations of the Washington agreement.

This feat was performed by the shaping of a proposal that China be authorized the immediate levying of a surtax of two and a half per cent and 5 per cent on luxuries, thus keeping within the limits of the Washington nine-power agreement, but providing that in case China abolishes the internal tariff, or likin, some sort of arrangement shall be made for "permitting freedom" to China on her tariffs by January 1, 1929, thus holding out the promise of ultimate autonomy to China.

The likin is a tax charged by China for shipments of goods from one province to another, and is one way the Chinese have had to get revenue for internal affairs denied them by the imperialists who dictate the tariff on imports at the seaboard cities. Hence this likin was not to the liking of the imperialist importers, and whether China gets autonomy or not in 1929, America has got China to promise to abolish the likin as quickly as possible. Strawn even offered to "help" China write a national tariff law.

Try to Shut Out Soviet.

One of the serious phases of the conference is article 2 of this American proposal, which says that provision shall be made for levying the full amount of the surtaxes "at all of China's land and sea frontiers." This is setting up a scale of tariffs on trade between China and Soviet Russia, yet entirely without Soviet Russia being present or consulted. It is understood that Soviet Russia is to make a demand for seats at the conference and it has already issued a notice that it would not be bound by any agreement made without participation, since the Soviet-Chinese tariff is the affair of Soviet Russia and China alone, and cannot be settled without participation.

The Japanese have not taken kindly to the victory of Strawn and they may yet be heard from with their objections also.

Coal-Gas Overcomes Eleven.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—Carbon monoxide gas, developed by burning soft coal in the furnace, overcame eleven persons in a thirty-family apartment house at 291 Crown street, Brooklyn. Police said the accidents were caused by failure to operate a blower on the furnace.

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 4.—The building housing the Hungarian Communist newspaper, the Uj Elore, was partly destroyed by fire yesterday. The paper is compelled, because of the great damage done to the printing room, to have the paper printed outside and to pay cash down for each issue. The manager of Uj Elore has announced that a big drive for funds has been started to assure publication during this critical situation.

LAWYER CLAIMS 300 POLICEMEN IN GENNA 'PAY'

Judge Bars 'Payroll' as Evidence

During the course of the trial of John Scalise and Albert Alselmi, charged with the murder of a Chicago policeman, Attorney Patrick O'Donnell charged that 300 Chicago policemen were on the Genna gang payroll as he made an attempt to introduce evidence to that effect in an attempt to show why Judge William Brothers should let these two members of the Genna gang escape the noose. The judge refused to allow this evidence which would show how corrupt the police system is in Chicago to be introduced.

Wise Sergeants Make Good Pay.

In the evidence that the attorney wanted to introduce were the names of 250 Chicago patrolmen on the Genna gang payroll getting monthly "salaries" ranging from $10 for the "dumb birds" who looked hungry and never said a word to $125 to "wise" sergeants who threatened arrests once in a while as a reminder that they "were in the know."

Crowe's Squads Defend Genna.

One squad of State's Attorney Crowe's men with the entire county as its field and country-wide prosecution as its threat drew a goodly sum from the Genna payroll. Another squad received a handsome "tip" for protecting the booze shipped by the Gennas to other parts of the county against federal officers and hi-jackers.

Three squads from the detective bureau, known for its third-degree methods on strikers and union workers that fall into its toils, were on the list as drawing down $400 to $800 every month.

WHAT BRITISH WOMEN SAW IN SOVIET REPUBLIC

Interesting Report on Family Life

THE report of the labor women's delegation to Soviet Russia, the conclusions of which were summarized in The DAILY WORKER, is now published by Mr. W. P. Coates, 3, Adams street, Adelphia, London, W. C. at the price of 1s.

The report is signed by Miss Mary Quaile (Transport and General Workers' Union); Miss Annie Loughlin (Tailors and Garment Workers); Mrs. A. Bridges (Printers, Bookbinders and Paperworkers); and Mrs. Aspinall (Weavers, Winders and Reelers). It is a large document—and unique, in the fact that it is the first record by British working class women of their own observations in the first workers' republic.

Family Life.

The report has naturally a great deal of interesting matter on the family under the Soviet regime, and offers the following important conclusion:

"We thus see that the so-called 'destruction of family life' in the U. S. S. R. simply resolves itself into an endeavor to destroy all that which is worst in our family life, into an attempt to place woman on a real and complete equality—economic, social, Describes Prison.

In the course of his letter a political prisoner writes us from Revel: "The inquiry prison in Revel, which is threatening to fall to pieces every day is being evacuated and the prisoners are being crowded in the central prison. As, however, the central prison hitherto was overcrowded, the living conditions have become absolutely unbearable and impossible. From 35 to 40 prisoners are crowded into one cell, which was originally intended for from 5 to 7 prisoners, and you can only sleep in an upright position. The meager prison rations have been again cut down, and they have ceased to issue meat."

CAP & MILLINERY UNION HEADS DO THEIR WORST TO KEEP UNION MEMBERSHIP CLOSED TO MASSES

By Worker Correspondent, Shop Nucleus No. 9, Chicago.

The workers, as a whole, know that they have nothing to lose but the slavery which is directly or indirectly being imposed upon them by the representatives of the master class in the various labor organizations. These bureaucrats pretend to adjust grievances. In reality they are leading the workers into the fifth depth of Dante's Inferno.

TAMMANY HALL WINS EASILY IN NEW YORK

Smith's Rail Graft Loots Treasury

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—Tammany won yesterday by almost two to one over the republican ticket. James J. Walker, creature of Gov. Al. Smith, and with a long record as a political spoilsman, involving serving as lawyer for the meat trust while on a senate committee supposed to curb the selling of putrid meat, will become mayor of the city on January 1, taking the place of the tool of William Randolph Hearst, Mayor John F. Hylan.

Walker's plurality over Frank D. Waterman, republican candicate and proprietor of the open shop pen manufacturing industry that bears his name, 401,581. He carried with him the entire city ticket with the exception of the fifteenth ward, the "silk-stocking" district of Fifth Ave. were a woman republican defeated one of the Tammany stalwarts.

Railroad Graft Wins

The heavy Tammany vote in New York was sufficient also to overcome the up-state adverse vote against the governor's looting of the state treasury in the interest of the railroads. His bond issue proposition for the expenditure of $400,000,000 state funds for railroad grade crossings was a piece of plain graft in the interest of the railroad lines that pass thru New York state and whose owners objected to towns and villages forcing them at their expense to put in grade crossings and other safety devises for the protection of life. Tammany, thru Smith, carried on a campaign to put in these crossings by state funds, thus saving the railroads millions of dollars.

This one grab at the state treasury reveals the source from whence Tammany gets its blackmail to keep its sinister machine in operation. The railroads pay well for such sacrifice.

Socialist Vote Drops

Norman Thomas, the sky-pilot candidate of the socialist party only polled 39,006 votes, as against Hillquit's vote of 150,000 when Hylan was first elected. Like Tammany, it served its purpose in its own way as an agency of the capitalist class. Whereas Tammany is avowedly for capitalism, the socialists aided in the victory by dividing the forces of labor at the polls.

Gitlow's Vote Uncounted

The vote for Ben Gitlow, candidate of the Workers (Communist) Party has not yet been tabulated. His name was removed from the ballot by Tammany on the charge that he was ineligible because he was convicted in 1920 of criminal anarchy for his activity in the left-wing movement in the socialist party.

New York Communists carried on an aggressive campaign among the workers to write the name of Gitlow on the ballot as a rebuke to the Tammany officials and capitalist democracy.

Efforts will be made to force a count of the Communist vote for mayor. Unquestionably much of the former socialist vote went to the Communist, as the class conscious workers of New York hold the yellow socialists in contempt for their studied and persistent betrayal of the working class in every field of activity, either in politics or the trade unions.

Mitchell to Raise Issue of Quick End of Riff War at Trial

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—When Col. Mitchell's trial reopens Monday, Mitchell's defense intends to produce Rene Fonck, a French aviator, as a witness to show that the reason why aviation is unable to make the headway it should in the French war against the Riffians is because the aviation is under the command of French artillery and infantry officers and that it is necessary to have the aviation in charge of well-schooled aviators if a quick ending of the Riffian war is to be expected.

If the court permits, he intends to call in British and French experts to show the development of their aviations and then to call in the American army and navy heads to show the inefficiency of their department.

Military Commission Blames Bulgars for Greek Sentry's Death

ANOTHER TEAPOT DOME UNEARTHED AT WASHINGTON

Officials Charged with $6,453,979.97 Fraud

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4—Colonel Thomas W. Miller, former alien property custodian, John T. King, former republican state committeeman from Connecticut; Jesse Smith, who committed "suicide" rather than face the Teapot Dome investigation which was then threatening, and four Swiss and German bankers are named in an indictment handed down by the federal grand jury for "conspiring to defraud" the United States government of $6,453,979.97 worth of American Metal stock seized during the war.

This $6,453,979.97 worth of stock was seized as belonging to an enemy alien and was held by the United States. Col. Miller and King and Smith arranged the turning over of this stock to a group of Swiss and German bankers in the Societe pour Valeurs des Metaux (Swiss Society for the Valuation of Metals) of Basle, Switzerland for a "fee" of $391,000 in Liberty bonds.

The indictment names the following German and Swiss bankers and corporations in the indictment:

FARRINGTON IS TRYING TO DODGE REMOVAL BY POSTPONING ANNUAL CONVENTION FROM 1926 TO 1927

By ALEX REID

(Secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee.)

Frank Farrington, district president, with the district executive board of the Illinois mine workers, is attempting to postpone the Illinois Mine Workers' convention from 1926 to 1927, and has issued a call to the local unions requesting them to vote for the postponement, stating there is no logical reason why the convention should be called at this time as it is not a scale convention year.

The same reasons were advanced by Lewis and the international board to postpone the international convention, and the Illinois fakers are now following suit. Practically word for word the Illinois president and board have copied the Lewis statement and the miners are asking—will they copy the count, or lack of count, of the ballot returns, like the Lewis yellows did—as we have not yet been informed of the court?

Farrington states there is no proper business to come before this convention and because of financial stringency the convention should not be called.

The Illinois miners know that there is a tremendous amount of legitimate work awaiting a convention and are girding for a battle in that convention in the hope that they will be able to remove from office, once and for all, the official wreckers of the union.

The following important questions are to come up at the convention:

Election steals thruout the district. Thruout the district at the last election votes were stolen and substituted on a scale never before known in the history of the miners' union. The condition has become such that the miners are determined to amend their constitution so that this condition cannot recur in the future.

Another important case is the betrayal of Sub-District Nine miners, by the officials of Sub-District Nine, which led up to the shooting of a progressive miner in Zeigler, and the arrest of fifteen miners, who are charged with criminal offense and in danger of being sent to capitalist prison at the instigation of the Farrington machine.

The infamous case against Freeman Thompson and John Watt illegally removed from office by the Farrington machine has long been a sore eye to the Illinois miners and they are determined that this case be thrashed out at the convention.

The Harrisburg case, where the Farrington machine denied the miners a special sub-district convention, legally called to investigate corrupt conditions in that sub-district, and the Johnson City case where Farrington attempted to negotiate a reduction in mining rates.

The Farrington machine realizes that this convention will prefer charges against him, and for the second time try him for constitutional violations. He is well aware that this convention if called will forever rid the Illinois miners of him and his gang of fakers, hense his desire to postpone the convention.

Illinois miners! Demand your constitutional convention on the constitutional date. Don't let Farrington pull the wool over your eyes any longer. Vote for your convention as a notice to the union wreckers that a cleaning out is due and imminent. The Thompson, Watt, Zeigler, Harrisburg, and Johnson City cases demand constitutional action and the only way you can get it is thru a convention.

NET TIGHTENS AS KLAN TRIAL REVEALS CRIME

Brutal Attacks Were Cause of Death

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NOBLESVILLE, Ind., Nov. 4—Science, with Dr. J. H. Warvel, pathologist of the Indianapolis methodist hospital, as its mouthpiece today gave further support to the claim of the state that the death of Miss Madge Oberholtzer was not due to poison.

Dr. Warvel was testifying in the trial of D. C. Stephenson, Earl Gentry and Earl Klinck, charged with murder as the result of Miss Oberholtzer's death last fall.

Bruises Killed Girl.

Thru the pathologist the state sought to clinch its charge that alleged brutal treatment given Miss Oberholtzer by the three defendants and not bichloride of mercury which she swallowed, as the climax of an enforced automobile tour with Stephenson, was directly responsible for her death.

Miss Oberholtzer, after being near death from the effects of the poison, Dr. Warvel said, was on the road to recovery when infection developed in bruises and lacerations on her body and killed her. Frequent examination of her blood cells during her last illness gave him the complete story of her condition, he testified.

MELLON RUNNING MINE ON SCABBY SCALE IN PENNA

All Miners Get from Lewis Is Betrayal

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 4.—Andy Mellon's Pittsburg Coal company has opened up Midland Mine No. 1, under the 1917 scale. This mine is located near Cannonsburg and has been a union mine ever since it was first opened almost 25 years ago. It is located in the Pittsburgh district attached to District 5 of the U. M. W.

Since the opening of this mine there has been one union coal miner murdered by the scabs that Andy transported from Alabama under false pretense, which is usually the custom under capitalism where the bosses are not satisfied by wringing millions of dollars out of the coal miners of this country, but are out to smash every

INTERNATIONAL LABOR DEFENSE SENDS $200 TO JOHN MERRICK

(I. L. D. News Service)

The International Labor Defense sent a contribution of $200 for the defense of John Merrick, a Haverhill, Mass., strike leader, who was framed by the shoe manufacturers of that city in January, 1923, on a charge of having planted an infernal machine near the shoe factory of Knipe Bros.

The police were unable to find any clue to the indentity of the culprit until the shoe manufacturer Knipe offered a reward for the arrest of the guilty person. Merrick's apprehension followed almost immediately. Merrick is a member of the Shoeworkers' Protective Union and has always been active in the labor movement.

Merrick was held in exorbitant bail—$40,000—tried and convicted. He was sentenced to serve from three to five years in the penitentiary, but released on bail pending appeal. His appeal will be heard shortly.

LEWIS-CAPPELLINI MACHINE NOW TRYING TO BETRAY MINERS' WAGE DEMAND FOR CHECKOFF OF DUES

The following article is the third of a series upon the great anthracite strike, involving 158,000 miners on strike for the last nine weeks, in which the Progressive Miners' Committee is pitted against the combined forces of capitalist oppression and the treacherous misleaders of the union. These forces were responsible for the jailing of Alex Reid while speaking at Scranton, where he was held in jail for a full month to cut off his leadership from leading the miners into militant struggle.

• • • •

By ALEX REID

(Secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee.)

(Article III.)

Thruout the anthracite mining cities one can hear a statement carried along that the strike is drawing to a close. This rumor is being carefully spread thruout the valley.

The writer was informed by many coal miners after he was liberated from jail on the last of October, (where the anthracite labor fakers were partly responsible for placing him), that the feeling among many miners was that an attempt was about to be made to compromise the strike on the granting of the checkoff with a five per cent increase in wages, and the sacrifice of the other demands of the miners.

Fakers Ready for Betrayal.

"This carefully prepared and circulated statement is being spread for no other reason than to prepare the men for betrayal," say the miners. The progressive miners and their leaders thruout the valley have repeatedly shown the miners that although the checkoff was important as an organizational demand and should be fought for, too much importance should not be placed upon it.

The progressive miners have shown the hard coal toilers that even if the checkoff was granted it would not add anything to their earning capacity. They also pointed out that the reason the labor fakers were attempting to attach so much importance to it, was because the granting of the empty checkoff would give them a basis for a compromise.

How near that statement was to the truth is found in the frenzy of the labor misleaders and their frantic attempts to jail the progressive miners in the hard coal region.

Miners, Beware a Sell Out!

Hard coal miners, be on your guard. You are fighting for a miserable ten per cent increase in wages for miners, $1.00 per day, day labor, full recognition of the union and other minor demands. Demand that your interests be safeguarded, that no compromise be made and no arbitration permitted of the strike.

The coal barons are gettting hundreds of millions of dollars of profit and royalties every year out of the our sweat and blood, while we are getting a miserable existence. Our wives and families have suffered and sacrificed as coal barons wives and children know nothing of, while our lives are continually in jeopardy, and we never know the moment we will be crushed under thousands of tons of rock.

Real Demands of Progressives

The progressive miners in the anthracite demanded 25 per cent increase in wages with two dollars increase per day for day labor. Anyone knowing the miserable social conditions of the hard coal miners readily admits that this increase would not give the miners even the average standard of living.

The tri-district convention, however, saw fit to repudiate the progressives' demands and adopted the demands of the Lewis machine, which every intelligent miner in the field considers inadequate. The question now of getting even these demands is in doubt and will require active vigilance on the part of the miners to offset the sentiment being created thruout the anthracite.

All Agencies Against Miners

Various organizations are at work at the present time thruout the valley in an attempt to mislead the miners and force them to accept a compromise.

The chambers of commerce have organized a committee to bring about negotiations between the miners and operators and they state that the granting of the checkoff would be a great victory for the miners. Nothing is said in their propaganda about the economic conditions of the miners, and their whole effort is directed towards the resumption of coal mining operation on the basis of the granting of the checkoff only.

A Fine Bunch of Vultures

With the chamber of commerce committee acting continuously with the coal operators and the capitalist press, are lined up the churches and Constitutional Educational League.

During the second week in October a mass meeting was called in Scranton by the Constitutional Educational League and at this meeting there were representatives of the American legion, Knights of Columbus, chamber of commerce, U. S. army generals, labor fakers and corporation lawyers.

Each representative spoke bitterly against the progressive element, and none was more bitter than Cappellini, the president of District 1 of the U. M. W. of A.

Cappellini, the renegade progressive who was elected by the votes of the progressive miners, is now lined up with all the powers of reaction to crush out all semblance of protest against his treachery and his lack of opposition to the master class.

Renegade Cappellini

In his speech at Scranton, Cappellini told the representatives of reaction that there was no need of anyone coming into the anthracite in behalf of the miners at this time, that he was well prepared to take care of the situation and our American institutions would take care of the people.

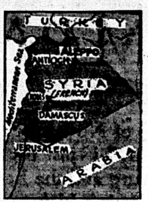
How well that care is given to the workers, and particularly to the miners in the anthracite I will deal with in my next article, but what a contrast between the ragged starved miners and their misleaders!

Rinaldo Prosperous

Picture the renegade progressive Cappellini on the center of the stage at the so-called patriotic meeting in Scranton, fat and slick, dressed in the height of fashion, groomed to perfection, still drawing a large salary with the local police authorities in co-operation, a picture of wealth and affluence, and you will readily understand why he wants no outsiders or progressives in the anthracite.

A great contrast indeed, and one which many starving miners are beginning to inquire into.

SYRIAN CALDRON



The ferment in the French mandated country of Syria is seriously challenged by the native uprisings. The fiendish storming of Damascus and the slaughter of thousands in the streets and houses of that city roused a storm of protest that threatens to engulf the French occupational forces. Spreading from Damascus the movement now embraces Homs, 80 miles to the north. Reports that vast reserves of Arabs are sweeping up from the south to recruit the rebel forces are probably correct.

Tabasco Is Hot Stuff But the Godly Priest Flees All Temptation

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 4—Reports from the state of Tobasco say that Bishop Pascal Diaz and fourteen catholic priests have fled from that state to escape the requirements of the decree that clergymen of all creeds must marry in order to exercise the duties of their office.

It is reported that the bishop and his fellow-refugees are coming to Mexico City to protest to President Calles that the state of Tobasco's decree amounts to religious persecution.

Five priests in Tabasco already have been arrested because they refused to be married.

Cap and Millinery Union Head Close Union to the Masses

thru a long fight for jurisdiction, between the Hat and Capmakers' Union by the bureaucrats of the capmakers, who have proven to the hierarchy of the American Federation of Labor that they are entitled to take their pound of flesh from the workers.

The organization that I am particularly referring to is the Milliners' Union, a part of the Capmakers' Union.

In the millinery trade in Chicago there are employed from six to eight thousand workers. There are enrolled in the union only a little over a hundred members. The number is so ridiculously small that it seems as if the officialdom itself is against organizing the workers.

In taking this attitude, it is living up to the universal tendency of the American Federation of Labor bureaucracy—"close the ranks." That seems to be the slogan, as long as the bureaucracy retains its own little factional machine. As a concrete example I would like to illustrate the reactionary stand of the officialdom on the matter of the organization of the women workers. 90 per cent of those employed in this particular branch of the industry are women.

Why this insane policy?

The president of the Cap and Millinery Union is Zaritsky. He has an apt and servile tool by the name of Solitsky, who is the business agent of the Chicago Milliners' local. Most naturally, he works in accordance with the reactionary tendencies of Zaritsky. Namely, the union should keep its eclusiveness, barring the broad masses. In this way, they hope to secure the leadership of the union for themselves, and keep it safe fro many left wing tendency.

Can this be done?

The answer is in the negative.

Conditions are forcing the workers to militant action in this, as in all other industries. The beginning has already been made. Last week a shop nucleus was formed, Nucleus No. 9. This youngster is healthy and will start tackling immediately the problems ahead of us.

The Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union, and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, despite their large organizational form, on account of the collaborative method used by the bureaucrats, support measures whereby the earnings of the workers are reduced. These wage cuts are always dependent upon the industrial conditions existing. That means, the assault upon the workers always takes place during the slack period.

The millinary trade, not having a union to speak of, wages and conditions are dependent upon the moods and whims of the bosses, since it is the result of individual, instead of collective, bargaining it is always to the detriment of the workers, because they are compelled to compete with each other.

So, what is our immediate task: First, organize all the workers in the industry, regardless of sex.

Second: A goal should be set whereby the workers employed should receive equal pay, regardless of their sex.

Thirdly: They should be educated to the end that the militant struggle of the union could be only one: namely, shop committee form of organization, which would cast away all the labor fakers the types of Zaritsky, Solitsky, Hillman, Sigman, Kaufman and so on.

By building up such form of organization, we hope to put the leadership of al lthe organizations in the hands of the workers, in the shops, and ultimately pave the way for real amalgamation in the whole needle trades industry.

Champions Light Wines

Former Gov. Edward F. Dunne touched a tender spot in the heart of every members of the advertising men's post of the American legion when he championed the cause of light wines and beers in a tirade against the prohibition amendment at their luncheons in the Hotel Sherman.

Among other things that he told his interested listeners was:

"You can't prohibit the manufacture of merchandise that can be made for 50 cents a gallon and sold for $50."

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 4.—The Chilean government has ordered from the Swedish Airplane company nine heavy military planes. Each machine will carry three Maxim guns and will be fitted for several heavy bombs.

FRUNZE'S DEATH MEMORIALIZED BY WORLD'S WORKERS

Demand Recognition of the Soviet Union

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK—The death of Mikhail Vaselevich Frunze, commissar of war of the Russian workers' government, will be commemorated at the two big meetings in honor of the eighth anniversary of the Russian revolution which will take place at the Central Opera House, 205 East 67 St., New York City, and at Grand Assembly Hall, 318 Grand St., Brooklyn, N. Y., both of them Friday, Nov. 6, at 8 p. m. The growth of the Red Army out of little guerilla bands into a force capable of defeating the intervention of the counter-revolution and of holding at bay the entire imperialist capitalist world will be detailed by speakers at these meetings. The death of Frunze, like the removal of Trotzky, leaves the powerful conscious military machine of the Russian workers and peasants undisturbed and the growth in strength and fighting capacity of the Red Army continues to keep pace with the growth in the economic power of Russia and the political strength of the Russian Communist Party.

Indeed, the successful organization of the Red Army is a symbol not only of military but of economic victory. The problem of supplies for an army is the problem of food production. The problem of munitions for an army is the problem of factory expansion and successful organization of heavy industry. The growth and victories of the Red Army are but evidences of the success of the Russian workers in running their factories and mills and mines, their railroads and steamships and telegraphs without the intervention of the capitalist class.

A Treble Victory.

The celebration of the eighth anniversary of the Russian revolution is therefore the celebration of a treble victory:—a military victory over intervention and counter-revolution, a political and cultural victory over backwardness, darkness and confusion, and an economic victory over destruction, sabotage and inexperience. The workers and peasants of Russia have not only succeeded in organizing their own life so well that now, on their 8th Anniversary, their conditions of living are already better than they were in 1913 in spite of war, counter-revolution and invasion, but also they have organized so great a power that it has become an instrument of liberation to the oppressed people of Asia and Africa and a point of support for the workers' movements of Europe and America.

Hear Story of Russia

The workers of Brooklyn and New York cannot, at this moment, visit Russia en masse, but they can hear the story of the achievements of the workers of that country from the lips of those who have been there, at the meeting in the Central Opera House, 205 East 67 St., New York City and in the Grand Assembly Hall, 318 Grand St., Brooklyn, N. Y., this Friday night. C. E. Ruthenberg, general secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, who made a trip to Russia as late as April, 1925, will describe, from first hand, what he has seen in the country ruled by workers and peasants. Moissaye J. Olgin, who was there during the 5th congress, will also speak. Other speakers in New York will be Gitlow, Krumbein, Manley, S. Don, Weinstone, chairman; in Brooklyn: Gitlow, Stachel, Lifschitz, Bimba, Wolfe, Rebecca Grecht, chairman. Revolutionary music and songs will be given. Admission is 50c. Tickets are on sale at the district office of the Workers (Communist) Party and in all branches.

These meetings are more than a celebration of the eight years of triumph of the Russian workers, more than an acknowledgment of a debt of gratitude to them for what they have done for the workers of the world. Our presence at these meetings is an evidence of the determination of the American workers that their government shall recognize the government of Russia and of their determination to prevent a new attack upon Soviet Russia. The strength of Russia is not only in its own workers and peasants and its mighty Red Army, but also, and even more so, in the sympathy of the workers of the rest of the world who will not permit themselves to be driven into attacking the only country that they can consider theirs. In that spirit it is necessary to attend these two demonstrations and to make them so big that our rulers will understand that they cannot start a new offensive against Russia and that they must recognize its workers' government.

To Save THE DAILY WORKER

Profiteers Steal Quarter Million Dollars from the Cotton Raisers of South

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the cotton growers of the south blindly vent their rage upon the government's crop reporting bureau. It is charged that the bureau is under control of those who manipulate the cotton prices to suit their own pocketbooks; that these cotton profiteers have stolen "a quarter of a million dollars," in the words of Senator Caraway, of Arkansas, from the cotton growers by simply having their experts predict an unprecedented cotton crop, resulting in a big drop in prices. The gamblers in cotton then step in and buy up the crop at low prices, holding in until the price again returns to top notch figures.

• • • •

The trick is not a new one. The wheat growers of the northern states suffer similarly in the grip of the grain gamblers, who own the boards of trade in the big wheat centers, Minneapolis and Chicago. As a result the wheat growers hate the grain exchanges, just as the southerner hates the cotton exchanges.

But hate has proved a poor result producer unless it is followed by definite and intelligent action.

• • • •

The cotton raisers, with the wheat growers, like the tens of millions of industrial workers, are thus learning that the government is the instrument of the profiteers, altho these profiteers carefully seek to propagandize all labor into believing that the government is "of, by and for the people."

It was no accident that this profiteer-owned crop reporting bureau declared first that the 1925 crop would total 13,740,000 bales and then later raised it to 15,226,000 bales while the department of agriculture at Washington at the same time issued reports that cotton production in the Soviet Union, Egypt, Lower California, Mexico and other countries would total 585,000 bales in excess of last year's production.

• • • •

Thus with the world virtually flooded white with cotton, according to government reports, the New York Times still tries to console the robbed that perhaps the high figure is correct. It does not say when this may become known. But if it is correct, says the Times, then the cotton growers ought to be happy since it declares they must have made money at the low figure. It does not point out that the bulk of the crop was not on the market when the low estimate was made; that the prices were not forced down until the speculators were ready to buy in great quantities.

• • • •

Another apology is found in the cotton letter of J. W. Jay & Co., members of the New York cotton exchange. It declares that the government report was the result of a little mistake, the mere failure to recognize that the weevil damage this year was at a minimum. The report says this was "unfortunate." It was, for the cotton growers, to the tune of a quarter of a billion dollars. Jay & Co. do not state the extent of their winnings, however.

Edward E. Bartlett, Jr., of Gwathmey & Co., former president of the New York cotton exchange, comes forward with the old remedy, advising the holding back of the crop "to restore market stability." Powerful organizations of tobacco raisers and fruit growers, to mention only two hard hit groups of land workers, have been created with this object in view. They have gone further, burning the crops in the fields to hold down production and keep up prices. But without avail. They are helpless in the grip of the great profiteers, who control the exchanges, own the means of transportation and storage, and dictate the government reports.

It is mockery to tell the renter or the heavily mortgaged farmer to hold his crop. It is like telling the starving worker to wait until next month some time to eat. It can't be done. Time presses and it works on the side of the great rich.

This condition will continue as long as capitalism lasts. That southern planters are realizing this more and more is seen in the growth of their farmer unions and other organizations with a class basis. This growing consciousness will result in more definite and organized support by the farmers of the labor party that will be built by the industrial workers. Thus the fight against the cotton speculators and the wheat gamblers becomes a part of the struggle for the final overthrow of the whole capitalist system that oppresses city and land workers alike.

Has Father Right to Slay Insane Daughter? Issue in Denver Court

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DENVER, Colo., Nov. 4.—Has the father a moral or legal right to take the life of an imbecile daughter, that her misery may be ended after thirty years of crippled helplessness, will be the question that a jury in district court in Littleton will be asked to decide as Dr. Harold Elmer Blazer, 60 years old "country physician" faced trial for the alleged murder of his daughter Hazel.

Fearing that old age creeping upon him might end his life suddenly and the girl, whom he had tenderly tended for thirty years might be given over to the mercies of strangers or institutional care, Dr. Blazer is charged with snuffing out his daughter's life with chloroform and then attempting to commit suicide.

Defense attorneys have announced that a plea of insanity will be made for Dr. Blazer and that it will be pointed out to the jury that he was not only insane at the time of the alleged crime but that the "imbecile—the human husk—known as Hazel Blazer "had no soul," and that taking her life was an act of human kindness.

RAILROAD UNION HEADS DISCUSS WAGE INCREASES

Prepare Demands for Better Conditions

The officials and general chairmen of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the Order of Railroad Conductors from all of the western roads are now holding meetings in Chicago preparatory to presenting their demands for an increase in wages to the railroad heads.

The General Western Chairmen's association appointed a committee of five from the Order of Railroad Trainmen and five from the Order of Railroad Conductors to draw up the demands to be presented for the conference.

All meetings of the conference are held behind closed doors and at the time The DAILY WORKER went to press it was unable to ascertain to what the special committee of ten would recommend to the coference.

The sentiment among the railroaders represented at this conference is for demanding an increase which would bring the wages up to the wartime level.

The United States railroad labor board reduced wages 12 per cent on all roads but later cut this reduction to 7 per cent on some roads where union heads sacrificed some of the working rules that the men had won. The conference is now discussing means of getting the war-time wages along with changes in working conditions.

Judge Upholds "Law'n Order" by Fining 19 Who Sell "Hot Dogs"

Nineteen who were attempting to take out a living selling hot dogs at the University of Chicago football game were fined $31 for selling hot dogs without a license. They were arrested upon the complaint of one of the university heads and held at the Hyde Park station until friends had put up a $50 bond.

Governor Re-arrests Convicts Freed by Lieutenant-Governor

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. Nov. 4—Nine convicts, including two former state officials convicted of defalcations, pardoned during his absence from the state by the lieutenant governor, were ordered re-arrested and sent back to the state penitentiary by Governor Terral of Arkansas.

Expedition Arrives

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 4.—Roy Chapman Andrews, famous exploder and director of the third Asiatic expedition of the New York museum of natural history, will arrive in San Francisco with his party today aboard the liner President Taft. He is returning from the Gobi desert of northern China where he and his fellow explorers found evidence of man's earliest origin. Included in the treasurers being brought by Dr. Andrews are forty eggs of the prehistoric Dinosaur estimated to be more than ten million years old.

Moline and East Moline May Merge

MOLINE, Ill., Nov. 4.—Residents of Moline and East Moline will vote at a special election Dec. 16 on the proposed plan to merge the two cities. Members of the city councils of both places drafted conditions of the union and planned the election.

GOOD NEWS!

For Daily Worker Readers

Wm. F. Dunne, editor of The DAILY WORKER, goes to the anthracite coal fields next week to stay for two weeks.

About Wednesday, Nov. 11, daily stories will appear analyzing the situation in this scene of bitter struggle, bringing to workers the true conditions existing there:

The strike now in progress; living conditions; the trade unions; the betrayals of the workers by the officialdom; the police and the courts.

This picture of the struggles of miners, written by an outstanding writer of the American revolutionary movement, should receive the widest distribution.

MELLON RUNNING MINE ON SCABBY SCALE IN PENNA

semblance of unionism that is left since the fatal Cleveland settlement of 1922, which was nothing more than separate settlements.

Then the coming of the Jacksonville agreemnet of 1924 under the "no backward step" policy; a period of three years which is responsible for the murdering of members of the U. M. W. of A.

200,000 Too Many.

But what about the murdering of union coal miners when there are 200,000 too many miners in the coal mines of this country? This being a conservative estimate by the faker, John L. Lewis, and his stool pigeons.

While this has been called to the attention of the coal miners of this country by the most brilliant writers many times, yet it is necessary to mention this fatal policy of the union wreckers often to get the coal miners to thoroly understand what is the reason that we are murdered while on picket duty trying to save our union, which is dearer to us than the interest or popularity of any individual even tho he be John L. Lewis the political stool pigeon of strikebreaker Coolidge.

The coal miners of this country must arouse from their slumbers and hold those responsible for the murderous conditions that prevail in the anthracite region, as well as the bituminous field.

Conditions Lost.

Every union condition that has been gained after years of struggle and sacrifice has been given away by the fakers in the districts, such as miners who have been fortunate in getting a home of their own have to pay rent for a coal company shack as in Bulger Block Coal company Local No. 1973, where a grand fight was made by President Louis Dufour who is a member of the Workers (Communist) Party, and for this very reason the faker Pat Fagan permitted the organizers and field workers of District 5 to hold an executive conference on this question. Of course, the discussion was in favor of the coal company and against the union miners.

How long are the miners going to stand for this, is the question?

The conditions in the bituminous coal fields are growing worse along with the latest discussion of the anthracite coal operators that no settlement will be made unless the miners will submit to a clause that no more strikes will take place.

Lewis, What Will You Do?

Lewis, you agreed to leave the pumpmen remain at work, which is giving the operators protection, contrary to union strike policy and should convince every coal miner of your traitorous leadership. You also supported the arrest of the progressives in the anthracite strike, while your stool pigeon, Cappellini, commended the political puppets of the anthracite coal operators for breaking up the progressive miners' meetings.

But what are you going to do now, Lewis, with the possibility of a struggle all winter in the hard coal region, while the bituminous miners are producing coal that is being used as a substitute along with equipment being made for oil, also; this being one of the dastardly betrayals of the 1922 settlement, by not having the contracts expire at the same period.

Well, Lewis, you have made a fizzle of everything you turned your hand to and there is not any question that you will make a failure out of the anthracite strike and make a settlement for the check-off so that you will have your salary guaranteed.

The A. F. of L. and the Left Wing

By William F. Dunne

ARTICLE V.—PART 2.

THE left wing in the A. F. of L. is a purely rank and file movement. Conditions in the United States have not created as yet a situation where influential heads of trade unions make common cause with large sections of the membership against the reactionary bloc as in Great Britain. The leadership of the left wing in the A. F. of L., with one or two exceptions, is composed of workers who were never part of the bureaucratic machine. The American left wingers build from below. Their progress is slow but that the movement has great vitality is proved by the fact that after a continuous three-year war on the left wing in close cooperation with the department of justice, the A. F. of L. officials at Atlantic City still had to deal with resolutions on amalgamation, a labor party, world trade union unity, recognition of Soviet Russia and a national organizing campaign.

DUE to the system of representation at A. F. of L. conventions which almost automatically brings as delegates the officialdom of the affiliated unions, the voting strength of the left wing, pending a swing of some big union to the left, will always be small, and in the face of the question of powerful unions, exercising their autonomy under the A. F. of L. constitution, votes mean little.

The left wing must first of all concentrate on the work of propaganda and organization in the unions which make up the A. F. of L.

The agitation for a labor party can become extremely effective if the central bodies and state federations of labor are brought into line altho they have no executive authority. In their respective localities, however, they are the only section of the American labor movement, which perform any real political functions. They have always taken the lead in progressive movements until stepped upon by the international unions and the executive council of the A. F. of L.

AWARE of this the fight at Atlantic City against the left wing found expression in a tightening of the control of the A. F. of L. over central bodies. They have been placed now in the same position as federal labor unions affiliated directly to the A. F. of L. The correspondent of the Federated Press states:

> The new powers given the executive council are intended as weapons to be used against central bodies going left, it would appear from the explanatory remarks of Chairman Tobin of the committee on laws, who is himself a member of the executive council. Tobin said situations might arise where central bodies violated A. F. of L. laws by harboring secessionists and adopting policies contrary to the laws and traditions of the parent body. Till the recommendations were adopted there was no authority to lift the properties of the offending group along with its charter. The new powers over the central and state bodies, it was explained were merely those already existing over federal local unions.

MEASURES like that above, in view of the almost complete lack of left wing voting strength in the Atlantic City convention, do not coincide very well with the expressed contempt of the left wing in the speeches of Green, Woll and Company. Organizational measures taken against opponents are always an indication of the oppositional strength—potential if not actual. The A. F. of L. officialdom, altho unbelieveably stupid, is yet wise enough to know that it cannot hide its class collaboration schemes behind the "red menace" forever.

A striking instance of the manner in which even the most patriotic labor leaders can ether be made to move or forced to appear openly as the an agent of the bosses, is the question of the foreign-born workers and the exceptional laws against them for which Secretary of Labor Davis, himself a member of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin workers unions appeared as champion.

IN numerous bills before congress proposals were made to establish a registration and fingerprinting system for alien workers. It was a strike-breaking scheme par excellence; the capitalist press, particularly the subsidized organs of the steel trust and mining companies, were enthusiastic. Davis received numberless tributes for "his fearless stand" from all the official and semi-official bodies—including "Majah" Berry's American legion—which are busy saving the United States from the working class and farmers.

The left wing went into action. A flood of resolutions from labor unions and working class fraternal societies swept over the desks of A. F. of L. officialdom in Washington and other union headquarters.

THE A. F. of L. with its demand for the complete stoppage of immigration and its vicious denunciation of aliens as the source of all "radical propaganda" in the labor movement was just as responsible as the capitalists and their detective agency auxiliaries, for the war on alien workers.

But the most powerful unions in the A. F. of L., such as the United Mine Workers, needle trade unions, railway shop crafts, etc. have huge percentages of foreign-born members.

THE A. F. of L. was forced to act. At Atlantic City it denounced such legislation and adopted a resolution opposing it.

The A. F. of L. was forced to take this action by pressure from below and in spite of the fact that Secretary of Labor Davis had given its officialdom a good excuse for inaction by pointing out that most of the Communists were foreign-born.

It is only when the left wing has been able to create a broad mass movement thruout the ranks of the organized workers, as in this case, that it achieves its immediate objective. The issue was of such vital importance to the labor movement that denunciation of it as another "red plot" had but little effect.

Such issues make a direct appeal to the workers' sense of solidarity and against this, when effectively organized, the bureaucrats are helpless.

THE proceedings of the Atlantic City convention are valuable material for the left wing. They show that when the left wing organizes its struggle around the basic needs of the workers when these are threatened jointly by the officialdom and the government, large circles of workers can be drawn into active participation in its campaigns.

On the other hand, the Atlantic City convention shows that the A. F. of L. officialdom has succeeded, by concentrating on the Communists, in evading the real issues of the struggle and forcing the left wing to fight for the Communists or abandon its program. Only the most advanced elements will do this and the left wing therefore is numerically weak in this period of growing power for American capitalism.

IF the Communist Party had interests other than those of the whole working class this situation could be accepted by it as a most desirable one. But in the present stage of development of the class struggle in the United States, with the trade union movement the most backward of any capitalist nation in the world, yet at the same time affording the only feasible road to the arousing of class consciousness in decisive masses of the workers, the left wing has to be more than an appendage of the Communist party or actually under its leadership.

The immediate task of the most conscious elements of the left wing is to broaden the base to which the offensive of the A. F. of L. officialdom has confined it. The Communists must take the lead in this. As this review of the proceedings of the Atlantic City convention has shown there are issues on which a broad left wing can be built—such as "organize the unorganized," "reductions of hours and increases of wages," "struggle against governmental spy systems," etc. When such issues are given their most effective application in the various sections of the labor movement and left wing activity is thereby stimulated, slogans like "for a labor party," "world trade union unity" and "recognition of Soviet Russia" not only begin to reach hundreds of thousands of workers but to ATTRACT them when closely connected with the slogans of the daily struggle.

FOR our party the immediate work in hand is that outlined for the British Communists by Losovsky at the fourth congress of the Comintern:

> The aim here must be to create a more numerous opposition trade union movement (in the form of a left wing—W. F. D.) Our aim must be that our Communist groups act as a point of crystallization round which the opposition elements will concentrate.
> The aim must be to create, to marshall, to integrate the opposition forces . . . . THERE MUST BE ESTABLISHED A RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN THE PARTY ORGANIZATION AND THE OPPOSITION, WHICH BY ITS VERY NATURE IS HETEROGENOUS—IN SUCH A MANNER THAT THE COMMUNISTS COULD NOT BE CHARGED WITH STRIVING TO MECHANICALLY DOMINATE THE ENTIRE OPPOSITION MOVEMENT. (Emphasis mine—W. F. D.)

FOLLOWING upon the paring down process which has, in the last two years reduced the left wing to little more than members of our party who are also trade unionists, the Atlantic City convention shows that our party must choose, for some time at least, between a left wing made up of Communists and with little possibility of effective work in the most reactionary trade union movement in the world or a broad left wing brought together on many minor issues—some of which may even appear silly to some revolutionists—in which "Communist groups should act as a point of crystallisation.'

alone amounted to the sum of $6,926.

At first the Gennas had tried the "back-alley handout" system on the patrolmen and other upholders of "law and order," but as these defenders of "private property" had short memories, the Gennas then told the coppers to show up at the Italian-American Social Club, 1022 West Taylor street, and there sign the "payroll,' and collect their "wages" every month. "Paydays" would come between the 25th of one month and then the 10th of the succeeding month.

The numbers of every patrolman were placed in the book in the endeavor to see that none tried the city hall "stunt" of collecting two or three pays for one month's "labor."

This is in substance the evidence offered by the lawyer which the judge refused to allow to be introduced as evidence.

Mayor Gets Hot Under Collar.

Mayor Dever when told about this became hot under the collar and said "We have believed right along that things were not as they should be at that station (the Maxwell street station which is in the district the Gennas used for their "manufacturing" establishments) and the superintendent of police is going to take some definite action in a very short time to improve conditons there."

CHICAGO WORKERS TO CELEBRATE SATURDAY AT TEMPLE AUDITORIUM

The events of Nov. 7, 1917, when the Russian working class seized power from decadent capitalism—those historic events, and with them the eight years' progressive development of the first Soviet Republic, will be celebrated in Chicago as everywhere else thruout the world on the anniversary of the Russian revolution, this Saturday. As previously announced, the Chicago mass meeting will be held Saturday night in Temple Hall, corner Marshfield and Van Buren, at 8 p. m.

There will be music and revolutionary songs, in addition to the speeches of Max Bedacht, Earl R. Browder, Martin Abern, Max Shachtman and Herbert Zam.

Republican Victory in Boston Ends 16 Years Democratic City Rule

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Nov. 4—The city's return to republican administration after 16 years of democratic rule, thru a decisive victory of Macolm E. Barnes, former collector of internal revenue, was indicated in returns from yesterday's election. Theodore E. Glynn, fire commissioner, who had the backing of Mayor Curley and the democrats was defeated by a vote of close to 15,000.

Indiana Republicans Win.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 4—Republicans won sweeping victories yesterday in municipal elections in Indiana. Their candidates for mayor were successful in Indianapolis, Terre Haute, Evansville, Fort Wayne, La Fayette, Crawfordsville, Peru, Elkhart, Frankfort and Jeffersonville, and in all of these cities but Indianapolis the republican victory ousted democratic administrations which have governed the cities for four years. Outstanding republican defeats were at South Bend, Marion, and at Richmond. In Indianapolis John R. Duvall, republican, held the mayoralty which will be vacated by Mayor Lew Shank

VIENNA BAKERS STRIKE AS 90,000 GOVERNMENT EMPLOYES WIN DEMANDS

VIENNA, Austria, Nov. 4.—Nine thousand bakers are on strike and Vienna is breadless because the bakers refused to work for the same pay under a rapidly rising cost of living. The threatened strike of 90,000 government employes has been averted at the last hour by conceding to the workers most of their demands in order to prevent a tie-up of all communications, since the postal and telegraph workers were threatening strike.

King admitted before the federal grand jury that Col. Miller, Jesse Smith and himself divided the Liberty bonds that were assets of the American Metals corporation after they had "managed" to turn back confiscated property to the German owners.

Miller denies knowledge of any "wrongdoing" and states that the transaction which was carried on between the alien property custodian's office was a "proper and legal one" as the department of justice had approved teh rethrn of the property.

Why the Change?

Despite the assertions of the department of justice that the indicted Swiss and German bankers were to be brot to America or trial or "conspiracy," the department now claims that after "investigating" international law it "discovers" it cannot extradite them for conspiracy.

FRENCH CRISIS IS AVOIDED BY SUPPORT VOTE

Revolt Threat Looms Thruout Domains

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, France, Nov. 4.—The Painleve government only exists by dint of sufferance. Tottering to an ignominous fall, rebuked by an overwhelming majority of the chamber of deputies, it was saved to prolong its death pangs by the socialists refraining from voting.

The result is that altho in the throes of death, and incapable of moving one way or another, with a majority menacing its existence, it drags into another day, uncertain whether its demise will be today or tomorrow, but knowing full well that it will be soon.

The former political enemies of the Painleve government enabled it to exist a short time longer by giving it a vote of confidence. They explained that it might be disastrous for France to change the ministry again within such a short time after its reorganization. The vote of confidence was 1121 to 189, with 21 deputies abstaining from voting.

The conservatives made it plain that their vote was not a vote of confidence, but only an attempt to end the present chaotic condition of affairs in France.

Now Wants Disarmament.

Simultaneous with the second cabinet crisis within ten days comes the announcement that France is making proposals to the league of nations for a disarmament conference to devise some means of limiting the heavy military burdens and at the same time create security guarantees to compensate for the limitation of armaments in case of sudden aggression.

This is viewed here as an effort to create confidence in the government and bolster up the falling currency. It cannot have the desired effect as all influential financial circles are aware that with new uprisings being reported daily from the mandated areas, a standing army of even greater dimensions is necessary to save the situation in the colonies.

Briand May Be Premier.

Painleve's stay is limited, that is certain. His successor will in all probability by M. Briand, who has stepped in many times at critical moments and weathered the storm. Whether he will be able to do so this time is questionable, as it is doubtful if the aid of Great Britain, of which he is practically assured, will be substantial enough to tide over the present period of disaster that threatens from every quarter.

It is also thought that if Briand forms a cabinet that increased pressure will be brought to bear by the United States, as that imperialist power will fight against the rapprochment of Britain and France with its tremendous economic power.

Communists Active.

Communists are carrying on a terrific campaign of denunciation of all the leading parties and vehemently demanding a cessation of conquest in the colonies. The storming of Damascus has loosened a veritable avalanche of fury from the ranks of the working class. Divisions of the army are being automatically shifted in all its units to prevent too long associations developing into mutiny among the troops engaged in these ventures.

The vote of confidence reluctantly given had in view the rapid spread of Communism among all ranks of the workers, rather than any abstract desire to stabilize the Painleve government.

The Great Leader of the Revolution

Books by V. I. ULIANOV LENIN Books About

STATE AND REVOLUTION

One of the most widely known of the works of Lenin. Written just before the Bolshevik revolution, it is a Marxian analysis of the capitalist state "the armed protector of Capitalism", and a lesson in the revolutionary necessity of the establishment of the workers' state, "the Dictatorship of the Proletariat", during the period of transition from Capitalism to Communism. State and Revolution is the final refutation of the nonsense spread by right socialists, anarchists, pacifists and syndicalists regarding the state. The book contains some of the most important Communist theory which must be read and understood by every Communist.

96 pages 25 Cents.

PROLETARIAN REVOLUTION or KAUTSKY THE RENGADE

Lenin led the fight of the revolutionist against the reformists and diluters of Marxism for 20 years. In this book he delivers a permanently annihilating attack on Kautsky the chief theoretician of the Mensheviks. Communists would do well to read and re-read this all too little known book.

128 pages (paper) .25 Cents

THE INFANTILE SICKNESS, or "LEFTISM" IN COMMUNISM

In all young revolutionary movements there develops an exaggerated tendency toward the "left" — a systematic opposition to participation in reactionary trade unions, and a wish to remain "pure" in the face of necessary and advantageous compromises. Lenin completely unmasks the hollowness of the ultra-left phrases, shatters their positions and leaves a ringing and crystal declaration of the true political line of Communism. A classic of Communist literature.

IMPERIALISM, THE FINAL STAGE OF CAPITALISM. By Nicolai Lenin

One of Lenin's monumental contributions to political economy. It is this final stage of capitalism, that finds its expression in a world struggle for the monopolistic control of markets, to capitalist imperialism, which brought about the world war and which must inevitably bring further wars until capitalism has been dethroned and the working class has established itself as the ruling power.

AMERICAN TEXTILE WORKERS UNDER THE DAWES PLAN LIKE THEIR BROTHERS IN GERMANY

By LOUIS KOVESS.

ARTICLE V.

PASSAIC, N. J., Nov. 4—Two hundred thousand English textile workers have fought for months against a 10 per cent wage reduction.

In North Czecho-Slovakia, 10,000 textile workers of 22 mills went on strike recently against wage cutting.

In the United States the 10 per cent wage cut has fluctuated, but where it was not enforced yet it is only a matter of time until it will be enforced. In most countries an attack has started to reduce the standard of living of the textile workers.

The Dawes Plan a Wage Reducer.

The consequence of the enforcement of the Dawes plan in Germany is, that the load of the war reparations falls on the shoulders of the workers. The conquering imperialist powers are trying to press out the blood from the working masses.

The result of this is that the starvation wages paid German workers cheapens production so that the German capitalist is able to compete with other countries.

Let us see for instance the difference between the German and English knitters.

If a knitter in England earns for a 47-hour week $15, the earnings of a Hamburg knitter for a 54-hour week is only six dollars.

But because the English capitalist don't want to lose any of his profit, he starts an attack to reduce the wages of the knitters. The American situation is similar. In Czecho-Slovakia and in other countries we see the attack made to reduce the wages of the knitter and all other workers in succession.

According to the national industrial conference board, the standard of living of German workers is only one-third of the American worker.

Export of German Textiles Increases.

The export of German textile products has increased from 115,427 tons to 144,033 tons in the first six months of this year. The value of the exported textile fabrics increased from 623,023,000 marks to 755,069,000 marks, or 25 per cent. The silk export increased from 62,393,000 marks to 78,1 750,000 marks.

Thomas F. McMahon, president of the United Textile Workers' Union, introduced a resolution at the convention of the American Federation of Labor, demanding the supervision of the Fordney-McCumber tariff act, now in effect.

Fight Against Wage Cutting.

From the above we can conclude that with the introduction of the Dawes plan, the German working class was given the role of wage cutters.

The fight against the Dawes plan therefore must be a part of the fight led by the textile workers and the workers of other industries.

We also understand that the cutting of the wages of textile workers is not a local affair but a country and world wide affair. The fight against wage reduction of the Passaic workers, and the organization of the unorganized, must start with a united front organization. The same steps are necessary on a country wide scale, and wherever there is an opportunity we must fight for world trade union unity.

When the textile baron brings for his excuse of wage cutting, that "he can not say that the competition" he does not say that for the sake of competition he is reducing the standard of living only of the workers, but will not give a bit from his profit.

Increase Productiveness, Lower Wages

In the United States, where the textile barons are piling up huge profits, not only do they want to increase their profit by reducing the wages, but thru increasing the productivity of the workers.

In the last year the American textile workers' efficiency has doubled without having his wages increased. In the last 20 years the efficiency of the textile workers has increased 400 per cent, in the meanwhile the cost of living has increased 100 per cent, but the wages of the knitters have hardly increased at all, and in the last few years have been falling steadily.

"Fight" and "unity"—without these two slogans coming true, the standard of living of the textile workers will steadily go down still further.

HAGUE MACHINE WINS IN STATE OF NEW JERSEY.

Coolidge Candidate Meets with Defeat

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 4.—Commissioner A. Harry Moore, democratic candidate for governor of New Jersey, running on a wet platform was leading his republican opponent, State Senator Arthur Whitney, by 31,000 votes when 871 of the state's 2,810 precints had been tabulated. Later virtually complete returns as tabulated at Trenton gave him the election by a narrow margin.

The democratic victory is by no means complete, however, as the third congressional district elected Stewart Appelby, republican, over his democratic opponent, J. Lyle Kinwouth, by more than 2,000 majority.

A Tammany Victory.

The election of Moore placed the state house in the hands of the Tammany adjunct of Jersey City, a formidable political machine dominated by Mayor Frank Hague, whose principal achievement in office has been the crushing of unionism in the city in favor of the open shop manufacturers.

Early in his career, while his machine was in the making he smashed a union organized by the policemen known as the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association. Later they organized into a secret policemen's union. He gave its members twenty-four hours to quit the union or quit the force after planting stoolpigeons in the organization and getting a roster of the membership. His reign of terror smashed this union. The active organizers were removed from the force in order to ensure it being an effective instrument to keep the town on a scab basis.

Hague is one of the "big three" in the national councils of the democratic party. The other two being Al. Smith, governor of New York, and George E. Brennan, democratic boss of Chicago. The regular Tammany spoils system in is vogue and the state is in for a period of typical Tammany looting.

Terrific Power Weilded.

The governor of the state of New Jersey weilds despotic powers over the people of the state. He has the appointive power of both prosecutors and judges of the courts, and thus makes them all subservient to the machine.

This power is used with merciless force against all efforts of the workers to organize in the large industrial centers of this state.

Hague, in his career as boss of Jersey City, has managed to become a wealthy man thru playing the political game, altho he entered politics without a cent.

Coolidge's candidate on the republican ticket, Arthur Whitney, was defeated by a close margin. He had the endorsement of the ku klux klan and the anti-saloon league. Cyrus C. H. Curtis, scab publisher of the Saturday Evening Post, Ladies Home Journal, Philadelphia Public Ledger and New York Evening Post, sent one of his principal pen prostitutes Clinton W. Gilbert, into the state to aid in publicity for Coolidge's man, but to no avail.

The only service rendered by Gilbert was to expose the real nature of the Hague machine.

Communist Vote Not In.

As was to be expected, the vote for the Workers (Communist) Party candidates has not yet been announced, the henchmen of the two old political machines having failed to tabulate it on the first count.

Much interest in the Communist campaign was manifested among the workers in the industrial centers near New York and undoubtedly resulted in a marked increase in Communist sentiment and support.

In the actual labor struggles the Communists of New Jersey have taken a prominent part, particularly in the great Paterson strike of last year, and thousands of workers support our principles. Many of the industrial workers are disfranchised because of the stringent election laws prevailing and it is not possible to register the number of workers under Communist influence thru the election machinery, though it serves to indicate the growing power of the movement.

Chicago Workers Picketing Angers Hungarian Consul

Picketers, who beset the Hungarian consulate in Chicago in protest against the torture and probable execution in Hungary of the radical leader, Mathias Rakosi and members of the independent socialist party, were scoffed at by Consul J. S. Schefbeck.

"They are a lot of radicals who are meddling in what is none of their business," he said over the telephone to the Federated Press. The demonstration, (which included a picketing of the Ambassador Hotel where the Hungarian finance minister is staying while trying to negotiate a loan), was arranged by the International Labor Defense.

Organization Meetings | # Workers (Communist) Party | Resolutions Social Affairs

LANGUAGE SECTION REORGANIZATION COMMISSIONS HOLD JOINT SESSION REGARDING WORKERS SOCIAL CLUBS

The members of the reorganization commissions of the Czecho Slovak, Greek, Lithuanian, South Slavic, Slovak and Scandinavian sections held their first joint meeting in Chicago on October 27th.

Comrade Lovestone reported for the organization department on the progress of reorganization and the investigation which the organization department is making to secure enough data to present a concrete, specific program for the formation of workers clubs by the various sections.

Czecho-Slovak Report.

Comrade Kalousek, reporting for the Czecho-Slovak reorganization commission informed the comrades that the Czecho-Slovak Communist press had been carrying articles regularly pleading for reorganization and making for an understanding of the question by the Czecho-Slovak comrades. Comrade Vijtauer is being sent out on a tour to explain in detail the party's bolshevization program to the Czecho-Slovak branches. Some opposition has manifested itself to reorganization, but it is not big or organized. Steps are being taken to assign comrades the task of convincing all those who are manifesting some hostility to the reorganization program.

Greek Federation Report.

Comrade Chryssos reported for the Greek commission. He declared that the Greek press has been energetically propagating the party's program on reorganization. No opposition has manifested itsef in the ranks of the Greek comrades to reorganization. The commission is planning to send an organizer to cover the various Greek branches. The Greek comrades reported that they are confronted with the problem of maintaining contact with the number of members-at-large that they have.

Lithuanian Report.

Comrade Andrulis, in reporting for the Lithuanian section, declared that some objection to reorganization had manifested itself in one of the Philadelphia branches. In Chicago there is not a single Lithuanian comrade who is doubtful or opposed to reorganization—everyone is enthusiastic for reorganization. The Lithuanian commission has received reports from Cleveland, New York, Detroit and Pittsburgh to the effect that the comrades there are expressing themselves favorably over the prospect of being reorganized as members of shop nuclei. Similar sentiments were expressed at the Lithuanian National Conference. The only likelihood of any loss amongst the Lithuanian comrades is that of the language difficulty which may confront some members.

South Slavs Report.

The South Slavic reorganization commission report was made by Comrade Novak. Comrade Novak explained the special campaign carried on by the South Slavic comrades for reorganization, the mobilization of all their speakers and the widespread circulation of literature. In one branch in Niagara Falls, one member opposed the reorganization; a special organizer was sent to the branch to explain the matter fully. No other opposition has shown itself. Some difficulties were encountered as having arisen from the change in dues payments. As soon as finances permit, the federation will propose a special bulletin on reorganization.

Scandinavian Report.

The Scandinavian comrades have been carrying on a very systematic and thoro campaign for reorganization in their press. Two and three articles are printed weekly in the Ny Tid. A comrade especially acquainted with the problems of reorganization is now touring the various districts. Some opposition and some passivity have shown themselves in Chicago.

Slovak Section.

Comrade Dendir reported for the Slovak section, and told of the numerous translations that had appeared in their press, on reorganization.

Special Workers' Clubs.

On the matter of workers' clubs, the information gathered by the organization department as to the special conditions existing in different federations was given to the comrades present. The application of the policy in organizing workers' clubs, necessarily varies, with the specific conditions in which the different language section finds itself. For instance, the Hungarian workers already have Elore Dramatic and Cultural clubs and Workers' Homes Associations, the Lithuanian workers are often members of the Lithuanian Workers' Literature Association. The Bulgarian comrades have special educational clubs. The South Slavic comrades, in some instances, have special benefit societies. The Jewish comrades have their Workmen's Circles in certain cases, and so on.

The Central Executive Committee organization department will permit sufficient latitude in the organization of these workers' clubs, so as to take into consideration the specific conditions existing among the various groups of workers.

A report is soon to be prepared by the organization department on the workers' clubs, outlining the general principles of procedure in organizing these clubs, explaining the method of constitution and functioning of these clubs, and providing for the specific application by each language section of the constitutional provisions regarding the organization of these clubs.

NEW YORK DISTRICT COMMITTEE EXPELS K. BLOHM FOR ATTACKS ON COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—The following is a letter, sent by the District Committee of New York to K. Blohm and approved by the District Executive Committee, expelling him after he had been called to appear before the Political Committee at four different times to answer attacks on the C. I. and failed to do so:

"K. Blohm,
"New York City.

"The District Executive Committee has acted upon the charges made against you in connection with your activities in behalf of Lore and Loreism. You have been expelled from the party upon the following grounds:

"1. Speaking and defending the policy of Lore and Loreism in the party.

"2. Attacking the Communist International in the manner that should be expected only from enemies of the Communist Party.

"3. At the time when Lore is organizing an organization which is an instrument against the party and the Communist International propagating the ideas of Lore in the party.

"4. That Blohm's remaining in the party is only for one purpose—to act as an agent of the Lore organization and to betray this party to the new organization.

"Motion to expel was carried unanimously by the political committee of the district.

"Signed, District Executive Com.,
"W. W. Weinstone,
"General Secretary District Two."

Seek Many "Prominent Citizens" of St. Louis for "Stealing" Whisky

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 4.—Federal collector of internal revenue Hellmich; Nat Goldstein, long identified with republican politics in St. Louis; State Senator Michael Kinney and his brother W. J. Kinney; Fred Essen, republican boss of St. Louis county and R. E. Walker, former deputy sheriff were some of those mentioned in warrants issued by the federal grand jury charging them with conspiracy to violate the Volstead act and conspiring in the theft of 893 barrels of whisky from the Jack Daniel whisky distillery warehouse.

The warrants were issued following the testimony of George Remus, who has made his "pile" and is now sojourning at the summer resort at Atlanta, that the federal government maintains for those who forget that prohibition officers must live.

Remus was also one of those that aided the 893 barrels to disappear from the warehouse but since he is a state's witness, no warrant has been issued against him, tho his estranged wife is being sought by the federal authorities for "doing her bit."

NUCLEUS LEADER MUST TRAIN AT WORKERS' SCHOOL

Group Selects Student and Pays His Fee

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—The Workers' School will train one worker of each shop nucleus, preferably the organizer, to lead political discussions in his shop nucleus, in the form of a course in the "Fundamentals of Leninism," in the theory and practice of Leninism in their concrete application to the American party in general, and the needs and problems of the shop nucleus and the manner of teaching it or leading the discussion. The shop nucleus will select the comrade to take the training course, exact attendance from him and pay his fee.

Training Necessary.

With the reorganization of the party on the basis of shop nuclei will come an intensification of the party's activities in all fields of work, and a thousand fold increase in our contact with, and influence over the masses.

In order that our reorganization shall not be merely a reallocation of our present membership and in order that the nuclei shall be active, and alive, responding to the needs of the masses in the shops and factories, it is necessary that our entire membership, organized in the nuclei, shall be equal to the demands of the situation. This can only be done by a deepening of the understanding of the laws of the class struggle among our membership by giving to every member a political minimum education in Leninism. They must also be instructed in the performance of the daily organizational tasks.

The shop nucleus training course is organized on a basis that provides the drawing in of the entire party membership into our educational work.

The course will combine the "Fundamentals of Leninism" and "Party Organizational Problems," the outline being approximately as follows:

1. Capitalist Wage Slavery—The system under which we live.
2. Imperialism, Present Dominant Form of Capitalism—The last stage of capitalism.
3. The Breach in the Imperialist Front and the Epoch of Social Revolution.
4. The Communist Order of Society—The abolition of the contradictions of capitalism and the emancipation of the workers.
5. The Dictatorship of the Proletariat—The unavoidable prerequisite of the struggle for Communism.
6. Proletarian Dictatorship and the Allies of the Revolution—Colonies and the peasantry.
7. International Party of the Proletariat—The road to the dictatorship of the proletariat.
8. The Party and the Masses
9. Structure and Organizational Problems of the Party—Shop nuclei, street nuclei, shop committees, etc.
10. Special Campaigns of the Party—Electoral campaigns, Soviet Russia, recruiting campaigns, Communist press.
11. The Work of the Shop Nucleus.
    - (a). Work of the different officers
    - (b). The shop paper.
    - (c). Legal and illegal methods.
    - (d). How the nucleus brings the party into the shops.
    - (e). How the nucleus mobilizes the masses for the party campaigns.
12. Problems of Bolshevization.

Leaders Brot Together by Class.

In addition to meeting the needs of our educational work in line with the party's program of bolshevization, the "Shop Nucleus Training Course" will also serve to maintain a steady personal contact with each of the shop nuclei thru its best representatives—the one chosen by the nucleus to take the course and be the leader in the nuclei educational work. The nucelus members will therefore have a direct means of bringing any special problem in the shop directly to the attention of the party higher committee for solution. Thus the shop nucleus training course will help in the function of the nuclei.

The first class will be formed out of the existing shop nuclei and every nucleus must immediately choose one comrade and send his name to Comrade Wolfe, director of the Workers' School, 108 E. 14th St.

New classes will be formed as the reorganization process progresses and new shop nuclei are organized.

The class will meet once every two weeks for six minths, two hours each session. A fee of $2.50 will be charged to be paid by the shop nucleus.

AMALGAMATED BANK'S HOLY TRINITY RUN TO CAPITALIST UPHOLDER, THE DAILY FORWARD, FOR CONSOLATION

The holy trinity of Duane Swift, publicity manager and new business getter of the Amalgamated Trust and Savings Bank, Mack Tulshin and Sam Levine, one of the heads of the bank and head of the Chicago joint board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America as well as being a member of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' general executive board, are desperate in their attempts to alibi their actions in expelling and firing Joseph Shafir, former president of the Bank Clerks' Union and clerk at the Amalgamated Trust and Savings Bank, Jackson Blvd. and Clark street.

Swift Uses Yellow Forward.

Duane Swift goes to great lengths in trying to clear himself. He tries to show in a recent issue of the Jewish Daily Forward that Shafir was not expelled because he advocated the recognition of Soviet Russia, but because he attacked class collaboration and labor banking and "hurt the business of the Amalgamated Bank."

Merely a Pawn.

And as Duane Swift, a pawn used by Mariempietri and Sam Levine to fire Shafir from the Amalgamated Trust and Savings Bank speaks thru the columns of that staunch supporter of the capitalist system, the Jewish Daily Forward, he forgets the interview he gave to one of the reporters of the Chicago Daily News in which he made statements that "the union did not know that Shafir was a Communist" and that Shafir was expelled from the union because he "introduced Communist measures."

Expel Shafir at Bank's Order.

Shafir never hid his Communist identity in the Bank Clerks' Union and they all knew who Shafir was and the views that Shafir espoused. But, when Shafir went to the American Federation of Labor and introduced resolutions for the recognition of Soviet Russia, world trade union unity and against class collaboration, then Duane Swift and Mack Tulshin, under instructions from Mariempietri, had Shafir expelled from the union so that the bank could more easily fire a left winger from the bank's employ.

Duane Swift has spent quite a number of hours in the offices of a number of papers in the city in his desperate attempt to cover up the fact that he is nothing more than pawn in the hands of Sam Levin and Mariempeitri to smash the Bank Clerks' Union.

Levine Spreads Some Bunk.

Sam Levine, in a statement to the Jewish Daily Forward said that Shafir would not be fired from the employ of the Amalgamated Trust and Savings Bank until the union made a demand upon him. The union made no demands upon Levine, yet Shafir has been fired.

Levine Makes Demands.

Not only has the union not made any demands upon Levine, but it cannot. Two years ago when the bank clerks' committee was negotiating an agreement with Levine, Levine refused to allow the clerks a closed shop clause, saying that even the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union did not have such a clause and that non-members were working with members in the Hart, Schaffner and Marx company shops. Instead of the union making a demand on Levine, Levine made the demand for expulsion of Shafir from the union.

New York's Mayor-Elect

Spawned in the unspeakable filth and slime of Tammany Hall, the mayor-elect of New York, next to Governor Al. Smith, is the most prominent living incarnation of the venal class corruption of that agency of the House of Morgan. He is ignorant as an Esquimaux, with the elegance and tastes of a Fiji islander, an apostle of the superstition of ultramontanism.

In the primary campaign against Hylan, the Hearst newspapers proved Walker to be a grafter, proved that while on the pure food committee of the state senate he, as a lawyer, defended the interests of the packing house trust in their efforts to sell rotten meat to the inhabitants of New York.

For 16 years Walker has been a Tammany member of the state legislature, during which time he shared in all the jackpots of political blackmail dispensed by that organization. He spends his time in New York among the bright lights of the roaring forties, wears a green striped suit, a purple waistcoat, and like Al. Smith, a brown derby—reminiscent of the stage costumes of Lew Dockstader, the late minstrel show end-man. His raiment depicts his arrested mentality. He is the author of an atrocious jumble of noise that passed for a popular song entitled "Will You Love Me in December As You Do in May," besides being a semi-professional baseball player. An intellectual blank he can be depended upon to unhesitatingly do the bidding of Tammany and the House of Morgan.

The deluded workers who voted for him will find his police force using their clubs, machine guns, tear bombs, and tanks against them in case they strive to better their condition thru strikes. In case that is not sufficient the Tammany governor of the state who helped elect Walker, will aid him with militia and state cossacks.

To attempt to compare the working class candidate, Gitlow, who headed the Workers (Communist) Party ticket with this clown and mountebank would be odious. Gitlow is in every respect the opposite of Walker, just as the party he represented in the campaign is the opposite of the democratic party.

"See America First"

Readers of the capitalist press are frequently regaled with heart-rendering accounts in "news" from Riga, Stockholm, Helsingfors or Berlin, of the alleged corruption of some minor officials in Soviet Russia, such "news" usually failing to note that the offenders have been summarily shot, or, if it relates this certain finale of those who think they can steal from the commonwealth of the Russian workers and peasants, the tale is told in such way as to solicit pity for the apprehended grafter.

This rather contradictory viewpoint of holding up the exceptional corrupt Soviet official as the rule, and asking tears for them when caught and executed could be a subject for capitalist press ethics in itself. But we would like to see what sort of a comparison the picture of corruption of authority in the United States would show. Happily, a few news items in the capitalist press, printed in one issue of one paper, the Chicago Tribune, may furnish such a picture.

First, an item telling of the testimony of Brigadier General Andrews, assistant secretary of the treasury in charge of the enforcement of prohibition, testifying before the ways and means committee of the house of representatives at Washington, says that no less than 10,000,000 gallons of whiskey in bonded warehouses has "evaporated."

Second, a dispatch from St. Louis, saying that Internal Revenue Collector A. J. Hellmich has resigned following his indictment with 38 others, for a plot to withdraw $1,800,000 worth of Jack Daniels whiskey. Others included in the list are deputies, ex-Congressman Essen, a G. O. P. leader, state senators, a circuit court clerk, etc.

Third, an attorney for beer-running gunmen on trial for murder in Chicago, states he is ready to prove by witnesses and documents, that 300 Chicago policemen were on the pay of the big dealers in moonshine known as the Genna brothers.

Fourth, the former mayor of Gary, Indiana, Roswell Johnson, arriving on his return from the Atlanta penitentiary, from which he was paroled after serving only six months of his year and a half sentence for graft and bootlegging, was given a public ovation, one ovator being the present mayor. Only two of the 75 indicted with Johnson are in prison.

Somewhere, we heard a saying about people who live in glass houses.

The Trial of the Grand Goblin

The trial of the former grand goblin, imperial hell-roarer, or whatever euphemism these creatures may designate for themselves, now going on at Noblesville, Indiana, is illuminating inasmuch as it exposes the loathsome character of the leaders of the ku klux klan.

Evidence has been produced at the trial proving that the grand goblin and two associates, also members of the klan, ravished Miss Oberholtzer, then satisfied their sadistic desires by fiendishly beating her until her body was a mass of bruises, driving her to attempt suicide rather than endure further torture, and finally caused her death. The details leading up to the tragedy have never been surpassed even in the putrid pages of the novels of the Marquis de Sade, from whose name is derived the word sadism.

Not the least offensive part of the trial is the gusto with which the yokel morons from the countryside flock to the court room and openly express sympathy with the monsters on trial.

This aggregation of hooded scoundrels boasts that it protects womanhood—they should add: from everyone except themselves. Like the biblical heroes of old they protect them only that they themselves may have them to satisfy their inordinate lust.

Regardless of the outcome of the trial the evidence already at hand is sufficient to prove that organization and its leaders deserving of nothing but the treatment accorded rattlesnakes and hyenas.

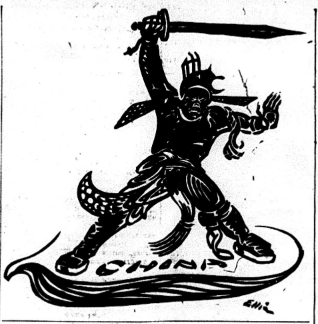
The Chinese Customs Conference - -

By James H. Dolsen



THE long-delayed international conference on Chinese customs is at last being held at Peking, tho at the date of this writing (October 30) it is uncertain if it will continue for any time. Whether it accomplishes much or not an analysis of the circumstances under which it has been convened and of the conflicting national interests involved will be very helpful for the light which it can throw on affairs in the Far East. China is one of the storm centers of world imperialism and consequently its struggle for national independence must have the support of class-conscious workers everywhere. That struggle is taking place now about the conference table where the cunning diplomats of the great powers are playing for the tremendous stakes of empire in the Orient.

The Washington agreements in 1922 provided for subsequent conferences of representatives of the signatory powers to arrange for increasing the maritime customs rates of China and for investigating the advisability of measures leading to the abolition of extra-territoriality, i. e., the privileged status of foreigners. The first named gathering was to be held within three months from the ratification of the Washington treaties and it was contemplated it would take place not long after the Washington conference itself.

FRANCE, however, refused to approve unless China would agree to resume payments of the Boxer indemnities due her in gold francs. The Chinese held out for payment in the paper franc which the French government issued to its own people as good legal currency. Of course the diplomats did not thus link the two matters but their connection was quite apparent from the fact that after waiting more than two years the French senate suddenly ratified the Washington treaty last July just after China had yielded to the demand for gold franc remittances.

The object of granting the increases in the Chinese maritime customs, according to the deliberations at Washington, was to enable the central government at Peking to secure a revenue sufficient to enable it to function effectively and maintain its authority thruout the country, and to arrange, in addition, for the abolition of the "likin," a tax levied at arbitrary and varying rates by the provincial governors.

Importance of the Customs Control.

THE Chinese, of course, want to have the foreign control of the customs abolished entirely and their first demand has been for this. The supervision of their tariff dates back to the treaties of the first half of the last century between Great Britain in particular and China. These agreements limited the maximum duty which China could impose on either imports or exports at 5 percent. The basic valuation on which this percentage applies was set in 1846 and has been changed only twice since then,—in 1902 and 1918. The rate has never been altered.

Altho the great powers unequivocally guaranteed the independence of their nation in 1922 and the open door policy is based on that assumption, China cannot alter either the basic valuations or this 5 per cent rate without the consent of everyone of the nations with which it has concluded commercial treaties, numbering some sixteen at the present time. Naturally each of these countries is opposed to having the duties increased on the goods which it exports to China or on the materials which it imports from China. As the respective interests of the powers are in vital conflict at many points it is evident there is little likelihood of any considerable concessions to China unless the general situation compels such action.

THERE is a very important internal reform which the Chinese can offer in return for concessions on the control of the tariff. This is the abolition of the "likin," a tax laid by the provincial authorities on goods in transit from one province to another and sometimes from places even entirely within the same province. The tax varies greatly in different districts and is arbitrarily determined by the governor quite independent of the central government. Its imposition is a fruitful source of income for the expenses of the tuchuns (military governors) in maintaining large mercenary armies which enable them to carry on private wars for their own aggrandizement.

The abolition of this duty would enormously facilitate the transaction of business in the interior of the country, even if it were not accompanied by the grant to foreigners of the right to trade outside the treaty ports, to which they are at present restricted. As a matter of fact, the removal of the tax will become increasingly necessary from the standpoint of the Chinese themselves if they are to achieve a real national unity. Their industries cannot prosper so long as these interruptions exist to the logical channels of commerce. The growth of capitalism will burst asunder all such fetters on the productive energy of the nation, just as the commercial class after our own revolutionary war found the restrictive tendencies of the various loosely federated colonies a bar to economic progress and set in action forces which destroyed local prerogatives in favor of a strong central government.

Great Britain Once Willing.

GREAT BRITAIN, in the Mackay treaty of 1902, agreed to an increase of the Chinese customs duties by 2½%, with a surtax of 5% provided the likin were abolished. This would make the maximum tax 12½% in place of the present 5%. Subsequent Chinese treaties with the United States and Japan ratified this arrangement but it has never been put into effect because of the requirement for approval by all the treaty powers.

Whether the likin can be abolished at this time by any central government in China seems questionable, at least unless some other source of revenue is devised by which the surrendered income is restored to the provincial governors in some other form. If the conference resolves itself into a bargaining battle, then doubtless the Chinese will demand a foreign loan sufficient to compensate the tuchuns liberally for their loss of this taxing privileged until its equivalent can be paid to them out of the increased general customs.

It is when a concrete situation is presented, like that emboded in the calling of such a conference, that the real basis for international policies is most clearly discernable.

Why was it that the foreign offices of the nations involved vacillated in their attitude almost from day to day? Of course the unexpectedly violent crisis precipitated by the incidents at Shanghai had much to do with these hesitations. A much greater reason, however, was the complicated balance of national interests in the Orient and the extremely unstable condition of world capitalism in general.

Offensive to England.

IT is hardly doubtful that the first suggestion for the holding of such a conference was very offensive to most of the powers, and to Great Britain in particular. The original suggestion by the United States had linked the matter of the customs with that of extra-territoriality. It was China which decided for a separate consideration of the two questions.

As this division was not made until some time after the entire matter had been broached to the powers the first reactions emphasized that aspect of the proposal which the respective nations found most objectionable. Thus Great Britain openly stated that she had nothing to gain from a conference on extra-territoriality. "At this time," declared Austen chamberlain, minister of foreign affairs, "our commercial interests in the Orient, and particularly China, are too vital to permit the Chinese government and courts jurisdiction over British subjects and property."

The hasty ratification of the Washington treaty by France seemed to indicate that she favored the proposed conference. Shortly after the confirmation, however, high officials of that nation asserted it was "not the right time for such a conference." On July 22, Japan notified the state department of her approval, contrary to the general impression that she would be strongly opposed.

Another "Investigation."

THE frankly expressed antagonism to the American "feeler" led the authorities at Washington to tone down their proposition considerably. It was officially announced that the idea so far as the question of extra-territoriality was involved meant merely the setting up of an "investigating" committee to "consider" and "report later" whether this privilege should be "abolished" and to "study" means for its "general elimination." Whenever the ruling class desires to postpone action it resorts to "investigation," particularly the American ruling class which is an expert in thus dodging decisions.

Soviet Russia Excluded.

IT is significant that the Soviet Union, the boundaries of which adjoin those of China for thousands of miles, was invited neither to the Washington conference nor its successor at Peking. Still Russia, of necessity, is vitally concerned in all the conclusions which may be reached.

The capitalist nations are in a peculiar quandary so far as the Soviet Union is concerned. Any decisions they may arrive at will not be binding without Russia's participation and would be in large part nullified by her refusal to accept. On the other hand, if Russia should ask for admittance to the conference the other powers would find it difficult to bar her. The Chinese would be for her entrance as she would be certain to support them against Western imperialism. With their influence in China rapidly waning, the United States and Great Britain would think twice before further angering the Chinese by a summary rejection of the Soviet Union's application. On the whole, Russia may decide to remain outside, for she knows that in this position she is no-wise bound while able to accord China practically as much support as if she sat at the conference table. However the Chinese delegates as a whole may dislike the application of Communist theories to their country, they realize that without the aid of the Soviet Union they would be largely helpless in the present international situation.

That the foreign diplomats will seek further to isolate Russia by making apparently important concessions to China is evident. Here, however, they have the extremely difficult problem of reconciling their own grasping ambitions in the Orient as well as providing for the exceedingly complex reaction of settlements reached there with the struggle for world-domination in Europe and Africa. They must also exercise much caution lest the whole gathering blow up by a too summary treatment of the Chinese before they have been able to achieve some degree of concerted action in the Far East.

THE Chinese have not forgotten that the promises made to them at the Washington conference have not yet been carried out. Great Britain had agreed to restore the leased territory of Weihaiwei and France had stated her willingness "in principle" to restore Kwangchowwan to China upon Japan's return of Kiachow. Tho the Japanese restored that port in January, 1923, neither France nor England have so far done anything to make their word good.

WHAT THE BRITISH LABOR WOMEN'S DELEGATION SAW IN SOVIET RUSSIA; INTERESTING REPORT ON FAMILY LIFE and political—with men. This is still further emphasized by the laws on marriage, divorce, children, etc."

In view of the present efforts of Russian delegations to place orders for machinery in Britain, the remark made by Moscow printing workers is significant.

"In conversation with the workers," say the delegates, "we were told that English machines were preferred to American, but that on account of the English firms refusing to give credit while Germany and America are offering long credit, orders for machinery are going to those countries."

Inevitably, the report covers ground which is already explored by the report of last year's trade union delegation, but its examination from the women's point of view produces a surprising amount of new facts.

Close Scrutiny.

The delegation was very searching in its scrutiny of factory conditions, as the following extract will show:

"We then went in to see the workers (in a privately owned factory) and here we met with a striking illustration of the fact that it is really the workers who are the governing class in the Soviet Union today. We had previously told the trade union official who accompanied us that when we interviewed the workers we should prefer the owner not to be present, just as we often intimated to a trade union official accompanying us that we wanted to speak to the working men or women entirely in private (and there was never any objection to that, the official herself often suggesting that course.)

"When in each case we went into the workroom the owner invariably accompanied us, but the trade union official every time told the employer politely, but quite plainly, that we did not require his presence, as we desired to interview the workers entirely in private. In every case, the owner, altho he evidently did not altogether like it, bowed to the inevitable and with a 'Very well,' left us. . .

Better Off Now.

"Questioned as to the conditions now in comparison with pre-revolutionary days, they (the workers) said there was no comparison, not only did they appreciate their political liberation, but they said that materially they were also now better off. For instance, they no longer had to do night work, and they seemed to appreciate particularly their summer holiday with pay.

"We asked them also what their employers were like, and in every case we found that the present-day employers behaved pretty well to the workers, and we heard no complaints against them."

The delegates took the opportunity for as much direct converse as possible with people whom they casually met, and one of the most interesting features of the report is their reproduction. Thus we have the following dialogue between a delegate and a peasant woman—the latter, of course, answering the questions.

"Would you like the czar and his government to come back?"

"Oh, no!"

"Why not?"

"Well, we have more land than we used to have, and they might take it away from us."

A young peasant women carrying a baby replied as to a question regarding conditions in Soviet Russia: "We have to work very hard, but things are improving."

"Are the peasants of your village content with the Soviet government?"

"On the whole, yes; altho they grumble at the hard times."

"What about the women in your village; do they take an interest in the government?"

"Some do; but a lot do not."

"Why don't they?"

"They are not used to it, and in some cases their menfolk discourage it; in others they have no time."

The conversations with workmen are also very interesting. The following took place at a salt mine in the Donetz basin:

"What are your conditions of life like at present?"

"Very bad still."

"As bad as they were a year or two ago?"

"Oh, no, they are better than that."

Czarists Not Wanted.

"Would you like the czarist government back?"

"Oh, no, no. There is no question of that. Of course, we would not tolerate the czarist government."

"Would you prefer the menshevik government to the Soviet government?"

"Certainly not; there is no question of our wanting a government other than the Soviet government."

"Are you member of the Communist Party?"

"No."

Textile workers who have to put up with the discomforts of many English mills will appreciate the following general remarks about the Soviet mills.

"The guarding of machinery in some cases was more advanced than in England.

"The ventilation in some mills was very good, in others, not so good, altho humidifiers were working almost everywhere.

"In all cases we found that the first consideration was the health and comfort of the worker.

"The rooms were well lighted. In one instance, where looms stood in the center of a room (not a shed) electric lights were hung low, so that each weaver could see very well to draw her ends. The work, on the whole, seemed very good."

CANADIAN ELECTION RETURNS INDICATE DEFEAT OF LIBERALS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

OTTAWA, Nov. 4.—The government of Premier MacKenzie King will remain in office until defeated in the couse of commons.

This decision has been reached following a cabinet meeting and conference between the premier and the governor general.

It is now clear that even counting upon the doubtful constituencies, which have not returned their election results, that there is no chance of the government securing the necessary 123 seats for a majority.

The cabinet will meet tomorrow and it is expected that after the session an official announcement on the policy of the King government will be made.

COA[illegible] MINERS GET LOW WAGES

CAPITALIST GOVERNMENT'S COAL COMMISSION PROVES ANTHRACITE OPERATORS MISREPRESENT WAGES

The following is the fourth article of a series upon conditions of the 158,000 anthracite miners now striking for a ten per cent wage raise, the check off and other demands. Alex Reid, head of the Progressive Miners' Committee, was recently released from the Scranton, Pa., jail where he was sentenced by a venal judge aided by the reactionary union officials.

• • • •

By ALEX REID

(Secretary Progressive Miners' Committee).

A veritable flood of propaganda is being circulated thruout the country by the anthracite mine owners, in an attempt to misinform the public of the wages and working conditions of the hard coal miners. By a clever manipulation of figures the coal companies' statisticians are attempting to show the miners are a well paid group. Their favorite method of falsifying is by using percentage of wage increases instead of actual money paid.

The miners' wages are cut very often thru no fault of their own, by being prevented from work by falls of roof, accidents, bad air, gas, lack of material, lack of cars, bad working conditions and injuries. The United States coal commission has the following to say on this question as a result of their recent investigation:

"Loss of time involving a depreciated annual income. A considerable number of miners lose some time during the year thru illness, accidents, shut downs, bad condition of working places or other causes beyond their control. Frequently when a contract miner finishes his working place, it may be some time before he secures another place to work.

"To give the earnings, therefore, of only those who work for the full year would eliminate all loss of earnings which were beyonl the mine workers' control, would reflect only the cream of the earnings and would give only an exaggerated idea of the earnings of the miners under actual conditions of everyday life."

When we consider the fact that there are over one hundred different classifications in and around the anthracite mines, and each classification is paid a different rate of wages, it will be readily seen how difficult it is to arrive at a scientific basis for estimating the earnings of the miners. We must deal with the average earnings of the mine workers to understand their conditions.

The coal commission reports that four-fifths of the contract miners worked less than 260 days during the year investigated, and that two-fifths of them worked less than 190 days, because of the conditions I have already mentioned, and over which the miners have no control. In the two largest anthracite districts the commission found the contract and consideration miners were earning less than $1,600 per year gross, and this is a sample of the conditions thruout the hard coal field.

Highest Skilled Only $1700 Gross.

On the whole the commission found the "highest skilled of all anthracite

A. C. W. A., LOCAL 39, TO RESIST WAGE SLASHING

Demands Joint Board Fight Bosses

At the last meeting of Local No. 39, Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, the following resolution instructing the delegates of the union to the Chicago joint board to resist any attempts on the part of the bosses to raise the volume of production and lower the wages of the clothing workers in the negotiations now being carried on:

"In view of the fact that a number of the Chicago manufacturers have called upon the representatives of our organizations to meet them for the purpose to reduce the cost of the garment, and

"In view of the fact that our experiences with the manufacturers for the last year, have taught us, that the 'promises of a bigger volume of work,' if readjustments and reconstructions will be made, didn't materialize, and

"In view of the fact that we are again faced with the same conditions as stated above; therefore, be it

"RESOLVED, That we, Local 39, of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America hereby at this meeting instruct our delegates to the joint board to bring the following for its approval:

"That in the negotiations with the manufacturers our representatives shall not grant anything that will tend to lower our standards;

"That we hereby resolve to protect the interests of our members with all our power, and we further

"RESOLVE, That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to our national president, Sidney Hillman, as our unanimous expression to guard ourselves against lowering of our standards."

Defiant Syrian Nationalist Leader Proclaims Republic

BULLETIN.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt., Nov. 5.—Two American destroyers, the Lamson and the Coghlan, with full crews, are rushing from this city to Beirut, as dispatches tell of the consolidation of the rebel forces in Syria and the proclaiming of a republic with a unified army to drive out the French ravagers.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DAMASCUS, Syria, Nov. 5.—Confidential reports reaching this city of desolation have aroused hope in the breasts of these elements fighting against imperialist aggression. Reports from Homs are to the effect that the numerous groups that arose in spontaneous revolt when the storming of Damascus became known are now consolidated under one head with one general staff and that henceforth the struggle against the scourge of France will be carried out with war-like precision.

Hasis L. Bakri, former leader of the nationalist "people's party," whose house was burned in the storming of Damascus, and who has been influential the past week in bringing many Druse tribesmen under his leadership, has been chosen as military leader of the bands operating between Damascus and Homs, and has proclaimed a republic.

He is the provisional president of the republic, and will insist upon the mandate commission of the league of nations recognizing him as the spokesman. Thus is the challenge of the national liberation movement hurled directly at Europe.

French occupation of Syria is based upon the authority of a mandate imposed by the treaty of Versailles. The nationalists hold that this mandate has been violated by the aggression of the French and the habit of French military officers engaging in business ventures to plunder the nation.

The one demand upon which all elements unite is: "smash the mandate." If the mandate is revoked it means evacuation of the occupied territory. If not the gauntlet is thrown down to France and it means war to the limit of human endurance.

SCAB COAL TO GET U. S. HELP BY LOW RATES

More Than One Way to Break Anthracite

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—Another move has been made by the Coolidge administration, thru the interstate commerce commission, to break the United Mine Workers of America.

The commission has issued two orders for the reopening of hearings on freight rate reductions between the coal markets in New York and other Atlantic seaboard cities and the Virginia and West Virginia fields where anthracite and semi-anthracite coal is produced.

The Virginia anthracite lands have been little developed, and their owners have claimed that the reason for this fact is found in excessive freight rates to New York.

It is the purpose of the commission to see whether it cannot lower the freight rates from this Virginia anthracite field, thereby weakening the position of the anthracite strikers in Pennsylvania.

By proposing a lower joint railroad rate from the Kanawha, Coal River, New River, Tug River and Pocahontas fields in West Virginia, the commission will give a new advantage to non-union coal in its competition with union-mined coal in the eastern markets.

SOME STATISTICS ON CHICAGO BANKS THAT JOBLESS MAY STUDY

More than $400,000,000 would be required to finance the purchase of stocks and bonds owned by Chicago banks. Ten banks of Chicago alone possess $364,000,000 worth of these securities. In 1900, $37,000,000 would have sufficed to accomplish the same purpose. This is an increase of 1,000% in stock and bond investments.

Twenty years ago Chicago had but 30 banks, now there are 205.

The combined resources of the Chicago banks in 1900 was $446,000,000. Today, it is approximately $3,000,000,000. This an increase of 700% in resources.

These are some facts published in a report showing the growth of Chicago business by the Chicago association of commerce commemorating its twenty-first anniversary, that jobless workers can ponder over when they walk the streets searching for work to earn the next day's meal.

WHEELER ASKS DISMISSAL OF INDICTMENT

Holds Campbell Fee Was Legal

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—Senator Burton K. Wheeler, vice-presidnetial candidate on the LaFollette ticket last year, today asked the supreme court of the District of Columbia to dismiss the indictment against him charging conspiracy to defraud the government in sceuring oil and gas land permits in Montana.

Indicted with Wheeler were Edwin S. Booth, formerly solicitor of the interior department, and Gordon Campbell, Montana oil operator.

His acquittal in Montana last April of charges of misusing his senatorial office to gain favors at the interior for Campbell was sufficient ground for the court to throw out the present case, Wheeler said. He demanded

PURCELL ROUSES KANSAS CITY TRADE UNIONISTS IN MESSAGE OF WORLD TRADE UNION UNITY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 5.—Albert A. Purcell, president of the Amsterdam International Federation of Trade Union, ex-chairman of the British Trade Union Congress and leader of the movement for world trade union unity, opened up his American tour at Kansas City last night in a speech at the Labor Temple, before an enthusiastic audience of over a thousand trade unionists.

Labor must forge its own means of freedom, he said, and the humblest worker is important. The Versailles treaty has sliced in two the former great national unions by dividing up nations. Today the workers of Italy and other countries, who formerly came as immigrants to the United States, but are now barred by the immigration law, are spreading over Europe. Great changes are in process.

Solidarity Must Be International

In Great Britain there is a united front in the labor unions and a labor party, but while all this solidarity within the nation exists, still there are 1,500,000 unemployed, and among them 250,000 of the best skilled men of Europe.

India, once Great Britain's big purchaser, now gets machines run by women and children on a fourteen hour day for a few pennies wages. China has machines, too, and there are 260 cotton mills in China. Other "backward" nations are becoming no longer "backward." All affect Britain, Japan, Germany and the United States where the cotton mills cannot withstand the competition. Mining is in a similar fix. In the mines of India,

MIKHAIL FRUNZE NOW LIES UNDER KREMLIN WALLS

Soviet War Head Rests Near Lenin

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Nov. 5.—The body of the late Soviet war minister, Mikhail Frunze, has been laid at rest next to that of late Soviet premier, Ilyitch Lenin. As Frunze's body was borne in a coffin draped with the Red Flag of Soviet Russia to its final resting place in the tomb of the Red Square before the Kremlin, thousands of Russian workers [illegible] in hand and tears in their eyes watched the procession.

Fifty hours before the body of Mikhail Frunze was laid at rest, peasants and workers and Red Army soldiers began to gather in the Red Square to pay their respects to the leader of the world's invincible Red Army. Over 250,000 passed by the bier and took their last look at Mikhail Frunze.

Twenty thousand soldiers of the Moscow garrison, with detachments from the Caucasus, the Ukraine and other parts of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics stood rigidy at attention for many hours as their final tribute to their dead comrade.

"The Communist Party mourns the loss of a most loyal and devoted member; the Soviet government mourns the loss of a daring and efficient servant, the Red Army mourns the loss of a fearless and popular chief," declared I. Stalin to the assembled throng.

Stalin was followed by Gregory Zinoviev and other leaders of the Communist Party and the Red Army, who showed the devotion of Frunze to the cause of the working-class and told of how he had died of overwork trying to better the condition of the workers in Soviet Russia and called upon the assembled Russian workers and peasants to emulate the example of Mikhail Frunze.

Following the speeches a small group of Soviet leaders bore the coffin to its grave under the wall of the Kremlin while the cannon in the fortress boomed a hundred-fold salute.

TWO MEETINGS FOR PURCELL TO BE HELD TONIGHT IN CHICAGO

Purcell will speak to the trade unionists of Chicago tonight in two separate halls. The first meeting will be held at 7:45 p. m. sharp at the Wicker Park Hall, 2040 West North Avenue, with Morton L. Johnson of the Electrical Workers acting as chairman.

The second meeting will be held at 9 p. m. sharp, at the North Side Turner Hall, 826 North Clark street, with Louis Look, president of the Machinists' District Council, as chairman.

The trade union committee arranging the Purcell tour asks all to note the hour of the two meetings tonight and be prompt in attendance to allow the famous visitor to begin and end his speeches on schedule.

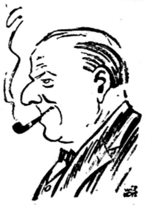
Purcell Writes on World Trade Union Unity

By ALBERT A. PURCELL.

THE question of the unity of national federations within one international labor federation constitutes a most highly interesting problem for our consideration. One must, however, only consider it from one particular point of view, which could indicate the surest, and hence the shortest way to its realization. In the first place we must admit that all parties have committed a great number of errors and that hardly anyone can be freed from this reproach.

But to investigate exactly to what extent the one party or the other is deserving of reproach would be a useless waste of valuable time and energy. Therefore we can disregard the past, as well as the question of apportioning blame, and once and for all give up indulging in mutual recriminations.

Seeks Labor Unity



ALBERT A. PURCELL.

We have already lost too much time with such things, which has not helped to narrow down our differences but on the contrary had widened them. Personal differences have often created friction which could easily have been removed if both sides had not proclaimed them from the house tops.

A FURTHER hindrance has been the following: Many comrades have proclaimed in the loudest manner the necessity of declaring that only an energetic attack upon capitalism can lead to the broad highway of the solidarity of the working class: the other side has regarded this as something superfluous, urging that such a declaration has been repeated a hundred times in the course of the last twenty years, etc.

Whatever the case may be, and apart from the question what sacrifices it may require, the cause of international unity is of such enormous importance, that not a single person, not a single nation can consider themselves as too big to remain outside the great international family. In the same way as the national trade union federations allow a place in their midst for every member, regardless as to how far he may differ from the point of view of the leadership, the international must also serve all national organizations as a powerful instrument, strong enuf to lift the whole working class out of the slough of capitalism; an aim in order to achieve which it is absolutely necessary to make use of every means.

But if there exists a capitalist slough there also exists a slough of the international trade union movement.

SO far as I am aware the national organizations which we have in mind are permeated by the infinite desire to work for the overthrow of capitalism. Our chief difficulty now consists in finding out methods. It is this which has roused a great storm. But a storm always arises when different points of view clash with one another. Our chief task at present is to unite the divided heads of the international labor movement.

Neither the International Federation of Trade Unions nor the Red International of Labor Unions can be in any way satisfied with the situation at present obtaining; neither the one nor the other can say that they really comprise the working class of the whole world—and this expression is to be understood in the actual sense of the word.

But if this is the case there naturally arises a simple proposal, and I believe that if the general council of the British trade unions were requested to take over the task of uniting in the near future, the divided European labor movement, my colleagues would regard this as a request to perform a useful service in the interest of solidarity, and I am convinced that it will certainly be possible to obtain their consent to this.

But if we are contemplating a meeting of this sort, then I believe that the past must be regarded as dead and buried, and that the only

PSYCHOLOGICAL SUICIDE TO BE KLAN DEFENSE

Teeth Marks Were an Attitude of Mind

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NOBLESVILLE, Ind., Nov. 5.—The defense here in the trial of D. C. Stephenson, ku klux klan dragon who organized that order in both Indiana and Ohio, and his two companions, Earl Gentry and Earl Klinick, on trial for the murder of Madge Oberholtzer, is to be that the girl died of "psychological suicide."

The mass of sores and bruises inflicted upon her body by the trio which became infected had nothing to do with her death. The reason she died is because she wanted to. Had she desired to live the prurient infection resulting in gangrene could have been eliminated by the simple exercise of mind over matter.

Teeth Marks Psychological

The marks left upon various parts of her body by Stephenson's teeth were there because of the attitude of mind of Miss Oberholtzer. If her physiology had been different the teeth would have left no marks.

This sort of defense is relied upon to release Stephenson and his depraved associates in one of the most repulsive crimes in the annals of this country.

As Usual the Worker and Not the Company Gets Blame for Wreck

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5—Responsibility for the collission of two electric interurbans on the East St. Louis and Suburban railway at Grandy, Illinois, on July 7 was placed today upon Motorman Miller and Conductor Smith by the interstate commerce commission. British in Palestine Reinforced.

LONDON, Nov. 5—Tho aware of the seriousness of the situation in Syria, the foreign office stated today that no information has been received, indicating that there need be no apprehension regarding the British position in Palestine.

Tho reports have stated that Syrian rebels are within two miles of the Palestine boundaries the foreign office stated that the British troops in Palestine are sufficient to deal with any emergency.

PRIESTS WILL NOT HAVE TO MARRY TO HEAR CONFESSIONS

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 5.—The government has issued a manifesto declaring that the action of the governor of Tabasco, ordering that the priests of the church must marry, was in violation of the constitution and a restriction "of their personal liberty." The manifesto directs the governor to withdraw his order forbidding unmarried priests to conduct services in the churches.

A number of priests fled Tobasco when the governor announced that the priests must marry if they wanted to preach and listen to the con-"fessions" of the gentler sex.

mine workers averaged 248 days per year and made, $1700 gross for the year," which in no way compensates for the risks, the hazards or the responsibilities of their employment.

From these earnings found by the commission must be deducted the expenses of the miners for marching and the many supplies that they must have to enable them to dig the coal, such as drills, and jack hammers, etc., etc., the cost of which is well over two hundred dollars per year. When we deduct this amount form the highest skilled and highest paid workers it leaves them with less than $1400 per year; but the wage of the average mine worker is a great deal less and far below the average standard of living.

In referring to the miners' laborers the coal commission said, "Their families have a very uncertain and inadequate income. They are frequently in economic distress."

That statement was made by John Hays Hammond, chairman of the coal commission, a commission that spent $600,000 of government money. Hammond, the other day, suggested that the Pennsylvania mine certificate law be repealed, that scabs may be brot into the anthracite region to break the strike. John H. Hammond, the South African mining engineer, would not hestitate to reduce the anthracite miners to the level of the coolie slave labor of the mines in South Africa.

As an indication of the terrible working conditions in the pits we need only glance at the labor turnover. The workers are continuously changing jobs in the forlorn hope of bettering their unbearable conditions. In some instances the labor turnover reaches as high as 416 per cent.

Amazing Labor Turnover.

The turnover in the Lehigh district ran from 55 per cent to 416 per cent; in the Wyoming district from 100 per cent to 225 per cent; in the Schuykill district from 115 per cent to 194 per cent. Anyone with any experience in mining will realize the terrible conditions that exist in a mine to cause such a labor turnover.

The conditions of the inside day men with those of the day men working on top are of anything worse than the contract and consideration miners in many respects. Their wages average from $4.62 to $5.96 per day flat rates.

The coal commission says that, "any outside men who are earning $1600 per year are working as many or more days than there are in the calendar year, thru overtime, work at night, or ninety-five days more than the industry averaged as found in the commission's investigation."

The foregoing facts as supplied by the official coal commission, squelches the lying statements of the hard coal barons and shows their propaganda now permeating the anthracite region and the rest of the country to be intentionally erroneous and misleading.

The workers will not be mislead by such propaganda, and such statements can only more firmly bind together the miners of the anthracite region with the soft coal miners and the workers of the other industries.

Tomorrow's article will deal with the social conditions of the anthracite miners).

ANITA WHITNEY SENDS DONATION TO INTERNATIONAL LABOR DEFENSE TO FIGHT AGAINST SYNDICALISM LAWS

(I. L. D. News Service)

Charlotte Anita Whitney, who was sentenced to serve from one to fourteen years imprisonment for alleged violation of the California syndicalist law and who is about to begin serving sentence as a result of the refusal of the United States supreme court to accept jurisdiction on her appeal, sent a contribution to the International Labor Defense to aid in the defense of persecuted workers.

Tho prominent socially in California and numbering among her personal friends men and women of influence in bourgeois circles, Miss Whitney refuses to take advantage of her position to secure relief from the sentence imposed upon her, while hundreds of workers are still tasting the bitterness of prison life.

Referring to Governor Richardson's refusal to pardon Tom Mooney, the I. W. W., and other innocent inmates of California's dungeons Miss Whitney said:

"He has had a long time to pardon the others, the poor men without influence, who are in San Quentin prison on the same charges that I am found guilty of.

"If the governor wants to show that he is a true representative of the people, that he intends to stand for the principle of liberty upon which this country was founded, then let him release those men from prison and not concern himself only with a woman who has the thousands of influential friends that I have."

No sonner had the news of the action of the United States supreme court reached the public than thousands of messages of encouragement from all over the country poured in to Miss Whitney's home. Scores of women called in person and hardly a minute passed without the arrival of flowers.

The International Labor Defense is conducting a campaign for the release of Miss Whitney and the other victims of the California syndicalism law.

"The Movement for World Trade Union Unity"

By TOM BELL.

World Trade Union Unity is one of the burning problems of the world labor movement today.

British and Russian labor are holding conferences; A. A. Purcell, a leading advocate of world labor unity, is touring the United States in its interests; official bodies of labor are sending delegations to Soviet Russia; steps for unity are being taken by the International Federation of Trade Unions and the Red International of Labor Unions.

It is at this time that the basis for unity, steps already taken, the outlook for the future—are all brought to the attention of American workers in this timely series of articles. Look for this series in future issues of The DAILY WORKER.

formidable forces in the present conflict under Rama Danibu Shallash, and also the bands of Druses, who in addition to the main body under chiefs of tribes were scattered thru all the armed groups above mentioned.

Recruits from Arabia are streaming into Syria to aid in the defense of the country against the French.

French Steal Arms

Wholesale pillaging of the villages between Damascus and Homs is being carried on by the French. Every hut within their reach is being searched, the arms and other useful articles confiscated and whole families murdered in cold blood.

Damascus itself is under a pall, the former historic Street Called Straight, resounds only to the tread of soldiery and the rumble of tanks and artillery; gone are the crowded bazaars and the fascinating scenes that made this street world-famous.

Maurading bands of French soldiery are ripping down walls and blasting their way into the ruins seeking whatever of value they can confiscate, without hindrance from the military authorities. Valuables are taken from the dead bodies of their victims. They do not even stop to remove rings from swollen fingers, but cut them off and rings and human flesh go into their sacks that they carry with them, later to be assorted when they return to their quarters with the rewards of the plundering expeditions.

Arouse the World

The true facts of the atrocities are being heralded to the world by every means available and is producing the desired results in spite of the terror and censorship. Couriers from Damascus, Homs and Beirut have been dispatched to every part of the Mohammedan world to arouse the masses against imperialism in all its forms and, disastrous as have been the effects of French occupation here, it is felt that no sacrifice is too great if only the millions under domination of the imperialist nations can be broght into battle to overthrow the European and American yoke.

question which has to be considered and solved is the question of the present and future organizing of the international working class of Europe. To speak and to judge of other matters would be a huge mistake. It will be the duty of everyone taking part in such a conference not to rake up questions regarding the dead and regrettable past, but to go there with the sole purpose of leading the great working class movement out of the wilderness.

I may be asked: Why only the European organizations? Because this is the most important thing, the rest will follow. In addition to this other organizations will soon understand that their affiliation is also desirable.

I, THEREFORE, appeal to all to all to enter into this campaign for a real anti-capitalist and genuine proletarian class international, in the spirit of the sincere desire for brotherhood and unity. If everybody follows this course, then we shall succeed. We are able to do innumerable things. We can arouse and fill with joy the hearts of millions of fellow-workers who are hopefully awaiting a real inspiring leadership, which there is no doubt a strong, united, all-embracing federation can give them.

This would mean a blow at the very heart of international capitalism, and this alone justifies such an attempt.

Forms Chain Stores

The Sears-Roebuck mail order concern with offices at Chicago is going into the chain store business. It recently opened two more retail stores in Chicago. It now maintains three stores in Chicago and one in Philadelphia, Dallas, Tex., Kansas City, Seattle and Evansville, Wash. This company is noted for the low wages it pays its employes.

World Basis of Bolshevik Revolution

THE Union of Soviet Republics is increasing in strength both within and without. It is not only the government of the Russian proletariat; the international significance of the Russian revolution created a government which has its basis in the proletariat of the whole world. This is the basis for the irreconcilable hate of capitalists and imperialists.—Manifesto of the Communist International.

FASCISM AGAIN ON RAMPAGE TO CRUSH CRITICS

Alleged Plot Excuse for New Terror

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Italy, Nov. 5.—One of the most savage conspiracies ever concocted by the bandit hordes of Mussolini came to light here today with wholesale attacks upon the political enemies of the butcher when new offensives were launched under pretext of reprisals for an alleged attempt on his life.

The anti-masonic outbreaks in Florence were eclipsed today when a sweeping order was issued commanding prefects to take charge of every masonic lodge in Italy, confiscate regalia, records, and arrest the officers.

Socialist Arrested.

Former socialist deputy, Zaniboni, has been arrested charged with aiding in the plot against Mussolini. General Capello, a war veteran and leader of the masons has also been placed under arrest charged with the same crime.

The socialist unitarian party has been ordered dissolved and raids were conducted against it thruout the day, accompanied by bestial beatings and other torture methods used by the fascists. This is a further attempt of Mussolini to crush the petty bourgeois elements organized around the masons of Italy.

This savagery has long been practiced against the Communists, but no complaints were then made by the socialists. Now, however, the drive has expanded and all elements not subservient to the dictator are being ruthlessly exterminated.

Insubordination Is One Reason Given for Ousting 13 Teachers

A significant factor in Superintendent William McAndrew's recent recommendation for the dismissal of 13 teachers from the Chicago public schools is the charge of insubordination given as one of the reasons for their dismissal. Added to that is the fact that all ratings are secret.

The teachers have registered their protest against the secret ratings system by coming before the board once more with the appeal that "under this system hundreds of teachers have been rated poor who would otherwise be rated fair" because under the system the teacher can be given any mark that suits the examiner and others who wish to get rid of her.

In connection with these dismissals a fight has arisen between the board of education and McAndrews over the reappointment of William H. Campbell to the board of examiners. McAndrew sponsors Campbell and charges politics are back of the attacks upon the examiner. The reasons advanced by the board are that he is over the age limit for service which is 70 years and that he is impolite in carrying out his duties.

Roumanian Peasantry May Get a Chance to Eat What They Raise

BUCHAREST, Nov. 5—The Rumanian grain export market is in a demoralized state, and grain dealers say this is due to the persistence of Russian grain offers in the European markets at low prices. It is stated that the shipment of barley from Russian ports last week exceeded 100,000 tons. With winter about to close the Danube river for shipping, Rumanian exporters are abandoning hope for any improvement in the grain export situation this year.

Coolidge Is Scheming to Bring Regularity into the Republican Party's Ranks

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, President Coolidge sits in the white house at Washington planning his message to the congress that convenes early next month; the congress that was elected a year ago in November, 1924, but has not yet been in session for a single day.

It is written in the law of the land that new congresses must cool off for 13 months after election before getting down to work. During that time European governments come and go. For instance, the present congress was elected during an era of "democratic pacifism" in Europe, with MacDonald, the labor premier of England, and Herriot, the "radical socialist" at the head of the French government. Since then the tories have come into governmental control in London, and Herriot is out and Painleve in for the second time in Paris.

• • • •

Altho there has been no change in the government at Washington, except for the replacement of a few members of the cabinet, and the death of some members of congress, like LaFollette in Wisconsin, nevertheless, it seems that Coolidge feels the temper of the masses is not the same that it was when they rolled up a landslide vote in his favor last year.

This is indicated to some extent by his calling Senator Borah, of Idaho, head of the important senate foreign relations committee, into conference on both international and domestic matters. Coolidge has been trounced by the senate too often not to realize the necessity of having the Idaho senator on his side, if possible.

• • • •

Since Borah is from the west, he must necessarily put up some sort of a fight for the farmers, especially for the irrigation farmers of his own and neighboring states. Borah denounces Secretary of Agriculture Work's "hard-boiled" policy on the vast reclamation projects in the west. Coolidge sustains Work. Borah declares the Work policy is destined to bring financial ruin on thousands of hard-pressed settlers, unable to make the payments demanded by the government. Considerable discontent has resulted. Borah might be used as a fig leaf by Coolidge to cover up in part the republican administration as a bitter enemy of the farmers. Coolidge realizes this.

• • • •

Borah is also a bridge between the Coolidge administration and Soviet recognition. Coolidge, like Harding before him, has been the political mouthpiece of American capitalism's attack on the Union of Soviet Republics. Borah has always been in favor of recognizing the workers' and peasants' government. When the developing forces become powerful enough to push Washington into recognition of Moscow, Coolidge may well say that he did not reverse the recognized republican policy, but that he merely surrendered to the senate's spokesman on foreign relations.

• • • •

Energetic efforts are also being made to win Robert LaFollette, Jr., successor to his father, for the Coolidge regime. This is not impossible. Some concessions can easily be made. The reward for the Coolidge-Butler-Mellon outfit will be the opportunity to claim that this shows its friendly attitude toward labor.

• • • •

Coolidge's message to congress can therefore be depended on to be a campaign document for the 1926 congressional elections, not a statement of the real position of this strikebreaking government. Glib words and high-sounding phrases will appear as bait for unsuspecting and unthinking workers and farmers, whose votes are needed.

Labor, in the cities and on the land, must realize that the Coolidge administration has not changed. Concessions to Borah, LaFollette, Jr., and others, do not change by an iota the anti-labor character of the big business government. It is merely an old-fashioned method of bringing these wavering elements into line. Republican regularity for 1926 is the goal sought.

• • • •

Let the workers struggle for the same regularity in their own ranks organized into a labor party that will present a class front to the capitalist class forces now entrenched in power in Washington. Every move of the Coolidge administration, when interpreted correctly, is an argument for independent political action on the part of labor.

BABIES SOLD TO "CHILDLESS" WIVES FOR $25 AND $35 EACH

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Nov. 5.—Charges that babies were sold at prices ranging from $25 to $35 each, to women, desirous of offspring, but denied them by nature, were being probed by the Hamilton county grand jury, following disclosures made in a divorce suit filed by Thomas Brummer Samuels, railroad employe, against his wife, Mrs. Helen Samuels, who is alleged to have purchased three babies from an unnamed woman, residing in Covington, Ky., just across the Ohio river from here.

Indictments are expected this week.

The woman, according to Samuels, maintained offices where women made their purchases of young babies, which were delivered "as the grocery boy brings around a dozen of eggs."

Samuels, according to his wife, wanted a large family. When she found that this was not to be, she got in touch with the "baby woman." For this she paid, $25, he declared, and awaiting a time when his duties on the railroad took him from home, arranged to have it delivered. A telegram was sent him announcing the "birth."

For a time, Samuels said, he was unsuspicious, but finally questioned his wife. She, he declared, broke down and confessed the hoax.

Wreck All Capitalist Expectations

ALL capitalist expectations have been wrecked upon the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. The proletarian dictatorship is embracing ever-widening sections of the working people. The conditions of living of the Russian proletariat are visibly improving. Slowly but steadily wages are increasing. The Soviet government is able to satisfy to an ever increasing extent the cultural requirements of the working class.—Manifesto of the Communist International.

POLICE TERRORIZE MANY IN CHASE TO 'GET' DURKIN

Frantic Search Keeps Workers in Fear

The police hunt for Martin Durkin, slayer of the red-baiting prohibition "enforcement" officer Shanahan and another Chicago policeman who tried to "get" him, has not succeeded in finding Durkin, but has succeeded in terrorizing and victimising many innocent workers.

Search 65 Apartments.

One hundred and twenty policemen, armed with shotguns and tear bombs surrounded the apartment building at 6415 Harper avenue, when someone had told them that Durkin's sweetheart, Betty Andrews, had lived there at one time, and kept the inhabitants of the house in a state of fear for a number of hours until the police had searched every room of the 65 apartments in the building in the hope of locating Durkin. They walked around thru the rooms with drawn guns, waking those who had gone to bed early and putting them thru the inconvenience of having their flats mauled and searched by a group of "fearless" coppers.

These coppers came near to killing one of their own number who in his eagerness to "get" Durkin, had climbed onto the roof of one of the houses near the apartment building.

Not only are apartment houses raided, but a squad of police with drawn guns arrived at the Wilson avenue station of the North Shore Electric in the search for Durkin.

Whitewash Detective Chief.

Chief of Detectives Shoemaker has been whitewashed of any blame for failure to "get" Durkin the night they had him cornered, and when Durkin was able to escape after shooting one policeman, and the police had shot their own "stool."

Senator Wheeler Asks Dismissal of Oil Indictment

freedom from trial on charges of which he has already been held not guilty by a jury.

The crime of which he was freed in Montana and the crime alleged in the conspiracy indictment "are one and the same," and the transactions held to be illegal in each are identical, said Wheeler's demurrer, filed by his counsel, Senator Thomas J. Walsh, democrat, of Montana.

Aside from the plea of former acquittal, Wheeler attacked the indictment itself, charging a number of alleged irregularities.

Wheeler contends that he never appeared for Gordon Campbell in any matter before the interior department, but that his services for Campbell were for legal work in Montana alone.

Enemy of Labor.

While Wheeler will likely succeed in evading the trial his connection with the oil operator should be remembered by the workers who were into supporting the LaFollette ticket last year. Wheeler is a valuable servant of capitalism, even as an insurgent, and the fact that he is connected in any way with Gordon Campbell proves his subserviency to the predatory interests, whether it constitutes a crime in bourgeois courts or not.

Instead of trying to send him to jail the large capitalist parties ought to give Wheeler the highest reward for joining in the LaFollette campaign to throttle the rising demand for a labor party in the last election.

LAME DUCK IS LOBBYIST FOR MILLIONAIRES

Mondell Adviser to Cal Coolidge

By LAURENCE TODD,
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON—Frank W. Mondell of Wyoming, former old guard machine boss in the house, defeated in the race for the senate against Kendrick and then consoled by appointment to the war finance commission until he launched upon a career as lobbyist and adviser to big corporations at the national capital, has appeared in the tax legislation fight.

He has sent to all press correspondents three speeches which he has delivered in defense of the Coolidge-Mellon tax-shifting plans. One is entitled "National Tax Reform and Reduction," and it was delivered April 15 last before the Louisiana Bankers' association, at New Orleans. The next was called "Federal Tax Policies and 0heir Effect on the West," delivered June 17 at the South Dakota Bankers' association convention at Brooikngs. The third was entitled "Federal Tax Reform," and was heard by the Hamilton Club of Chicago on June 15.

Make Little Fellow Pay.

The substance of Mondell's program of tax-shifting from the big and strong to the little and patient shoulders is set forth in resolutions adopted by the Louisiana bankers after he spoke. They denounced the federal income tax rates as excessive, favored maximum surtax rates of "less than 25 per cent," demanded abolition of the federal inheritance tax, call upon democrats in congress to deal with taxation as a nonpartisan question, and call for repeat of the publicity clause in the income tax law.

Enemy of Labor.

Mondell was known in Washington for many years as an active agent of every interest opposed to the farmers and to organized labor. He was retired from congress on his record. He was for tha treason taken up by Coolidge. He can now be seen, often enuf, in the entrance lobby of the White House offices, conducting various "substantial" individuals into the presence of Coolidge. He offers advice to Coolidge, and his clients seem to find satisfaction in the fact that he puts away coat and hat and looks quite at home when he gets to the White House. Now that congress is about to take up tax legislation he is busier and more patronizing in manner than ever.

Praises Large Fortunes.

His clients who now print and circulate his tax-shifting arguments are assured of his loyalty by this typical paragraph in his talk to the Hamilton Club: "I know of no excuse that can be offered for the present federal state tax, except the possible one of socialism, and I agree with President Coolidge that governments should not seek social legislation in the guise of taxation, and that large fortunes properly managed are not necessarily a menace to our institutions."

Preliminary exchanges of views among the progressives in congress who will follow the lead of Senator Norris indicate that the administration tax scheme will be fought every inch of the way. The progressives will insist on publicity of income tax returns, retention of the federal estates (inheritance) tax, and reduction of the income tax on smaller incomes before reduction is made on the larger incomes.

men, women and children are working, often as long as 36 hours at a stretch. Children are born in the mines.

All Workers Must Unite

Often among the unorganized it is said, "Why bother about the trade unions?" But they have brought to labor the gains it has made. The sixty-hour week of the British miners has been cut to forty-two. But now the competition of Asia compels the British workers to seek unity with all workers. No matter what one may think about Soviet Russia, it has 6,000,000 organized unionists, working out problems that will help other workers solve theirs.

Each people must be allowed to work out their own destiny. Hands off Russia, and England and America, too, when the masses of people are making their government to their own liking. But we must achieve labor unity, unity. Labor must set foot everywhere capitalist sets foot and bring into one great international all labor led by the unions of the world.

Not Afraid of Russians

Purcell told of the horrible conditions that existed in Baku, Russian Caucasus, before the revolution and the wonderful change made by the workers' government with the backing of the Russian unions. The representatives of each nation's unions would do more in five minutes to abolish war, end the opium trafic, etc., than all the capitalist conferences ever organized.

Russian unions must be represented. We need them, they need us. We must help workers' Russia with machines. They will help us with food. We need not fear the Russians, they would have only two representatives to our eighteen. Even if they would eat sixteen of us we would still have as many as they.

All Cards on the Table

We call for world unity of all unions—all cards on the table. We want to have American unions in. We want to say to the capitalists of the world, "If you want war go fight it yourself." Here the audience rose spontaneously and burst into cheers.

The workers bear the cost, they give their lives and everything to war. No matter how we get the change—just so we get it. The great fact stands out that Russia can no more be used to raise armies to fight the battles of imperialism. There has been a big to do about Russia killing the poor czar. Well, England has killed kings and queens. England has made the most savage of wars, but the war waged by labor is always humane.

The workers of the world hold the future in their hands. They may make great things of the world, a world of plenty and security for those who create the wealth of the world, but there must be world trade union unity to get them.

Events Move Faster and Faster

Events are moving faster and faster to compel the workers of the world to set foot on the pathway that leads to power. We must be prepared. The battlers that have gone before have suffered and are suffering. Capitalists have filled the jails of the nations they rule with thousands of leaders of the trade unions. One nation alone has 9,000 in prison. We must get power to fight this thing to the death. We must get power to approach the master with terms by throwing the whole weight of one great world organization of unions into the balance in all nations on the side of the workers and their emancipation.

As Purcell closed three rousing cheers, led by Alex Howat, militant miners' leader, fairly rocked the building.

CLEVELAND WORKERS WAGE FIGHT AGAINST POLICE PERSECUTION

CLEVELAND, Nov. 4.—The Workers Party of Cleveland is now engaged in a free speech fight, fighting the efforts of the local police department to bar Workers Party literature and speakers from the streets of Cleveland.

On last Friday night, Witt, the independent, was holding a meeting at the public theater. Comrades Herbert Benjamin, Sadie Amter and Marian Gordon were distributing the election leaflets issued by the district committee of the Workers Party. They were warned by the cop that this was against the law. Retiring to the corner, where they saw persons distributing leaflets of other parties, they continued to distribute the Workers Party leaflets and were immediately arrested.

Police Molest Protest Meeting.

On Saturday, the Workers Party held a protest meeting at public square against the threatened execution of Rakosi and the other Hungarian comrades. Comrade I. Amter, the district secretary spoke for more than an hour, while the policeman and a captain listened. They moved up to the stand, but did not interfere. The captain then crossed the street with a plainclothesman. Shortly afterwards, Comrade Benjamin took the stand and was criticizing Secretary of State Kellogg for refusing to admit even an alleged Red, Countess Karolyi, when he was dragged from the platform by the captain and taken to the station.

He was charged with disorderly conduct and held under $1,000 bail. The police stated that the reason they arrested him was to protect him from the ku kluxers. They tried to trump up a case of criminal syndicalism—but even that seemed too much for them, for shortly afterwards they offered him his release provided he would sign a waiver.

It is a clear sign that the police intend to deny the Workers Party the right of free speech in Cleveland. The Workers Party has decided to fight back. The district committee has sent a letter to the city manager and safety director asking whether the Workers Party is to have the same rights as the other parties or not. It has asked whether the Workers Party is to have the right of free speech or not. The letter states that "either this right obtains or we have been shorn of the democracy that is supposed to prevail. . . This is a vital question not only for the Workers Party, but for the organized workers of this city. For we are conscious that when members of the Workers Party are harassed and attacked, this generally precedes an attack on the organized workers of the country."

Protest Meeting Arranged.

The International Labor Defense, which is conducting the defense of Comrade Benjamin, has arranged a mass protest meeting together with the Workers Party at public square on Saturday, November 6, at 4 p. m.

REACTION TRYING TO SEIZE CANTON WHIPT BY THE KUOMINTANG

HONGKONG, Nov. 5.—Cantonese forces under Chang Kai-shek have captured Swataw and the followers of Chen Chiung-ming have retreated into Fukien and Kiagsi provinces. Opposition on other fronts apparently has collapsed leaving the Canton forces in control of the province of Kwangtung.

FORD'S CANDIDATE WINS IN DETROIT WITH LABOR AID

DETROIT, Nov. 5.—Mayor John W. Smith, supported by the Henry Ford-Detroit Federation of Labor united front won the election yesterday by a very narrow margin over his opponent, Charles Bowles.

Bowles was supported by the ku klux klan, and altho defeated, nine of the klan candidates for the city council were elected.

Considerable disturbance and a spectacular auto parade by klansmen wound up the campaign.

The political labor fakers expect to get in on the spoils and some of them expect to be protected in their bootlegging activities because of their betrayal of the workers of Detroit in lining up behind Henry Ford's candidate.

State Opens Trial of Dr. Sweet and 10 Co-Defendants

DETROIT, Mich., Nov.—The state of Michigan has begun to present its witnesses against Dr. O. H. Sweet and 10 co-defendants in the hope of convicting' them for the murder of a white hoodlum that was in a mob that threatened the lives of the Negroes that had come to visit Dr. Sweet.

Clarence Darrow and Arthur Garfield Hays are defending the Negroes in their fight to live wherever they please with no interference on the part of klansmen.

Hi Johnson Says He Will Fight for U. S. Minimum Wage Law

PHOENIX, Arix., Nov. 5.— Senator Hiram Johnson of California will introduce in congress a resolution providing for an amendment to the constitution giving states power to enact laws governing minimum wages for women. He so announced when he arrived here with the senate subcommittee on irrigation and reclamation.

The supreme court recently held the Arizona minimum wage law for women unconstitutional.

GREEK FUR WORKERS WIN STRIKE IN UNION ORGANIZATION DRIVE

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 5.—The Greek fur workers, hitherto unorganized, but lately brought into the Furriers' Union with the aid of the left wing joint board headed by Ben Gold, have won a complete victory after several days of spirited strike. The bosses' association have granted all demands and only a few small shops remain to settle. The triumphant strikers are parading the streets with bands playing and banners flying on the way back to the shops.

LAW ENFORCERS PASSING BUCK IN GRAFT QUIZ

Busy Dodging "Payroll" Expose

Since the charge made by Attorney O'Donnell that 300 of the Chicago policemen were on the Genna payroll, in the trial of the Genna gunmen, Albert Alselmi and John Scalisi, State's Attorney Robert Crowe and United States Attorney Edwin A. Olson have been passing the buck back and forth as to whose duty it is to get the Genna "payroll" and prosecute the offenders for conspiring to violate the prohibition law.

United States Attorney Olson refuses to handle the case until after the state's attorney his been given "ample" time to act upon it.

State's Attorney Crowe refuses to handle the case claiming that the United States attorney must first take action in this case as it concerns a violation of the feedral law.

The various heads of the police department are still threatening a shakeup of the police force, but they will not do so at the present moment, "as it may endanger the state's cases" against the two gunmen.

It has become known that the day that the Genna gang and the police shot it out, that a number of police broke into the Italian-American Social Club headquarters, 1023 West Taylor street, in an attempt to seize the Genna "payroll" records fearing that an exposure would result.

"King Benjamin" Can Safely Return to House of David

BENTON HARBOR, Mich., Nov. 5—"King Benjamin" Purnell, for two years a fugitive from the House of David colony, which he organized here more than 20 years ago, may return without danger of arrest now.

It was learned that suits for $100,000 each filed against him by Ruth Bamford Reed and Gladys Rubel as an outgrowth of the expose of the House of David in 1922, have been dismissed. The suits were based on alleged improper relations which the sisters claimed Purnell had forced on them.

Gives 28 Per Cent Wage Raise as Best Way to Stop Strike

VIENNA, Austria, Nov. 5.—The threatened strike of 90,000 government employes has been averted by a salary increase of 28 per cent.

Jury Hard to Pick.

Holdup victims are so plentiful in Chicago that fifteen of the first sixteen veniremen questioned in an effort to get a jury to try Henry J. Fernekes, "midget bandit," on a charge of murder were disqualified.

Fernekes, accused of many robberies and two murders in the East, was brot back for trial from Joliet prison where he is serving a 1 to 14 years for a bank holdup.

His alleged victim was Michael Swinatowski, cashier of a building and loan association, slain by bandits as he took several thousand dollars to a bank.

RECOGNITION OF SOVIET RUSSIA WILL BE DEMAND OF NEW YORK MEETING

NEW YORK, Nov. 5—"The United States must recognize Soviet Russia." That is the growing determination of ever greater masses of the American workers. The new plot against Soviet Russia, hatched at Locarno, in which an attempt is made to unite France, Germany, England, the United States, and other similar powers in a common drive for the overthrow of the Russian workers' republic, has only intensified this determination on the part of the American workers that their government shall recognize and open the fullest and freest trade relations with Soviet Russia.

This answer will be the central feature of country-wide demonstrations on the occasion of the eighth anniversary of the November, 1917, Russian revolution. The workers of New York City will pladge their solidarity for the defence of Soviet Russia and make their demand for Russian recognition at two great mass meeting in Central Opera House, 205 East 67 St., New York City, and in Grand Assembly Hall, 318 Grand St., Brooklyn, N. Y., both on Nov. 6, at 8 p. m.

RUSSIAN SCIENTISTS WILL LEAVE FOR AFRICA TO CARRY ON STUDIES

MOSCOW, Nov. 5.—Hopeful of proving the theory of evolution in the wilds of Africa by cross-breeding man with the higher apes, by artificial means, Dr. I. I. Ivanoff, member of the Russian Academy of Sciences and world famous biologist, will leave for Africa the end of this month.

Dr. Ivanoff's expedition is being backed by the Russian Academy of Sciences and the Pasteur Institute is giving him the use of its experimental station in Port Konakry, French Guinea.

"We will start our experiments by crossing chimpanzees with gorillas, by artificial means, and we may alse cross gibbons with chimpanzees and gorillas."

To Crossbreed Apes.

"In the actual experiments of cross-breeding man and the higher apes, we expect to use representatives of the most primitive African tribe, and chimpanzees which are the most man-like of the apes.

"The experiment will be expensive because the higher apes do not multiply in captivity, and it is necessary to take an extensive staff, with expensive equipment to tehir homes. The Pasteur Institute experimental station in French Guinea is ideally located for the work. It is in the midst of vast forests abounding in man-like apes."

Dr. Ivanoff said that if the experiments gave positive results, the expedition might remain many years in the Pasteur station, repeating and extending the work until complete proof had been obtained of the relationship of man to lower forms of animal life.

Two Killed and Four Hurt in DuPont Blast

TACOMA, Wash., Nov. 5.—Two men were killed and four more were injured when the dynamite cartridge house at the Dupont Powder Works exploded Wednesday.

AMERICAN AMBASSADOR TO "VISIT" AIRPLANE SQUADRON IN RIFF WAR

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5. — The state department at Washington expressed "surprise," when asked as to the purpose of the trip to be made by the American ambassador, Moore, to "visit" the American air squadron fighting on the side of the French against the Riffians, and tried to make it appear as tho they knew nothing of the matter.

A number of weeks ago, the state department, after many protests against the participation of the American aviators in the Riff war, in a half-hearted note notified the American air squadron that they were violating American law by attacking a friendly people. The state department has done nothing to force the aviators out of Morocco.

FILIPINOS DEMAND REFERENDUM DECIDE INDEPENDENCE ISSUE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MANILA, Nov. 5—A national plebiscite to decide; whether the Filipino's wish independnce or not will be held early next year, if Governor General Leonard Wood does not veto it, according to the leaders of the majority delegation in the Philippine legislature.

A bill is now being prepared which will be presented to this session of the legislature which adjourns Nov. 9, providing for a referendum on the question.

Passaic Mill Workers Organizing the Fight Against the Wage Cut

PASSAIC, Nov. 5.—The mill owners are planning a new attack against the weavers. The Battoney just had a wage cut of 10 per cent and it is the question of a short time when it will be followed in the other mills. In case the weavers do not organize, they will suffer a wage cut and starvation they never had before.

The united front committee of the textile workers which consists of the delegates from different unions locals and textile mills, have put is aas their task, the organization of the weavers in order to resist the attacks of the mill owners in an organized manner.

A meeting was held at Passaic last Friday in which about eight hundred workers participated. Other mass meetings are going to be held, one for each nationality in order to explain their situation to them. At every meeting we are going to have an English speaker.

All meetings are held at Hoffman's Hall, 27 Dayton Ave., and they begin at 7:30 p. m.

Workers, organize and fight for a 44-hour week, for 10 per cent raise and for the recognition of the union. Line up behind the united front committee of the textile workers.

Headquarters open for registration every night at 25 Dayton Ave.

When that argument begins at lunch time in your shop tomorrow—show them what the DAILY WORKER says about it.

BANKERS TAKE STEPS TO FORM CONSTABULARY

Guardsmen to Be Used Against Strikers

KEWANEE, Ill., Nov. 5.—The first step towards the establishing of a state constabulary, which can be used by manufacturers and bankers to break strikes, was started here under the guise of protecting Henry county against bank robberies and holdups.

Sixty guardsmen, members of the National Rifle Association, were sworn in as special deputies in Henry county by Sheriff George P. Brown and equipped with sawed-off shotguns, army rifles and revolvers.

As organized labor has so far successfully opposed the creation of a state constabulary in Illinois this method is now being adopted of bringing to life that pet of the bankers and manufacturers' associations.

New York Y. W. L. to Protest Legion Week of Fake "Education"

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 5.— On Sunday, November 15, at 1 p. m., Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East 4th street, a mass meeting against "Education" week will be held by the Young Workers' League of District No. 2.

The American Education Week is set aside by the bourgeoisie for the purpose of "educating" the children young workers and the working class as a whole towards patriotism to the capitalist class and also to keep them from struggling against capitalist exploitation.

The Young Workers' (Communist) League is calling upon the masses of the young workers to join in the struggle against American "Education" week and all that it represents. The struggle against the American "Education" Week is a struggle in the defense of the workers' interests. Every worker and young worker who understands the interests of his class and has them at heart should come to demonstrate his protest at the mass meeting, Sunday, November 15, at 1 p. m., Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East 4th street. Pat Toohey, a young miner who was recently released from jail where he served a sentence because of his activities in behalf of the striking miners.

Area Branch One of Y. W. L. Meets Sunday

Area Branch No. 1, of the Young Workers' League of Chicago, announces that there will be an important business meeting at 19 South Lincoln street, 10 a. m., Sunday morning.

The Great Leader of the Revolution

Books by — Books About

V. I. ULIANOV
LENIN

STATE AND REVOLUTION

One of the most widely known of the works of Lenin. Written just before the Bolshevik revolution, it is a Marxian analysis of the capitalist state "the armed protector of Capitalism", and a lesson in the revolutionary necessity of the establishment of the workers' state, "the Dictatorship of the Proletariat", during the period of transition from Capitalism to Communism. State and Revolution is the final refutation of the nonsense spread by right socialists, anarchists, pacifists and syndicalists regarding the state. The book contains some of the most important Communist theory which must be read and understood by every Communist.

96 pages 25 Cents.

PROLETARIAN REVOLUTION or KAUTSKY THE RENGADE

Lenin led the fight of the revolutionist against the reformists and diluters of Marxism for 20 years. In this book he delivers a permanently annihilating attack on Kautsky the chief theoretician of the Mensheviks. Communists would do well to read and reread this all too little known book.

THE INFANTILE SICKNESS, or "LEFTISM" IN COMMUNISM

In all young revolutionary movements there develops an exaggerated tendency toward the "left" — a systematic opposition to participation in reactionary trade unions, and a wish to remain "pure" in the face of necessary and advantageous compromises. Lenin completely unmasks the hollowness of the ultra-left phrases, shatters their positions and leaves a ringing and crystal declaration of the true political line of Communism. A classic of Communist literature.

LENIN, THE GREAT STRATEGIST
By A. Losovsky.

A portrayal of Lenin in action as a Marxist, logician, revolutionary stategist and proletarian statesman.

THE THEORY AND PRACTICE OF LENINISM.
By I. Stalin.

An important work on Communist theory and practice during the period that Lenin lived and led —the period of Capitalist Imperialism. Written by a close co-worwer of Lenin—the present Secretary of the Russian Communist Party.

IMPERIALISM, THE FINAL STAGE OF CAPITALISM. By Nicolai Lenin

One of Lenin's monumental contributions to political economy. It is this final stage of capitalism, that finds its expression in a world struggle for the monopolistic control of markets, to capitalist imperialism, which brought about the world war and which must inevitably bring further wars until capitalism has been dethroned and the working class has estabilshed itself as the ruling power.

IRISH WORKERS HAVE NO JOBS AND NO HOMES

Strikes Increase Under So-called "Free State"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

QUEENSTOWN, Ireland, Nov. 5.—The unemployment crisis, coupled with the severe housing problem which are now raging in the British Isles, are particularly acute in Ireland under the capitalist Free State government.

Strikes are increasing thruout the country, and the government while it issues resolutions urging "co-operation," has followed the lead of the Baldwin government and definitely made it known that if necessary, it will act as a strikebreaking agency.

New Dail Will Show Up Lies.

In a short time from now the Dail will be sitting, and the workers, especially in southern Ireland, will find that the rosy promises of "prosperity" made when the present government, the servant of British capitalism, was formed, have materialized into universal unemployment, abject poverty and downright starvation.

It is now admitted that never since 1847 have the workers and peasants of Ireland undergone such distress, not only in Cork, but in the country towns, notably those that during the British regime were made into military encampments, and which are now practically derelict.

When the Free State was formed, it was promised that industries would start, that there would be employment and a "living wage" for all, and that taxes would be slashed.

Just the reverse is now the case. The Dail has not even seen fit to supply the unemployment dole to the thousands of jobless and needy workers. The British government has added to the misery by cutting the small old age pension by a shilling a week.

Added to this, the cost of living has increased. In Cork, where the employers are circulating talk of another general rdeuction in wages, the prices have increased in some cases fifty per cent. For example, potatoes are now sold for 1s 2d per weight, altho they are purchased by the speculators for less than 5d per weight. Milk is 2s per gallon, altho the small farmers are forced to sell it for 1s 6d at the most.

A British ex-soldier, now residing in Cork declares, "Tuberculosis still scourges 'Dear Old Cork.' Treatment is most essential in some cases. Nevertheless concessions by the government are withheld from many. Immediate treatment is the only prospect of recovery. I am awaiting institutional treatment, and hoping that those who are responsible will procure my admittance."

Family Lives in Stable.

There are numerous evidences of the acute housing problem. The last session of the Cork county council was forced to consider the case of Mrs. K. Neligan Morrissy, a widow supporting eleven children and living in a stable. P. H. Barry of the board of health said it might be cheaper to rent a house for her than to send her and her children to the workhouse. This woman continues to reside in her stable at Doneraile, and has declared that she will die on the roadside rather than receive charity from the Free State.

Conditions in Ireland are but a sharp reflection of conditions prevailing in England, which have been given wider publicity. Just as Premier Baldwin mutters about "discussing the housing problem with the house of lords," while thousands of unemployed face eviction in overcrowded slums, so does the Dail do nothing but pass resolutions of "sympathy." Just as the British home secretary, Joynson-Hicks, declare that his government will "protect the community," by doing the work of strikers, so does the Free State government intimidate the Flax Spinning and Weaving company employes at Cork who are threatened with starvation because they resisted wage cuts.

GREEK MILITARY DICTATORSHIP ANNULS ELECTION OF COMMUNIST MAYORS OF XANTHI AND SALONIKI

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ATHENS, Nov. 5.—The two Communists elected as mayors of Xanthi and Saloniki will not be allowed to serve as mayors. The Greek Pangalos government has annulled the election of these two Communists "for the safety of the state."

CARPENTERS' WAGES GO UP, SAYS U. S. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR, BUT FOR HOW LONG IT DOESN'T SAY

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Union carpenters have continued to advance the general level of wages during 1925 altho their gains have not been so numerous as those recorded by the bricklayers and electrical workers, according to the report on the U. S. department of labor on union wages and hours. In seven of thirty-eight cities covered by the report union rates for carpenters were higher on May 1, 1925, than in 1924. In two cities there were decreases. The average rose from $1.056 per hour in 1924 to $1.071 in 1925, a gain of less than 1½%.

But How Long Will It Last?

Extending the comparison back to 1920 we find 21 of the 38 cities reporting increases while six cities show declines in minimum wages paid union carpenters. The average of the 38 cities rose from 97.6c. in 1920 to $1.071 in 1925, a gain of 9.3%. As the cost of living has fallen over 15% in the same period, the last 5 years have witnessed material improvement in the living standards of union carpenters.

The 44-hour prevails except in Cincinnati where they work 44½ hours and in Richmond where the regular week is 47 hours. In 1920 union carpenters worked longer hours in Charleston, S. C., Cincinnati, Indianapolis, New Orleans and Richmond. Since 1913 14 cities have been brought into the 44-hour column.

St. Louis at Top

St. Louis tops the list in carpenter wages with a minimum of $1.50 an hour. Pittsburgh follows with $1.37½. The rate in St. Louis is a gain of 50% over 1920 and of 140% over 1913. In Pittsburgh the gains have amounted to 53% and 150% respectively. Union carpenters have the lowest scale in Charleston with a rate of 70 cents, which means a reduction of 12½ per cent from 1920.

Minimum hourly rates for union carpenters in 18 leading cities in 1913, 1920 and 1925 were:

Carpenter pay per hr.	1913	1920	1925
Baltimore	$0.438	$0.90	$1.00
Boston	.50	1.00	1.10
Chicago	.65	1.25	1.25
Cleveland	.50	1.25	1.25
Denver	.60	1.125	1.125
Detroit	.50	1.00	1.15
Indianapolis	.50	1.00	1.10
Kansas City	.55	1.00	1.125
Los Angeles	.50	.875	1.00
New Orleans	.40	.75	.90
New York	.625	1.125	1.313
Omaha	.50	1.125	1.00
Philadelphia	.50	1.125	1.125
Pittsburgh	.55	.90	1.375
St. Louis	.625	1.00	1.50
San Francisco	.625	1.063	1.044
Seattle	.563	1.00	1.00
Washington	.500	.95	1.125

Cities in which union carpenters have secured increases since 1924 are Baltimore, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Memphis, Newark, Providence and Seattle. Decreases were reported from Charleston and Los Angeles.

South Has Poor Showing.

Cities in which union carpenters fall materially short of the average include Atlanta, Birmingham, Charleston, Jacksonville, Little Rock, New Orleans and Richmond, all in the south. In these cities the minimum hourly rate is 90 cents or less. Taking the 38 cities as a group the average for 1925 represents a gain of 107 per cent over 1913.

PURCELL SPEAKS IN CLEVELAND ON TUESDAY, NOV. 10

World Trade Unity Is Subject of Meeting

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 5.—Arthur A. Purcell will be in Cleveland on Tuesday, Nov. 10. Brother Purcell is promised a fine reception,since the Cleveland Federation of Labor is sponsoring his meeting which will be held at the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers Auditorium, St. Clair and Ontario.

Brother Purcell comes to Cleveland as the president of the Amsterdam International of Trade Unions, an organization of 27,000,000 organized workers. Purcell is also member of the British parliament, and the message he brings to the American workers on the question of world trade union unity is so important that no worker of Cleveland should fail to attend the meeting.

In addition the the endorsement of the Cleveland Federation of Labor, a number of unions individually are supporting the meeting through a conference, so that one can say that practically the entire organized labor movement of Cleveland is back of it.

The admission is 25c —a fee that allows every worker to be present and hear this brilliant speaker. No workers interested in the progress of the organized labor movement should fail to be there.

FIFTY WORKERS ESCAPE DOOM AS HOTEL COLLAPSES

Bosses Tried to Rush Construction

Fifty building trades workers narrowly escaped with their lives when five floors of the John Evans Hotel, now under construction at Hinman Avenue and Davis Street, Evanston, collapsed and fell to the ground a mass of twisted girders and shattered concrete. In an attempt to hurry the construction of the hotel so that it could be paying the proprietor profits as soon as possible the supports holding up the building were taken out before the concrete pillars that were to hold the building were dry enough to stand the strain.

As the men were working on the upper floors they noticed the floors sag. They dropped their tools and got down to the street as fast as they could. Shortly after the last building trades worker had reached the ground, one of tthe walls gave in and fell to the ground with a deafening roar. Those living at the North Shore Hotel ran to the street fearing that one of the walls might fall across the alley and onto the east wall of the hotel.

When that argument begins at lunch time in your shop tomorrow—show them what the DAILY WORKER says about it.

BOSTON RAISES $250 AT FIRST RESCUE PARTY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 5.—The first of a series of DAILY WORKER rescue parties was held here this week at the Dudley St. Opera House, with a good program of music and dancing and a playlet by the Young Workers League.

Comrade John J. Ballam, in an appeal for The DAILY WORKER, told the story of the first DAILY WORKER campaign and how our paper is part of the American working class.

"If a dear friend were dying," said Ballam, "and your contribution of a few dollars would help to save his life, would you hesitate? The DAILY WORKER represents our movement, it is the collective organizer and agitator for our party; it is the organ of the militant trade unionists; it is the bearer of the Communist message.

"Without The DAILY WORKER, our movement would languish. Let us save it for as we build The DAILY WORKER,—we build our party. Our Workers Party is the instrument thru which the workers will accomplish their revolution and The DAILY WORKER is our party's voice. Come to its rescue!"

The rescue party raised $250 in cash and $50 in pledges.

The Russian, Armenian, Jewish and other branches are also arranging rescue parties.

A Correction.

Editor, DAILY WORKER—In my article there is a serious mistake. The article is entitled "What Will We Gain from Reorganization?"

In column four, line 20, there is an ommission which makes me look like a philosophical anarchist. The sentence should read: "The Communist movement arising out of the real struggles of the workers in the period of imperialism, has made it clear that the culmination of the class struggle will not be"—and then should follow the clauses "thru the casting of votes, but thru sterner measures—thru turning the tables against the oppressors."—Israel Amter.

SECTION 5, CHICAGO, REORGANIZES INTO 3 INTERNATIONAL BRANCHES

By MARTIN ABERN.

At the Section No. 5 membership meeting, Workers (Communist) Party, Local Chicago, held on Thursday, October 29, three street nuclei of eleven, twelve and seventeen members respectively were organized.

Seventy-one members appeared at the meeting from the branches in this area, 29 of these were found to be both working and living in other sections and are being assigned accordingly.

Section No. 5 on the North Side is for the most part a residential area which accounts mainly for the fact that shop nuclei were not formed as yet.

Among the 29 members who are being assigned to units in other sections, there are many who work in large factories where it is known that there are other party members. These will be formed into shop nuclei.

As fast as possible, the members among the three street nuclei formed at the section meeting will be attached later to shop units.

In street nucleus 1, are to be found the following classification: blacksmith helper, teacher, carpenter, cab driver, sign painter, furrier, mechanic, drugless physician, saleswoman, store cashier, car inspector, party worker and four housewives and one comrade at present unemployed.

In Many Industries.

Street Nucleus No. 2 contains the following: Two laborers, iron worker, dressmaker, blacksmith, two carpenters, (unemployed); housewife, party worker, painter, (unemployed); printing ink worker.

Street Nucleus No. 3 contains: clothing worker, (unemployed); cabinet maker, university student, three carpenters, one of who mis unemployed; rigger, custodian, journeyman tailor, (unemployed); bookkeeper, housewife and a painter.

Those who will be assigned to other shop or street nuclei in other sections had the following occupations: Three machinists, janitor, three party workers, two stenographers, two journeymen tailors, tailor, two clerks, pharmacist, three housewives, two unemployed, student, sheet metal worker, two bookkeepers, cabinet maker, printer, iron worker, painter and auto body worker, cigar maker, carpenter, barber, hair dresser.

Nearly 50 Per Cent Belong to Unions.

Nearly 50 per cent of those registered at the section meeting had union affiliations. The 34 union members were:

Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 1; carpenters, 7; stone and derrick men, 1; Journeymen tailor, 3; painters, 3; machinists, 5; office employes, 4; wood turner, 1; Teachers' Federation, 1; sign and scene painter, 1; draftsman, 1; streetcar man, 1; flat janitor, 1; waitress, 1; Typographical nUion, 1; cigar maker, 1.

Most of these comrades are live wires in their local unions. In the street and shop nuclei to which they are being attached, they can be expected to increase their union activity.

The street nuclei organized, proceeded to elect temporary officers and formed a provisional section committee which is meeting Monday, November 2, to take up general party problems.

One of the immediate tasks assigned was the reaching of party members absent accidentally from the section would be but a short time before the meeting. The comrades felt that it other comrades who were absent at the meeting were drawn into the shop and street nuclei and work with renewed energy.

In Section No. 5, altho having no shop nuclei at present, there are many of the livest wires in the party. They are certain to make things hum and we can anticipate the formation of shop nuclei even in that generally residential area.

Three of the six sections in Chicago have now held reorganization meeting. The next one, Section No. 3, will be on Wednesday, November 4, at the Vilnis Hall, 3116 S. Halsted street.

RUSSIAN BRANCH TO CELEBRATE 8TH YEAR IN CHICAGO, NOV. 8TH

A mass meeting and concert in honor of the eighth anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution is arranged by the Russian Branch of the Workers Party for Sunday, Nov. 8, at 6 p. m., at the Workers' House, 1902 W. Division St. Admission free. Come and bring your friends. Russian speakers, a musical program.

YOUNGSTOWN & WARREN TO CELEBRATE EIGHTH YEAR OF RUSS SOVIETS

CLEVELAND, Nov. 5.—Herbert Benjamin will be the speaker at two meetings which are being arranged in Ohio to celebrate the overthrow of czarism by the workers and peasants in Russia.

These meetings will be held in Warren, Saturday evening, Nov. 7th, at the Hippodrome Hall, and in Youngstown Sunday, Nov. 22, at the Ukrainian Hall, at 2:30 p. m.

Worker Correspondence will make The DAILY WORKER a better paper—send in a story about your shop.

BOSTON COMMITTEE OF ACTION TO RAISE FUNDS FOR DAILY WORKER

BOSTON, Nov. 5.—Continuing the campaign initiated last week at the automobile factories in this vicinity, the committee of action, composed of Workers Party and Young Workers League members are also engaged in an intensive money raising campaign to save The DAILY WORKER.

To Start Nucleus.

The DAILY WORKER rescue party run by Local Boston this week will be followed by another rescue party sponsored by the English Branch of the Workers Party. The date has not yet been set, but will be announced in a later issue of The DAILY WORKER.

To Start Nucleus.

The success of the distribution of the special "Henry Ford" issues at his factories here has resulted in a bundle being ordered for daily sale at the factory gate. This is the prelude to the establishment of nucleus in this assembling plant.

The initiation of this work by the newly organized worker correspondents' group here will result in continuous, concerted, organized group effort that will remove the job of supporting the party press from the domain of sporadic "campaigns" and will result in estabisihing The DAILY WORKER on a firm foundation in this city.

Send Appeal to Ford Workers.

A special letter addressed to the workers in the automotive industry has been written and will be issued with the papers this week. The final assurances of success lies in the pressing need the paper supplies and the highly effective group of young workers who will constitute the backbone of our sales force.

CLEVELAND ARRANGES GALA AFFAIR TO CELEBRATE 8TH ANNIVERSARY OF UNION OF SOVIET REPUBLICS

CLEVELAND, Nov. 5.—The eighth anniversary of the proletarian revolution in Russia will be celebrated in Cleveland in resplendent style. The mass demonstration will be held at Moose Auditorium, 1000 Walnut St., on Sunday, November 8, at 2:30 p. m. The speakers will be Jay Lovestone, member of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party, Israel Amter, district secretary, and Martin Gordon of the Young Workers League.

There will be a fine entertainment in conjunction with the meeting. Several choruses and mandolin orchestras, and in addition a revolutionary tableaux. The arrangement committee is preparing an entertainment such as Cleveland has seldom heard or seen to make the occasion a memorable one.

After the meeting and entertainment, there will be a supper which is being prepared by women comrades of the party. The celebration will end in a dance at 11:30 that night.

The major part of the proceeds of the celebration will go to The DAILY WORKER. Therefore, every comrade is asked to make the attendance at this meeting an overwhelming one. Let there be no standing room in the large auditorium. Let us make this anniversary of Soviet Russia one that will not soon be forgotten. The admission is small—35c for iether the afternoon meeting or the dance at night; 50c for a combination ticket.

MINNESOTA DISTRICT MAKING HEADWAY IN REORGANIZATION

The Minnesota district organizer reports considerable progress in reorganizing the party on the basis of shop nuclei. The city of St. Paul has been divided into three sections. Section No. 1 includes all the territory east of Rice and Webasha and north of the Mississippi river. Section No. 2 is made up of all the territory west of Rice and Webasha and north of Selby. Section No. 3 consists of territory west of Rice and Webasha and south of Selby, and the territory south of the river.

St. Paul Reorganizes Quickly.

Meetings of all party functionaries were held to receive an explanation of the Central Executive Committee reorganization program. Section meetings were then called in each section, to proceed with reorganization. These meetings were very well attended. Every comrade enthusistically supported the reorganization program. Section one was immediately constituted, an executive secretary was elected and a provisional executive committee of five was also elected. Then there were organized two shop nuclei, one in a clothing factory and one in a leather goods factory. Besides, there are organized two street nuclei in this section.

Section No. 2 also set up its temporary executive committee. One shop nucleus was organized in a bedding manufacturing company and three street nuclei were organized here.

In section No. 3 two street nuclei were organized.

After that, meetings of the newly elected party functionaries were called to explain the work of the various nucleus and laid the basis for the election of permanent officials of both the nuclei and the sections.

The district committee unanimously adopted the resolution commending the St. Paul comrades for the efficient manner in which they responded to the task of reorganization.

Branch Functionaries Meet.

In Minneapolis meetings of all branch functionaries were also held. They were well attended by all comrades except the Finnish. These meetings unanimously endorsed the reorganization of the party. Sectional reorganization commissions were chosen, composed of the secretary, organizer, and industrial organizer of every branch. Within the sections these commissions work under the control of the district executive committee reorganization commission.

Russian Tea and Baked Potatoes Aplenty for Jamaica Woods Hikers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—Did you ever hike out in the woods? If you did you'll be tickled at the chance to come out with us. If you didn't—step out now. The woods are glorious.

Put on your hiking outfit, take along your lunch and water canteen. Meet us in front of the headquarters—108 East 14th St. this Sunday morning at 10 a. m. That's where the big crowd starts. The Brooklynites can meet us as we leave the station on the Jamacia Ave. line B. M. T. at the last stop, 168th St. at 11 o'clock.

Don't expect a collection—there wont be any. Of course we will have some eats for those who couldn't bring any. Plenty of potatoes will be ready to bake and good hot Russian tea for all.

All readers and friends of The DAILY WORKER are invited. The DAILY WORKER builders will have an official meeting at the camping grounds.

We will hike 4 miles thru the finest woods of Jamaica and the trail is blazed. Come along—bring your sweetheart and your pals. Start early—on time Sunday at 10 at 108 East 14th or at 168th St. Jamaica B. M. T. at 11 o'clock.

Your neighbor will appreciate the favor—give him this copy of the DAILY WORKER.

NEW HAVEN WORKERS TO HAVE RUSS REVOLUTION MEETING FRIDAY NIGHT

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 5.—After an energetic election campaign which closed last night, the Workers (Communist) Party of New Haven is preparing for the 8th anniversary of Soviet Russia, to take place in Hermanson's Hall, 158 Crown St., Friday, Nov. 6th at 8 p. m. It is expected that many of the workers addressed at noon shop meetings during the campaign will attend.

The speakers will be J. O. Bentall, in English; A. Chramoff in Russian; Carl Weissberg for the Young Workers League; and Ida Rothstien will preside.

RUSSIAN AND SLOVAK BUREAUS ELECT COMMISSIONS TO HELP PARTY REORGANIZATION WORK

The bureaus of the Russian and Slovak sections of the party have elected reorganization commissions of three each, to supervise and push the work of reorganization of the respective sections.

The Russian commission consists of Comrades Omelian, Striz, Chramoff, while the Slovak commission is made up of the Comrades Zuskar, Tuhy, and Dendur.

There is no doubt that these commissions will help materially in the furthering of the reorganization work.

SECRECY CLOAKS SESSIONS OVER ITALIAN DEBTS

Americans Will Do All the Talking

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—The Italian debt commission presented to the American mission today facts regarding the economic condition of the Mussolini dictatorship. No offer was made by either group to settle the Italian debt of $2,138,000,000, the Italians simply contenting themselves with presentation in detail what they claim to be their economic situation.

After discussion of nearly two hours, it was agreed to create two sub-committees, composed equally of Italian and Americans, one to go into the capacity of Italy to pay, and the other to discuss actual terms of payment. No further session of the full commissions will be held until these sub-committees are ready to report.

Secrecy Prevails.

A mantle of secrecy was draped by treasury officials around the actual discussions, due to the "unfortunate publicity" that attended the French negotiations. It was mutually agreed that the Italians were not to divulge anything that transpired in the meetings, and that all the talking to the press done by Secretary Winston of the American commission, was to be done in the presence of one of the Italian commissioners. The reason advanced for this unusual secrecy was that it was desired to avoid a repetition of what occurred during the French negotiations, when French spokesman announced prematurely that an agreement had been reached.

Even the personnel of the two subcommittees, on which will fall the major part of the negotiations, was not divulged.

Moves House When Dry Agents Try to Serve Injunction

(Special to The Daily Worker)

IRON MOUNTAIN, Mich., Nov. 5.—Federal authorities were baffled in an attempt to padlock the road house of George Meehan, when Meehan moved the house to parts unknown under cover of darkness.

When federal authorities approached the former site of the house, they were confronted with a billboard announcing the plotting of the site into lots for residential purposes.

Motion Picture Payroll Amounts to $1,300,000 Weekly in Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 5.—Motion pictures led Los Angeles industries with the heaviest payroll in 1924, according to a survey completed here today, $1,300,000 being the screen business payroll weekly. A total of $67,600,000 was spent in the industry during 1924.

Fink Beats Up Passenger.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 5.—When George McGill refused to stop smoking on a street car after the street car company fink had insulted him, the fink drew a revolver from his hip pocket and beat McGill over the head. McGill was then taken to a hospital and upon regaining consciousness was arrested for disorderly conduct and resisting an officer.

Flood Inundates Welsh Village.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—Thirty persons are dead as the resul tof the flood which wiped out the Welsh village of Dolcarhog when a dam broke. Ten bodies have been recovered. Many towns in North Wales are today without electric power as the lake, emptied when the dam broke, provided water power for a great electric power plant.

Philadelphia Winner Dies as Votes Are Counted Electing Him

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 5.—An unprecedented situation exists in Philadelphia politics today with the death of John M. Patterson, who was elected district attorney on the republican ticket yesterday. Patterson died shortly before midnight last night after several days of illness.

Who is to succeed Patterson, or how his successor is to be named or who names him, are the questions puzzling politicians, lawyers and others here. Such a situation, several prominent attorneys said, never has come up before.

Wild Storm Hits Ships.

CHERBOURG, France, Nov. 5.—Fifty or more passengers landed from the steamship Berengaria today with bandaged heads, arms in splints or sprained legs, from injuries received on the voyage from New York in the most terrific storm, in the captain's estimation, the ship had ever encountered.

Undisputed Party Leader

The Tammany victory in New York elevates Governor Al. Smith to the position of undisputed leader in the democratic party in the United States. The defeat of the Hearst-Hylan petty-bourgeois combination and the campaign of vituperation preceding and following the primaries in September did not adversely affect the party in that city. The triumph of Walker, the Tammanyite, over Waterman, the republican candidate, almost equalled the last victory of Mayor Hylan when all elements of the New York democracy were united.

Capitalist editors, usually incapable of astute political analysis, regard the elections of Tuesday as of no national consequence. A Marxian analysis reveals that it has considerable national significance. The democratic party has been without a recognized leader since Woodrow Wilson was stricken with his fatal illness while campaigning for the Morgan issue of the league of nations. A fierce internal conflict ensued when, after the 1920 national defeat the petty-bourgeois elements tried, thru the late Bryan, to regain control of that party. At the 1924 convention the Bryan-McAdoo forces engaged in a titanic struggle to wrest the party from the clutches of the House of Morgan and bring it back into middle class hands. This effort failed and the Morgan forces won.

Bryan's death removed the most powerful of the petty-bourgeois leaders. William G. McAdoo can never hope to rival the hold that Bryan had upon the imagination of the middle class.

Four powerful and corrupt political machines now dominate the democratic party: Tammany in New York, the Frank Hague machine in Jersey City that placed its candidate in the governor's chair, the George E. Brennan machine of Chicago and the Tom Taggart machine in Indiana. These sections of that party are as one behind Smith.

The eastern wing of the democratic party is triumphant, but that does not mean that the national party is thereby revived. McAdoo will challenge Smith's desire to head the ticket in 1928 and the Madison Square convention of last year will be repeated, with the possible nomination of Smith as candidate for president of the United States. His candidacy will sound the death knell of the oldest political party in America, as such a defeat will demonstrate the undisputed sway of the republican party as the representative of finance-capital.

By 1928 the ever accelerated pace of gigantic mergers in all industries in this country will have forced the completion of the transition of the republican party from an agency of industrial capital to the political expression of finance-capital.

In spite of the absurd notions of the muddle-headed socialists that capitalism is one united reactionary mass and that it maintains parties identical in nature, Marxians know that only in periods of rapid changes in the economic structure of a country do we have anything approaching two parties representing identical class interests. Finance-capital will throw its support entirely to the republican party and the three units of the democratic party will vegetate in the mire of local politics, while its petty-bourgeois wing will for a time fitfully strive to exist and then vanish.

Viewed nationally the victories of the democratic party in Tuesday's elections are not signs of new vitality, but only its death rattle.

With one reactionary party dominating American politics, the working class, now for the most part unconscious of the class character of political struggles can more easily be rallied to the support of a working class party.

The Persian Puzzle

The new importance in world affairs of strategically located nations like Persia aside from their wealth in natural resources is brought to our attention by the attention paid by the capitalist press to the deposing of Shah Ahmed by the national assembly.

Northern Persia is rich in oil. American and British oil concerns are waging a struggle for control of the deposits with Britain, thru the Anglo-Persian Oil company, having a little the best of the competition at present altho American imperialism has an emissary in the Persian government—Dr. Arthur Millspaugh, who acts as "budget adviser."

But the real importance of Persia is not in its deposits, but in that it lies in between Irak and Afghanistan and borders on the Persian Gulf opposite Arabia and is an outer bulwark for British India.

In this sector the forces of western imperialism represented by Great Britain conspire against the Soviet Union. Teheran, close to the southern point of the Caspian Sea, is the center of imperialist intrigue for to the north and west are the rich oil fields of Baku.

What the overthrow of the present dynasty actually means, given legal sanction by a vote of 80 to 5 with 30 representatives absent in the national assembly, is not clear at this distance, but the trend seems to be toward a republic fashioned after the Turkish fashion.

Riza Khan, a Persian cossack, is the chief personage in the new government. Whether he is a tool of British imperialism, a friend of Soviet Russia or what is more likely, a Persian nationalist, will be shown sharply when the new government makes its statement on foreign policy.

In Turkey the establishment of republican rule was followed by the overthrow of the caliphate and an orientation away from Great Britain.

The attempt of Great Britain to grab the Mosul oilfields has increased the antagonism and it is probable that in Persia a movement that is of a nationalist tendency will soon find itself in conflict with the British imperialists.

Some sections of the capitalist press hint that the deposing of Ahmed by the national assembly was the result of British intrigue; if so Great Britain is playing with dangerous weapons, for these are the days when colonial and semi-colonial countries are no longer content to groan under rulers picked for them by the foreign offices of the imperialist powers.

The Chinese Customs Conference - -

By James H. Dolsen

PART II

JAPAN AND THE CUSTOMS CONFERENCE

THE Japanese press, reflecting the interests of its ruling class, is agreed that the proposal to allow China to raise her customs duties presents a grave danger to their country, Japanese exports to China, they contend, are possible in large measure only because of the nominal Chinese tariff. Therefore if China were to impose a high export tax, it would so increase the expense of the raw materials which Japan must import from that country as to make Japanese competition in the world market impossible.

An examination of the character of the trade between the two countries proves this contention is well based. Japan takes a larger part of China's exports than any other country. On the other hand one-third of her own exports find their market in Chinaa. Any general increase in Chinese customs therefore will injure her trade, cutting both ways like a scissors.

THE bulk if her exports to China consist of yarns and cotton goods of a cheap grade, which her experts admit can easily be made in the Chinese mills, and which in fact are to an ever greater extent being manufactured there. There is an increasingly heavy investment of Japanese capital in China, and a pronounced tendency to transfer the cotton spinning industry there where raw material is abundant and labor still cheaper than at home. According to the Japanese press this same tendency exists in the matchmaking and flour industries.

Silk Industry Threatened.

The interconnection of economic factors is nowhere so evident as in a situation like this. Japan's most important market is the United States to which she sells a third of her total exports. Of these, raw silk makes up 80 per cent. Yet an expert for the Mitsui company, one of the biggest corporations in the country, after an investigation of conditions in Kwangtung states that this single Chinese province could produce more mulberry leaves than all Japan. (The silkworm feeds on this leaf only). If China had customs autonomy she would be able to make the raising of such trees and the consequent building up of a huge industry so profitable that the Japanese silk industry would be dealt a death blow. Take from Japan, as one writer says, the silk export to the United States and the cotton goods and yarn to China and Japan has nothing much left.

The enormous importance to Japan of her Chinese commerce is evident from a consideration of the statistics for recent years. From 1904 to 1918 the Japanese share of the direct trade between the two countries increased 714 per cent, more than fourteen times as much as England's and three times that of the United States. In 1880 Japan had but 3 per cent of China's foreign trade. In 1899 this had increased to 11 per cent and in 1913 to 20 per cent. During the world war she made a huge gain, her proportion reaching in 1917 over one-third, 35 per cent of all China's external commerce. From 1899 to 1913 the tonnage of Japanese steamers engaged in the Chinese trade increased by five times, and has been growing ever since.

CONTRIBUTING to the building up of this commerce are the thousands of Japanese firms in China itself. Here there is also the record of an enormous growth. In 1875 there was one such company in Shanghai. There were 195 in 1899. Fourteen years later in 1917 this number had jumped to 1,269. Out of 42 foreign-owned banks in China 29 are Japanese.

China's Tariff Autonomy Opposed.

There is little doubt that the business interests of China will try to build up the native industry thru a protective tariff if customs autonomy is secured. Very naturally they would seek to adjust rates in such a way as to build up their export trade in coal and do away with the huge importations from Japan; and at the same time hinder the export of iron ores and encourage the growth of steel manufacturing. Each of these measures would become a double-edged sword at Japan's throat.

"JAPAN'S economic life," as a correspondent states in the Trans-Pacific recently, "depends on the free and regular exchange of commodities with China." The Mitsui expert whom we have previously quoted believes the prospects facing Japan are so threatening that "Japan must develop into a highly technicalized industrial nation to maintain itself."

Under such circumstances as these what can Japan's policy be towards the Chinese conference? It has already been pointed out that from the standpoint of her commercial interests any increase in the Chinese tariff would work to her disadvantage and absolute autonomy would be disaastrous. On the other hand, the large outstanding loans owed to Japan cannot be paid unless China has an increased government revenue and the customs seem the only method of realizing such additional income. Another complication comes from the fact that in the fierce international struggle for control of China the feelings of the Chinese people themselves must be taken into account, particularly because the Soviet Union will fully exploit any attitude hostile to the workers and peasants of China. It is this latter and comparatively new factor in the tangled Far Easctern situation which has prevented the powers from long ago having taken the most drastic action to end the Shanghai strike.

Unless Japan reverses entirely her historic policy, it will be her tactics to keep South and North China at each other's throats. She pursused this method at the time of the 1911 revolution when she sent a mission to bargain with the Manchus for her support of the dynasty and at the same time emissaries to Canton t ofind out what the rebels would give for her aid. She adopted a like procedure during the civil wars.

To Refuse Tariff Autonomy.

THERE is no doubt that most strenuous efforts have been made by the usual secret diplomatic underground methods to reach an agreement between the powers for a united front against the Chinese. The Osahi, published at Osaka, Japan, in an officially inspired article recently stated: "With reference to China's claim for tariff autonomy, an agreement ha salready been reached between Japan, the United States, and Great Britain to object to discussing that question, altho they are willing to give their kind consideration to it. . . . Should China press the participants to give her their immediate reply, her request would be immediately refused."

If the tariff conference is to progress it must then be confined merely to the question as to just how much of a raise China will be allowed to make in her customs, how the additional income shall be portioned out, and whether ther eshall be any relaxation in the present measure of foreign control. The appointment of Hioki Eki as chief of the Japanese delegation indicates that on the tariff Japan will make a last-ditch fight. Eki is characterized by the Japan Weekly Chronicle as, with Mr. Obata, "having done more bullying work in respect of China than probably any other diplomatist, living or dead." The paper intimates that the Japanese will offer concessions in regard to extra-territoriality as a set-off to their stand on the customs.

Great Britain's Attitude.

WE have noted that Great Britain's stand has been frankly hostile to the conference so far as extra-territoriality is concerned. In this her foreign department represents the diehards of her Hongkong and Shanghai settlements who insist on a "strong" policy, which means one of using military force to suppress all pppposition to exploitation.

As regards the tariff, she will fight bitterly to retain her right of naming the head of its administrative staff. The proposal to raise the Chinese customs to 12½ per cent on condition the "likin" is abolished, has already been approved by England. Even complete tariff autonomy, aside from the control of its administration, would not meet the same opposition from England which it will from Japan, despite the agreement above referred to. This is because the cotton goods, a principal article of Chinese import from England, are of the finer grades which the Chinese mills are not adapted for making. On the other hand China will need to continue for some time to import machinery from England so the British need have no fear of prohibitive duties on this growing branch of their exports.

England Losing Out.

During the world war Great Britain suffered severe losses in her Oriental trade. Prior to 1913 the British controlled over half of China's entire foreign commerce. In 1917 England's proportion had dropped to about 40 per cent. Between 1904 and 1918 her direct trade with China had increased but 49 per cent. The tonnage of British steamers in the Chinese trade decreased from 60 per cent of the total in 1880 to 40 per cent in 1913, tho the actual tonnage itself increased from 15,874,352 tons to 93,334,830 tons, indicating the enormous shipping which England controlled.

Of the commercial firms in 1864 in Shanghai 75 per cent were British and of the foreign banking houses at that time all but one were British. In 1917 out of the 7,055 commercial houses but 596 were English. There were twice as many Japanese and twice as many Russian. Out of 42 foreign-owned banks but four were British-owned. These figures show that Great Britain is losing her position of primacy in the affairs of China.

Britain Versus the Soviet Union.

GREAT BRITAIN'S tactics will be to isolate the Soviet Union, just as before the world war it was her policy to isolate czarist Russia. Of corse, the reasons for this maneuver are altogether different tho many of the same considerations, suriously enuf, apply. There is the same struggle in the buffer states as there was in the old days. But today it is Great Britain, representative of world capitalism, confronting the Soviet Union, representative of the new working class society.

The British ruling class knows that the success of the workers and peasants of Russia sends thru all the oppressed masses of the Far East and India, who themselves are similar in social compos[illegible]n, a great wave of hope and a growing consciousness of their common interests in fighting imperialism, personified particularly in the English rule. Despite the clashing interests of Britain and America the English do not forget that it is a $300,000,000 standing credit made by the Federal Reserve Bank of the United States to the Bank of England which preserves Great Britain on a gold basis, and they believe that the American bankers will allow nothing to happen which might overnight plunge the world into financial chaos. They count on the unyielding opposition of the great American international banking interests to the Soviet Union despite the general desire of her business men to engage in trade relations, and therefore count on at least a minimum amount of co-operation in Far Eastern diplomacy.

Japan's Powerful Position in China

Soviet Russia, Friend of the Oppressed Peoples

By MANUEL GOMEZ

AS the lordly powers of the world meet each other today across the table at the Chinese customs conference in Peking, there is one great nation, deeply concerned in all the affairs of China, that is conspicuously among those missing. That nation in Soviet Russia, now the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

Soviet Russia was not invited, and her request to be included was refused. The reason must be clear to everybody. Soviet Russia would scarcely be of help to the other great powers in such imperialist aggressions against the Chinese people as are being re-forged at the conference table, in the name of "guarantees" for eventual Chinese customs autonomy. If Soviet Russia were at the conference she would not side with the imperialists. She would expose them. She would defend the interests of exploited China.

Lenin called Russia the bridge between Europe and Asia, capitalist newspapers tell us that this is the bridge between civilization and barbarism. They do not, however, go so far as to cite in evidence the bloody assault of British "civilization" against the defenseless students of Shanghai, or the most recent exploits of French "civilization" in wiping out whole Moroccan villages and in unloosing upon the old city of Damascus such a mad orgy of fire and destruction that even the capitalist world stands aghast. Happily for the future of the world, the British and French militarists do not constitute all of European civilization, any more than the United States government, fresh from its latest rape of Panama, constitutes all of American civilization. The revolutionary proletarian elements of the west, the class-conscious vanguard of the oppressed masses struggling against exploitation and imperialism—it is of these elements that the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics is the triumphant expression. They stretch out the hand of alliance to all peoples fighting for national liberation. Russia is thus no longer merely the bridge between Europe and Asia. She is the bridge connecting the class struggle of the industrial proletariat with the liberating movements of the oppressed of all countries.

IT was only natural when the American soldiers, Paul Crouch and Walter Trumbull, became sickened of their role of guardians of Wall Street's interests in Hawaii and determined to help the Hawaiian people throw off the yoke of American imperialism, that they turned their eyes toward Soviet Russia. And conversely, it was to be expected that when the Soviet steamship "Vorovsky" touched at Latin-American ports a month ago, the Communist nucleus aboard would send a message of fraternal greeting to the oppressed peoples of Latin-America.

At the time of the November revolution in 1917 the Russian government had special priviliges in China, as well as the "right" of extra-territoriality and all the other "rights" enjoyed by the great capitalist powers today. These privileges and "rights" were voluntarily surrendered by the Soviet regime. Russia, which under the czar, had been foremost among the imperialist oppressors of China, became her friend and ally. In every instance where the diplomatic representatives of the capitalist powers in Peking took a stand prejudicial to the interests of the Chinese people, notably during the Shanghai outrages of this year, the Soviet ambassador stood out single-handed in opposition. It is no secret that only fear of Soviet Russia prevented the powers from open war against China following the Shanghai affair.

BEGINNING in 1919 and 1920, close ties were established with the Kuomintang party and the Canton government headed by the heroic Dr. Sun Yat-sen, who is loved and honored by all friends of Chinese freedom. How much Dr. Sun valued the association is seen in his dying message to the central executive committee of the Soviet Union. The message is well known but it is of such significance that I give it here in full:

> Dear comrades:
> Here on my death bed my thoughts turn to you, as well as to the future destiny of my party and of my country.
> You are the head of the Union of Free Republics, that heritage which the immortal Lenin has left to all suppressed peoples of the world. By means of this heritage the victims of imperialism will inevitably win their emancipation from that social order which has always been based upon slavery, war and injustice.
> I leave behind me a party which, as I always hoped, will be allied with you in its historical task of liberating China and other suppressed peoples from the yoke of imperialism.
> My charge to the Kuomintang party before all is that it shall continue to promote the cause of the national revolutionary movement for the emancipation of China, which has been degraded by imperialism into a semi-colonial country. I therefore charge my party to maintain permanent contact with you.
> I cherish the firm belief that your support of my country will remain unaltered.
> In taking my last leave of you, dear comrades, I express the hope that the day is approaching when the Soviet Union will greet in a free and strong China its friend and ally, and that the two states will proceed hand in hand as allies in the great fight for the emancipation of the oppressed of the whole world.
> With brotherly greetings,
> SUN YAT-SEN.

IS it any wonder that the imperialist robbers do not want Soviet Russia to sit in at a Chinese customs conference which all China is denouncing?

The people of India, struggling for freedom from the crushing rule of imperialist Britain, find in Soviet Russia no less a friend than the Chinese. It was Soviet Russia who, following the massacre of Hindus by the British soldiery at Amritsar—a lesson in "civilization" comparable only to the French fury at Damascus—launched the protest that went around the world. In the great Bombay strike, Russians workers helped liberally with funds. So great and so apparent is the Soviet support of Hindu liberation that Great Britain has repeatedly insisted as a first condition before opening negotiations with the U. S. S. R. that it refrain from anti-imperialist propaganda in India. But not all the pledges in the world can destroy Soviet Russia's elemental sympathy for the cause of Hindu liberation.

Almost the first foreign alliance consummated by the government of revolutionary Russia was with Mustafa Kemal Pasha and his Turkish liberation movement; this alliance was maintained thruout the course of Kemal's struggle to free Turkey from imperialist rule and was an important factor in his success. In Egypt, Russia's sympathies have been outspokenly with the nationalist movement headed by Zaglul Pasha—even when Zaglul himself threatened to desert it. British "civilization" has just seized control again in Persia, by means of a particularly venal coup d'etat, but a wholesome respect for the red army of Soviet Russia has been, and remains, the constant friend of Persian independence.

Soon perhaps the forces opposing the British-inspired coup in Persia will be denounced in the press of Europe and America as "Communists and Bolsheviki."

Those are familiar epithets in the mouths of imperialists, and no doubt seem fearsome enough to them—but they have no terrors for the revolutionary nationalists of the colonies and semi-colonies, who have learned to know imperialism as death-dealing oppression and Communism as the ally of national liberation.

EVEN the revolt of the Riff tribesmen under Abd-el-Krim has been attributed to bolshevist propaganda. This is of course untrue, for it is the brutal imperialism of France and Spain that drove the Riff natives to war for freedom. Nevertheless, no one doubts where the Soviet government's sympathies are in the struggle. The Communist Party of France rendered direct aid to Abd-el-Krim at the very time when French imperialism was attacking him, and the C. P. of France together with the other Communist parties are the paladins of Soviet Russia in western Europe.

National questions are now assuming special significance and acuteness, not only in Asia, Africa and Latin-America, but even in Europe. The eruption of Greeks and Bulgars which we are reading so much about these days is but an incident in the struggle over Macedonia, which was in no way settled by the great war. The imperialist powers support the claims, now of Bulgaria, now of Greece, now of Yugo-Slavia — as their interests may dictate. Soviet Russia echoes the slogan of Theodore Alexandrov: Independence for Macedonia! Similarly, the Soviet Union endorses the aspirations for Croatian autonomy as originally defended by the republican Croatian party, when its leader, Raditch, was still loyal to the interests of his peasant followers.

SUBJECT peoples everywhere are able to have confidence in the attitude of the U. S. S. R. toward them because it is not seeking superprofits. It has no imperialist aims, for the simple reason that it has no imperialistic economic base, and no dominant capitalist class. It is not even a national state in the older sense, but a union of autonomous socialist Soviet republics, welded together under a constitution which leaves each one free to leave the union at will. It cannot by its very nature, acknowledge the supremacy of any chosen people, of any select race. It knows phrases such as "white supremacy" are fictions on white robbery . . . on imperialism, which must be destroyed if Communism is to live.

One of the great accomplishments of the Russian revolution, as Stalin puts it, was to aid in converting the colonies and semi-colonies from citadels of capitalist imperialist power into citadels for the overthrow of world imperialism. Lenin added a few words to those of Marx and created the historic slogan: Workers of the world and oppressed peoples, unite! But it is after all, only a slogan. Soviet Russia gives it reality, and demonstrates by its relations with the subject peoples of all lands the unity of the proletariat and national liberation struggles.

Russia has established the first lasting proletarian dictatorship. She has also made the first breach in the ring of capitalist imperialist states. This is the unmistakable sign, to the peoples of the colonies and semi-colonies, of how the advancing march of the industrial proletariat in all the great nations of capitalism will inevitably shatter the yoke of imperial slavery that bears down on them.

CO[illegible]T OF LIVING IS HIGH IN COAL FIELDS

PURCELL ARRIVES IN CHICAGO ON TOUR OF U. S. AND CANADA URGING UNITY OF WORLD LABOR

Albert A. Purcell, member of the British parliament and head of 22,000,000 trade unionists of Europe affiliated with the Amsterdam International of Trade Unions, arrived in Chicago from St. Louis, where he spoke to a large audience of workers on behalf of unity on the trade union field of all workers regardless of whether they are in the Russian trade unions, the American trade unions or in the trade unions of any other nation.

During the course of his interview here with The DAILY WORKER, he emphasized the necessity of the workers uniting to meet the attempts of the bosses to beat down the wages and lengthen the hours of labor.

"If we intend to deprive our masters of their power to use the foreign low wage, long hours as weapons against us here or elsewhere, the unity of the working class everywhere is the prime weapon we must forge and wield with unfailing energy and effectiveness," declared A. A. Purcell.

In discussing the possibility of future wars and how they may be staved off, he declared:

"If we regard war as the curse, crime and horror of a passing age, then all-inclusive international working class unity must be a pre-essential of the great and glorious task to secure ourselves against the merest chance or even war-like threat.

"It is our duty to determine upon unity of action to definitely prevent war and all the horrors it breeds and spreads in its inhuman trail."

While discussing the necessity of international unity, Purcell decried the attempts made by certain groups to avoid this international solidarity of the organized workers and declared in behalf of those groups that realize and recognize the value of international action on the trade union field of all workers that "Our historic insularity must pass away. Sheer self-preservation demands swift action towards closer association with any and every strictly working class element which may be positively bent upon making unity its immediate aim and international working class solidarity its goal."

Purcell pointed out that capitalism is increasing its operations in the so-called backward lands of Asia, Africa, Central and South America and that

GREECE "SEEKS" PACT SIMILAR TO LOCARNO FOR BALKAN NATIONS

ATHENS, Nov. 6.—Following the declaration by the league of nations that no Balkan pact similar to the Locarno pact would be negotiated unless one of the Balkan nations requested it, the Greek Pangalos military dictatorship is now requesting the formation of a pact similar to the Locarno pact.

This attempt by Greece is looked upon as an act to curry favor with the league of nations commission now investigating the Greco-Bulgar flareup, as Greece has opposed the signing of any pacts in the Balkans, especially so when they dealt with the rights of minorities.

STRIKING COAL MINERS REFUSE COMPANY TERMS

Men Fail to Fall for Company Bluff

FAIRMONT, W. Va., Nov. 6.—Despite the announcement of the Consolidation Coal Co. that it will reopen the Monongah and O'Donnell mines, and replace the strikers, the striking coal miners, who have been in strike since April 1, in an attempt to force the company to recognize the United Mine Workers' Union and the Jacksonville agreement, remain solid and refuse to accept the 1917 wage scales the company offers.

The company announced that it was cleaning up a number of mines that it intended to re-open and that it had signed an agreement with a "miners' association."

The union heads point out that no union men have signed an agreement with the company to go back to work under the 1917 wage scales and that the "miners' association" is undoubtedly some paper organization that the coal company has put up to fool the mine workers into going back into the pits.

"The Movement for World Trade Union Unity"

By TOM BELL.

World Trade Union Unity is one of the burning problems of the world labor movement today.

British and Russian labor are holding conferences; A. A. Purcell, a leading advocate of world labor unity, is touring the United States in its interests; official bodies of labor are sending delegations to Soviet Russia; steps for unity are being taken by the International Federation of Trade Unions and the Red International of Labor Unions.

It is at this time that the basis for unity, steps already taken, the outlook for the future—are all brought to the attention of American workers in this timely series of articles. Look for this series in future issues of The DAILY WORKER.

Sawmill Workers Win First Victory in a Long Time in Wash.

ABERDEEN, Wash.—(FP)—The strike weapon of workmen and solidarity has scored another victory in the settlement of the Aberdeen sawmill strike which lasted nearly four weeks.

By a large majority the men of 5 mills accepted the operator proposal, granting the demanded minimum of $3.75 per day. The old rate was $3.25. The employers refused, however, to make a straight 50c per day raise on all wages, but promised to readjust scales of higher paid employes. The companies also granted the right to maintain grievance committees.

The lowpaid workers, the bulk of over 1,300 men, are benefitted by this settlement. Had the workers heeded the advice of smooth-talking federal mediators and returned to work a week earlier, "pending settlement", the strike would have been lost.

In six months at the new rate the lumber barons will have paid the strikers for their worthwhile vacation. The strike effects may benefit the whole industry, since the Aberdeen minimum is higher than Tacoma, Portland, Seattle and other cities.

Oh, Yes! Capitalist Government Is 'Friend' of the Labor Unions

DAYTON O.—(FP)—Six union plumbers and one helper have been discharged by U. S. aviation officers and 10 "maintenance men" put in at 30c an hour to do the work at McCook ield. The work is botched and the overnment is not saving a penny.

DATES GIVEN PURCELL ON TOUR THRU THE U. S. AND CANADIAN CITIES

The trade union committee arranging the Purcell tour has announced the following dates for his speeches in several cities of the United States and Canada:

Detroit, Mich., Sunday, Nov. 8, at 3 p. m. at the Cass Technical High School Auditorium, Grand River Ave. and High St.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 9, at 8 p. m. at the Carnegie Library Hall, Federal and Ohio Sts.

Cleveland, Ohio, Nov. 10, at 8 p. m., at the Engineers' Auditorium, corner Ontario and St. Clair.

Toronto, Canada, Nov. 11, at 8 p. m. at Central Labor Union.

Montreal, Canada, Nov. 13, at 8 p. m. at Central Labor Union.

New York City, Nov. 17, evening, at the New Star Casino.

DEMANDS COAL PROFITEERING CEASE IN N. Y.

Communists Take Up Fight to Aid Poor

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 6.—The Workers (Communist) Party today issued a statement on the coal situation in which they called upon the board of health of the city of New York to meet the acute coal crisis by the establishment of a city monopoly in coal and the opening of stations in the workers' quarters in which coal should be sold at cost. The statement was made in the form of an open letter to the health commissioner. It reads as follows:

"Frank J. Monaghan,
"Health Commissioner, City of N. Y.,

Poor in Distress

"Sir:—The situation of the poorer people in the city of New York, with winter approaching and coal profiteering making it impossible to secure the necessary fuel, is an intolerable one. As the cold weather sets in, health and life are seriously menaced. The measures so far proposed are hopelessly inadequate to so grave and general a crisis. Profiteering must continue and grow worse unless a far-reaching policy is adopted which will make profiteering impossible and break the coal famine.

"The Workers (Communist) Party calls upon the board of health to establish a complete city monopoly of the purchase and sale of coal in the city of New York until the crisis is liquidated. It further calls upon the board of health to open stations in convenient parts of the city, with special reference to the working class quarters, where such coal will be sold directly by the city at cost. Any program short of this endangers the health and lives of the workers of New York City and the responsibility for this situation will be directly chargeable to the city government. We call for immediate action on this matter.

Due to Monopoly

"We therefore call to your attention the fact that these recurring coal crises are due to the private monopoly in coal and the periodic strikes that it provokes, and that any solution that aims to be permanent and to prevent new crises from occurring, must base itself upon the nationalization of the mines. We call upon the city of New York to work in this direction."

Canadian Labor Party Keeps Two Men in the New Tory Parliament

By JOHN ROBUR.

OTTAWA, Can.—(FP)—The Labor party will have the same strength in the new Canadian parliament as in the last. Of the two members in the last house, one was defeated but a new member comes to support J. S. Woodsworth from Winnipeg. The new member is A. A. Heaps, one of the victims of the prosecutions after the Winnipeg strike of 1919. The defeated member was William Irvine of Calgary. The Conservatives will have the largest group in the new house. The Progressives will have about one-third of their previous strength.

FRENCH MEET HEAVY LOSSES IN SYRIA WAR

Britain Fears Loss of Irak

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ALEPPO, Syria, Nov. 6.— Syrian rebels, steadily gaining in number as new recruits join the forces and new waves of Arabs from the south swarm to aid in the struggles against France, are now encamped within only eight miles of the city wall of Damascus, preparatory to launching a drive in the morning that it is hoped will drive out the enemy invaders.

Reinforcements arriving from Morocco have strengthened the French forces and the butcher, General Gamelin, is said to have set forth with a strong force, well equipped with every known device of frightfulness to engage the rebels. This is questioned in better informed circles, as the French have already notified the inhabitants who still remain in Damascus that it may be necessary to throw shells over the city in the counter-attack on the Druses and Syrians.

Heavy French Losses.

In the territory between Damascus and Beirut and in the vicinity of this city (Aleppo) there has been fierce fighting and heavy losses have been suffered by the French. One detachment of French infantry was surrounded last night and wiped out by the rebels, their entire equipment being captured. Two batches of light artillery and stores of munitions have also fallen into rebel hands and are being turned against the French.

Britain Skeptical.

BONDON, Nov. 6.—The attitude of the British capitalist class, both official and private, toward the French war in Syria, is skeptical. The utmost discretion prevails in speaking of the events. No criticism of the massacres of the people of Damascus have appeared. This attitude is motivated by the fact that the situation in Syria constitutes a grave danger to the rule of Britain in Irak, also held under a league of nations mandate. If the Syrian revolt is successful the whole mandate policy of the league of nations will be wrecked, and successful uprisings in Irak will follow.

Meanwhile heavy forces are thrown on the Syrian border under the fake pretext of "defending British interests."

Labor Party Fighting for Control in Nov. 14 Australian Elections

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MELBOURNE—(FP)—The general elections for the Australian federal parliament take place Nov. 14. Labor, which already controls 5 of the 6 Australian states, seems to have the advantage in the federal elections and may get a majority in both the house of representatives and the senate.

To prevent Labor's rise to power, the Conservatives are trying to work up the red menace. A prominent issue is the recent repressive legislation, including the deportation act, of the federal government. The red menace is also dressed up.

Matthew Charlton leads the Labor party, while the Conservatives are led by S. M. Bruce, the present prime minister. The Conservatives include the Country party representing the wealthy ranch-owners. A few independents are also up.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 6.—A banquet arranged by the Jewish branch of the Workers Party, was held at the Labor Lyceum, in honor of Comrade I. Feingold on the occasion of his leaving the city for St. Louis where he will become general organizer for the Cloth, Hat and Cap Makers union.

Comrade Feingold, as chairman of the executive board of the St. Paul local of this union, has been very successful in negotiating several good agreements with the bosses, and the membership of this local showed its appreciation of the good work done by this left winger by the numbers in attendance and by the speeches made by some of them as well as by members of other organizations.

SOCIALISTS JUBILANT BECAUSE OF GAINS IN "SILK STOCKING" WARD

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 6—Tho the socialist vote dropped from the high mark of 150,000 in the Hillquit campaign against Hylan, to 39,000 in Tuesday's elections, there is jubilation in socialist headquarters here. Tho the workers have turned in thousands from the treachery of the socialists, they made gains in the 15th ward, the "silk stocking" district, where the bourgeoisie gave Norman Thomas 712 votes, as compared with 535 votes last year when he ran for governor.

Not a single socialist was elected to any office in the elections of Tuesday.

CHICAGO LABOR TO CELEBRATE SOVIET TRIUMPH

Mass Meeting Tonight at Temple Hall

Conclusive and overwhelming proof that the working class of America understands its own class interest in the achievement of Soviet Russia, is furnished by the hundreds of mass meetings celebrating the eighth anniversary of the Russian revolution that are being arranged all over the country for November 7 and 8.

The monster meeting in Chicago, which will be held at Temple Hall, corner Van Buren and Ashland today at 8 p. m., promises to be one of the most notable gatherings of the kind that has ever been held here. Among the speakers will be Earl R. Browder, Max Bedacht and Martin Abern, members of the central executive committee of the Workers (Communist) party. A special feature will be revolutionary songs by the Freiheit singing society. Tickets are 25 cents, and can be secured in advance or at the hall.

The unparalleled interest in the meetings thruout the country displayed by skilled and unskilled workers alike, constitutes a ringing answer to the whole campaign of lies with which the capitalist press has been trying to poison the workers against Soviet Russia. Asked to explain the unprecedent advance sale of tickets for the Chicago meeting, the arrangements' committee calls attention to the great strides in economic reconstruction made in the Soviet union during the past few years, even capitalist reporters being forced to admit that the Russian workers are now better off than before the war, whereas in the other countries of Europe the condition of the working class becomes steadily worse.

A canvas of the south side shows that Negro workers are taking a special interests in the meeting. This is no doubt largely due to the way in which Soviet Russia has extended the hand of fellowship to all oppressed races and peoples, as in Africa, China, India, the Near East and Latin-America.

It is pointed out that 21 governments have already recognized Soviet Russia, while the United States government still refuses to act. Many trade unions and other labor organizations thruout the land have called upon the government to extend recognition to the workers' republic, and the slogan of "Recognition of Soviet Russia" will be again placed on the order of the day at tonight's meeting.

NATION SUFFERS POVERTY WORSE THAN EVER BEFORE, SAYS BRITISH LABOR M. P.

MANCHESTER, Nov. 6.—At Nelson to-night, Mr. John Wheatley, British labor member of parliament said, in the industrial situation today and the poverty which accrued from it, they had something which was unprecedented in the history of this or any other country. The nation was stricken with poverty, not because of a shortage of goods, but because of the superabundance of things required by human beings. Races had been brought into competition that were not competitors before the war, and there would be no revival of trade until we altered our industrial system of society.

ANTHRACITE MINERS LIVING IN HOVELS AND HALF-STARVED, BUT DENIED WAGE RAISE BY BOSSES

In the anthracite mining region where 158,000 miners are on strike, the usual evils of capitalism are sharpened and capitalist government rules with an iron hand over the workers whose conditions are explained in the following article by Alex Reid, miner for 29 years and head of the Progressive Miners' Committee. Reid was recently released from the Scranton jail where he was sent by a conspiracy of coal operators, capitalist courts and reactionary union officials to prevent his speaking to strikers.

• • • •

By ALEX REID

(Secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee.)

(Article V.)

The cost of living has steadily risen during the last year and has reached the point where the workers find themselves barely able to exist. Their wages barely enable them to buy the cheapest foods while many are in a state of semi-starvation. This condition was true prior to the great anthracite strike, and now with two months loss of work, many miners in the hard coal field find themselves in dire want, but yet determined to strike on until victory is achieved.

The workers in all industries know that the dollar will not buy as much as it did a year ago. They know prices are still on the up grade, and they know that when they get an increase of wages, and sign a contract, when the cost of living is still rising, that they have in reality signed under circumstances that mean their real wages are steadily on the incline.

Living Costs Increase.

The anthracite miners with their families constitute fifty per cent of the population of that region, and they know what living increases mean as much if not more so than the workers in any other part of America, as the following figures compiled by the government will show: Last April's report shows bacon to have increased 29 per cent, pork chops 28 per cent, flour 35 per cent, coffee 25 per cent, and we know that everything averages higher in the hard coal region than it does in any other part of the country.

Clothing costs from 25 to 50 per cent more than in New York. Doctors' fees have jumped 50 and 100 per cent for every visit of the doctor since 1923, while rents have gone skyward with a vengeance.

High Rent for Hovels.

The Pennsylvania state housing commission has recently stated that rents have advanced from four to 115 per cent in the last four years. The rents have increased most in the small towns, and that is where most of the coal miners exist. The writer saw many of those shacks called houses with daylight shining thru the walls, no wall paper in sight, while the plaster was hanging in shreds, and I could not see how anyone had the courage to charge any rent at all.

The housing commission further states that rents are still on the upgrade as a shortage exists, while the coal commission comments on the subject as follows:

"Housing facilities in the anthracite region are far below the average and rank fifty per cent in the matter of adequate sanitation and facilities."

The United States department of labor figures show the inhabitants of Scranton have to pay about ten per cent more for their houses than the people in the United States as a whole pay, and rents are still going up as shown by the Pennsylvania housing commission.

Real Wages Decline.

The Annalyst of July 10 quotes Bradstreets, "The cost of living has increased 13.3 per cent over last July."

Deport Aliens Who Violate the Prohibition Laws, Urges Lawmaker

Deportation of all aliens who dare to take a drink of pre-Volstedian vintages or similar fluids or otherwise violate the prohibition amendment, was urged by Congressman Grant M. Hudson, before the Anti-Saloon League's national convention which is now meeting in Chicago, as a step in the campaign to "dry up" the United States.

He also urged a stricter enforcement of the prohibition laws.

All is not so well at the convention. There is one group that wants a modification of the dry laws while another group wants a strict enforcement. When it comes to apportioning the jobs in the organization, many clashes are expected as quite a number would like to make cozy berths for themselves.

BRITISH LABOR UNITY FIGHTS OFF WAGE CUTS

Live Leaders and Wise Policy Wins So Far

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON—(FP)— Not only have the miners and the textile workers by their militancy warded off wage reductions and patched up a temporary peace in England, but the building workers have made a truce by which there will be no wage reductions for at least nine months. The shipyard unions are also holding their demands in abeyance while an inquiry is made into the industry.

Trouble is brewing on the railroads. The demands of the employers are totally irreconcilable with the programs of the unions, and the central wage board has failed to reach any agreement. The matter has been referred to the national wage board, so the railroads will enjoy a truce during the negotiations. The companies want a flat rate reduction in wages of $1.50 a week in rural areas and $1 in London. The worker demands are set out in the all-grades program of the National Union of Railwaymen and in the program of the Railway Clerks Association, embracing all-around increases in wages and general improvements. The N. U. R. is also demanding a pension scheme for railroad workers.

The locomotive engineers union has begun a campaign to do away with overtime. On the Southern railway all members are refusing to work overtime when arriving at their local depots, if they have completed 8 hours on duty. Electrification is leading to unemployment, and the engineers refuse overtime while fellow-workers are workless.

Farmer Jury Chosen to Try Doctor for Killing Daughter

Littleton, Colo., Nov. 6.—A jury of Arapahoe county farmers and mechanics was chosen to decide the fate of Dr. Harold Elmer Blazer, 60 year old country doctor who snuffed out the life of his imbecilic daughter, Hazel Ingrit Blazer, in an Englewood bungalow last February. The jury was completed and sworn in just as court adjourned for the noon recess.

When the court reconvenes the attorney for the state intimates he will try to prove that the imbecilic daughter had a right to live, and that her father was in his right mind when he chloroformed his daughter. The state will not demand that the death penalty, but will seek a verdict of first degree murder with a life sentence.

Peaceful Transition to Socialism Never Heard of By Police

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 6.—Members of the city police force are receiving daily instructions in the use of firearms and a pistol range has been installed. The New Orleans police department is the possessor of riot guns, tear bombs, saw-off shot guns and is under the control of a city administration which does not care a whoop for union labor.

'PLOT' AGAINST MUSSOLINI IS A PLAIN FAKE

New Terror Hatched by Tyrant

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Italy, Nov. 6.—Mussolini's great publicity campaign to rehabilitate himself in the eyes of the Italian masses who were becoming skeptical of his prestige since his recent cold reception at Locarno and since the open contempt in which he is held among all civilized people became public, is assuming malignant characteristics.

The loud clamor about his attempted assassination yesterday was totally engineered by bandits and criminals in the fascist ranks who framed up the whole affair, even to carrying with them to the demonstration a loaded rifle they could later use as evidence against the ex-socialist deputy, Zaniboni, who is now either in prison or dead, charged with the plot against the life of the tyrant.

Blackshirt hordes in every stage of drunkenness are swarming the streets of Rome in a mad frenzy, demanding death for all lovers of freedom, and the fascist press is wildly demanding immediate death, without trial, of all suspected of "implication in the plot."

With the same excesses that characterized the reign of murder, incendiarism and pillage, against the labor organizations in the early days of the fascist regime, the masons are now being terrorized, because of their political antagonism to Mussolini.

The Garibaldi's in Paris and one of the descendants of the famous Italian patriot in the United States, are in momentary danger of assassination by fascists because the Mussolini organs have already paved the way for such action by publishing fiction to the effect that the "plot" against the bandit tyrant was "hatched in Paris, and the Garibaldis were concerned in it."

It is known that Mussolini's agents trial his enemies in every country in the world and are preparing a reign of assassination to silence exposure of his methods in maintaining power.

Farm Labor Unionism Foreseen by Middle Class Farm Leader

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK—(FP)—Farm worker labor unions, not farm producer co-operatives, are the trend which agricultural organization will take in the future, Benjamin O. Marsh, Farmers' National Council, believes. Addressing the Civic Club of New York Marsh said:

"The next decade will probably see 65% or more of farmers tenants or hired men, many of them working on large farms. Many will thus have lost any equity in their small holdings and probably will secure the best returns for their work if organized, not as competing producers, but as hired men at American wages. Such mergers as the Armour-Morris, bakery and milk combines, render the work of farmer cooperatives much more difficult."

YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE TO HOLD MASQUE BALL SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 14

To raise funds for The Young Worker and the District No. 8 office of the Young Workers' League which is planning a wide field of activity, Working Area Branch No. 1 of the Young Workers' League is holding a masque ball on Saturday, November 14, 1925, at the Workers' Lyceum, 2733 Hirsch Blvd.

All the Workers Party and Young Workers' League members and sympathizers of the Young Workers League and its activities are urged to attend and to come masked as valuable prizes will be given to best single costumes or a group portraying some revolutionary event or epoch. Admission to the dance is only 35 cents.

ANTHRACITE MINERS LIVING IN HOVELS AND HALF-STARVED, BUT DENIED WAGE RAISE BY BOSSES

and quotes Dun's showing "43 price advances."

The course of prices is upwards, and the workers know as prices increase, the value of their wages decrease. The picture of ragged children in the anthracite region, existing in their miserable shacks called home, with no prospect under this rotten economic system, with the multimillionaire coal barons demanding a decrease in the wages of their fathers, is pitiable indeed.

This strike will be settled, as they have been in the past and the settlement will settle nothing. More strikes will come as this one has and the same fight will be fought over again. As long as the miners are willing to work for a small amount of the social value of their production, just so long will they have to endure this periodic turmoil.

Nationalization Only Cure.

Nationalization of the mines with workers' control was put forward in the progressive miners' program but the Lewis machine turned it down. Nationalization of the mines has long been a prominent demand of the miners, at every convention for many years they have endorsed it, and instructed their officials to work for it, but never yet have these officials attempted to carry out the demands of the miners in that respect.

The suffering of the miners explained above is not the only or worst part of their life, another chapter must be written in connection with the life or death of these unhappy wage slaves that is enuf to draw the blush of shame to the cheek of any normal minded man.

The major and minor injuries sustained in the underground hell holes tell a tale of suffering and woe not found anywhere else in the annals of history.

I will deal with this question in the following article tomorrow.

COUNT 3,388 VOTES FOR COMMUNISTS IN NEW YORK ELECTION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 6—In the recent municipal elections held in New York City, the Workers Party candidate for city controller, William W. Weinstone, was credited by the election officials with 3,388 votes. In the borough of Manhattan he received 848 votes; in Kings, 1,197; in the Bronx, 1,113; in Queens, 268 and in Richmond, 14.

Charles Krumbein, candidate for president of he board of aldermen was credited with 3,296 votes of which 906 were in the borough of Manhattan; 1,293 in Kings; 1,043 in Bronx; 267 in Queens and 17 in Richmond.

Gitlow Barred.

Benjamin Gitlow was barred from the ballot and the party carried on a campaign to write in Benjamin Gitlow's name but in the returns no mention is made as to the number of votes he received.

Steal Votes.

The vote which the election boards credit the Workers Party with is not the total vote, for in many places where the party did not have watchers the ballots of the Workers Party candidates were not counted. In a number of places, ballots were challenged as improperly made out, etc., and in that way many votes were negated.

Army and Navy Cut Personnel; Will Ask More Appropriations

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—As a prelude to ask for larger appropriations for the army and navy, the army and navy departments have announced curtailments due to "lack of funds."

The navy, to keep within its purse, has cut the enlisted strength of 84,289 to 81,700.

Motor transport plants are to be closed by the army to cut expenses at Camp Holabird, Md., Camp Normoyle, Tex., and the motor repair section of the San Francisco depot will cease operations by June 30 next. The quartermaster corps motor transport school at Camp Holabird will be transferred to the Philadelphia school.

Old Time South Knows Run-away Wage Slaves Are Same as Chattels

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW ORLEANS — (FP) — That slavery is not dead in the south is evidenced by Clarksdale, Miss., where the plantation owners are wrought in a frenzy over the disappearance of "human chattels." A strike caused the arrest of four Mexicans. Eight Mexicans refused to work and left the plantation. S. L. Dodds offers a reward for information leading to their capture. In addition he has offered $100 for information leading to the identity of any person found guilty of enticing them away.

Kellogg Replies to Steel Labor Saklatvala Ban

WARREN, O., Nov. 6.—Trumbull Lodge No. 73 of the Amalgamated Association of Iron Steel and Tin Workers, recently adopted a resolution against the exclusion of Saklatvala from the country. This resolution was forwarded to Senator Willis of Ohio, who evidently was unacquainted and unconcerned about the non-admittance of Saklatvala.

Willis communicated with Secretary of State Kellogg, who did not confine his reply to a statement to Willis, but embodied also a reply to the steel workers.

Kellogg uses the usual subterfuges when writing of the case of Saklatvala. He refers to the espionage law of May 1918, which was continued in force by an act of congress in March, 1921. This law is stretched to cover the case of Saklatvala and save the United States government from being overthrown by a lone Communist member of the British parliament.

It is most improbable that Kellogg's reply will satisfy the steel workers of Warren. There is one thing that they want: to have Saklatvala come to this country and tell the workers about conditions in England and India—and in Soviet Russia, for the workers understand that he has also been in that country.

Evidently the United States government and the capitalists of this country do not want the workers to hear their own, the workers' side of the question. The capitalist papers tell us enough about conditions in India and in Great Britain. Does Kellogg think that he can keep the workers ignorant of these conditions by excluding Saklatvala? The exclusion of Saklatvala is proof conclusive that Kellogg and his colleagues dare not face facts—and are trying to keep the workers in the dark.

Australian Workers Roused Against the Deportation Menace

SYDNEY, Australia — (FP) — On Sept. 9 representatives of all labor councils throughout Australia held a conference at Sydney to decide what action should be taken if the anti-Labor federal government deported any trade union leaders because of helping the British strikers in their fight against the shipowners. The deportation legislation was taken as a direct challenge to the Labor movement. It was recommended that in the attempted deportation of any unionist no worker should in any way assist. The sea-transport workers were called upon to give legal assistance.

For the repeal of the legislation the aid of the courts is to be invoked while deportation will be made a burning issue in the November federal elections.

Regarding the British seamen's strike, the conference recommended that "all unions be called upon to pay a levy of 1¼% per week of the earnings of the workers.

Cal's Speech Writer Quits to Get Fat Job Glorifying Oil Trust

Ambitious plans for a campaign to glorify the oil industry and its dominating personalities in the eyes of the American public—as a counter-attraction to the trial of the Teapot Dome fraud cases—are reported in connection with the hiring of Judson C. Welliver, former journalist and magazine "muckraker" as their chief of publicity. The American Petroleum Institute is said to have paid Welliver $35,000 a year to leave his White House job, where he wrote presidential speeches and letters and opinions.

Standard Oil of Indiana is identified as the dominating force in the Institute. Doheny, Sinclair, Stewart and many other men involved in the oil fraud scandals are prominent in its activities.

ance Co[illegible] Opening of Lottery to Pay State Debts

PARIS, Nov. 6.—The republican group in the French chamber of deputies and the senate, among which are Poincare, Millerand and former finance minister Francois Marsal are considering means of having France raise money to meet her budgetary expenses by means of a lottery similar to that used by the Italian Mussolini government.

These leaders of the republican party of France propose to establish lottery booths all over the country by means of which the state will be able to meet its expenses.

Purcell in Chicago on International Tour for World Labor Unity

this development of capitalism in these nations would imperil the conditions of the trade unionists of all countries and in the following words shows that only one thing can save the workers from this fate.

"Unless trade unionists of all countries forget their differences and unite in forming a sanitary cordon of adequate wages and working conditions about these countries the workers in the more advanced countries will soon find themselves out of employment, because production will be concentrated in the backward countries where labor is exploited and material is cheap. We must help unionize the workers of India, China, South Africa and other lands where the machine is penetrating."

In discussing the moves being made for unity by the trade unionists of Russia and England, he stated:

"We have joined with the 6,000,000 Russian trade unionists of the all-Russian central executive committee of trade unions to promote the unity movement. By no means all of the Russian trade unionists are Communists. We hope to take in the 6,000,000 catholic trade unionists affiliated with the clerical international and those other millions of European workers who belong to the so-called dissident unions, and of course we desire earnestly that the workers of America shall co-operate with us."

The DAILY WORKER is unable to give a report of the two meetings that Purcell will address on world trade union unity at the Wicker Park Hall, and the North Side Turner Hall, due to the fact that The DAILY WORKER went to press too early. Tho a full report will be in the next issue.

Wall St. Imperialism Orders Deportation of Cuban Workers

Blame for the deportations and arrests which have been going on in Cuba is laid directly at the door of Wall Street, by the Cuban section of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League, which points out that President Machodo is being regularly visited by General E. R. Crowder, the American ambassador.

The Cuban section of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League, established only a few months ago, has been very active, demanding categorically that the United States government relinquish its "thinly-veiled protectorate" over Cuba, consent to the abrogation of the Platt amendment and immediately withdraw all military and naval forces from Gunatenamo Bay.

Headquarters of the Cuban section are at Gral. Suarez, 216-218, Havana. A special secretariat for foreign correspondence has been set up, under charge of A. Bernal del Rieszo. Julio A. Mella, arrested during the recent raids, continues as general secretary.

Popular Program Is Scheduled by Chicago Opera

The program for the second week of Chicago Civic Opera includes "Aida" Tuesday, Nov. 10, with Raisa, Van Gordon, Cortis, Kipnis and Lazzari, Polacco conducting; Wednesday "Otello", with Sawyer (debut) Claessens, Marshall, Rimini, Kipnis, Mojica and Oliviero, Moranzoni conducting; Thursday, "Il Trovatore" with Muzio, Homer, Kerr, Cortis, Bonelli, and Lazzari, Weber conducting. Friday, "Der Rosenkavalier" with the same cast as the premiere performance.

Saturday matinee, a second performance of "La Traviata" with Muzio, d'Hermanoy, Correnti, Hackett, Steel, Beck, and Torti; Moranzoni conducting. Saturday night, at popular prices, "La Tosca" with Sawyer, Ansseau, Formichi; Moranzoni conducting. Sunday afternoon, Nov. 15, Samson and Delilah" with Homer, Marshall, Cotreuil, Formichi, Defrere; Weber conducting.

Seeks $10,000 Damages.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 6.—Declaring that a rock hurled by the tires of one of its busses last May struck him in the head and made him deaf, Wylie Howard of Peru, state highway commission employe, asks $10,000 damages from the Inter-City Safety Coach company in a suit now on file in Marion superior court.

Allied Patriots Fighting for their Capitalism In the Home of Wall Street

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the Allied Patriotic Society, Inc., of New York City, meets in the new Army and Navy Building and unanimously passes resolutions commending John R. Voorhis, 96 years old, president of the board of elections, for striking the name of Benjamin Gitlow, Communist candidate for mayor, off the ballot.

It is easy for Communists to understand that the 96-year-old election board head is also vice-president of the allied patriots. The political agent of the capitalist state is also a leader in a non-official organization for the protection of that state. That is the case with all jingo, red-baiting outfits. Otherwise they would never be organized.

• • • •

The allied patriots gave Voorhis a standing vote endorsing his action. In reply Voorhis declared, "I only did my duty."

Voorhis, in taking office, no doubt swore to uphold the constitution, the declaration of independence, the bible and a lot of other documents supposedly sacred. Perhaps he had never read them. If he had, he was not very strongly impressed by the declarations for free speech, free press and free assemblage, and for the right of the people to change the form of government whenever they see fit. That was good enough for the colonists in 1776, when they wanted to get rid of the king's rule in this country, and had to resort to a seven years' revolution to do it. But it is not held to be applicable today.

When Voorhis did his duty it was on behalf of a government that sits on the lid trying to keep down discontent, that fears the wrath of the people underneath, just as King George the Third feared the colonists in the 18th century and sent his best soldiers to keep them intimidated and in servile obedience.

Of course the smug organs of capitalist "democracy" seek to conceal this situation. The New York World, mouthpiece of victorious Tammany Hall, in an editorial entitled, "Communism East and West," points out that California is sending a woman to prison for membership in the Communist Party, while New York City is placing the Communist Party ticket on the ballot. It says:

> "The result will be that California will be torn by a storm of dissension and the Communists will get publicity in the newspapers, and in addition will appear as a persecuted underdog, whereas New York goes its peaceful way and the Communist Party will be quietly snowed under on Tuesday."

• • • •

Since it does not take brains to write along the well-defined rut laid out for capitalist newspaper scribblers, this kept literary machine was no doubt justified in displaying his gross ignorance. That is what he gets paid for.

If he had followed events he would have known that Gitlow was barred from the ballot as the Communist candidate because a capitalist court convicted him of the same kind of an alleged crime that it is claimed Anita Whitney committed on the other side of the continent; violation of the state syndicalism law. The exploiters' United States supreme court has acted similarly in both cases. The loaded dice of employers' "justice" turn up the same prison sentences for both Ben Gitlow and Anita Whitney, altho more than 3,000 miles may separate New York from California. They could just as well have been on opposite sides of the earth. Capitalism everywhere operates in the self-same way.

• • • •

New York City isn't satisfied with ruling Gitlow off the ballot. The allied patriots, with the National Security League co-operating, are starting a drive to put the emblem of the Communist Party, the crossed hammer and sickle, off the ballot. It has hitherto been permitted to go on at the head of the Workers (Communist) Party column, that contained the names of such party candidates as were not under prison sentences.

All of which indicates that the home of Wall Street isn't comfortable in the midst of growing numbers of Communists. But to refuse Communist workers the right to vote their opinions at the polls on election day may result in giving the international bankers a little temporary surcease from worry. But it only succeeds in stirring the workers to greater efforts to build and organize their revolutionary power. Sleepless nights haunt only the bedsides of the enemies of the revolution.

BRITISH WIRELESS MEN WIN STRIKE WITH HELP OF POSTOFFICE UNION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Nov. 6.—The strike of the Marconi wireless operators and receiving clerks in London, Liverpool and Manchester ended today with the reinstatement of the nine operators who had been dismissed for reasons of economy. The strike crippled transcontinental and trans-Atlantic wireless communication.

The government wireless service was not affected by the walkout, which involved about 150 men.

When several messages marked "Via Marconi" were handed into the postoffice to be dispatched as telegrams, the postoffice staff protested against handling the messages, taking the ground that it would be equivalent to acting as strike breakers. Thereupon official instructions were given by the postoffice authorities that such messages should not be accepted for transmission during the strike.

Prison Management at San Quentin Proven Inhuman to Prisoners

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SAN QUENTIN, Cal.—(FP)—Open warfare between Warden Frank Smith and chairman of the board of prison directors George Van Smith reveals further deficiencies in San Quentin prison, where nearly 80 political prisoners are confined. Van Smith charges that four men are shut up in cells designed for one; the cells are old and have no toilets; several hundred convicts are obliged to wait at meal times because of inadequate dining facilities; the bathhouse must be kept crowded every hour of the day if the 2,900 convicts are to have even one bath a week; and drugs and liquor are smuggled in, while sex perversion is rampant.

EDUCATIONAL CIRCUIT ARRANGED BY DISTRICT EIGHT OFFICE

Work has elready been started for conducting classes in the "Elements of Communism" using the educational outlines prepared by the Communist International, in several important centers outside of Chicago.

Comrade Oliver Carlson, former director of the Workers' School in New York, is in charge of the course. The classes will begin the week of Nov. 16. Registration fee for the first semester of eight weeks is $1.50. Classes will be held in Gary on Monday evenings, in South Bend on Tuesday evenings, in Waukegan on Wednesday evenings, and in Milwaukee on Thursday evenings.

These classes are open to those sympathizing with and interested in the Communist movement as well as to members of the Workers Party and Young Workers League.

Place of meetings will be published in future issues of The DAILY WORKER.

MANUFACTURERS ATTACK LABOR UNIONS AT MEET

War on Child Labor Legislation

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 6.—In spite of the protestations of the college professors, preachers and the kept press that there is no class struggle, the labor-hating National Association of Manufacturers, which held its convention at the Statler Hotel, gives them all the lie.

Lauds A. F. of L. Stand on Russia.

The convention opened with a speech delivered by the association president John E. Edgerton. It was a tirade against the working class, teeming with hatred for the trade unions and lauds the open shop to the skies. The American Federation of Labor convention was highly praised, by this foe of organized labor, for its stand against the first workers' and farmers' republic, Soviet Russia.

Following his tirade, messages from Calvin Coolidge, Secretary of Labor Davis, were read praising the work of the National Association of Manufacturers, thus showing the identity of interest between the bosses controlling the association and their lackeys who are in the government at Washington.

Prepare New War.

Tho the workers were told that the world war would be the last war, Secretary of Labor Davis' message to the manufacturers dealt with how a mobilization of men and materials would take place in the next war.

A tremendous amount of glee was shown by the delegates when the report showing the advance of the open-shop was made to the convention. A resolution containing the usual line of bunk of giving the worker the right to work where and when he pleases and standing for the principle of the open-shop was passed.

Condemn Child Labor Laws.

Another resolution condemning laws that prohibit child labor was passed by the convention, in which they stated that they were opposed to child labor on principle but opposed the adoption of an amendment to the constitution prohibiting child labor as it was repugnant to the "traditional local responsibility of self government."

In another resolution the convention expressed itself in favor of letting a greater number of immigrants to enter the United States provided they first passed a rigid examination. In its resolution on immigration the association states that "we would not even be opposed to admission of Chinese except that the Chinaman has a way of going into business for himself and thus competing with the National Association of Manufacturers. We will even move our factories to China if we find it profitable."

Condemn "Reds."

Thruout the convention there was nothing but condemnation for those workers who were striving to make the unions fighting organs of the working-class in the struggle against capitalism and praise for those who stood for the antiquated craft union system and resisted all attempts at change. It seemed like a united front between Mr. Green and the National Association of Manufacturers

Cleveland to Have Free Speech Meeting

CLEVELAND, Nov. 6—An open air protest against the action of the police barring the Workers Party speakers from the streets will be held on the Public Square, Saturday afternoon, Nov. 7, at 4 o'clock.

Last Saturday, the police arrested a number of our speakers at the open-air meeting arranged to protest the attempt to murder Mathias Rakosi and 100 other workers in Hungary.

Every party member must be on the Public Square without fail to protest the action of the Cleveland police.

New Zealand Stays Wet.

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, Nov. 6.—New Zealand has decide to remain wet. The counting of the vote is as yet incomplete, but the results thus far ascertained show approximately that the prohibitionists cast 277,981 votes against 310,596 by their opponents.

MEMBERS OF POLISH PARLIAMENT DESCRIBE TORTURES OF WHITE RUSSIAN PEASANTS IN POLAND

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WARSAW, (I. R. A.)—Nov. 6.—Two members of the Polish parliament and prominent White Russian workers, Tarashkevitch and Ballin, have published an open letter which discloses the inquisition in southern White Russia. The mothers and children of the arrested White Russian prisoners appealed to Tarashkevitch and Ballin begging them to go and on the spot see for themselves the unheard of tortures which are being made use of by the police in their inquiries. The members of parliament immediately went to Bielostok, having in vain appealed to the prosecutor for permission to visit the prisoners. Tarashkevitch and Ballin describe the tortures of the peasants as follows:

"On the third day we received a declaration from 18 peasants, with a minute description of the tortures undergone. Of those who signed the declaration, the eldest is 23 years of age, the youngest is a girl of 14. They were hung up on iron bars, their heads were beaten against the wall, their fingers were broken one by one, their heads were steeped in pails of ice cold water, and then they were once more beaten into unconsciousness.

"We went out of the town," wrote the members of parliament, "in the direction of the barracks, where the 'enquiries' took place, in the hope of finding out something at least from a distance. The barracks, however, were surrounded by police cordons, for a distance of 200 meters. Nobody dared approach the place of torture.

"We returned to Bielostok and declared to the governor that we were willing to make a written statement refuting the accusations of torture, if we would be allowed to convince ourselves of the fact. The governor categorically refused this."

This letter, published by Tarashkevitch and Ballin, caused a great sensation in the official cricles.

CAL STILL WILLING TO LET LEWIS BREAK MINE STRIKE WITH SOFT COAL

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—Despite renewed pleas for federal intervention in the anthracite coal strike, now in its tenth week, there was little indication to-day that Pres. Coolidge plans change his "hands off" policy.

The president's principal advisers in the strike situation have advised him that there is no actual suffering for want of anthracite coal. Coolidge also is inclined to let congress wrestle with the problem and allow the union bituminous miners break the strike with soft coal.

Utmost Secrecy Veils Italian Debt Question

WASHINTON, Nov. 6.—The laborious analysis of facts and figures continued today to mark the Italian-American debt negotiations over the funding of Italy's $2,138,000,000 debt.

There will be no talk of terms, it was stated at the treasury, until all of the mass of data submitted by the Italians has been thoroly digested.

An example of the treasury's watchfulness to see that secrecy is maintained was given today when it was learned that a newspaper reporter was ordered out of the building last night. Guards declared treasury officials ordered all reporters barred while the conference was in progress.

Communist

The first American English daily Communist newspaper is making Labor history.

The Daily Worker has become such an important factor, by voicing the aspirations of workers in this country—and by leading the fight for the best interests of the working class—at the head of the increasing ranks of revolutionary workers grouped in the Workers (Communist) Party.

The Daily Worker is a mine of information on each step in the progress of world Labor—and its interpretation of news, aided by special articles, explain the forces behind each incident of importance to a worker.

Such a paper deserves its increasing circulation—and should receive your subscription.

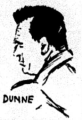
GOOD NEWS!

For Daily Worker Readers

Wm. F. Dunne, editor of The DAILY WORKER, goes to the anthracite coal fields next week to stay for two weeks.



About Wednesday, Nov. 11, daily stories will appear analyzing the situation in this scene of bitter struggle, bringing to workers the true conditions existing there:

The strike now in progress; living conditions; the trade unions; the betrayals of the workers by the officialdom; the police and the courts.

This picture of the struggles of miners, written by an outstanding writer of the American revolutionary movement, should receive the widest distribution.

PASTOR SUCCEEDS IN WINNING CASE AGAINST ETEENPAIN AFTER WAVING RED BUGABOO IN COURT

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 6.—Despite the mass of evidence presented by the Eteenpain proving the "clerical" behavior of Rev. John D. Lillback, the United States district court, after a trial that lasted two weeks, ordered the Eteenpain, a Communist Finnish daily, to pay the minister $15,000. The Eteenpain has appealed the case to a higher court.

The Rev. Lillback when confronted by many of the girls of the parish that he had hugged, kissed, fondled and made other advances to, under the guise of religious ceremony, accused the witnesses of being Communists, radicals, and anti-clericals who were united in a conspiracy to persecute him and trying to discredit him because he had attacked the Communists and had aided the United States government "to trace down many plots against the government." In the face of these red scares he was awarded the verdict.

Thruout the entire trial, the lawyers for Lillback did not even attempt to prove his innocence of the charges made by young girls and many of the married women of his parish which were published in the Eteenpain and for which the pastor was brot to trial, but raised the red bugaboo and tried to prove that all of the witnesses were in league with the Communists and out to persecute Lillback.

If It Can't Pay Good Wages It May as Well Go Out of Business

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 6.—Directors of the Gullet Gin Company (cotton gin—take note) located in Amite, near this city, unanimously voted to liquidate their affairs before giving into the demands of their employes who have been on strike for the past month for better wage conditions, and at the same time adopted a resolution that no committees would be recognized the company desiring to deal with their employes as individuals. The employes declined the offer and suggested that perhaps liquidation of the corporation would be the best for the interests of the community.

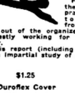
The Official Report of the British Trade Union Delegation to Soviet Russia
RUSSIA TODAY



The first publication in England of this most complete report of the British Trade Union Delegation to Soviet Russia, caused a great stir in the world trade union movement.

From all parts of the world came high praise for this historical document, from those workers in and out of the organized labor movement earnestly working for world trade union unity.

This report (including charts and maps) is an impartial study of every phase of life under the first world's workers' government. Politics, Finance, Army, Religion, Education, Trade Unions, Wages—these and other subjects are analyzed by the Delegation who travelled unhindered and free to investigate in all sections of Soviet Russia.

It is a complete, impartial and dignified document of one of the world's leading bodies of Labor.—Including a special report on the famous "Zinoviev" letter and the Red International of Labor Unions.

STEEL TRUST GETS $12,000,000 MORE PROFIT THAN IN 1924, YET OPERATING ONLY 72 PCT. CAPACITY

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

A profit of $42,400,412 was the U. S. Steel corporation's reward for buying labor cheap and selling its product dear in the third quarter of 1925. This exceeds by $12,000,000 the profit of the same period last year and is sufficient to pay both regular and extra dividends twice over.

Slack Times For Labor But Good Profit.

An extraordinary thing about these profits is that they were made by a corporation averaging only 72 per cent of capacity production. Even in July when the average fell to 68 per cent U. S. Steel made a profit of $12,908,513. The steel trust charges prices which produce double dividends while operating less than three-fourths capacity.

Profits the first nine months of the year amounted to $122,907,625, equal after all interest charges and preferred dividends to $9.44 on each $100 share. Indications point to more than $13 a share for the entire year. Financial quarters are full of hints that continuation of such high profits will be found to justify an increase in the seven per cent dividends now being paid regularly on over half a billion dollars of common stock which originally represented no investment whatsoever.

Gary's Rule of Gold.

Only five days before announcing these excessive profits chairman Gary said: "If one should ask whether or not there is any panacea for the ills that sometimes appear to the moral, political, social or economic life of the nation, the answer is, 'Yes, by the general adoption and practice of the golden rule.' If any one protests that this is impracticable such a one, of course, refers to others and does not include himself. In determining the application of the golden rule, not only individuals but aggregations should become active participants."

Gary also suggests that "all of us must constantly and conscientiously look into our own hearts and strive to overcome what, if anything, is wrong." Does he find in his own heart the suggestion that such mammoth profits warrant an increase in the 40 cents an hour basic wage of the corporation of which he is dictator? Or a reduction in prices of products which affect the price of practically every item in the cost of living today?

Quite the contrary! He brings out of his heart the proposal that steel magnates once again form a ring to raise prices and wring even larger profits out of the country. That is Gary's idea—the golden rule inside the employing class—but exploitation for labor. Gary isn't waiting for pie in the sky.

SYRIAN QUESTION MAY STAY FALL OF PAINLEVE REGIME

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, France, Nov. 6.—Premier Painleve, whose government only exists by sufferance of his enemies, is stalling for time and using the syrian upheaval to prolong his stay. Discussion of the Syrian question was to come up today and would have probably brought the crisis, but Painleve asked that discussion be postponed until General Sarrail, deposed commissioner of Syria, returns and reports on conditions there.

Meanwhile a full fledged revolution is in progress in Syria with the one object of clearing the country of the French.

State Interstate Commissions Fight for "State's Rights"

Since the recent decision of the interstate commerce commission granting the Chicago & Northwestern the right to increase its suburban commuter rates 20 per cent, many of the members of the Illinois commission, which claimed jurisdiction over this fare increase as being interstate commerce, has hopped onto the bandwagon with Minnesota, Kentucky, Indiana and Ohio in the demand that "state's rights" be respected and are preparing to carry their fight into the next session of congress.

The first campaign to be launched aimed to defeat the move being made by the thirty railroad presidents in the Association of Railroad and Utilities Commissioners to pass legislation at the next session of congress to have federal control of motor busses now engaged in interstate traffic. This move of the railroads is an attempt to kill off the bus lines that are now eating into the profits of the roads.

The state bodies are fighting this move claiming that each state has the right to control the traffic withn its state.

The Ninth Year Dawns

The Bolshevik revolution, that eight years ago tomorrow was hailed by the advanced section of the world proletariat, still marches from triumph to triumph. Eight years ago the bourgeois world was infuriated at the spectacle of Soviet Russia defiantly raising the crimson banner of world revolution. The kept press was unable then, as now, to find words with which to villify the revolution.

Predictions of dire calamity to the revolution echoed ever more feebly until finally the capitalist world had to recognize that it was here to stay.

For the working class of the world during the rising tide of revolution after the imperialist war, Bolshevik Russia was the inspiration for determined struggle. In the dark days when the revolutionary tide subsided it was the ray of hope that enabled us to struggle aganist overwhelming odds.

Not merely does the working class turn toward this outpost of the world revolution for help and guidance, but the oppressed of the earth, whether they live in New York or Damascus, London or Canton, Persia or the vast stretches of the Asiatic desert, recognize the Soviet Union as their own, the one great bulwark against the frightfulness of imperialist despotism.

November 7, 1917, is the outstanding date in the history of the world, the date on which, to use the term of Engels, man began to "emerge from the realm of necessity in the kingdom of freedom."

Instead of reckoning time from the beginning of the christian era, the calendars will eventually be revised and this era, the period of world revolution, will date from the storming of the Winter Palace and the proclaiming of the revolutionary dictatorship of the proletariat.

A Fighting Englishman

Chicago labor has as its guest today Albert A. Purcell, president of the Amsterdam International Federation of Trade Unions, long prominent in the labor movement in Britain, and outstanding advocate of world trade union unity. He does not come with a message of submission or despair for the working class, but with a program, the fulfillment of which will cement the labor movement of the world into a powerful force aiding in the liberation of mankind from the thralldom of wage slavery. His challenge is a call to labor to forge its own means of freedom.

Aware of the lesson of history that never at any time in the age-long struggle of oppressed against oppressor has the slave-master sought the liberation of his slave, Purcell knows that if labor would be free it alone must strike the blow.

Not being a Communist, Purcell does not emphasize the one indespensible thing for the revolution, the necessity for the creation of a political party that will lead the working class to the overthrow of the capitalist system. But as Communists we nevertheless hail his coming, as we recognize that given unity of the trade union forces of the world the struggle for the elementary demands of the working class will take on new forms that will lead to an understanding of the necessity for a political struggle against imperialism in all parts of the world.

Purcell's visit on the eve of the eighth anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution serves also to emphasize the duty of labor thruout the capitalist world to overthrow its treacherous leadership and form an alliance with the unions of the victorious proletarian state.

Because of his stand for the fundamental interests of the working class he receives no welcome from the slimy servants of the bourgeoisie masquerading as leaders of labor in this country, his coming is not the subject for servile fawning on the part of the capitalist editors, as is the case when prominent members of the British ruling class stop here. But the masses of conscious labor welcome him as a valiant fighter in the interests of the working class and receive him with acclaim not because he is an Englishman, but because he speaks in the interest of labor thruout the world.

MOSCOW TRADE UNIONS PROTEST AGAINST RAKOSI COURT-MARTIAL

MOSCOW, Nov. 6.—At a protest meeting arranged by the Moscow Trade Union Council against the white terror now prevailing in Horthy-ruled Hungary, Mathias Rakosi, Zoltan Weinberger, Kathrina Haman, Goegoes and Oeri were elected as honorary members of the presidium.

Comrade Bela Kun made a detailed report upon the situation of the Hungarian working class movement. He pointed out that altho the working class was once again beginning to mobilize its force, the aims of the present struggle of the Hungarian working class are to better the economic situation of the exploited workers, to achieve trade union unity and to legalize the Communist Party.

Bela Kun pointed out that Rakosi and his comrades had also worked for these aims, but that they were far removed from any intention of organizing any armed struggle for power. The information of Bela Kun upon the treacherous and provocative role of the Hungarian social-democracy in the attempts now being made to crush the Hungarian working class once again, in the handing over of Rakosi to the vengeful bourgeoisie of Hungary, caused a storm of indescribable indignation in the thickly packed masses. Bela Kun concluded with the declaration that the powerful and united protest action of the international proletariat could save the Hungarian comrades from death.

England to Lead Reaction.

Brown of England, joined in the protest against the white terror in Hungary and pointed out that the English bourgeoisie, which was at the moment flinging prominent English Communists into prison, was eager to take over the role of leader of the international reaction, but that this attempt would be defeated by the resistance of the English working class.

Losovsky of the Red International of Labor Unions, pointed out that the social-democratic trade union bureaucracy in Hungary and in other countries was prepared to use all measures to force back the revolutionary trade union movement. Expulsion from the unions and denunciations to the police are equally acceptable methods to the yellow trade unions in their struggle against the revolutionary trade union wing.

Send Protests to Embassies.

After the speeches of Dobrogianu and Gera of Roumania and workers from the Moscow factories, the meeting adopted a protest resolution in favor of Rakosi and his comrades by acclamation. The meeting further elected a delegation to hand the protest to all the embassies in Moscow. The meeting also dispatched telegrams to various working class organizations in all countries, to the Anglo-Soviet Trade Union Unity Committee, the general council of the British Trade Union Congress, to the parliamentary labor party, etc., in which the international working class was requested in the name of the 500,000 members of the Moscow International Red Aid organization, to do everything possible to prevent the trial of Rakosi before an extraordinary court.

After the Bourgeoisie, the Proletariat

By MAX BEDACHT

THE proletarian revolution in Russia ended the short rule of the Russian bourgeoisie. Bourgeois and proletarian revolution were simultaneous phenomena there. The proletariat had grown so strong and so conscious in Russia, even under the old regime, that it could no longer be used by the bourgeoisie as an instrument of the latter's revolution. On the contrary; the proletariat very deliberately used the bourgeois revolution as the basis for its own immediate struggle for power.

Revolution is that period of history in which the social changes that take place gradually but continuously have reached the point where they come in direct conflict with the outward forms of society. Revolution is the process of a fundamental change of these outward forms. This change is necessary for the continuity of the progress of society. Without the safety valve of a revolution the inner forces of society find only one way of freeing themselves and that is by throwing society back into the throes of unlimited reaction.

The process of revolution is not a quiet, orderly phenomena.

SOCIAL changes are a steady stream of social development and progress. The existing outward forms of society act as a dam against this process and stowe up and hem in tremendous forces. Thus two contradicting forces are wrestling for supremacy. The old social forms act as a break to social development, trying to slow it up and to stop it entirely. At the same time, this progress is hammering at the fetters of obsolete forms. The onward pressure of progress doubles its force in the same ratio as the resistance of the old order increases.

Revolution is the process of breaking the dam of the old order. All forces of social progress are freed by it. With renewed vigor and increased speed the stream of onward development of society rushes forward to a higher perfection. Thus revolutions become, as Karl Marx expresses it so graphically, the locomotives of history.

From the foregoing it becomes at once clear that to understand a revolution it is necessary to understand the forces that make it. To comprehend a revolution its sources must be understood and its origin investigated.

THE beginning of the proletarian revolution lies at the end of the bourgeois revolution. The beginning of the political rule of the bourgeosie is at the same time the beginning of the proletarian revolution. The rule of the bourgeoisie develops the objective forces of the proletarian revolution, the means of production, and the subjective forces, the proletariat.

The proletarian revolution in Russia is no exception to this rule. The special conditions under which that revolution took place, however, present difficulties which the international mensheviks have not yet succeeded in understanding. This gentry insists that since the proletarian revolution in Russia followed so closely on the heels of the bourgeois revolution, (they were only nine months apart), the bourgeoisie had no chance to develop the objective and subjective forces of the proletarian revolution. Therefore, they reason, this revolution was out of order. With this abstract formula the social democrats cover their very concrete opposition to the proletarian revolution.

THE bourgeoisie always had a better understanding, at least of the subjective factors of revolution. In 1848 the German bourgeoisie betrayed its own revolution because it was aware of the existence of the proletariat as a factor to be reckoned with. The German bourgeoisie then knew that it would be incomparably harder for it to suppress the independent revolutionary aspirations of the workers in 1848 than it was for the English revolution to suppress the Levellers in 1649, or for the French revolution to suppress the followers of Badeuf in 1796. The German bourgeoisie saw no other sure way to prevent the proletarian revolution than by making its peace with the old regime and by solving its own need for a social change thru a compromise with the old order.

The revolutionary hopes of Karl Marx in those years were based on the expectation that a bourgeois revolution could and would be turned, within reasonable time, into a proletarian once.

THE revolutionary upheavals of Europe of the 18th and 19th centuries were not without an echo in Russia. The French revolution had a very distinct reverberation in Russia; but no upheaval resulted. Revolutionary slogans and maxims were imported. But there was no class to lend revolutionary energy and force to these slogans. Russia was a backward country. The class on the back of which the whole burden of autocracy rested, the peasantry, looked backward for its salvation, not forward. It looked upon village Communism of the past, compared to which, speaking from the standpoint of economy, even production on the basis of serfdom represented social progress. Besides the peasantry was divided into tens of thousands of little villages that did not even know of each other's existence and divided into dozens of nationalities with different languages. Autocracy on the other hand, presented itself as a strong centralized power.

But in the middle of the 19th century capitalism came into Russia; as a foreigner at first. Soon, however, the stranger became acclimatized. While capitalism could not conquer politically it did conquer economically. Absoluteism had to make its bow to the newcomer.

The wide spread revolutionary tendencies among the Russian intelligentsia was a manifestation of the will to political power of the bourgeoisie. This revolutionary bourgeoisie could not find any allies and fighters except among the proletariat and the peasantry. Thus the revolutionary bourgeois intelligentsia became to a large degree the leader of the revolutionary movements of the masses in Russia.

But when in the '80s and '90s the revolutionary aspirations of the proletariat became more clearly defined and a Marxian proletarian movement developed, then the revolutionary ardor of the bourgeoisie cooled off very decidedly. The growth of the subjective forces of a proletarian revolution made the bourgeoisie tremble before its own revolution.

The Russian bourgeoisie therefore attempted to solve its problem in the same way the German bourgeoisie had solved it in 1848: by way of compromise with autocracy.

THEN came the world war. The barbarian greed for conquest dominating the autocracy, very well chimed in with the imperialist aspiration of the Russian bourgeoisie.

During the war, however, the conflict between the bourgeoisie and the autocracy became irreconciliable. The state apparatus of autocracy was dominated by greedy and extravagant aristocracy. Conquest was for this class merely a new source of graft. War itself developed into that. Like in the Russo-Japanese war so again in the great world war graft and corruption became the order of the day. While the bourgeoisie was bent on making graft at all costs, even at the cost of victory. Here the conflict between autocracy and bourgeoisie became acute.

While the most clear-sighted leaders of the bourgeoisie dreaded revolution yet history told them categorically; hic rhodus, hic salta! Here is the rose and here you dance!

But, alas, the bourgeoisie had waited too long. The proletariat of Russia had long been born as an independent class. It did not appear merely as a potential revolutionary force within the womb of capitalism, but as an independent force alongside of capitalism. The bourgeoisie did not appear as a young and vigorous class, proud of its revolutionary aspirations; but it appeared as an old and senile class, shaking with fear at the thought of revolution. The working class, on the other hand, was no longer an infant strong enough only to help its parent, but it was a full grown giant, confident, vigorous and self-conscious. This giant, unlike the bourgeoisie, was not afraid of revolution. It welcomed it. And, against the wishes and theories of the international social-democrats, this giant of the working class pushed the tottering bourgeoisie aside into a common grave with autocracy and collected its lawful inheritance, political power.

Eight years it has maintained this power against a world of enemies. It has proven its right to the title of ruler by the fact of its rule and has thus shoved all contrary theories down the throats of their originators, the anti-proletarian social-democrats.

IMPERIALISM IN SANTO DOMINGO

By JOSEPH FREEMAN.

AMERICAN control over Santo Domingo was strengthened this week by the ratification of two treaties between the United States and the Caribbean republic.

By one of these treaties Santo Domingo confirms all the acts of the American military occupation, which lasted from 1916 to 1924. Among the acts so confirmed were the levying of taxes, the granting of concessions, and the floating of loans through American bankers. The second treaty rearranges the distribution of Dominican funds, which are under American control. It also extends the treaty forced upon Santo Domingo in 1907. The extension is to run until Santo Domingo pays off its debt on the loans floated by American bankers in 1918 and 1922.

Bankers' Scheme.

THE new treaties grant the American customs receiver general of Santo Domingo the power to apply revenues for paying interest and amortization on these loans, and in addition opens the way for a new loan of $25,000,000 to be floated in the United States. The bulk of the customs revenues collected by the American receiver general is applied to paying off the American bankers; only what is left is turned over to the Dominican government.

The purpose of these treaties was to extend American control over the Dominican republic. America's excuse in 1904 for invading Santo Domingo was that the native government was having trouble with foreign creditors, chiefly France, which threatened to send warships to collect the debts claimed by its bondholders. In 1922, when Santo Domingo's bonds were held by American bankers, the state department thought that the Caribbean republic was paying off its debts too rapidly, and was approaching the point where it could claim complete freedom. In June 1922 Secretary of State Hughes announced that the United States would withdraw its troops, if Santo Domingo signed treaties recognizing all the acts of the American military occupation, extending the 1907 treaty until its debts to American bankers were paid off, extending the powers of the American receiver general of customs and opening the way for a new loan by American bankers. If these treaties were ratified, Secretary Hughes declared, elections could be held for a native government and the United States troops would be withdrawn.

Resist Loan.

THE treaties were secretly negotiated in 1924, after which American troops were withdrawn and the present native government of Santo Domingo was elected. When the secrecy surrounding the treaties was lifted, nationalist Dominican leaders vigorously protested against what they considered America's attempt further to enslave their country. Seventeen out of the thirty members of the native chamber of deputies signed a "Pact of Honor" in which they bound themselves not to vote for the treaties. They declared that these treaties involve "a serious danger for the sovereignity of the nation;" and that the contemplated $25,000,000 loan which is "the basis and the motive" of the new treaties implies "the prolongation of the state of subordination to the United States for a period of time ranging from 25 years as a minimum to 100 years as a maximum."

The deputies who signed this pact absented themselves from the chamber whenever the treaties came up. The treaties were finally ratified by a parliamentary trick, when one of the signers of the pact entered the chamber and the president quickly declared a quorum and pushed the document through.

Military Backs Loan.

THE significance of the provision in the new treaty that American control is to extend until the debt to American bankers is paid off may be seen from the circular issued by Lee, Higginson and company of Boston which participated in the floating of the 1922 loan. This circular, sent out to prospective American investors, points out that the American military authorities in Santo Domingo guaranteed "the acceptance and validation of this bond issue by any government of the Dominican republic as a legal, binding and irrevocable obligation of the Dominican republic." The 1922 loan runs until 1942. A letter to Lee, Higginson and company from the United States naval officer in charge of the department of finance and commerce in Santo Domingo assured the bankers that Dominican customs duties "shall be collected and applied by an official appointed by the president of the United States and that the loan now authorized shall have first lien upon such customs revenues."

Though the American military government of Santo Domingo has given way to a native civil government, the treaties ratified this week confirm this and all other acts of the American military government.

Rail Union Delegates to Submit Proposals to Other Conferences

The demands submitted by the committee of ten to the western general chairmen's meeting has just closed in the Morrison Hotel for the restoration of the war-time wages will now be submitted to the Eastern and Southern General Chairmen's Association meetings, where representatives of the eastern and southern railroads of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and Order of Railroad Conductors will pass upon the demands made by the Chicago meeting and then the union officials will present them to the employers in the negotiations for a new scale.

All details as to the demands for working conditions and means to be used to gain the wage increase wil be kept in secrecy until after the meetings in the other two sections.

LABOR DEFENDER TO APPEAR ON DECEMBER 1

Will Voice Needs of the Class War Victims

The Labor Defender, an illustrated monthly magazine to voice the fight for release of all class war prisoners will make its appearance on December 1st next. It will be published by the International Labor Defense with offices at 23 South Lincoln Street, Chicago, Illinois.

There are many victims of the class struggle in the United States who are now almost unheard of. They are rotting away in the dungeons of capitalism but almost forgotten. Long and bitter fights to release them have failed and it appears that many have lost courage and hope that those whom the capitalists have succeeded in getting a stranglehold on can ever be freed.

Voice of Working Class Martyrs.

The Labor Defender will probe the barred cages of the master class and shed a new light on those working class martyrs who have spent many years away from their homes and their friends bereft of fresh air and the pleasure of participate in the movement of working class freedom.

The story of Ford and Suhr, of Mooney and Billings, of McNamara and Schmitt and of many others will again be told and the fight for their liberation will be given a fresh urge.

Right now Richard Ford who had already spent almost twelve years in Folsom prison, California is again in the toils, threatened with death on the scaffold. There is a hardly a state in the union that has not its quota of workers doing penance for their loyalty to the cause. They must not be forgotten. Furthermore they must not rot in jail.

The first issue of The Labor Defender will contain an article by the rebel poet Ralph Chaplin. He will tell the story of Sacco and Vanzett who are sitting in the shadow of the electric chair in Massachusetts.

The Zeigler frame-up will be treated by Thurber Lewis who investigated the case on the spot for the International Labor Defense. It will be illustrated with pictures of the defendants, the mine where the defendants sweated for their masters and the union hall where the shooting occured.

The story of the Rakosi trial in Hungary and the campaign waged, by the American workers in his behalf; the story of the Ford and Suhr arrest and trial twelve years ago, the Crouch and Trumbull case; the Merrick case in Massachusetts and the other Merrick case in Pittsburgh—those and many others will be told in the first issue of The Labor Defender. Pictures depicting the class struggle in America and all over the world will be an important feature of the magazine.

The Labor Defender will sell for ten cents a copy. Subscription is $1.00 a year.

THE REVOLT IN SYRIA - -

By H. M. Wicks

UP from the ashes of Damascus the groans of the victims of French imperialism have become transformed into fierce imprecations that strike responsive chords in every part of the vastness of the Mohammedam world. Tens of thousands have been murdered within a few day's time. The city that thru the ages has stood as the pride and glory of the world of Islam, situated between east and west, whose streets have respounded to the tread of many conquerors and countless generations, lies again at the feet of a conqueror.

In its time Damascus has been under the domination successively of Hebrews, Assyrians, Persians, Macedonians, Romans, Saracens and Turks. But thru all the ages it has never witnessed such fiendish excesses as are practiced by the French of today.

BY virtue of the treaty of Versailles the French vandals roam the highways of Syria. The very presence of French forces in that territory brands the conspiracy at Versailles, where those ancient buzzards of imperialism —Wilson, Lloyd George, Clemenceau, Orlando—intoned sombre sentences about democracy, liberty, self-determination of nations, a ghastly lie. The Syrians believed the soft words of the imperialist nations. When beautiful pictures of self-determination, of freedom for all forever, were presented to them, they believed them. At the close of the war general elections for a congress were held. This congress met in Damascus and proclaimed an independent Syrian government. In spite of this decision, the imperialist designs of Britain and France decreed otherwise. Britain secured mandates over territory rich in oil and of strategic advantages in maintaining her far flung colonial empire. Among other considerations France secured the mandate over Syria.

BETWEEN March, 1921, and August 1925, there were nine uprising in Damascus that had to be put down by force of arms. In September, 1923, the Syrians boycotted the fake elections arranged by the French and insisted that the mandate had no justification under the terms of the treaty of Versailles.

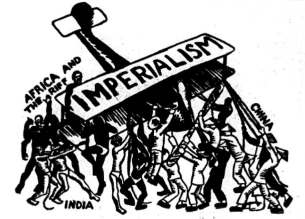
When the French mandate was granted and the military occupation began, the duly elected government of Syria was declared a band of outlaws. A request was then made to permit the forming of a provisional government under supervision of French political officials, and withdrawal of the military power. This was considered a piece of impudence by the French bandits and the entire government was arrested and thrown in jail.

EVERY appeal was held in open contempt and those who dared raise their voices, even to protest violation of the treaty, were accused of treason. Brute force alone prevailed.

Unspeakable indignities were heaped upon the population. General Serrail, the French high commissioner and his underlings, outraged every section of Damascus and preyed upon the whole countryside. Troops of semi-savages from the most backward French colonies were encamped within the city and, in order to keep them peaceful, brothels wore established for their amusement and each section of the city was forced to furnish its quota of women for this purpose.

In addition to this frightfulness a number of male relatives of these victims were tortured to death by the soldiery because they were caught endeavoring to impart their knowledge of conditions to travelers. There could be but one answer to this terror—armed revolt.

THROTTLE THE ENGINE OF DEATH AND DESTRUCTION



"The hour of liberation of North Africa and Arabia from the rule of French, English and Italian imperialism is near at hand."

The revolt came. It originated in an unexpected source. As French rule became more dominant thruout Syria, it extended to the mountain country of the Druses. These tribesmen had never been conquered by any ruler. They proposed to France that they be permitted to share in the government of the territory they inhabited. The Druse tribesmen received the customary French reply—the mailed fist. An army corps was sent against them. They rose and cut it to pieces in the first conflict.

THEN began the series of battles that culminated in the proclamation of the republic on last Wednesday. When the news of the valiant struggle of the Druse tribesmen reached the Arabs the smouldering fires of hatred burst into flame.

Crowds gathered in the villages and discussed the situation. The French military machine ordered dispersal of the street crowds. With the most savage fury the troops assailed the Syrians. Twenty-five thousand of them were murdered in two weeks. As a means of intimidating the inhabitants the troops strapped dead bodies of their victims on camels and paraded them thru the streets of Damascus. Instead of inspiring terror, these acts aroused the fury of the masses. Street fighting began. Terrible reprisals ensued. For more than fifty hours the city was a veritable inferno. Machine guns, hand-grenades, poison gas, airplane bombs, armoured cars and tanks; all the equipment of modern warfare was brought into action against the population of the city. Damascus was subdued. In the smouldering ruins the uniformed French soldiers ghoulishly prowled among the dead, stealing jewelry and other valuables, even cutting off the fingers and ears of their victims because it required too much work otherwise to remove the jewels.

LIKE wild-fire the story of the storming of Damascus spread thruout Syria. Messengers were dispatched to every part of the Mohammedan world carrying the news of the ghastly rule of the French. Armed bands spontaneously sprang up and consolidated with others. Armies were improvised, commanders chosen, and the region between Damascus and Homs cleared of French forces in a few days. New recruits were thrown into Syria to aid the French, but the native forces in the towns and villages fought them off.

Three large armed forces were operating. One under Hassan el Kharsat, another under Gamma Sussa, and the third under Rama Danubi Shallash. Hasis L. Bakri, former leader of the nationalist 'people's party," whose house had been burned by the French in the storming of Damascus, and who was compelled to flee the city to save his life, succeeded in gaining influence among the rebellious tribesmen and bringing many of them under his influence.

After hasty negotiations in the thick of the fighting these forces were unified under the leadership of Bakri. He is now the military leader of the forces operating between Damascus and Homs eighty miles to the north, is gaining adherents daily from large groups between Homs and Aleppo. A republic has been proclaimed with Bakri as provisional president and headquarters will be established at Homs. With the authority of the provisional government behind him, Bakri will appeal to the mandates commission of the league of nations. This will do him little good, except inasmuch as it will expose to his followers and the oppressed of the colonial world the fact that the league will not support their cause. Great Britain will hesitate to support a policy of endorsing insurrection in the mandated areas, because it would find its own domination challenged. If Britain should come to the aid of Syria she would be confronted with demands for independence from Palestine. Instead of aid to the struggling Syrians, British forces stand menacingly at the border ready to help stifle the uprisings at the first indication of danger to its own domains.

TO free the soil of Arabia from the despotism of France the imperialist forces will have to be scourged from the land. That can be achieved only by a determined insurrection, under the leadership of men asking no quarter and giving none. At the same time such a terrific campaign of propaganda against Britain must be launched that that government will hesitate to take action for fear of arousing to fury the masses suffering under its own yoke.

That the rebellious armies now forming will be able to wipe out with blood and fire the rapacious army of French imperialism is quite probable. Already vast hordes are sweeping north from the deserts of Arabia in response to the call of Syria. One thing is certain, even if the French are not completely routed, they cannot suppress the rebellion, as the Druses can retire to the mountain country and hold off the French indefinitely.

The conflict arising in Syria is not confined to that land alone, but is a part of the general rise of the oppressed colonies against the rapacious greed of imperialism, Already coordinating influences are at work to influence the colonial world both of Asia and Afric; from the northwestern coast of Africa, where the Riffians under Abd-el-Krim are stubornly resisting the combined forces of France and Spain, thru Egypt and Palestine to Syria, from thence to Arabia and into India. An ambitious campaign, designed to drive European capitalism out of Africa and Asia, is already under way. Homs and Aleppo are centers of propaganda against England, France and Italy. From Cairo another flood of subversive literature is going out. From Morocco goes a steady stream of propaganda.

ABLE men, thoroughly familiar with the colonial and mandate problem, are in charge of this work. The chief agent for Syria is Abd-ul-Rahman Shabander, who as foreign minister in the provisional government of Syria, was arrested by the French military and escaped from the country, and who now directs the propaganda bureau engaged in spreading hatred against France. He, like the new provisional president of Arabia, is a member of the nationalist "people's party."

One document put out by that party signed, "the committee of liberation of Syria," declares the French generals are a group of assassins and says "the hour of liberation of North Africa and Arabia from the yoke of French, English and Italian oppression is near at hand."

The Riffians, from the north of Africa, send the following greeting to the struggling Syrians and Druses:

"We, the central committee for the liberation of North Africa great with joy the heroic uprising in Damascus. The patience of Araby is exhausted. The fire of the revolution is blazing on. You have acted like brave men. Help your Riffian brethren. Get the Mohammedan soldiers to desert the French."

GENERAL SARRAIL, the leader of the brigands who ravaged Damascus has been removed and another figure head appointed as commissioner of Syria. The removal of one marionette will never change the hatred of the oppressed Syrians into acceptance of French bondage. In passing it is noteworthy that Serrail is a friend and supporter of the party of the socialist ex-premier Herriot, and that the socialists strenously protested against the removal of Serrail. It is consistent with the heroes of the social-pacifist era, recently closed, that the most outrageous crimes against colonials should be laid at their door.

The fires of Damascus may forge the sword that will drive from two continents the mercenary forces of capitalism, just as the first swords of Damascus beat off the ancient conquerors.

In this struggle for national liberation the oppressed masses of Asia and Africa have with them the class conscious proletariat of the imperialist countries who will use their power to cripple at home the armed forces and the industries that maintain them, until such time as we become strong enough to administer the death blow to all imperialism.

Maneuvers of Gompersism Against Unity

Editor's Note.—While this article by Bucharin on the question of world trade union unity was written before Gompers' death, and tells of his activities against the unity of the workers, nevertheless, everything said holds true of the officialdom that now rules after Gompers. It applies very aptly to William Green, who succeeded Gompers as president of the American Federation of Labor. It is therefore, being published at this time while Albert A. Purcell is making his tour of the United States and Canada, urging his plea for the unity of the world's workers. It follows:

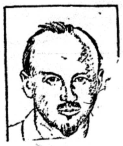
By N. BUCHARIN.

THE approchement between the trade unions of Great Britain and those of the Soviet Union is arousing the attention of the enemies of the revolutionary movement. This is quite understandable; it is not without reason that we speak not only of the historical, but of the world historical significance of the transformation which is taking place among the English working class.

Hence the excitement prevailing among our enemies; hence the Vorwarts (Germany) this rotten paper of a rotten social-democracy, has twice slandered Arthur A. Purcell in characterizing his speech as a forgery and has thus impudently deceived the German workers. Hence the Russian mensheviki are carrying on in their paper, Socialist News, a campaign against Edo Fimmen on account of his support of the unity of the international trade union movement. Hence the American Federation of Labor is drawn into the struggle. Hence Gompers is also beginning to interfere in "European affairs," this old henchman of American capital, this old servitor and cunning rascal who has grown grey in the service of his masters, this leader of the Federation of Labor to whom even Amsterdam appears as too "socialistic."



N. BUCHARIN.

MR. GOMPERS is commencing an intervention in Europe similar to that of his American masters, who cross the frontiers of their beloved fatherland and go hawking round with a sack full of dollars and put their fleet on the table of European democracy.

Mr. Gompers obviously believes he can rescue the position of the specially obstinate right section of the Amsterdam International. In this respect he is copying the late President Wilson, who for a long time tolerated the "barbarism" of Germany, but at the decisive moment "lost patience" and "intervened" in the European war, thus converting it into the world war and insuring the victory of the entente.

And in the same way Mr. Gompers also believes that the left tendencies in Amsterdam have acquired a dangerous preponderance. Please understand! The English trade unions are negotiating—not in dreams but in broad daylaght—with the Bolsheviki of the Soviet Union. And old Purcell shakes hands with the ex-convict Tomsky! Is not the end of the world approaching?

AND Mr. Gompers is rallying the forces of the American Federation of Labor and is beginning to speak of returning to the Amsterdam International in order to "rescue" it from the intolerable influence of our trade unions. It is quite obvious that Mr. Gompers will either endeavor to destroy the Anglo-Russian trade union bloc, or to suppress our trade unions within the Amsterdam International by isolating them from the revolutionary trade unions of other countries. It is only for this "noble" aim that the "trade unionist" American agency of capital has stirred itself.

Both English and Russian trade unions must be on the alert. For the mutual relations between these two strongest branches of the European trade union movement which have been established with such pains, can be exposed to a danger on the part of the American Federation of Labor, which did not break away from the Amsterdam International in order to fight on the side of the revolution, but because it has gone over unconditionally and completely, body and soul, to the side of American capitalism.

EVEN in the sphere of international politics Mr. Gompers adopts a definitely white-guardist line. While the British trade unions fought against the bourgeoisie under the slogan of the Anglo-Russian commercial treaty; whilst even the English labor party went into the election campaign under this banner, Mr. Gompers conducted a bitter fight against the de jure recognition of the Soviet Union. In other words, he, the alleged "labor leader" proved himself to be more reactionary than the English conservatives. And now, this gentleman, who has helped the conservatives to beat the English labor party and the English trade unions, is prepared to appear in the role of the savior and messiah of the "fallen" Amsterdam International. This truly ridiculous, pompous behavior of this gentleman will, we hope, be repudiated by all sensible workers who understand that the working class must have nothing to do with an immediate confederate of Curzon and Churchill.

The Russian Workers Marching Forward

By M. A. SKROMNY.

Eight years have passed since the October revolution. When we recall how the political "prophets" from the counter-revolutionary camps predicted that the Soviet power will not survive even for eight days, we can afford to smile. At that time there were many who believed these "prophets." Russian and foreign capitalists risked their money and the lives of their slaves to make good this prophecy. But all in vain—in spite of the fact that the country was almost totally destroyed when the Bolsheviks took over the power of the state. In October 1917 there were only about 15% of the railroad engines left and of some industries only 3% remained.

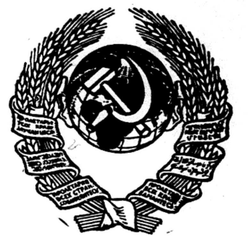
Soviet Copes With Enemies.

The enemies of the Soviets considered that under such circumstances it was impossible for the Communists to keep going. To facilitate the fall of the Soviets plots have been organied from the very first day of the revolution. The Kornilov affair arranged by Kerensky was followed by that of Krasnov, Kolchak, Yedenich, Semenov and many others. To cope with the situation the red guard was organized, and later the red army.

To crush the power of the counter-revolution the Soviets began to confiscate the funds of the rich, to nationalize the big industries, the cheka, the dreaded cheka, was organized. The revolution used the full power of the dictatorship of the proletariat to crush its enemies. The blockade and intervention by the foreign imperialists served only to strenghten the power of the revolution and win more sympathy in the eyes of the workers of the world.

The terrible famine of 1921 did not shake the faith of the masses in their Soviets. On the contrary, it gave them more faith in them as they saw the difference in dealing with the situation by the Soviets from that of the czarist government. There were many famines under the czars, the "civilized" governments never blamed the czars for it, but the Soviet government was blamed when the famine came after seven years of war, revolution and counter-revolution.

Finally, after the famine was conquered the Soviets got their first breathing spell. The work of rebuilding the country began feverishly to make advances. A great revival in industry and agriculture began. Day by day the growth of production and the betterment of the living conditions of the workers and peasants can be noticed. The "Lenin lights"—electricity—is beginning to shine in the dark villages. Tractors are appearing on the land. Illiteracy is being conquered.



The Emblem of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

But They Like Bolshevik Gold.

The great surplus of grains opened the doors of the capitalist countries to the hated Bolsheviks. They are being recognized officially or unofficially. Bolshevik gold is accepted by the saints of the "last" war in exchange for goods. Soviet Russia is too a great market to be ignored.

It is true that the plots against the Soviet government are still rampant. The notorious fake "Zinoviev letter" in Great Britain, the "Moscow orders" in the United States and Bulgaria, are evidence. But nowdays there aren't very many who believe these fakes. The workers in the capitalist countries do not believe any more their capitalist rulers and their press. The workers want to find out the truth about Soviet Russia for themselves and they are sending delegations to the land of the Soviets in spite of the advice to the contrary by the capitalists and their lackeys, the social-democrats.

The report of the British trade union delegation had the effect of a bombshell in the camp of the professional and counter-revolutionary liars.

Suppressed Peoples With U. S. S. R.

The policy of the Soviets in the Near East and Asia Minor is creating more panic for the capitalist governments than the so-called Bolshevik gold, for it is a policy of equality and freedom while the policy of the imperialists is a policy of oppression and robbery. The situation in China is clear evidence. The slaughter that is going on in Morocco is more proof.

All attempts to organize a united front against the Soviet government met with failure so far. The last attempt, the so-called Locarno pact, will meet the same fate as the others. The oppressed and crushed Germany united with its oppressors against the friendly Soviets. It is a clear demonstration that the class interests of the German bourgeoisie were put on a higher level than the interests of the "dear fatherland." This lesson will be understood by the workers of Germany as well as the workers of the world. They will also put the interests of their class above the interests of the country, when the proper time will come for action. The Soviets will find many allies in the midst of their enemies.

Besides that there is another danger growing for the imperialists in the form of a league of oppressed nations which will also help to smash the Locarno plot against the workers' and peasants' republic. If the capitalist governments will again dare to attack Soviet Russia they may in turn be attacked by all the colonial and semi-colonial peoples who are just waiting for an opportunity to get rid of their robbers.

U. S. S. R. Grows Stronger Daily.

The situation in Soviet Russia is growing better and better every day. Production is increasing and proportionally wages are also increasing, and in many industries they are already above the pre-war scale. At the same time the situation in the capitalist countries is growing worse. Production is being speeded up and wages at the same time are being cut, working hours increased, unemployment is rampant. And this in spite of, or more accurately, thanks to the American loans and the Dawes plan.

All this is forcing the laboring masses of all countries to consider the two different systems which they see at work: the system of capitalist democracy and the Bolshevik system of the Soviets. At this the eight anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution this question appears before them in bold relief. Sooner or later they will have to choose between these two systems.

And when they will chose, it will be the Soviet system!

Secretary of Labor Insists on Finger-Printing All Aliens

WASHINGTON—(FP) — Secretary of Labor Davis has again raised a cry of alarm, directed at the house committee on immigration, against the aliens in the United States. He insists that his proposed measure requiring that every alien be finger-printed and photographed and given an official record, to be checked up by personal report by the alien to a federal officer each year, is necessary to induce these foreigners to become Americans.

Davis declares there are between 6,000,000 and 7,000,000 un-naturalized aliens in the United States, and that more than 5,000,000 of them have been more than 5 years. This fact, he argues, shows that they do not intend to become American citizens. Many of them are definitely antagonistic, he believes, to American civilization. Hence the government should keep close watch on them through a compulsory registration and annual report.

The Chinese Customs Conference

By James H. Dolsen

PART III.
THE FRENCH STANDPOINT.

THE direct interests of France in China are very much less than those of England, Japan, or the United States. Her share in Chinese commerce is small. She has two extremely valuable concessions, those at Shanghai and Tientsin. With Czarist Russia she participated in the Sino-Japanese war loan, and her bankers have made other financial advances to the Peking government. British and American residents in the Shanghai foreign settlement have complained that the French failed to do their share in suppressing the "riots."

The importance of France comes rather from her dominant position in Europe, and the fact that she is England's only formidable rival in the old world. Consequently in the commercial and industrial competition for world-power she could, for the sake of the advantages sure to accrue from the friendship of the Chinese, well afford to grant the demands of China. Here again, however, the whole complicated and interdependent character of modern industrial society must be taken into consideration.

FRANCE is in the most difficult financial straits. Unable to reach a settlement of debt to the United States and with the warning of the Coolidge administration that it will frown upon any further bank advances to nations which have not adjusted their debts to this country, the French must rely on the financial assistance of the London financiers. She cannot, therefore, act with a free hand in the Peking conferences.

Sun Yat Sen, Tchang Tso Lin, and Wu Pei Fu.

Interests of the United States.

The richest country in the world today, the United States, is vitally interested in the events in China. It took the lead in suggesting the calling of these conferences, as we have seen.

What does this government want from China? What is it willing to concede, and why? Alone of the powers concerned it has not seized nor is it holding any Chinese territory. It has not so far participated to any appreciable extent in loans to the Chinese government. Its money is not yet heavily invested in Chinese industry.

BUT—our trade with China amounted to nearly a quarter billion dollars last year (1924) and is growing fast. The Pacific is believed by many leading business men as destined to become the most important avenue of commerce in the world, occupying the position held in the last century by the Atlantic. The Panama Canal removed the greatest obstacle to effective American competition for the trade of the Orient. Its completion brot the Pacific coast of the United States closer to China and Japan than are England or Europe. The eastern part of this country, which is its great manufacturing district, became then almost as near to China as the western coast of Europe had been. The instant effect was to boom trade with the Far East. The world war coming on shortly after the canal was in operation also helped. In the four years 1913-1917 American commerce with China doubled, amounting in the latter year to one-sixth of China's total. In the period from 1904 to 1918 the United States made a gain of 244 per cent in her Chinese trade.

The combined result of the world war and the opening of the Panama Canal is graphically shown in the following figures (in millions only):

	U. S. exports to China	U. S. imports from China
1914	$ 37,000,000	$ 43,000,000
1919	117,000,000	154,000,000
1924	124,000,000	158,000,000

Interests Chiefly Commercial.

The interests of the United States in China have thus been predominantly commercial. That the American traders in Shanghai and Hongkong were one with the British in the demand for harsh measures of repression against the Chinese during the recent trouble and determined to retain all their special privileges was evident from the denunciation by the American Association in China, of Senator Wm. E. Borah's advocacy of the renunciation of extra-territoriality. In reply Borah excoriated them as "part of the imperialistic combine which would oppress and exploit the Chinese people and charge the result of their offense to some one else." "These interests, including the American chamber of commerce in China, he continued, "are the real cause of the trouble."

ON the other hand, curiously enough the American missionaries—and missionaries in general have been considered by imperialists like Cecil Rhodes invaluable adjuncts to "civilizing" the backward peoples—seem as a whole to take strong sides with the Chinese for the abolition of foreign privileges. The present anomolous situation, they complain, hinders the work of "converting the heathen" on account of the un-Christ-like attitude of the "superior" white race.

Because of the failure of the last consortium (an agreement to negotiate government loans only thru an association of certain banks representing the great powers except Russia) American finance capital, aside from minor amounts in industry, has invested little in China. Its interests thus lie in the possibilities of the future rather than the protection of the past.

On the whole the financial and commercial interests of the United States, viewed in a large sense, should incline its capitalists to a lenient treatment of the demands of China. The raising of the Chinese tariff would effect its exports to a very limited degree, for they consist chiefly of machinery, oil, wheat, tobacco, lumber, and highly finished steel products, all of which China is unable to supply for the present in sufficient volume to meet its pressing needs.

So far as extra-territoriality is concerned, with no Chinese land in its possession and no important railroad or coal concessions, the interests of the United States would seem to indicate the acceptance of Senator Borah's views as to the advisability of its gradual abolition. It is significant that the Coolidge administration has not seen fit to reject or even modify the published statement on this subject of the chairman of the most important committee in the senate.

Ruthless Measures in China.

While these facts would indicate a lenient attitude towards the Chinese demands, it is true, on the other hand, that the United States was the first to land marines in Shanghai and has taken a prominent part in policing the strike areas. American warships patrol the inner waters of China, tho no other sovereign nation allows alien men of war on its rivers or other inland waterways.

THE American congress last winter debated for days the question of how large an appropriation should be voted to police the Yangtze Kiang and finally decided that six large river gunboats would be sufficient. It would seem that our lawmakers at Washington are determined to make us the great scab-herding and strikebreaking nation of the world.

The Shanghai China Weekly Review (American owned) boasted last summer of the patrol thus established in these words: "No one outside of the inner councils of the war and state departments at Washington knows just exactly what did happen on the Upper Yangtze about this time (during the general strike, 1925), but the captain of any American ship who desired an armed guard got it." The paper adds significantly, you must read between the lines to get it, ". . . the commander of the American patrol forces was given instructions not to fire first, but if fired upon, to be a close second."

The Wireless Controversy.

A MATTER certain to come up at these conferences will be the controversy between the United States and Japan over the erection of wireless stations in China. Some years ago the Chinese government granted the Mitsui company a monopoly of erecting wireless stations. Later it also gave the Federal Telegraph company of America a wireless concession. The Japanese government thereupon protested to China. The American government intervened with the charge that the Mitsui grant was void because it violated the open door policy which Japan had accepted many years previously.

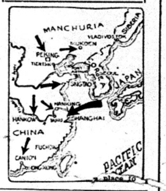
The Mitsui company erected its station but it did not fulfill the contract, not being powerful enough to send its messages across the Pacific. Meanwhile American engineers of the Federal company waited for months in China for a decision. Great Britain, France, and Japan proposed to the United States the joint operation of a single system. The suggestion was rejected. Lately China has urged that the United States and Japan jointly loan China the capital for the wireless station, to be operated by the three powers.

This controversy illustrates the many complications which characterize the relationships of foreigners to the Chinese government and the international conflicts which so readily ensue. It also throws light upon the double dealing which goes under the name of statesmanship in the capitalist world.

The Sacred Right of Private Property.

THE note of acceptance of the Chinese government's invitation to the conferences were all alike, stating that the particular nation "is now prepared to consider the Chinese government's proposal for the modification of existing treaties in a measure as the Chinese authorities demonstrate their willingness and ability to fulfill their obligations and assure protection to foreign rights and interests now safeguarded by the exceptional provisions of these treaties." In all the notes and correspondence their runs this insistence first of all on the protection of foreign property rights in China.

SCENE OF PRESENT STRUGGLES IN CHINA



If the foreign nationals can get the Chinese government to guarantee all their present rights under some other formula equally as binding as the present treaties, Great Britain, France, the United States, and Japan will gladly surrender their special privileges. To the imperialist powers "A rose by any other name will smell as sweet."

No Lasting Solution.

Having thus surveyed the factors which determine national policy, it is necessary to understand that the complicated relationships of capitalist industry in national boundaries cause many variations in their particular application. Even the most powerful and strongly centralized autocracy no longer dares to risk a great war without the psychological preparation of its subjects. So the powers must take into consideration at Peking the reaction of their citizens towards the measures taken and the methods proposed.

That a fundamental settlement of the problems involved can be arrived at is not possible. The contradictions developing so swiftly within the world capitalist system, now that it is rotten-ripe, are too great to be solved except by its overthrow. Prophetic of the latter way outstands the ominous figure of the Soviet Union—ominous for the oppressors of the people. The shadows of a giant worker, arm in arm with his peasant brother, fall on the startled faces of the diplomats who plunged the world in one bath of human blood and stand ready to precipitate a second or at least, unable to prevent one.

UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT SENDS THIRTEEN BATTLESHIPS TO BULLY CHINA DURING SHANGHAI STRIKE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—That American naval vessels constituted 13 out of the fleet of 20 ships of foreign powers that intimidated the Chinese in Shanghai after the massacre of students by British police there last May, and that American naval enlisted men are still on shore serving as police in Shanghai, is set forth in a letter received by President Coolidge from Dr. Harry F. Ward, national chairman of the American Committee for Justice to China. Dr. Ward has recently returned from a year spent in the Orient, during which he lectured under Y. M. C. A. and other religious auspices in the cities of China. He is a member of the faculty of Union Theological Seminary, New York, and secretary of the Methodist Federation for Social Service.

"Whereas," he says, "the dumping of British owned tea into Boston harbor resulted in the independence of the United States, the dumping of British owned opium into the river at Canton resulted in the subjection of China to western powers, thru a series of treaties forced upon her, taking away major portions of her most vital sovereign rights.

"The United States thru its merchants, manufacturers, bankers, and missionaries has participated in and profited by the special unequal treaties upholding them by guns and bayonets.

"In the Shanghai strike, following the shooting of unarmed students by foreign police, May 30, 1925, we supplied 13 out of 20 warships to maintain the policy of control and taxation of Chinese by foreigners without representation. Our marines were quartered on a Chinese university and high school arbitrarily closed by foreign orders, and our naval forces are still on shore serving as police at Shanghai.

"In the circumstances, we may at any moment by the work of a consul or the act of a naval officer or a marine be engaged in war with China without any authorization by congress. Unless this situation is changed the historic friendship that China has for us because of our past policy is bound to be transformed into enmity."

That worker next door to you may not have anything to do tonight. Hand him this copy of the DAILY WORKER.

The Preface for America - -

By Leon Trotsky

This article is the special "Preface For America" written in May, 1925, by the brilliant Communist writer to the American edition of his latest book "Whither England?" published by the International Publishers, Inc. of New York, thru whose courtesy this is being reprinted.

The capitalist press of America has become alarmed over the book. Not only has this preface been generously quoted in the leading American journals, but other parts of the book as well, both in America and England, have been pointed out as "open advice to the workers to overthrow their governments."

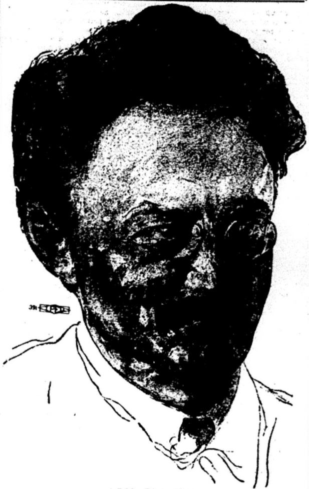
Many journals in both countries have begged in alarm for the suppression of the book.

THE present work is devoted to a consideration of the ultimate destinies of England, a subject that may be of interest to the American reader for two reasons: First, because England occupies a very prominent position in the world; second, because the United States and Great Britain may be regarded as twin stars, one of which grows dim the more rapidly as the brilliancy of the other increases.

The inference to which I am led by my study is that England is heading rapidly toward an era of great revolutionary upheavals. Of course, the English secret service men and their American disciples will declare that I am engaging in propaganda for a proletarian revolution, as if it were possible for an outsider, by means of pamphlets, to alter the course of evolution of a great nation! As a matter of fact, I am simply attempting, by analyzing the most important factors in the historical development of England, to explain the historical path by which that country will be made to encounter obstacles—internal as well as external—to its continued existence. To accuse me of revolutionary meddling in the affairs of foreign countries, on the basis of such statements, would be almost equivalent to accusing the astronomer of bringing about a solar eclipse because he has predicted its occurence.

BUT do not understand me as saying that astronomical phenomena are parallel to the phenomena of society. The former are accomplished outside of us, the latter thru our agency. Which does not mean, however, that historical events may be achieved by our mere wish or directed with the assistance of pamphlets. Far more books and newspapers have come out and are still coming out with the avowed purpose of defending and maintaining capitalism — including British capitalism—than have ever been published to attack it. Ideas of any kind may be effective only when they are based on the material conditions of social evolution. England is headed for revolution because she has already entered the stage of capitarist disintegration. If the guilty must be found, if we must ask: What accelerates England's progress on the path of revolution, the answer is, not Moscow, but New York.

This answer may appear paradoxical, yet it is the simple truth. The powerful and constantly growing influence of the United States on world affairs is rendering more and more impossible and hopeless the situation of British industry, British trade, British finances, and British diplomacy.



LEON TROTSKY

THE United States cannot but tend to expand in the world market, failing which its own industry will be threatened with apoplexy because of the richness of its blood. The United States can only expand at the expense of the other exporting countries, which means, particularly, England. In view of the patented Dawes method of harnessing the economic life of an entire mighty nation in the traces of American supervision, it almost provokes a smile to hear people speak of the revolutionary significance of one "Moscow" pamphlet or another. Under the cover of what is called the pacification and rehabilitation of Europe, immense revolutionary and military conflicts are preparing for the morrow. Mr. Barnes, who enjoys the confidence of the department of commerce at Washington, suggests that the European debtors of the United States be assigned to exploit such portions of the world market as will not bring the impoverished and indebted European cousins of the United States into competition with the expansion of their creditor across the seas. In aiding to restore the European monetary system, the United States is simply exploding one inflated illusion after other by giving the Europeans an opportunity to express their poverty and dependence in the language of a firm currency. By exerting pressure on its debtors, or giving them an extension, by granting or refusing credit to European countries, the United States is placing them in a gradually tightening economic dependence, in the last analysis an ineluctable situation, which is the necessary condition for inevitable social and revolutionary disturbances. The Communist International, viewed in this light, may be considered an almost conservative institution as compared with Wall Street, Morgan, Dawes, Julius Barnes —these are among the artificers of the approaching European revolution.

IN its work in Europe and elsewhere, the United States is generally acting in co-operation with England, thru the agency of England. But this collaboration means for England an increasing loss of independence. England is leading the United States to hegemony, as it were. Relinquishing their world rule, the diplomats and magnates of England are recommending their former clients to deal with the new master of the world. The common action of the United States and England is the cloak for a profound world-wide antagonism between these two powers, by which the threatening conflicts of the perhaps not remote future are being prepared.

This brief preface is not the place in which to speak of the fate of America itself. There is no doubt that capital today nowhere feels itself so strong as in America. American capitalism grew marvelously, chiefly at the expense of the European belligerents at first, now by reason of their "return to peace," their "rehabilitation." But in spite of all its huge power, American capitalism is not a self-contained factor, but a part of world economy. Furthermore, the more powerful the industry of the United States becomes, the more intimate and profound becomes its dependence on the world market. Driving the European countries farther and farther down their blind alley, American capitalism is laying the foundation for wars and revolutionary upheavals, which in their frightful rebound will not fail to strike the economic system of the United States also. Such is the prospect for America. In revolutionary development, America does not stand in the front rank; the American bourgeoisie will still enjoy the privilege of witnessing the destruction of its older European sister. But the inevitable hour will strike for American capitalism also: the American oil and steel magnates, trust and export leaders, the multimillionaires of New York, Chicago and San Francisco, are performing—tho unconsciously—their predestined revolutionary function. And the American proletariat will ultimately discharge theirs.

HOW WAGES ARE BEING SLASHED

By EARL R. BROWDER

FOR capitalism, the key problem of economics is, how to increase profits. And for this, the principal means is to reduce the proportion that goes to labor as wages, out of the values labor created, and to increase the proportion that goes for interest, rent and profit.

This can be done directly in two ways; by reducing the wage rates, or by increasing the intensity of labor. And there are various indirect ways, one of which is to keep money wages stationary while the cost of living goes up.

All these means are in active operation today.

Government statistics disclose to some small degree the successes of the capitalists in their schemes for increased exploitation. In "Commerce Reports" of November 2nd, for example, the following figures can be found which are very illuminating:

Cost of living index figure (relative to 1924) Sept. 1924, is 147. For September, 1925, it is 159.

That is an increase of about 8 per cent. If real wages are to remain constant, money wages must be raised 8 per cent also to cover the increased cost of living.

These figures are compiled by the National Industrial Conference Board, a private organization of capitalists, which has certainly no bias in favor of the wage workers.

But what really happened to money wages during the same period? They remained the same or were actually reduced. Which means that real wages have been out to the amount of 10 per cent or more. This gained for the capitalists an extra profit of between one billion and a billion and a half dollars.

Simple figures from a few states will show how that has gone into effect.

The index figure for number of workers employed in New Jersey (1923-100) was 87 in September last year, and 91 this year, an increase of 4 points.

The total payroll for these same periods was 86 and 89, an increase of but 2 points, and therefore a positive decrease in earnings. The official index for average weekly earnings, relative to 1923, showed September last year at 100, while this year it is 98. When compared with the cost of living here is a clear wage slash of 19 per cent.

In Illinois the average weekly earnings, (relative to 1922), dropped from 110.1 in September 1924, to 107.6 in September, 1925.

Delaware weekly earnings averaged 4 per cent less this year than last.

And in the Meantime —

Production has been increasing by leaps and bounds. All the indicators of production and trade, point to 1925 as the banner year of capitalist industry in America.

Not only have money wages been reduced. Not only have wages been cut still more thru the higher cost of living. Also the workers have been forced to speed up, and in some cases to work longer hours, so that production has enormously increased.

This year's mass of surplus values expropriated by the capitalist class is doubtless the greatest ever known.

That is why the Wall Street stock market is so joyous, and why the price of stocks has flown skyward. All of this is "cashing in" on the accumulated and perspective "surplus values" squeezed out of labor in such rich abundance during 1925.

Postal Receipts on Up Grade.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5—Postal receipts, regarded as a barometer of business conditions, continue on the upgrade, totalling $32,489,042 in 50 selected cities during October, as compared with $29,118,862 in October, 1924, an increase of $3,370,179, or 11.57 per cent, the post office department announced today.

Wages and Profits in the Railroad Industry

By MORD WILGUS.

PART 1: RAILROAD WAGES

IN the opinion of the public at large, the railroad workers are paid wages far in excess of other wage earners. The question arises how such an opinion, false as it is, has been able to gain wide currency even among workers themselves. It is not denied that there are some groups of workers in this industry who receive wages which permit them to live in decency. But to apply this standard to the railroad workers as a unit is nothing short of deception.

The existence of the labor aristocracy in the form of the Big Four Brotherhoods is unquestionably the chief cause of this prevailing belief taking root among wage earners in general. A contributing cause is the policy of the railroad employers in quietly spreading illusions in the press and otherwise of railroad workers leisurely driving in to work in their privately-owned automobiles, with the consequence that this myth reached fantastic proportions several years ago. The mental picture of a railroad worker driving his "own car" into the yard seduces the critical faculty of the average worker completely. He at once conjures up images in his mind of the ease and plenty enjoyed by certain groups of workers while he must toil on endlessly on wages scarcely permitting the necessities of life.

HOWEVER, let us look at the facts. Let us see just how much wages these "high-paid" men actually receive. In a shop one is often inclined to think: "Well, I don't get much wages, but the others must be getting it." This is but natural in view of the general secrecy about wages prevailing in the shops. In addition to this, the employers for their own interests, never cease spreading false rumors and exaggerations in order to create jealousy amongst the men and thus divide them against each other. Divide and conquer has always been the slogan of the masters. Furthermore, the failure of the employers to make public their payrolls denies the more class conscious worker a source from which to make comparisons and thus effectively expose on the spot the machinations and chicane of the bosses.

The U. S. department of commerce from which our data is taken divides the railroad workers in seven groups as follows:

1—Executives, assistants and staff assistants.

2—Professional, clerical and general.

3—Maintenance of Way and Structures.

4—Maintenance of Equipment and Stores.

5—Transportation — other than train, engine or yard.

6—Transportation—yard masters, switch tenders and hostlers.

7—Transportation—train and engine service.

THIS grouping which corresponds with the forms of labor in the industry gives a distorted picture of the wage scales in force for the workers as a whole. To eliminate this distortion, we have divided the railroad workers in accordance with minimum and maximum wages they receive. To arrive at the actual weekly wages, the monthly stated wages were multiplied by twelve and then divided by fifty-two. The workers on the railroads are generally paid twice a month. Since there are fifty-two weeks in the year, it would be erroneous to divide the monthly wages by four weeks for a man must eat fifty-two weeks in the year and not forty-eight. All data is for the year 1923, but no material changes have taken place since.

GROUP A—Railroad Workers Receiving Less Than $25 Per Week.

Kind of Work	No. of Workers 1923	Weekly Wages 1923
Mechanical device operators	7,625	$24.50
Messengers	6,721	13.15
Tel. Switchbd. Op. & Office Assts.	5,219	17.10
Janitors & Cleaners	7,597	18.00
Skilled Trades Helpers	11,028	22.45
Pumping Equipment Operators	6,249	18.95
Workers (extra gang & work train)	58,310	18.68
Workers (track & roadway)	210,913	17.10
Maintenance of Way Laborers (other than track & roadway)	8,401	17.10
Signal man and signal maintenance helpers	3,232	22.00
Helper Apprentices	7,619	24.50
Regular Apprentices	13,635	16.25
Coach Cleaners	13,101	20.75
Maintenance of equipment laborers	115,567	20.35
Station agents (small)	4,137	23.10
Baggage, parcel-room and station workers	9,571	22.85
Callers, loaders, scalers, sealers and perishable freight inspectors	16,581	23.80
Truckers	42,066	21.25
Laborers	6,251	22.85
Crossing and bridge flagmen and gatemen	22,813	17.08

Total number of workers receiving less than $25 per week—574,655.

THE group of workers comprised above number 574,655 men and women or 33 per cent of the grand total or railroad employes on all class 1 roads. Together with their wives and children, they represent a community of over 2,000,000 souls. While this group represents what is generally known as unskilled labor, nevertheless they play a decisive part in maintaining the arteries of the country in running order. The arduous toil of keeping the roadbeds in condition is in their keeping. And yet they are paid wages which will scarcely afford to bare necessities of life. In the face of these facts it is preposterous to prattle about high-paid railroaders, a third of whom receive less than $25 per week.

Group B—Railroad Workers Receiving Between $25 and $33 per Week.

Kind of Work—	No. of Workers 1923	Weekly Wages 1923
Clerks	172,306	$28.85
Stenographers and typists	21,822	26.10
Carpenters (bridge and building	23,507	27.95
Painters (bride and building)	3,565	27.00
Gang and section-foremen (maintenance)	40,080	28.95
Assistant signal men & signal maintainers	2,385	27.45
Carmen	136,707	33.00
Skilled trades helpers	135,236	25.05
Gang foremen, Laborers (shops, engine houses, etc).	4,240	31.40
Telegraphers and telephoners	19,571	$32.60
Telegraphers and telephoners' clerks	13,813	31.95
Baggage agents and assistants	846	30.50
Gang Foremen (freight station, warehouse, etc.)	3,774	32.10

Total number of workers receiving between $25 and $33 per week—577,853.

Group B whose wages fall between $25 and $33 per week consist of skilled workers. Together with Group A they number 1,152,506 wage earners or practically two-thirds of the total number of railroad employes. Compared to organized trades in other industries the scale is low, falling far behind the so-called American standard of living.

Group C—Railroad Workers Receiving Between $33 and $40 per Week.

Kind of Work—	No. of Workers 1923	Weekly Wages 1923
Bridge & building gang foremen	5,440	$38.35
Gang foremen (extra gang, work train, etc.)	4,852	33.50
Signalmen & signal maintainers	8,057	36.25
Blacksmiths	10,279	37.50
Boilermakers	22,152	38.25
Electrical workers	9,651	38.00
Machinists	68,140	38.00
Sheet Metal Workers	12,594	37.00
Supervisory station agents	5,469	38.10
Road Passenger baggagemen	5,871	39.75
Road passenger brakemen & flagmen	14,581	36.00
Road freight brakemen & flagmen	65,750	39.00
Yard brakemen & helpers	55,301	38.00
Yard firemen & helpers	22,664	34.65

Total Number of Workers Receiving Between $33 & $40 per week—310,421.

THERE are 310,421 workers comprised in Group C receiving wages which assure them the necessities of life but no more. To talk of maintaining a family in health and decency on a weekly avreage income of $36 is ridiculous. Of course one must live. But to say that you are living in health and decency is false. You cannot do it.

One cannot obtain a modern three-room apartment today under $45 per month. But a three-room apartment for a family of five, the average composition of a worker's home, is too small and causes overcrowding. And overcrowding, as every intelligent worker knows, contributes neither to health nor decency.

Suppose then, the railroad worker in Group C rents a four-room apartment. What is the consequence of that? A four-room modern flat rents at a minimum of $60 per month or $14 per week. Subtract this sum from $36, the approximate average wage of the above group, and you find the high paid railroad man has $22 left to cover expenditures on food and clothing for a family of five! Not to say a word about unemployment, sickness, etc! If the worker eats, as he should in order to maintain his efficiency as a wage earner, he must live in an overcrowded flat; if, on the other hand, he takes a four-room apartment, to permit himself and his family a minimum amount of breathing space, he is compelled to cut down on his table or eat cheap, undernourishing food. How then, can wages which barely permit the necessities of life allow one to indulge in luxuries or an automobile?

Group D—Railroad Workers Receiving Between $40 and $60 per Week.

Kind of Work—	No. of Workers 1923	Actual Weekly Wages 1923
Road passenger conductors	10,531	$54.00
Road freight conductors	26,901	52.65
Yard conductors & yard foremen	22,002	44.10
Road passenger engineers & motormen	13.042	58.65
Road freight engineers & motormen	34,137	59.40
Yard engineers & motormen	22.142	46.45
Road passenger firemen & helpers	12,756	43.45
Road freight firemen & helpers	36,504	41.30
Supervisory clerks	5,309	53.10
Chief clerks	12,879	41.60
Signal & Telegraph gang foremen	1,180	44.10
Assistant General Department foremen	12,112	59.15
Maintenance gang foremen & leaders	12,553	52.50
Train despatchers & directors	5,645	59.65
Supervisory station agents	2,459	56.60
Yardmasters and assistants	7,111	58.90

Total Number of Workers Receiving Between $40 and $60 per week—217,898.

GROUP D—We now come to the group of workers who are generally regarded as the labor aristocracy and justly so. This class of workmen despise the word "worker" and look upon themselves as a category distinct from and independent of common labor. Psychologically corrupted with bourgeois ideas and standards, they have abandoned the militancy which formerly characterized their activities and are now engaged in operating non-union coal mines, "labor" banks and insurance schemes in complete harmony and co-operation with the capitalistic interests.

It is not accidental that these workers known collectively as the Big 4 Brotherhoods have gained their privileged position. Their gains are not the result of a militant struggle or the class conscious solidarity of its members but on the contrary they are the concessions designedly granted by the railroad interests in order to split and divide the workers and render them impotent as a conscious force in the ever-increasing struggle betwen capital and labor.

Hence one must not be surprised to find this group receiving wages higher than their fellow workers. It is a means of keeping them apart and weakening the tremendous potential power of the railroad workers as a single unit. Of course, superficially it appears that the higher wages of the labor aristocracy come from the skilled work they do—but then one asks how was it possible for certain sections of the working class to obtain this skill to the exclusion of the vast majority of the proletariat? The answer is obvious. It was the employers who provided the means in the form of free vocational schools (nominal fee schools, Y. M. C. A., Baron de Hirche's Cooper Unions) and promotions based on seniority as in the railroads. These are the two chief subjective factors which constitute the basis for the existence of a labor aristocracy. Both these factors, that is the vocational schools and promotions are initiated and controlled by the employers. By means of these they seduce and corrupt the more individualistic and ambitious members of the proletariat and raise them to a labor aristocracy. It is this opportunity furnished by the capitalist for a small minority of the workers which constitutes the bribery. Hence in reality it is not greater skill which comands higher wages—it is indirect bribery shamelessly accepted by the Brotherhoods of Enineers and Conductors at the expense of their underpaid fellow workers the majority of whom receive wages decidedly below the lowest minimum prescribed by the government itself.

It should be kept in mind that the Big 4 Brotherhoods together with the higher paid technical force comprised in Group D total not more than 20 per cent of the total number of railroad employes.

THE figures furnished by the U. S. department of commerce give the total number of railroad workers for the year 1923 as 1,879,770. This grand total includes the "executives," general officers, lieutenants, and sergeants of police, patrolmen, etc. We fail to see, however, how an executive or general officer can be classified as an "employe" or how a police force organized and paid by the railroads to overawe and terrorize the workers can be called useful or necessary to the efficient running of the roads. The well-paid "executives" are nothing but figureheads holding down sinecures while the riff-raff organized as police bullies receive pariah's wages for their contemptible "labor." These two parasitical groups comprise over 14,000 so-called "employes" who pork-barrelled the stupendous sum of over $75,000,000 in salaries for the year 1923.

THE total amount paid in wages for the year 1923 was $3,043,161,000. This sum includes the 75 million dollars expended on sinecures and "law and order." Dividing the $3,043,161,000 among the 1,879,770 workers, we find the average wage to be $31 per week, a sum absolutely insufficient to support a family in health and decency according to the U. S. department of labor itself. The "prosperity" of the American worker exists principally in the imaginations of the bourgeoisie, in their press and in their propaganda abroad designed to entice foreign workmen to the hell-breathing ten- and twelve-hour day steel furnaces of Gary & Co.

BEFORE passing to the second part of the article dealing with railroad profits, it would be in place to describe the hours of labor in this industry. Unfortunately we cannot do so as the department of commerce withholds all data on the subject of hours. The "basic" day is supposed to consist of eight hours, but this is a myth. By allowing overtime, extras, exceptions, etc., the railroad managers craftily metamorphose the "basic" eight-hour day into a "baseless" day. Of course overtime may be necessary in emergencies but when the "emergencies" are more or less permanent affairs there is an end of the eight-hour day.

Morgan Out to Grab Great Muscle Shoals Resources of Power

WASHINGTON—(FP)—Once more the Alabama Power Co., which is owned by the General Electric trust, which is Morgan & Co., is reaching out to grab the nation's vast hydro-electric power plant at Muscle Shoals.

Its transmission lines are the only ones in the region. It is now using the power from the Wilson dam under a six months lease which it secured during the summer from the secretary of war. Its scheme is that Congress shall yield to the demand of the Coolidge administration that the government rid itself of its power dams, and that the company shall get Muscle Shoals on a 50-year lease, with the privilege of renewal after that period. This would in effect be a sale of the plant to the power trust. It would remove the last opportunity of six southern states to have their rates for electric power and light cut by federal competition.

Shop Nuclei Help Save The Daily Worker

By Jay LOVESTONE.

The shop nuclei of the party have shown themselves to date to be in the front ranks of the party units in rallying to save The DAILY WORKER.

Amongst the highest contributions given to The DAILY WORKER campaign fund are those made by the various shop nucle. The proportion of shop nuclei contributing in The DAILY WORKER is greater than the proportion of the other party units; likewise the average collected by the shop nuclei members is higher than the average collected by each member in the various branches.

An examination of the lists prepared to date by The DAILY WORKER indicates the following achievements of various shop nuclei:

New York District.

Shop Nucleus	Amount Contributed to date Ending Oct. 29
Shop Nucleus No. 1	$ 46.00
Shop Nucleus No. 2	20.00
Shop Nucleus No. 4	15.00
Shop Nucleus No. 5	4.00
Shop Nucleus No. 6	6.00
Shop Nucleus No. 9	12.00
Shop Uucleus No. 11	3.00
Shop Nucleus No. 12	12.00
Shop Nucleus No. 13	1.00
Shop Nucleus No. 16	9.00
Shop Nucleus No. 22	5.00
Shop Nucleus No. 27	5.00
Shop Nucleus No. 30	1.00
Shop Nucleus No. 31	5.00
Chicago District.
Pullman S. N. No. 1	$ 7.00
Shicago S. N. No. 2	4.00
Chicago S. N. No. 5	306.34
Chicago S. N. No. 8	4.00
eigler S. N.	50.00
Gary, Illionis Steel S. N.	38.60
So. Bend Studebaker S. N.	5.00
Gary Steel Mills S. N.	11.65
Kenosha, Wis., S. N.	10.00
Total	$749.59

It must be remembered that at present, the average membership of a shop nucleus is much smaller than that of our branches. Considering this fact, it certainly is creditable to the shop nuclei members that 22 of their units have been able to collect over $700 of the approximately $16,000 already collected for The DAILY WORKER.

But we must admit that a number of the shop nuclei have not yet done their share. A number of the shop nuclei have been inexcusably negligent in participating in this important effort to put The DAILY WORKER on its feet.

The fact of the matter is that this campaign affords the comrades an excellent opportunity to bring the party's ideas and purposes before masses of non-Communist workers. We hereby specifically point out the shop nuclei which have so far, aaccording to our records, failed to do their bit for The DAILY WORKER. Perhaps some of the individual members of the shop nuclei in this dreelict list have participated in this drive and have their contributions registered as part of the contribution of party units to which they are not affiliated. This does not remove our criticism. Each shop nucleus, as a party unit, should organize its own little campaign as part of the general party campaign. Each shop nucleus should try to put itself as a basic party unit, in the front ranks of the workers for this party campaign.

The list of shop nuclei which have not yet directly responded, as shop nuclei, to The DAILY WORKER call for help, follows:

New York District (No. 2)

Elizabeth, N. J.: Shop Nucleus No. 1 and No. 2. New York City: Shop Nucleus Nos. 3, 7, 8, 10, 14, 15, 17, 18, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 28 and 29.

Pittsburgh (No. 5)

Pittsburgh, Pa., Shop Nucleus No. 1.

Ohio (No. 6)

East Liverpool, Ohio: Shop Nucleus No. 1.

Chester, W. Va.: Shop Nucleus No. 1.

Warren, Ohio: Shop Nucleus, No. 1.

Detroit (No. 7)

Detroit, Mich.: Shop Nucleus No. 2, 3 and4,

Chicago (No. 8)

Chicago, Ill.: Shop Nucleus No. 1, 3, 4. 6, 7 and 9,

Dowell, Ill.: Shop Nucleus No. 1.

Pullman, Ill.: Shop Nucleus No. 2, 3 and 4.

Frankfort Heights, Ill.: Shop Nucleus No. 1.

West Frankfort, Ill.: Shop Nucleus No. 2.

Connecticut (No. 15)

Shelton, Conn.: Shop Nucleus No. 1

The comrades of the shop nuclei should utilize their strategic positions of having direct contact with the non-Communist workers in the factories. These comrades should without fail, redouble their efforts and show that they can deservedly be called the most active members of our party.

The purpose of the publication of these facts is to stir the comrades of the shop nuclei who have already gotten some results to intensify their activities and at least redouble their results in a short while. The comrades in the shop nuclei which have not yet put themselves on the map in the campaign to Save The DAILY WORKER should at once call meetings of their nuclei and make The DAILY WORKER the first order of business. Each shop nucleus should then, as a party unit, pledge itself a certain quota which it will raise in The DAILY WORKER campaign.

We feel certain that the comrades organized in the existing shop nuclei should be able ot gather at least thirty-five hundred of the forty thousand dollars that The DAILY WORKER must have in order to insure its existence.

The New Party Constitution

By Jay Lovestone

THE organizational department has received a number of questions from various sections of the country regarding the application of certain sections of the party constitution.

Beginning with this article, there will be published a series of articles answering the various questions raised.

Not only will we discuss various provisions of the new constitution, but we will try to explain the concrete application of these provisions in the light of the party reorganization campaign.

Question No. 1. "If a comrade makes $200 one month, and so on, what will be the dues payment for this comrade?"

Answer: Every party member is to pay each month dues based on the total wages received by him or her during the month. It would be incorrect to have any other system of dues payments, for example — such as an average for six months. The workers do not have sufficient funds to enable them to make payments on such a long time basis. Likewise, if a comrade is out of work during a certain month, he should receive his exempt stamp for that month. If a comrade makes more in one month than in another, then he should pay more dues in the month in which he earns more. This rule should be strictly observed by all district organizers and party members. It is the simplest, most practicable and fairest application of the graduated dues payment scale established in our party.

The old design of dues stamp, that is, the old 50 cent stamp, should serve, until further notice, as the fifty cent regular, standard dues stamp which every party member must buy. The 25 cents, 50 cents, 75 cents and $1 denomination stamps, with the picture of the worker and a factory on them, should be used until further arrangements only as the extra stamps. That is, if a party member makes less than $125 during the month, he will pay that month 50 cents and therefore buy only the regular fifty cent dues stamp. On the other hand, supposing that in the month of November a party member earns $150-$175 then, when he pays dues for the month of November, he will pay all in all, a total of $1.00 for that month. He will buy his regular 50c dues stamp and an extra stamp of 50c.

The question may be raised as to the district organizer knowing definitely how much each member makes during a particular month. We must simply rely on the Communist integrity of the party members to make accurate reports as to the basis of their dues payments.

The D. O.'s will have to see to it that every party unit submits to them a report of the dues payments indicating clearly, first of all, how many of the regular dues stamps have been purchased in every party unit. This will serve as an effective measure to ascertain the number of members found in every shop or street nucleus. Secondly, the amount of extra stamps sold should likewise be indicated.

Question No. 2. "In what category of dues payments are housewives who are earning nothing?"

Answer: Housewives earning no wages will be considered in the same class with those comrades who earn less than $125 a month. They will be required to pay 50c a month in dues. They will not be exempt. To exempt housewives of this category (that is, those who are not earning anything) would mean to reestablish the dual stamp basis, indirectly, but yet just as firmly, as it ever existed before.

Question No. 3. "The (X) Language Section of our party has 45 members at large to day. What shall we do with these members, after reorganization, and the abolition of the federation branches? How shall these members at large be connected with the party?"

Answer: After reorganization, the comrades who are now members at large will be connected with the party in the following two ways:

A. They will be conncted with the district organization in the territory in which they find themselves today. That is, a party unit in the city which a member at large lives or works will be connected with the shop or street nucleus in this city. If there is no such party unit in this city of residence or employment, he will be connected directly with the district office under whose supervision the territory in which he finds himself is.

B. In those instances, where comrades now members at large find themselves living or working in that section of the country in which there is no party district organization yet, and which is today called the National Office Territory, such comrades will be connected with the party directly thru the national office of the party.

We desire to abolish the existence of this category of membership known as members at large. The Communist Party must be based on active members, and not on those whose sole basis of membership is to be found in their dues payments. Of course, we recognize that there may be camrades living or working in sections of the country where no party units are as yet organized. In these instances, these comrades connected with the district or national office of the party serves as special party outposts, so to say, in organized or unorganized territory. In such instances, such comrades will serve the party effectively by striving to win over enough workers to enable them to organize party units as soon as possible.

The members at large presently affiliated with the party thru their dues payments to the various language sections will maintain their contact with the national language propaganda bureaus only for the purpose of carrying on certain Communist activities among the workers of their particular language fraction bureau. But these members will pay their dues to and maintain their affiliation with the party only thru the party organization as such,—either thru the district office, or the national office, as the conditions dictate.

Question No. 4. "How will the language propaganda bureaus be able to raise funds efficiently among their respective language fractions if they are not permitted to collect dues or any special assessments thru selling or issuing such stamps?"

Answer: The system of dues payment thru the federations is abolished. Dues are to be paid thru the district offices from now on.

Whenever a particular fraction bureau desires to raises funds for a campaign, let us say, for its press, or any other activity, it will secure permission from the C. E. C. of the party, to participate in the raising of such funds.

In the event that a certain propaganda fraction bureau desires to levy any assessment or set up a certain quota of which each member must collect a minimum portion, the C. E. C. will take the following procedure: Special permission will be granted to various fraction bureaus to circulate what we may call special assesment lists, on which the comrades belonging to the various language fractions will sign the names of the contributors and the amount given by each contributor. These lists are to be returned by the various local and district language fractions to the national language fraction bureau which directs the activities of the party members in the numerous language fractions carrying on the party's work among the various national groups of workers.

Armenian Communists---Join the Party!

Statement of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party

THE Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party calls upon those Armenian workers who declare themselves to be Communists but who are still organized separately from the Workers (Communist) Party and its Armenian section, to join the party and to carry on their work in support of Communist principles thru the party organization .

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party has for more than three years been carrying on a continuous campaign to unite all of the Armenian Communists in the Workers (Communist) Party and its Armenian section so that the energies of all the convinced Communists could be used for work among the Armenian masses. In spite of the efforts of the Central Executive Committee, there still remain outside of the party and its Armenian section a group of former members of the Armenian Workers Party. It is the view of the Central Executive Committee that these comrades were misled and that it is not their desire to put themselves in opposition to the party. It is therefore that the Central Executive Committee has decided to open the way for these comrades to affiliate with the party and to carry on active Communist work among the Armenian masses as part of the Workers (Communist) Party.

IN making this decision, the Central Executive Committee again emphasizes that no Communist can, under any circumstances withdraw from a Communist Party because he is in disagreement with the Central Executive Committee on some questions of tactics or policy which does not involve the fundamental principles and policies of the party. It was the duty of Sunarian as well as all the members of the Armenian Workers Party who were of his viewpoint to carry out the decision of the Central Executive Committee of the party in relation to the organization of the Armenian section, even tho they disagreed with this decision. It was because these members did not understand this fundamental Communist duty that they find themselves outside of the organized Communist movement in this country. It is with the understanding that in future the comrades who made this error will carry out all the decisions of the party and its Central Executive Committee as disciplined members of the organization that the Central Executive Committee extends an invitation to the existing branches of the Armenian Workers Party which are not affiliated with the Workers (Communist) Party to immediately become a part of the party.

The procedure should be that wherever there are organized groups of the former Armenian Workers Party which are not affiliated with the Workers (Communist) Party, these organizations should immediately adopt resolutions to apply for a charter as a branch of the Workers Party, declaring their acceptance of the principles and policies of the party and willingness to submit to the discipline of the organization.

Branches which take this action will be affiliated with the city committee of their respective city or direct with the district organization if no city committees exist. They will purchase their dues stamps thru the city committee or district committee as the case may be, as all branches of the party now purchase their stamps.

The Central Executive Committee calls the attention of the Armenian branches to the fact that the party is now being reorganized on the basis of shop nuclei and street nuclei (international branches) and that they must be prepared to have their branch reorganized with the other branches of the party. At the same time that this reorganization takes place and the members of these branches become members of the shop nuclei and street nuclei, the members will also be organized as part of the Armenian fraction of the party by becoming incorporated in the organization for work among the Armenian workers.

BY taking prompt action to affiliate with the Workers (Communist) Party the groups in question will have the opportunity to become part of the city and district organizations of the Armenian fractions and to establish full opportunity for them to participate in the work of these Armenian fractions and to be represented on the city an ddistrict committees of the Armenian fractions.

So far as certain members of the group in question are concerned who were expelled from the party because of their direct violation of the discipline of the Central Executive Committee of the party, the Central Executive Committee will be glad to consider each such case and the circumstances surrounding same, to do whatever possible to reinstate such members to the right of party membership. This reinstatement, however, will only take place after acknowledgement of the errors for which the member was expelled from the party. The individuals who were thus expelled must apply to the Central Executive Committee in writing for reinstatement in the party.

The Central Executive Committee of the party is of the opinion that the proceedure outlined above offers the opportunity for the unification of all Armenian Communists who have a sincere desire to become part of the organized Communist movement of this country. It is time that the wounds received by the Communist movement among the Armenian masses be healed and all the convinced Communists join together to build the influence of the party among the Armenian masses. It urges all the members of the group of Armenian Communists outside of the party to take immediate advantage of the opportunity to rejoin the party presented to them in this statement and assures them that the Central Executive Committee will do all in its power to permanently heal the breach that has existed among the Armenian Communists.

The Greatest Labor Leader

By Norman H. Tallentire

ON the eve of the third month of the anthracite coal strike, or "suspension of mining" as the strike is dubbed locally, John L. Lewis, International President of the United Mine Workers of America, broke his silence, and after innumerable cabinet conferences with citizens' committees, committees from chamber of commerce, and similar aggregations, condescended to address himself to the members of his own organization, the striking miners, on "Mitchell Day" in the Victoria Theater, at Shamokin, Pennsylvania, in the heart of the hard coal region.

This was an unusual event and on our arrival in town, as we mingled with the crowds, who were assembling by the hundreds from nearby towns, we noted an air of expectancy, and intense interest amongst the miners of the prospect of hearing Lewis speak.

NOT only the miners, but the townspeople were all agog, the advent of this labor leader being signaled by a display of national flags on house and store as requested by District President Golden "In honor of Mr. Lewis."

The interest of the striking miners however, was not confined merely to looking upon their president. Having been on strike for eight weeks their interest was chiefly concerned with the conduct of the strike and with a possible settlement. As the crowd of three thousand miners jammed the theater, comment was heard between groups of strikers from different sections.

"Down at Eagle Hill," says one, "there was a big meeting the other day in respect to strike relief." It was stated that the orders for food supplies, issued by the local union officers, were being drawn on one particular store, where prices were twenty to thirty per cent higher than in nearby stores. In answer to protest by strikers and their wives they were told, "you take the order drawn on the store which we give you or you get no order at all." With this, for the present, the miners had to be satisfied.

"DOWN at Port Carbon," another interjected, "they are checking up on all the girls working in the silk mills, and laying off the daughters of striking miners." Yet another miner spoke up. "I see they have thousands of tons of bituminous coal laying by the Reading tracks outside of Pottsville, and there's a shovel at work on the slack pile over near Gilberton."

These reports from different sections and the comments by the miners, showed clearly that the miners had immediate problems to be solved, in connection with the strike, chief among these being the question of relief for the miners, this question again being intimately bound up with the duration of the strike. Hence the keen interest displayed by all miners on the methods of giving out relief, the firing of strikers' daughters from silk mills, and the substitution of soft for hard coal on local railroads.

THE possible duration of the strike, whether it will last to December first, or until the first of the year, aroused sharp discussion. Says one miner, "I see in the last Journal that locals in soft coal are passing resolutions demanding a general strike." And another, "If this goes on much longer, we will have to call out the maintenance men, and make the bosses come to time."

These are the issues uppermost in the minds of the miners as they assemble for the meeting and promptly at 10 a. m. to the strains of a Sousa march, Mr. Lewis and "his party" appear on the flag-draped stage. "The party" consisted of the mayor of Shamokin, a representative of every church in Shamokin, Mr. Lewis, Secretary-Treasurer Kennedy, President Cappellini of District No. 1, and a number of lesser luminaries with Chris Golden, president of District No. 9, and chairman of the meeting.

THE first speaker is the Rev. Father Boyle, who does a good job for his church, by talking as an ex-miner and a union man, in the language of the miners, about the struggle of the union in the nineties, and urging all present to stand by their leaders in the present struggle. The Reverend Harvey J. Barney (or some such name) of the United Brethren church next graces the exercises, reading from several closely written pages an effusion of consummate hypocrisy, characteristic of the hidebound puritanical bigots who infest this region.

Speaking in an affected, sonorous, funeral voice, this scintillating genius opines, that religion is a prerequisite to thinking and that accumulation of surplus wealth—a curse of society today—is caused by the unregeneracy of the human heart. Such snivelling balderdash as this brot forth considerable applause from the audience.

Cappellini speaks a few words in fulsome and fawning praise of Lewis, followed by Fahey, who drivels about the early days with Mitchell and other pioneers, about his own present sickness and his many meetings with Mitchell, McBride and others. After a brief speech from Secretary-Treasurer Kennedy, a wire is read from Phil. Murray in Pittsburgh apologizing for his absence and then President Mattie of District No. 7 takes the stand, having been brot to the stage from the audience to speak in Murray's place.

THIS speaker proves to be the buffoon of the program, the house being frequently in an uproar during his talk. At every reference to any event in the history of the union since 1886 Mattie assures the audience that "I was there, too, mind you." This speaker does not seem to be in good grace with the official family, especially when his remarks seem to indicate a demand for a full strike program, with all the maintenance men pulled out in the anthracite, and if necessary that a general strike be called.

As Mattie waxes eloquent along these lines, Mr. Lewis and Golden look at their watches and Lewis particularly begins to squirm in his seat. However, after a while Mattie desists from his inopportune remarks and President Golden makes a spread eagle speech introducing Lewis as "the greatest labor leader in the world," a statement Lewis survives without a flicker of an eyelid.

IT is now eleven forty a. m. and the theater (which on this occasion has been donated by the management who refused to permit the miners to hold meetings in any of their chain of theaters during the 1922 strike), must be vacated before the time for the afternoon show. The meeting is well managed so that no rude interruptions may interfere with the well-oiled program. As Lewis advances to the front of the stage the band strikes up the "Star Spangled Banner," the audience rising meanwhile, and aft some perfunctory applause for "the greatest labor leader," Lewis speaks.

Dealing entirely with past history, Mr. Lewis omits any reference to the problems suggested by comments of the strikers previous to the meeting. The address is merely a rehash of the speech delivered by Lewis at Hazleton on August 25 before the "suspension" commenced. With meticulous care he relates the progress—or non-progress—of the negotiations with the operators' committee, interspersed withe reference to previous struggles of the miners since 1920, and to his interviews with President Harding in respect to "arbitration, etc."

LEWIS charges that the present strike is the result of deliberate planning by the operators in an attempt to break the union and reduce the miners to conditions of serfdom, and to enable the operators to sell their stocks of low grade coal at profiteers' prices. Mr. Lewis asserts "that the plot to force a suspension of mining has been carried out during several months with mathematical precision by the operators."

Speaking particularly for the benefit of the nebulous "public," he states that the demand for arbitration put forward by the operators is at once a bluff and an evidence of weakness. "Only when we are strong are we offered arbitration. When I asked President Harding for arbitration in Mingo county, West Virginia, in 1920, it was refused. Now they insist on arbitration."

Lewis insists that the miners will never submit the question of their bread and butter and their working conditions to men with little or no knowledge of the industry and its perils (altho he has just related several instances when he himself clamored for arbitration), stating that the cry of businessmen for peace and stability in the industry is the cry of interested parties who desire a termination of the strike in order that their own little profit-making schemes may go on uninterrupted. But the speaker insists that the struggle must go on, that "never in any struggle in history have fighters desisted for the sake of non-combatants."

DEALING with statements of Samuel Warriner, the spokesman of the coal operators, that the miners of the anthracite "must be cured of the strike habit," Lewis reiterates his charge that the bosses and not the miners are responsible for the present strike.

This is the one point in this suave talk of Mr. Lewis where the least suggestion of the struggle between two definite groups in society is indicated. The struggle between exploited and exploiters as expressed in definite class alignments is glossed over by this exponent of "true Americanism" to use his own phrase, but the right of the miners to quit work as free American workingmen is put forward in true A. F. of L. language, and at no point in his discourse does Mr. Lewis remotely suggest the role of the bosses' government in the present fight.

This in spite of the fact that already many meetings of striking miners have been broken up by the local and state police, backed up by the officers of the U. M. W. of A., who have endorsed the disbanding of meetings of miners in Scranton, Plymouth, Luzerne, Shenandoah, Exeter and other sections. This breaking up of progressive miners' meetings is reminiscent of incidents related by other speakers, about the early struggles of union organizers in this very region.

After about seventy minutes have elapsed, during which Lewis has simply reaffirmed his statement of August 25, he looks at his watch and states that "many other matters might be here discussed, but the hour grows unseemingly." Despite the fact that 150,000 miners have been unemployed for eight weeks without any apparent gain being made by the strikers, this "leader" has no suggestions to offer in order to intensify and to end the struggle.

THE calling out of the maintenace men is never even suggested and no reference whatever is made to the possibility of a general strike as indicated in the close of Lewis' speech before the Tri-District convention at Scranton on June 30. In spite of the fact that the bosses' agents refuse even to discuss the possibility of wage increase, demanded by the miners, the miners' leaders still permit members of the union to take very good care of the bosses' property, and so far as we can gather from the speech of President Lewis, no matter how long the struggle in the hard coal fields goes on, the miners in the bituminous fields will continue to mine soft coal to be used as a substitute for anthracite.

In the meantime, as indicated by the talk of the miners before the meeting, the miners and their families are relying on "relief funds" for support in many instances, in others they are running up bills which will take many weary months to pay after work in the mines is resumed, and the possibility of a long drawn struggle with "compromise" at the end looms as a nightmare before the striking workers.

NO proposal has been submitted whereby the forces of this great union (500,000 strong) may be brought to bear on the enemy. No suggestion has been made as to how the miners will exist if the struggle continues "until December or until the first of the year." The decorous meeting is closed as "the hour grows unseemingly," and the miners are hustled out of the theater to the strain of more martial music, having heard no practical suggestion as to the next steps to be taken to win their fight come from "the greatest labor leader in the world."

"GETTING READY FOR THE NEXT WAR."

The Great Pacific War. A History of the American-Japanese Campaign of 1931-33, by Hector C. Bywater, Boston, Houghton Mifflin Co., 1925. $2.50.

THIS book is worthy of attention, not because there is any probability of the next war following the lines of Bywater's book, but because of the light it throws upon the thoroness with which the war-makers are charting all the possible problems of all the possible wars, knowing as they do that war is inevitable under capitalism, and unable to foresee where the anarchy of their system will draw the lines between the combatants. Of greater interest would it be to have had Mr. Bywater's views of a struggle in the Pacific based upon a war between the United States and Great Britain. That, too, is doubtless figured out in many details by the military experts of both sides. But they are too discreet to publish imaginative accounts based upon them.

The book under review is obviously the work of a naval specialist. It deals almost entirely with the technical side of modern warfare between imperialist states. Taken for what it is, it is of considerable interest and is well-written. But after the experiences of the world war, even the technicians who try to aviod such matters, must deal with the political and social imponderable factors which play such a decisive role in modern war. Thus Bywater shows Japan initiating the war in order to smash a semi-bolshevist rising at home. He is forced to bring in the growing nationalist movement in China as a factor in the defeat of Japan. But thruout his account the other imperialist nations are carefully and completely out of the scene, and the "Great Pacific War" does not become a world war.

Curiously enuf, Bywater finds that Russia is still under the Soviets in 1931, altho he ventures little prophecy as to its policies, internal position, and international relations. He would say, doubtless, that here is no significance in this because he is basing his study of a possible war upon the present relation of forces and is not attempting a prophecy of possible world readjustments. It still remains of some importance, that no experts are attempting nowadays to set the date of the fall of Soviet Russia.

The next great war will not be at all so simple as Mr. Bywater makes his imaginary Japanese-American war. Not only will it involve, necessarily, another alignment of the entire capitalist world into two camps, but it will deal from the beginning with a revolutionary labor movement, with revolting colonial peoples, and with Soviet Russia. Any study of war that leaves these things out of account today, or deals with them only incidentally, is of no great importance.

It is rather amusing to see the New Republic, in a review of Bywater's book, consoling its semi-pacifist soul with the reflection that it proves war is "unprofitable." The New Republic seems to think that wars are caused by propaganda, and that enuf counter-propaganda to show that it is "unprofitable" and "unethical" will prevent war. But nothing can prevent the "next war" except a proletarian revolution that removes the root of war—the capitalist system of production.—Earl E. Browder.

ORGANIZE THE REVOLUTION!

LENINISM is the organizing of revolution. Bolshevism is the unlimited devotion of the revolutionary advance guard of the proletariat, combined with unwearied, tenacious work for the preparation of the revolution.—Manifesto of the Communist International.

FORWARD TO WORKERS' RULE!

Manifesto of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party on the eighth anniversary of the establishment of the workers' and peasants' government of Russia.

• • • •

EIGHT years ago, on November 7, 1917, the workers and peasants of Russia threw their exploiters from their backs. They formed a Soviet government and established the workers' rule in Russia.

For eight years the workers and peasants of Russia have defended their government and their right to abolish the exploitation and oppression of the capitalists. They have fought to establish a new social order in which the product of their labor would be used to give them a higher standard of life, in place of enriching a few capitalists and landowners.

TO maintain their workers' and peasants' government they were obliged to fight armies of the czarist generals who sought to re-establish the rule of robbery and autocracy in Russia. They were forced to fight the imperialist capitalist governments—England, France, the United States which sought to destroy their government because the capitalists feared the effect of the example of workers' rule in Russia upon the workers these capitalists were exploiting at home. They were compelled to fight the socialist mensheviks who conspired with and acted as spies for their enemies.

The Russian workers and peasants were compelled to overcome the blockade through which capitalism was seeking to strangle their government. They were obliged to overcome famine and hunger which followed the destruction wrought by counter-revolution and their imperialist enemies.

Against all these enemies the Soviet government of the workers and peasants has triumphed. It has maintained the rule of the workers and peasants in Russia and is creating a social order which is putting to an end the oppression and exploitation of the workers by capitalists.

• • • •

Achievements of the Workers' Republic

WHILE in all capitalist Europe the standard of life of the workers has been reduced to below what it was in 1914, before the war began, in Soviet Russia, the standard of life of the workers has been improved over what it was in 1914. Capitalist society has made worse the lot of the workers; the Communist government has against great obstacles improved their lot.

The workers and peasants of Russia are no longer ruled by agents of the capitalists, who use the government to fight the workers. Injunctions are not used to force workers into submission when they go on strike and enemies of the workers. The courts are not used to oppress the workers; the courts safeguard the right of the workers. The police and soldiers are not used to force workers into submission when they go on strike and fight the capitalists; they are used to protect the workers.

The capitalist employer no longer rules in Russian industry. There is no boss who hires and fires the workers at will. The Russian industrial unions have by law the right to represent the workers in the industries. They make the agreements in regard to scales of wages and the workers' right to work. The workers' shop committees represent the workers in the management. The workers of Russia are no longer the slaves of the capitalists; they have won their right to full participation in every phase of the work of production.

The Soviet government protects the workers against injury in industry, it protects them against unemployment; it is creating educational opportunities for young and old; it is creating the opportunities for recreation and the broadening of the life of the workers and peasants of Russia.

Thus there is being built a new social order in which the hardship and evils, the exploitation and oppression of capitalism are being ended and the opportunity for a finer, happier life created for the workers.

• • • •

The Danger to Capitalism

THE Soviet Union which the workers and peasants of Russia have created is a dagger thrust at the heart of the capitalists' social order. The capitalists know that the success of the Russian workers and peasants in building a new social order means the death-knell of capitalism. The capitalists know that the workers of the capitalist countries will follow in the footsteps of the workers and peasants of Russia; that they will overthrow their capitalist rulers and set to work to create better conditions of life for themselves.

The Soviet Union is an inspiration to all oppressed peoples of the earth. They find in the workers' and peasants' government an ally and supporters in their struggles for freedom. The people of China, the people of India, the people of Africa, the people of Morocco are inspired by the triumph of the Soviet Union to take up the struggle against the imperialist capitalist countries which are robbing them.

The labor unions of the Soviet Union have taken the initiative in uniting the trade unions of the world against capitalism. They are seeking to draw together in one great international organization all the organizations of labor. The capitalists see in this movement for trade union unity a new danger and threat against capitalism.

Because the Soviet Union is the inspiration of all oppressed peoples in the struggle against imperialism, because the labor unions of the Soviet Union are creating a mighty weapon against capitalism in trade union unity, because of the glorious example of a workers' government creating a better life for the workers and peasants which exists in the Soviet Union, international capitalism is again moving to destroy the achievements of the workers and peasants of Russia.

• • • •

The New Attack on the Soviet Union

THE negotiations now under way between Great Britain, France and Germany for the creation of a "security pact" is an effort to clear the way for an attack upon the Soviet Union. What Great Britain, France and Germany want is the security of capitalism, which can only be gained by destroying the Soviet Union.

The debt negotiations of the United States government are an effort to settle the European problems in order to pave the way for the struggle against the Soviet Union. Through the Dawes' plan in Germany and through debt settlements, new loans and investments, the American capitalists are becoming the exploiters of the workers all over the world. The American capitalists cannot take payment of their profits and interests in goods; they can only secure payment through greater investment. Thus the interests of the American capitalists in other countries grows.

American capitalism is seeking to protect its billions of investments against the danger of revolt of the oppressed peoples and the exploited workers, which the existence of the Soviet Union inspires, and it therefore follows the policy of the most irreconcilable enemy of the Soviet Union. It refused to recognize the Soviet Union.

It misses no opportunity to make an attack upon the Soviet Union. The exclusion of the Communist member of the British parliament from the United States, Saklatvala, and the threat of new persecutions against Communists coupled therewith, is a sign of a coming attack upon the Soviet Union.

• • • •

Attack Upon the Soviet Union Attack Upon all Workers!

THE attack upon the Soviet Union is an attack upon all workers. If the imperialist capitalist powers can destroy the Soviet Union, it will mean a wave of reaction and effort to destroy the labor movement the world over.

The workers of the United States will find that with the danger of the Soviet Union removed the capitalists will launch an even greater attack than that through which they drove down wages, lengthened hours, and destroyed many unions in the open shop drive of 1921-1922.

Capitalism, freed from the obstacles of the Soviet Union in its exploitation and oppression of colonial peoples, will drive unchecked into new imperialist struggles and a new imperialist world war.

American capitalism will be free to use its investments in European industry as a means of forcing down the wages of the American workers and forcing upon them the low standard of life which it is compelling the slaves of the Dawes' plan in Germany to accept.

Fight for the Soviet Union and the Workers' Interests

THE American workers must unite with the workers of other countries for defense of the Soviet Union and the workers' interests. The interests of the workers and peasants of the Soviet Union are the interests of the workers of every country. They are fighting against the same capitalist enemy. The same capitalist enemies which seek to destroy the Soviet Union are seeking to further oppress and exploit the workers of the United States.

Every workers' organization must place itself on record for the defense of the Soviet Union. In every city the trade unions, the co-operatives, the workers' fraternal and political organizations should send delegates to a conference to unite for defense of the Soviet Union and to fight for the workers' interests. Form a united front of labor for defense of the Soviet Union and the workers' interests.

Down with American imperialism and its looting of the peoples of Mexico, South America, China and the Philippines.

Down with the Dawes' plan and the enslaving of the German and American workers.

Down with American militarism and its sacrifices of the workers' lives for the capitalist profits.

A united front of the workers to fight for labor's interests. Forward to a labor party to fight labor's political struggles.

Forward to world trade union unity for the fight against the capitalists.

Rally to the defense of the Soviet Union.

Join in the celebration of the eight anniversary of the Soviet Union.

Recognize the Soviet Union.

Stand by the workers' and farmers' government of Russia.

Forward to the workers' and farmers' government of the United States.

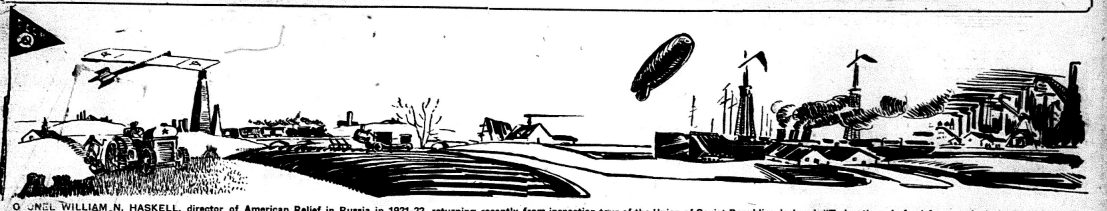
THE SUNRISE OF THE NEW DAY SHINES STRONGER THAN EVER ON THE EIGHTH ANNIVERSARY OF SOVIET RULE IN RUSSIA



COLONEL WILLIAM N. HASKELL, director of American Relief in Russia in 1921-22, returning recently from inspection tour of the Union of Soviet Republics declared, "Today there is food for everybody in Russia. In fact, I believe there is more food there than in the United States, and the prices are much lower. The population that was standing in line waiting for bread in 1921 and 1922 is now well fed. The destitution and suffering of those black years is now only a bitter memory."

From Brest-Litovsk to Locarno, 1917---1925

By H. M. Wicks

TWO treaties, Brest-Litovsk and Locarno, depict the advance of the proletarian revolution the past eight years. The first, in the early days of the revolution, found the Soviet government at a disadvantage, compelled to make a retreat and yield to the humiliating demands of General von Hoffmann, representing the imperial government of Germany. At that time Russia was unable to fight any country, even tho that country itself were in the midst of an imperialist war that finally culminated in defeat.

The second treaty, that of Locarno, was called at a time when for nearly eight years Soviet Russia had defied the whole world of the bourgeoisie. From a weak nation, scarcely able to maintain itself against one European nation, it had grown to be the most formidable and most feared power the world has ever seen.

At Brest-Litovsk Russia was a nation embracing millions of disillusioned and undisciplined workers, soldiers and peasants, whose one impelling motive was peace, bread and land, who had been cemented together in one common mass of misery to make an end of czarist despotism and who later rallied to the leadership of the Bolsheviks and crushed the bourgeois aftermath of czarism.

After the desolating years of war exhaustion and after fighting thru two revolutions in eight months the Russian masses could not fight longer. There had to be a respite from the agony and bloodshed. A party that could not understand that fact could not consolidate the revolution.

The First Step.

THE czar of all the Russians, during the tempest of war, had boasted that he would sacrifice every man and every ruble in order to win the war. Twelve million Russians were hurled into the abbatoir of the world war; sacrificed for the czar and the imperialist butchers who backed him. In the spring of 1917 the workers at the front and at home decided that they had been sacrificed long enuf. instead of being sacrficed by the czar they proclaimed that the time had come to sacrifice the czar. And they did so. When the various governments under the leadership of the bourgeoisie elements, culminating in the rule of Kerensky, endeavored to continue the war on the side of the entente, the workers, rallying to the clarion call of the Bolsheviks, determined to sacrifice Kerensky.

Brest-Litovsk came soon after the triumph of the Bolsheviks. It was impossible to drive the Russian masses into further warfare, even to resist the imperious demands of the German general staff. At Brest-Litovsk was revealed on a broad scale the practical application of the Marxian formula that the Communist Party is the vanguard of the working class; that it does not merely defend the immediate interests, but the historical interests of that class. The interests of the working class as a whole come first. And, altho some contended that it was an act of self-abasement to yield to the arrogance of Von Hoffman, the old Bolshevik guard of the party considered that it was far better to accept temporary defeat and humiliation and misunderstanding on the part of the rest of the world, than to make a futile but heroic gesture and shatter the revolution.

Eight years pass and we consider Locarno, when the revolution had become so powerful as a world force that the European capitalist nations, both victors and vanquished, who participated in the world war had come together for the purpose of trying to create a "security pact" against Bolshevism conquering the world.

What happened in the interim to produce this transformation? Hundreds of volumes have already been written describing certain events of these eight years, and thousands more will be written before it is all recorded. Within the confines of one article it is quite impossible to give but the most fragmentary outline of the events.

First and foremost we must deal with the organized power of the Soviet government. The victory goes to those who have the power to take and hold it.

A Master Stroke.

AT Brest-Litovsk the Bolshevik diplomats were confronted with a situation where the enemy was powerful, relentless and astute. Behind them was no army, only an undisciplined mass of workers just struggling out of an age long servitude, who knew only that they were weary of fighting. The problem there confronting the Bolshevik leaders was to gain time, to get a breathing space, so that the victory of the revolution could be consolidated.

The humiliating peace was signed and the strategy proved a masterstroke for the revolution because it enabled it to survive; to hold the support of the peasantry and to begin to weld together an army out of the amorphus mass of humanity in Russia. It gave the revolution the necessary time to expose to thousands of German workers the predatory designs of the imperial government; it enabled the Bolsheviks to exploit the conflicts between the imperialist nations and to begin to train a Red Army based upon the indomitable Red Guard, that had gone thru the revolutionary upheavals, preparatory to the armed struggles against Kolchak, Denekin, Yudenich, and other white guardists.

Tho the victory for the proletariat of Russia was realized thru the application of Lenin's formula, "turn the imperialist war between nations into a civil war against capitalism," the terrific impact of the war made the maintainance of an army sufficiently strong to defend the proletarian rule a gigantic task. To firmly establish the dictatorship of the proletariat demanded the building of an army that could defy the white guardist adventurers within and the imperialist invaders from without. Never at any time did the Bolsheviks have any illusions regarding this necessity. They yielded to no soft, sentimental yearnings for peace. They faced the grim realities of the struggle. As Lenin, in those days, emphasized:

> "Dictatorship is an authority resting directly upon force, and not bound by any laws. The revolutionary dictatorship of the proletariat is an authority maintained by the proletariat by means of force over and against the bourgeoisie and not bound by any laws."—The Proletarian Revolution and Kautsky the Renegade.

Arm the Revolution.

THE first task of any revolution is to disarm the former ruling class and its supporters and arm the revolution. At the time of Brest-Litovsk the workers had not recovered from the shock of the war sufficiently to engage in a further struggle. When the question of defiance to the demands of the German imperialists came up, those who favored a continued struggle said to Lenin who favored making a strategic retreat to gain time: "How do you know the workers will not rally to a further struggle? Can you answer that?" Lenin replied that he did not need to answer, that the peasants in the army had already answered "with their feet" as they ran away from the front.

So at Brest-Litovsk the proletariat of the world learned from the Bolsheviks that there are many sides to a revolutionary struggle. In this concrete instance they learned that not only is a determined offensive necessary, but that it is equally important to understand just when it is necessary to make a strategic retreat. They learned that retreat, no less than the offensive, is a part of the science of revolution.

Lenin's Strategy Wins.

AFTER Brest it was much easier to convince the workers of Germany and Austria-Hungary that they were fighting a war of imperialist conquest. A terrific propaganda of exposure, laying bare the designs of the central powers flooded the armies of Germany and her allies, causing disintegration in the ranks, and doing far more to defeat Germany than would have been possible even tho Russia could have remained in the war. When the imperialist war came to a close the Red Army of the revolution was being formed, preparatory to defending the triumph of the Russian proletariat against the world. No sonner had the echoes of the last guns died on the imperialist front than the hireling of entente imperialism, Admiral Kolchak, with a bandit gang, armed by France and Britain, started a drive against the revolution and boastfully announced that he would wear the crown of the czars of Russia in a few weeks.

The first recruiting day for the Red Army was called and the streets of Moscow and Petrograd (now Leningrad) swarmed with workers and peasants anxious to defend the revolution. When Leon Trotsky looked upon the masses in the streets struggling to enter the ranks in defense of their revolution he said "If Kolchak ever wears the crown of the czars he will wear it in a Siberian forest, but not in Moscow."

These raw troops after a hasty preliminary training were attached to the army, the nucleus of which was the old revolutionary fighters of the Red Guard. Into the Urals marched a large part of the new army and, under the command of Comrade Frunze, after months of bitter fighting, Kolchak's forces were cut to pieces, and Kolchak himself shot by one of his own men.

Red Army Triumphant.

AFTER Kolchak came Deniken, after Deniken came Yudenich. Wave after wave of invading hordes were beaten back and the Red Army was becoming ever more powerful. Then came the French-inspired drive of Poland against the revolution, and the troops of the Red Army thundered toward Warsaw and were only stopped by the throwing of French recruits onto Polish soil. The Polish white guards under Pilsudsky had invaded Russian territory, but this time, instead of a Brest peace, the Bolsheviks retaliated by hurling them back across the border and driving them into their own capital city with such terrific force that their sympathizers thruout the world held demonstrations against the "savagery" of the revolutionary forces.

All the counter-revolutionary ventures were financed by France, England and the United States. Even after these lessons the imperialists were not convinced that the revolution was impregnable. They secured another "white hope" in the person of General Wrangel, who from the Crimea, in 1920, began operations against the revolution. He was soon removed from the scene of activity. The whole force of the victorious Red Army was hurled against his mercenaries with such fury that after two weeks' steady retreating he found himself bottled up near Sebastapol and in order to save his own neck ran away on a French warship under cover of darkness, where he found refuge in Constantinople.

American and Japanese troops that had been harassing the revolution in the east, aiding every adventurer from Kolchak to the ataman, Seminoff, were finally forced to evacuate.

The First on Earth.

FORGED in the fire of civil war and revolution the Red Army had become a powerful, disciplined force, capable of defending its victory against the world. It was a new army, representing a new victorious class, fully conscious of its mission. For the first time in the history of the modern world the class that made up the army realized the fruits of victory. It was the armed force upon which rested the authority of the revolution.

Not merely was this army trained to fight, but an intensive educational campaign was carried on until on May 1, 1922, there was not a single member of the army who was illiterate.

Famine Stalks.

ADDED to the throes of the civil war the revolution was faced with a devastating famine in 1921-22. Grim death stalked thru the Volga region and millions perished before relief could arrive. The recurring droughts that have frequently thruout written history depleted the population of this region caused the almost total failure of crops. Here was a new enemy confronting the revolution. But the reserve forces of the revolution, the proletariat of other lands, rallied to the famine relief work and helped make it possible for the Soviet government to survive even that calamity.

Russia was faced with still another problem, the difficult task of reviving the economy of the nation. At the outbreak of the revolution it was hoped—and all signs indicated the probability of aid from other countries thru revolution—that the workers of other nations would be able to furnish the machinery and technical instruments necessary for the industrial revival. But the tempo of the movement slowed down, and in order to obtain necessary equipment an economic retreat, similar to the military retreat at Brest, was necessary. With the same superior statesmanship that motivated his stand on the question of Brest, Lenin boldly enunciated the new economic policy (N. E. P.) Some super-leftists, calling themselves Communists, charged that this retreat was a betrayal of the revolution. But the Bolsheviks pointed to the fact that it was possible to permit foreign capital to enter and participate in the development of the country if the political power to determine the limits of this participation remained in the hands of the proletariat.

It was a necessary retreat and altho it involved dangers, those dangers were not so great that the revolution was endangered. The power of the revolution embodied in the Red Army made unthinkable a return to the old conditions. The years since the enunciation of that policy have proved its correctness and vindicted again the diplomacy of the revolution.

Try Other Methods.

BUT the defeat of the allied aspirations to crush by force the power of the revolution, did not destroy their hope of crushing it by other methods. The new economic policy and the famine were viewed as opportunities for obtaining, thru the slimy diplomacy of Europe, the victory they could never hope to obtain by force of arms.

Numerous efforts were made to involve Russia in a diplomatic net that would open wide the gates for capitalist penetration. The most ambitious of these projects was the Genoa conference in 1922.

Britain, France and Italy arranged the conference to which it invited Soviet Russia and the United States. Charles Evans Hughes, the bungling secretary of state of the Harding cabinet, proposed cutting down the Red Army before entering such a conference. This suggestion met with the contempt it richly deserved. Hughes and his supporters did not seem to realize that it was the existence of the Red Army that made necessary the Genoa conference. The endeavor to throttle Russia by military force had failed so under the guise of "reconstructing Europe" the allies hoped they could force wide open the door to the vast resources of Russia, already slightly opened to admit the functioning of the N. E. P.

When their motives were known, Lenin rudely slammed the door in their faces. On his first public appearance on his return from a vacation where he had gone to recuperate from a seige of illness, Lenin, in a speech before the Congress of Metal Workers in Moscow, said: "Soviet Russia's economic retreat has ended and will go no farther in its concessions to capitalism. If these capitalistic gentlemen think they can obtain more by continuing to squeese us, we will reply: 'Enuf. You shall get nothing.'"

Lenin Hurls Defy.

LENIN, who was invited to the meeting at Genoa and would have gone had his health permitted, said that he hoped to talk to Lloyd George personally.

"I shall tell him," he said, "that he can't scare us with trivialities, after cannon have failed to frighten us. It is no good to threaten us with little things, because in so doing the threateners might lose their prestige. Attempts to put us in the position of a conquered country are nonsense. We, as merchants, know what we owe you and what you owe us, and also what should be your lawful profit."

The speech of Lenin cast gloom over Genoa as the giants of allied imperialism opened their conference. It dispelled any hopes they had entertained of economically enslaving Russia, thereby winning on the economic field the victory that was snatched from them by the Red Army on the sanguinary field of civil war.

Leon Trotsky, at that time war minister, in a public address asserted that if any attempt were made by those nations represented at Genoa to take from Russia by force what they could not achieve thru diplomacy "it might be necessary to tip the balance with blood."

The splendid batallions of the Red Army that had been built up in four years time from the shattered and undisciplined remnants of the fighters of the early revolutionary period were a guarantee against further military designs that might have been formulated at Genoa.

Treaty of Rapallo.

AT Genoa the allied statesmen had the audacity during the first week to propose absurd demands that, if accepted, would have reduced Russia to a state of vassalage comparable to that of China, with all the powers having a free hand to plunder to their heart's content. To flaunt the open contempt of the revolution in the faces of Lloyd George, Poincarè, Barthou and company, the Soviet government met with Germany at Rapallo and concluded a treaty that wiped the slate of their mutual war obligations clean, while the allies were striving to force Russia to recognize the absurd debts of the Czar. The treaty of Brest-Litovsk was officially abrogated by the two nations involved, though as a gesture the treaty of Versailles had already declared for its abrogation.

For more than a month at Genoa the allied powers struggled to create a basis for united action against Russia, but their own irreconcilable contradictions defeated their purpose and it dissolved with no permanent results achieved.

The S-R Trials.

ACCOMPANYING the efforts of the allies at Genoa the social-democrats of the world tried to alienate the class conscious proletariat from support of the revolution by publishing reams of hysterical documents appealing to the "civilized world" to come to the aid of the social-revolutionaries who were then on trial in Russia, charged with every crime from conspiracy against the revolution to actual assassination and accepting money from the French military mission.

While in the throes of revolution and civil war these reptiles, under the direction of the executive committee of the social revolutionary party, with Victor Tchernoff, a hireling of French imperialism at their head, committed a series of the most loathsome and repulsive crimes against the revolution in order to open the gates to the allied armies so that the defenders of the revolution could be drowned in oceans of blood and the supremacy of capitalism restored.

This malignant throng was decisively silenced when the Soviet government, after proving, with unimpeachable documentary evidence, that they were guilty of all the atrocious crimes charged, and many more, commuted the death sentences imposed upon them. Rather than execute them they were permitted to live and endure the execration of all sincere revolutionists thruout the earth.

Locarno the Latest.

OTHER efforts of the capitalist nations to devise a method of crushing the revolution; the arbitrary creation of little ententes, the manouvering to gain advantages in one way or another over the revolution, finally culminated in Locarno, where the most ambitious plan for isolating Russia from the rest of the world and forming a bloc of nations to destroy the revolution by armed invasion came to naught.

By exploiting the conflicts between the various imperialist nations, Russia has, thus far, been successful in preventing an armed invasion. But those sinister forces represented at Locarno are still at work, and as long as they exist they will menace the revolution.

But Russia need have no fear of them, for there is a tremendous potential reserve force in India, Asia and Africa, where the exploited colonials, groaning under the burdens of imperialism are even now stirring restlessly. When the time for war between the outpost of the world revolution and the capitalist nations of the earth comes, in addition to the iron battalions of the proletarian Red Army there will be the vast masses of colonial slaves brought into the conflict on the side of the revolution.

Then the imperialist nations themselves have still to reckon with the class conscious proletariat at home, under the leadership of the Communist International, who will throw all their might into the scales on the side of the Union of Soviet Republics and tip the balance for the revolution.

Revolution Defiant

LET the imperialist nations hesitate before letting loose upon their heads certain annihilation, for such it will be if ever they dare step one foot of a hostile army on the soil of the revolution.

From Brest-Litovsk to Locarno; from the first feeble steps on the path to revolution to the day when the imperialist world stands appalled before the might of that revolution. After eight years Soviet Russia is still holding aloft the torch of world revolution and every passing year it grows brighter; its rays penetrate ever darker recesses of the earth until all the exploited and oppressed are turning their eyes toward it as the beacon that will light the path to freedom.

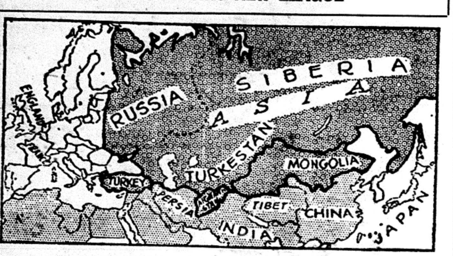
EUROPE FEARS NEW LEAGUE



In order to justify the campaign of frightfulness being waged against the colonial peoples in nations bordering the Mediterranean sea, the propagandists of the allied butchers have created the legend of a new league of eastern nations to challenge the western league of European nations. The dark-shaded nations are supposed to indicate the boundaries of the potential league, while the light shaded portions represent those nations sympathetic to the scheme.

A fable is current in London to the effect that Dr. Tewfik Pasha, Turkish foreign minister, has approached the powerful eastern chieftains with the proposition and is sounding out the Asiatic powers. Soviet Russia is reported to have expressed its willingness to join such a league.

This propaganda is for the purpose of detracting attention from the maneuvers of Great Britain in endeavoring to create a "sanitary cordon" around Russia, with the object of isolating and trying to crush by force of arms the proletarian revolution. The recent seizure of power in Persia by Riza Khan has baffled Great Britain, as Khan is known to have been friendly toward Soviet Russia. If his friendship continues, and it is reasonable to expect it will, he may set up a republic and enter into closer relations with Russia. Britain fears that Teharan may become a strategic spot from which Bolshevist propaganda may more effectively permeate Iraq, Afghanistan and India. It may also endanger British oil interests in the south, as the Persian gulf has long been regarded as a British preserve.

A league of nations against the European league may eventually be formed, but it will not come thru the initiative of the present rulers of Turkey or other nations under domination of the imperialist powers. It will come when the colonial peoples rise in their might and scourge from the face of the earth the despotic invaders who are now holding them in subjection to imperialistic nations. Then will be formed a great anti-imperialist bloc whose blows will shatter to its very foundations the European league of nations and the governments that support it, and at the same time will send American capitalism reeling mortally wounded out of the Near and Far East.

At home the American proletariat will have to finish the job and give it a proper burial.

BRITISH INTELLIGENCE CHIEF BOASTS HOW GERMAN ATROCITY STORIES WERE MANUFACTURED

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—General J. V. Charteris' admission at a New York banquet that as chief of intelligence for the British army in war time and official propagandist he manufactured German atrocity stories has aroused the indignation of many of his listeners. They were particularly aroused at Charteris' naive boast that he switched captions on two photographs, one of dead bodies and another of dead horses going behind the German lines. The horse caption explained the bodies were going behind the lines to be boiled down for fat. Charteris said he switched this caption to the dead men picture and then sent the photographs to China to create anti-German sentiment.

The stories of the pseudo fat rendering methods of the Germans were broadcasted during the war and obtained a wide circulation in America. even Billy Sunday shouting them from his evangelistic pulpits.

"The matter most certainly will be taken up in parliament," declared two British labor members of parliament, now visiting in America following the inter-parliamentary union congress held at Washington, D. C.

Task for Ninth Year: Demand Soviet Recognition by U. S.

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

ON the threshold of the ninth year of the Union of Soviet Republics, the United States alone of the so-called "great powers" withholds its recognition of the workers' and peasants' government. All the others have surrendered, as Wall Street's puppet power in Washington ultimately will.

During the eighth year of the Soviet Union, two more of the world's leading imperialist nations were forced to bend their knees and accord recognition to the workers' republics.

In western Europe, the Herriot government put France in line with the capitalist governments of Germany, Italy and Great Britain, so that not a major nation on the continent was left out of the procession that had recognised the everlasting stability of Soviet rule.

In the far Pacific, the Mikado's government at Tokio also surrendered the hope of overthrowing the workers' power, gave it recognition instead and opened extensive trade relations with it.

SOVIET recognition by France and Japan clearly showed the turning of the tables in the conflicting relations between workers' rule over one-sixth of the world, and capitalist rule over the other five-sixths of the earth's land surface.

Soviet rule was on the defensive when the Mikado's armies were penetrating the Far Eastern Republic, supporting the Kolchak white guard counter-revolutionaries. The struggle was difficult when the United States joined in the growing invasion of Soviet soil, with Vladivostok in the hands of the enemy, and the pirate flag of the bandit oppressor being carried to the borders of Soviet Russia in Europe.

Soviet rule was on the defensive in Europe, with imperialist France, and England, and the United States, with all the other capitalist foes of workers' rule developing every possible opportunity to place a dagger at the heart of the youthful and vigorous proletarian power that called in its turn for their extermination.

Soviet rule was on the defensive when Yudenitch was knocking at the gates of Leningrad and Baron Wrangel, from the south, was pushing his way, with murder, and pillage and fire, towards Red Moscow.

• • •

BUT the picture on this year's eighth anniversary of the Soviet Union is a different one. The workers' republic is on the offensive. The capitalist world is on the defensive.

UNITED STATES ALONE AMONG POWERS DODGES SOVIET RECOGNITION

The complete list of countries that have recognized the Union of Soviet Republics up to the present time follows:

1. Esthonia, Feb. 2, 1920.
2. Lithuania, July 12, 1920.
3. Latvia, Aug. 11, 1920.
4. Finland, Oct. 14, 1920.
5. Persia, Feb. 26, 1921.
6. Afghanistan, Feb. 28, 1921.
7. Turkey, March 16, 1921.
8. Poland, March 18, 1921.
9. Germany, April 16, 1923.
10. Great Britain, Feb. 1, 19924.
11. Italy, Feb. 7, 1924.
12. Norway, Feb. 13, 1924.
13. Austria, Feb. 20, 1924.
14. Greece, March 8, 1924.
15. Sweden, March 15, 1924.
16. China, May 31, 1924.
17. Denmark, June 18, 1924.
18. Mexico, Aug. 24, 1924.
19. Hungary, Sept. 18, 1924.
20. France, Oct. 28, 1924.
21. Japan, January 20, 1925.

United States?

In the Far East the oppressed nations, especially the Chinese republic, look to Soviet rule for inspiration and leadership. Facing an industrial depression at home, Japanese capitalism feels its power weakening on the continent. China and Korea prepare for greater liberating struggles. Gone are the days when Kolchak could promise the Japanese Mikado one-half of Siberia. The last soldier of Nippon has instead slowly treked his way out of the Isle of Sakhalin, rich in resources and commanding in location, a valuable but lost prize, to Japanese capitalism. The Soviet Union in the Orient hurls its challenge to the whole capitalist world.

FRANCE recognized Soviet rule. No promises made to pay the czarist debts. No surrender of any of the elemental rights of the workers and peasants. Recognition came as the seventh anniversary was being celebrated one year ago. There was the Franco-Russian alliance of the czarists with the great profiteers in Paris. There is now another Franco-Russian alliance, the unity of the liberated Russian workers and peasants with the revolutionary workers and peasants of France, not only struggling for their own emancipation, but also allying their battles with those of the colonial slaves in Morocco, in Syria and elsewhere that discontent may flame and challenge the foreign master.

Altho the French imperialists, in their efforts to bulwark "the empire," have almost emptied their treasure chests in Paris, nevertheless funds are still found to subsidize the military budgets of Poland, Roumania, Czecho-Slovakia, the Baltic states and other border enemies of Soviet rule. Thus does bankrupt France seek to strengthen its military sway over capitalist Europe, and to build for new and more ambitious attacks against the Soviet Union. All this in spite of the fact that the franc is falling in price while capitalist America is becoming more niggardly with its loans, fearing for the billions already advanced, while the wars in North Africa and Asia make continued demands upon the depleted French treasury, no matter what government is in power.

SO does capitalist Europe fear Soviet Russia. It is this capitalist fear of the Red Giant in the East that forced the Locarno conference; an effort of the capitalist nations to rally every ounce of strength for new attacks against the workers' power, while at the same time maintaining its increasing oppression over their own workers and farmers at home. Yet the hysteria in the league of nations council, called to consider the hostilities between Greece and Bulgaria, shows how the capitalist structure creaks in every timber.

WHAT an inspiration for the workers and farmers of the United States to wage greater efforts demanding the recognition of the Union of Soviet Republics by this nation. That should be a task to be accomplished during "The Ninth Year."

Altho recognition has not yet been granted, nevertheless, the builders of the power of the workers and peasants are continually visiting this classic land of capitalism, purchasing the things that they need, getting the information that will help them or offering facts to break down the wall of prejudice built up by the lies of a well-nigh all-powerful profit press. Soviet representatives purchase tractors and ploughs from the farm implement industry in the north; cotton in the south; cattle, sheep and hogs of special breed in the west; spending tens of millions of dollars. Soviet Russia is building. But the workers and peasants want to build faster. They want to open up the lanes of commerce that will unleash the flow of goods that they need, that will put their products on the markets of the world. They are not begging, but demanding credits from capitalist industry and getting it. But they want more. Russia was backward under czarism. The Russia of the workers and peasants strides forward, registering new achievements with each passing month, an invitation to labor thruout the world to follow in its footsteps.

IT should be enough for this short article to call the attention of America's toiling millions to the findings of Colonel William N. Haskell, of the United States army, director of the American relief administration in Soviet Russia during the famine of 1921-22, who has just returned to this country after another tour of investigation of the Soviet Union.

Colonel Haskell is an imperialist soldier, graduate of West Point Military Academy in 1901; director for several years in Wall Street's armed forces in the subjugated Philippines; commander of a regiment along the Mexican border in 1916-17; who went to France in the great war to help make the world safe for Morgan's millions, then to superintend "relief" in Roumania and Armenia, to help save these nations for capitalism after the war. Armenia went Soviet and remained so. Roumania just manages to hang onto the end of Wall Street's bread line.

COLONEL HASKELL tells in his own words how he was sent to Soviet Russia "when Herbert Hoover's highly philanthropic impulse moved humanity to the relief of poor Russia." It is not necessary here to argue again that Hoover's every impulse grows out of the profit hunger of the American dollar. This was proven conclusively by the story of the part played by his "relief forces" in the overthrow of the Hungarian Soviet Republic. It is merely necessary to point out that Colonel Haskell has no cause to be prejudiced on the side of Soviet rule. He is merely pointing out indisputable facts when he says:

"Today there is food for everybody in Russia. In fact, I believe there is more food there than in the United States, and the prices are much lower. The population that was standing in line waiting for bread in 1921 and 1922, is now well fed. The destitution and suffering of those black years is now only a bitter memory."

That gives the lie to the stories recently circulated by the Chicago Tribune that famine is again devastating Soviet Russia. Again Haskell says:

"Today the Russian rouble is quoted at 51 cents and is on a parity with the English pound and the American dollar. Moreover, it has been there more than two years and is backed by a gold reserve. All the old money has been wiped out and there is plenty of silver and copper money around. The stores and markets, except for a few articles, are plentifully supplied with goods."

All this while the franc in France and Belgium, and the lire in Italy, with the moneys of other capitalist lands drop in value, while the return to the gold standard in England only increases the cost of living for wide masses of labor. But again, quoting from Haskell:

"Today the Russians are sufficiently if not fashionably clothed. The streets of Moscow and other cities hum with traffic."

Then this contrast:

"The working man is no longer hungry or oppressed. His is the preferred class.

"Contrast this with the popular conception of the old, old Russia—the Russia of the fabled opulence and magnificence of the upper class, of religious oppression and cruel class distinctions, the Russia of the knout and the cruel landlord.

"All that, of course, has faded into the past. The once proud nobles of Russia are scattered over the world, some serving as butlers and waiters.

"The working man, who was once less to them than the dust beneath their haughty feet, now has the first consideration."

REMEMBER that the above is the confession of a man who not only believes in the rule of the landlord, the banker and the great exploiter in this country, but has joined the military arm of the profiteers' social system in order to protect the plunder of these business bandits. He does not yet realize that the workers and peasants of the Soviet Union are striving to abolish all classes; so he still talks of classes. Thus he admits that children are having their first real chance in Russia under Soviet rule when he says:

"The working man's children, who never had a chance in the old days, are now also in the preferred class. The government owns everything, and everything is conducted with special reference to the working man."

And again:

"I believe that the men who are running Russia are working earnestly for the common good of their country, without thot of graft."

This shatters another whole barrage of kept press propaganda, as does the following:

"The government fosters no religion, but every man may worship his own god in his own way. There are no longer any restrictions on the Jews. Many of them are members of the government."

Once more:

"A light of hope indubitably gleams ahead for the country they used to call the land of the white czars."

Some more of Haskell's conclusions are as follows:

"I was particularly interested in seeing the hospitals of today in Russia, because in 1922 they were stuffing wounds with newspapers and sewing them with thread picked from old cloth. They had no anaesthetics.

"Now the hospitals in Russia are clean and sanitary, and fairly well equipped with modern appliances.

"The streets of the big cities, which were in filthy condition in 1922, are now as clean as New York and considerable attention is paid to muncipal sanitation."

COLONEL HASKELL, of course, does not admit that it was the futile attack of world capitalism against Soviet Russia that produced the untold agony and misery of the first years of Soviet rule, an attack egged on by the United States government.

It is to this land, with its Soviet rule that the profiteers tried to overthrow, that Colonel Haskell now refers as a "land full of hope and vigorous activity, politically tranquil, but badly in need of capital and equipment."

IT should not be difficult to pin great significance to this report by Colonel Haskell. He is a representative of Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce in Coolidge's cabinet, which means that he is a business getter for American capitalist industry. Hoover's agent does not talk of the "economic vacuum" that Soviet Russia was supposed to be in the days when the trio, Harding, Hughes and Hoover, fought against Soviet recognition.

Secretary of State Kellogg has taken Hughes' place and Coolidge has become accustomed to Harding's seat in the white house, but still the diplomatic wing of the government continues to attack the workers' and peasants' republic, giving little hint of any change in policy, not even to its labor wing, the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor, that continues its bitter onslaught. But there is a different breeze blowing in the department of commerce, if any value is to be placed at all upon Haskell's declarations.

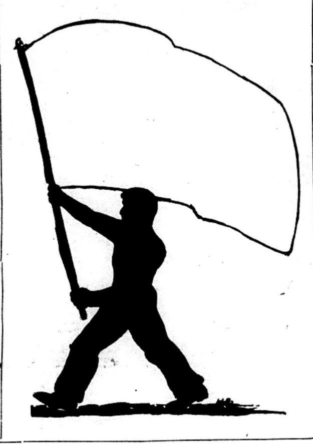
AMERICAN workers and farmers can speed the day of Soviet recognition by bringing their power to bear upon the capitalist government at Washington.

They can help develop those relations between Soviet Russia and the United States that will help flood the Soviet Union with the equipment that the Russian workers and peasants need to build mightier their new social order.

American workers and farmers can win a great victory during the ninth year of Soviet rule by forcing recognition by the United States of the first workers' and peasants' government, the hope of the workers and farmers thruout the whole world. Stand by the Soviet Union by demanding Soviet recognition.



EIGHT YEARS AFTER—AND PURCELL

By H. D. WENDELL.

EIGHT years after the Russian revolution a man comes to America. Standing before a gathering of four hundred delegates of organized labor he spoke a few simple thruths about the workers' and peasants' government. This was not all he said. He said much more and said it well. But it was what he said about the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics that frightened the greater part of the 400. It frightened them so that they sat perfectly still and were not relieved until their spokesman; President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, got up and did what the 400 wanted him to do and which he knew they wanted him to do.

Green made a speech against the Soviet Union. It was a rabid, vicious speech. Secretary Kellogg, Sir Joynson-Hicks or Baron Wrangel could have done no better. The 400 were relieved. They could breath more easily. The icy sweat into which the speech of this man from Europe had plunged them gave way to the hot vapors of their leader outdoing Abramowitch at his best.

TO Arthur A. Purcell, fraternal delegate of the British Trade Union Congress, it must have been at once a ludicrous and sad spectacle. Perhaps it wasn't. Perhaps he had heard his own British Mr. Green, the Hon. J. H. Thomas M. P., make a similar speech much more cleverly. But he must certainly have been sad to note that in that sea of faces there was no one to challenge the chauvinism, the social patriotism, the utter demorilization of this labor convention of which Green's speech was the epitome.

Purcell is not a Communist. He is a British labor leader of many years standing and much prominence. He has been chairman of the British Trades Union Congress. He is now vice-chairman. He is President of the Furniture Workers' Union of Great Britain. He is a labor member of parliament. As the representative of the British unions to the International Federation of Trade Unions, the Amsterdam International, he was made president of that body. All this stands him in good stead and these honors alone would have given him the kind of welcome in American labor circles that an arch-duke gets in Newport. But he is more than that.

PURCELL headed the British trade union delegation to Soviet Russia. The delegation went to the forbdden land. It came back and made a lengthy report. This report was sympathetic. It recommended the recognition of Soviet Russia. It broke down the tissue of lies about the U. S. S. R. that had been laboriously built up by the London Times with the able assistance of certain silk-breeched labor ministers working hand in hand with their tory opponents. It blasted the myth of the "Zinoviev letter." In a word, it told the truth.

This earned Purcell a bad name among the elite, the silk-hatted gentry, of his own labor movement. It made him a dangerous character at Atlantic City. But it didn't prevent the rank and file of the British trade unions from endorsing the report and sending him as their fraternal delegate to the A. F. of L. convention.

More than that. The British trade unions entered into an agreement with the Russian unions. They both pledged themselves to work for the world unity of all trade unions. J. H. Thomas didn't like this. He did all he could to prevent it but could not. The social-democratic leaders of the German trade unions didn't like it, Jouhaux of France didn't like it, it got under Oudegeest's skin and drove President Green to make the frantic speech loudly applauded by the New York Times and the Bankers Association. Purcell had a lot to do with the agreement. He was in favor of it. He worked for it. He is working for world trade union unity now. That's the second reason why Purcell is feared.

THE prejudice of Atlantic City could not help but spread thruout the movement. But the farther down it goes the less virus there is in it. Thousands of trade unionists want to hear Purcell talk. They want to know what his message is. Purcell is talking to them now. In eight of the biggest cities of the country trade unionists have arranged mass meetings at which Purcell is speaking.

He is telling them the truth about Soviet Russia. He is telling them why American labor should also send a delegation to Soviet Russia. He is telling them what world trade union unity means. And they are listening.

Columbia-Ecuador Break

BALBOA, Panama, Nov. 4.—An impending rupture between Ecuador and Columbia is indicated in a dispatch received here from Bogota stating that the Ecuadorian minister has been withdrawn from Columbia as a protest to Columbia's approval of the recent boundary treaty with Peru. Ecuador holds, it is said, that the treaty was approved without proper regard for Ecuador's interests.

If you want to thoroughly understand Communism—study it.

A Cradle Chorus

(Schools for baby "Blackshirts" are the latest Fascist innovation in Britain—Daily Herald.)

ROCK-A-BYE, Baby, in your Black Shirt,
You must begin early your creed to assert;
We'll read you no longer mere nursery-rhymes
But Morning Post leaders and pars from The Times;
We'll teach you to lisp, in a shrill treble clef,
The new A. B. C. of the little B. F.

No bright B. F. babies are safe in their beds
While all propaganda is left to the Reds:
So pick up your rattles, while all the world harks,
And drown with their thunder the doctrines of Marx;
Their echo a mightier babel shall be
Than the gospel put forth by the C. P. G. B.

So battle your babel, brave babes one and all:
Till the Bolshy battalions of Muscovy fall.
Grow up to be girls, or alternately boys
Who know that the world can be conquered by noise—
Continue your antics till everyone's deaf,
And the Earth's Pandemonium branded "B. F."

Division St. Admission free. Come and bring your friends. Russian speakers, a musical program.

CHINA AND THE SOVIET UNION

By JAMES H. DOLSEN.

IT was in Shanghai in 1923 that Dr. Sun Yat Sen met Adolph Joffe, Soviet ambassador to China. What the Chinese nationalist leader learned at first hand from this representative of Bolshevik Russia made a deep impression on him. He discovered that the natural bond of interest which unites the oppressed peoples of subject and colonial countries with the workers ism was recognized by the Russian revolutionists and formed an important tactic in the work of the Third International.

Thereafter Dr. Sun came increasingly under the influence of Communist theories, strengthened by his visit to Moscow where he met Lenin. When he died at Canton March 11th of this year his last wish was to be buried "beside his great friend Lenin."

THE treaty negotiated between the Soviet Union and China marked the first recognition of the latter country as a nation of equal rank with the great powers. Its conclusion had a tremendous effect upon the Chinese inclining them to broaden their friendly relationships with the workers' republic to the north and west, and creating grave problems for the grasping statesmen of Europe and America to face.

It was a realization of the unity of interest between the workers and peasants of the two nations that led the Kuomintang, carrying on the struggle against foreign imperialism in China, to make a historic declaration of their attitude towards the Soviet Union thru a public manifesto of their national executive committee, issued May 21st of this year.

In speaking of the way China has been treated by other countries, this statement thus refers to the Russian attitude: "As to the nations which treat us on a footing of equality, we declare, as we have stated in our manifesto on the Sino-Russian agreement, that only Soviet Russia deserves the name of an equal partner." And farther on, it virtually binds the party to an alliance with the Soviets: "This party (Kuomintang) should, therefore, continue hand in hand with the Soviet Republics to struggle against imperialism for the realization of the national revolutionary movement."

"Red" Canton to Commemorate Eighth Anniversary.

WHILE countless celebrations of the eighth anniversary of the Soviet Republic will be held in China, the greatest outpouring will doubtless be witnessed in Canton, the capital of the Southern republic and the former home of Dr. Sun Yat Sen. Since the more radical elements in the Kuomintang got control last spring, the tendency has been increasingly to the left with the result that Chinese Communists are in virtual command of the city today.

A correspondent of the North China Daily News, Shanghai, writing in the Kolnische Zeitung, of Cologne, Germany, characterizes the Communist domination of Canton as "an experiment which the whole of Asia is watching." Its international aspect, he goes on to explain, "is crystallized in an embittered struggle between England and Russia, the outcome of which cannot be foreseen." He boasts however, that "Everything is being done by the British with intellectual and material means to starve out Bolshevik ideas in Canton."

THE commemoration of the Soviet anniversary in Canton will not be merely by enthusiastic speeches of eloquent orators at mass meetings. An army of Chinese mercenaries, with the financial and moral backing of Great Britain in particular and of the other powers as well—including, we may be sure, this country—is marching on the city. Perhaps the booming of cannon and the sharp staccato of rifle fire, with the groans of the wounded, will mark the day.

Whatever happens our heroic comrades of the Red Corps of China can be counted on to carry the working class banners to eventual victory. The grasping ambitions of the capitalist nations cannot permanently be reconciled, any more than a crowd of thieves can live in security.

More and more the masses of Chinese workers and peasants will come to realize their unity of interest with the workers and peasants of the Union of Soviet Republics as it is and the world union it is destined to become. Therefore they greet with renewed hope and courage their Russian comrades at this eighth anniversary of the Communist revolution.

Eight Years of Growth Brings Prosperity to Soviet Union

By EARL R. BROWDER.

ALL the world is interested in what is going on in Soviet Russia. And especially all the world's workers. Every bit of news that comes, registering the victories and the setbacks of the first workers' government, is eagerly read by millions. Because every one knows that a tremendous and epoch-making step was taken when the Russian workers and peasants' under the leadership of the Bolsheviki, took power in October, 1917, and every development since that time is either a step forward for the whole working class of the world or a defeat for the whole working class. For good or ill, Russia has for eight years stood as the vanguard of the proletarian revolution. The evidence that accumulates every day, that the defeats and hardships have been passing and temporary, while the victories and material benefits have been constantly growing greater and more permanent, heartened the toiling millions of every land for new struggles against their exploiters.

The Organs of Workers' Rule.

THE working class cannot rule unless it is organized. Under czarism, the Russian workers were denied the simplest rights of organization, and could act only in secret, conspiratorial, underground organizations. How have they fared in this respect since they broke the power of the bourgeoisie?

First, let us examine the growth of the political party of the workers—the Bolshevik faction of the Russian Social-Democratic Party which became the Russian Communist Party. In 1903, the Bolsheviks had 825 members; after the 1905 revolution it rose to 46,146 members; then until the 1917 revolution it lived an underground existence during which it could not even register its membership. Beginning with 1917, the party increased its membership by leaps and bounds, in spite of the severe obligations of membership, the rigid discipline, and the most careful scrutiny and examination of candidates. Today the Russian Communist Party numbers 850,000, every one of whom is a picked man or woman, pledged under the highest degree of discipline to the cause of the proletarian revolution and the service of the working class.

The exact figures of the growth of the Russian Communist Party are as follows:

Year	Members
1903	825
1905	5,150
1906	13,800
1907	46,146
1917	172,625
1918	148,000
1919	313,766
1920	611,978
1921	705,245
1925	850,000

(Figures to 1921 from Wm. Z. Foster's The Russian Revolution, page 35, Chicago, 1921; for 1925, from Reports of the Statistical Department of the R. C. P. No. 134.)

EVEN more striking is the tremendous youth movement. This is reaching truly phenomenal proportions. The growth of the Young Communist League is aptly described by N. Bucharin, (in The International Bourgeoisie and its Apostle Kautsky,) as "an unparalleled stormy and extraordinary organizational development." Developed entirely since the revolution of 1917, the Young Communist League (not counting the very young people who are organized in the "Pioneers") has in 1925 more than a million and a half members. Its course of development is registered in the following (from The Young Communist League of Russia in Figures, Moscow, 1925, page 7):

Young Communist League Membership
1922 Oct. (5th Congress)	206,000
1923 January	303,944
1924 January	500,700
1925 January	1,140,706
1925 April	1,432,608

Where else in the entire world has the working class youth found such a free and rich social life that would result in such a truly magnificent organizational growth? Surely not in the United States, where even the bourgeois-endowed boy scouts, backed by the untold wealth of the richest country in the world, gathers in little more than the children of the middle class.

But if the growth of the youth organization is remarkable, what then shall we say of the organizations of the children (of 12 to 16 years), called the "Pioneers"? This wonderful body, of which there is nothing to compare in other countries, increased its membership more than one million in less than a year and a half. It is training the children of Russia to take their positions as responsible members of the ruling class of Russia—the working class—to become the administrators of the future socialist state, and the builders of the Communist society.

The growth of the Pioneers is shown in the following figures (from The Communist Children's Movement in Figures, Moscow, 1925.):

	Number of Groups	Number of Members
1924 January	3,000	161,349
1924 July	3,704	200,000
1924 October	12,000	760,000
1925 January	19,814	1,000,032
1925 April	25,866	1,299,519

IN the question of the organization of labor unions, the Russian working class has been able, thanks to the revolution, to rise from their complete suppression under the czar, in the course of the eight years of workers' rule, to the position of the most completely and scientifically organized working class in the entire world. In the first years of the revolution, every worker automatically became a member of the union. This fact was seized upon by the enemies of Russia and of the working class, in order to claim that the union membership did not mean anything. But since 1921, membership is purely voluntary, and requires the continuous and conscious action of each member to maintain, membership fees being paid individually. And still the union membership continues to grow.

The first period of this growth is shown by Foster (in The Russian Revolution, Chicago, 1921.):

January, 1917	1,385
June, 1917	1,475,429
January, 1918	2,532,000
January, 1919	3,638,812
April, 1920	4,262,000

AFTER the inauguration of the New Economic Policy, the course of development is described by N. Bucharin (in The International Bourgeoisie and Kautsky its Apostle,) as follows:

"A long time ago we left the method of automatically organizing the working class in the trade unions; as we did during the period of war Communism, and went over to the method of individual voluntary membership. Nevertheless this did not result in a decrease in the numbers of the union membership, but on the contrary, it resulted in an increase. On the 1st of January, 1923, the percentage of the entire working class organized in the trade unions was 95.9 per cent.

"At the time of the Fifth Trade Union Congress, the unions had a total membership of four and a half millions. And the Fifth Trade Union Congress was able to show an increase in the total membership of 30 per cent, the total membership then being over six millions."

Surely there has never been before a working class which was so thoroly and completely organized, that wielded such enormous power in society, as the Russian working class—thanks to the Bolshevik revolution.

Growth of Culture.

THE tremendous development in organization has been accompanied by a parallel development of culture among the workers. Whereas under the czar and the petty-bourgeois provisional government, the working masses had been denied largely even the opportunity to learn to read and write, under the Soviets, on the contrary, the workers thru their organizations and led by the Communist Party, have developed a rich and active intellectual life. This is reflected in the reports of the trade unions, and particularly in the institution of the Workers' Correspondents.

The general level of culture is shown in the great growth of newspaper circulation. The comparison shows:

Daily circulation before the revolution 2,500,000
Daily circulation in 1925..........5,000,000
One edition, all papers, 1925 7,500,000

Thus it is seen that the proletarian revolution gave to millions of workers and peasants in Russia their first opportunity to participate in politics, to know what is going on in the world, to read and to think, and thus to act with intelligence and power. And, quite to the contrary of what exists in the United States, every copy of the papers is written by workers, for workers, and does not consist of the intellectual poison of the Chicago Tribune or the Hearst papers, of which, the more the workers read the more confused they are made.

TO show that these papers are actually written by and for the workers and peasants, one needs only look at the institution of the Workers' Correspondents. As an institution with its own congresses and officials, this movement was only launched in late 1923. Already it has become a great national institution. Witness the following figures, reported in Pravda on the occasion of the second congress of workers and village correspondents, and also contained in a report by the Publishing House of the Journalists' Institute:

	Worker Cor'spdts.	Village Cor'spdts	Total
March, 1924	32,570	24,800	57,370
August, 1924	43,200	57,500	100,700
Dec., 1924	63,280	79,780	143,060

Accompanying this development of the regular press, with its hundreds of thousands of worker-editors, there has developed (due to the lack of printing presses and paper to fill the tremendous demand for ever more publications) the so-called "Wall Papers," newspapers which are written out by hand and pasted on bulletin boards, in the shops, mines, and villages. These "wall papers" are numbered at present in tens of thousands.

The part taken in this work, directly, by the trade unions, is growing ever more important. A short section of the report of the All-Russian Central Council of Trade Unions for 1924 (pages 86-87), is so much to the point, and so brief, that it must be reproduced here:

"The educational work of the unions is based mainly upon the factory club. Of the 1,572 workers' clubs (in 62 provinces), 1,049 are located in factories, the others being local and central clubs.

"The unions pay special attention to the workers' libraries, which constitute an important part of their educational activities. The results of an examination of the educational activities of the unions carried out in 62 provinces showed that in 1923 they had 1,608 union libraries, with 332,000 permanent subscribers, of whim 50 per cent were manual workers, 35 per cent clerical workers, and 15 per cent members of their families. The libraries had about 3,000,000 volumes." (This was more than two years ago, and has been multiplied several times since then.)

"There are at present (first part of 1924) in Soviet Russia a total of 885 factory apprentice schools with 60,000 students, 301 technical courses with 10,009 students, and 30 evening courses with 60,000 students.

"It should also be pointed out that the unions are taking an active part in the selection of students for the universities, and that workers and members of trade unions are given a higher education." (Trade Unions of U. S. S. R., in 1922-24, Moscow, 1924.)

The unions themselves directly publish 24 newspapers and 63 magazines, with a circulation of about 735,000. The biggest circulation is that of the Gudok (The Whistle), organ of the Railwaymen's Union, which has a daily circulation of a quarter-million copies.

Conditions of Living.

THE Russian workers are as yet far from having achieved a comfortable standard of living. Inheriting a backward country, in which industry was only beginning to develop; with even the backward industry completely ruined by the war, the blockade, and the civil war; being largely cut off from access to the resources of the rest of the world; with all of these tremendous handicaps, it will take the Russian working class some years to realize the full possibilities of a Communist development of economic life.

It is absurd, however, to compare the material conditions of the Russian workers with some "ideal." The measure of the revolutionary achievements must be measured by comparison with what the workers had before. And from this standpoint, the progress of the working class is great indeed.

Production of the Russian industries is rapidly approaching the prewar level. And this production, instead of as formerly being largely for the benefit of the exploiting class, is now all for the benefit of the workers. Today, in spite of the shortage of many necessary commodities, the Russian workers are not only living on a higher scale than ever before in history—they are also, as a whole, living on a higher level than the working class of Central Europe.

(An excellent summary of current economic developments in Soviet Russia is to be found in the article of N. Bucharin, in International Press Correspondence, Aug. 27, 1925, Vol. 15, No. 67.)

The Workers' Rule.

FIGURES are dull, dry things. They give no adequate idea, of course, of the tremendous changes wrought by the Bolshevik revolution in Russia. For the greatest achievement, and the greatest change, was not the immediate material and organizational benefits that came from the revolution—it was rather the reversal of the old order of society, the transformation of the subject class into the ruling class. Even the conservative British Trade Union delegation to Russia understood this, as was shown in their report when they said:

"A report on labor conditions in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics must begin by pointing out that in Russia the workers are the ruling class. For unless the reader bears this in mind thruout he will be misled by much in the Russian labor conditions that at first sight seems very much the same as with us. Really everything is quite different; because in Russia we have a regulation of the workers' rights that they have put upon themselves for their own well-being. Elsewhere we have a restriction of the workers' rights put upon them by the wealthy. . . No one who grasps this will ever be misled by the lies he can read almost daily that the worker in Russia lives a live as limited as, and with even less liberty than, with us. The Russian workers are the ruling class of Russia. They enjoy the rights of a ruling class. They are beginning to exercise its responsibilities. They still have much to learn, but they have made a start. In a village school visited by one of the delegates the children were learning to write in copy books in which over "God save the czar" had been pasted, "Once we were slaves, now we are free."

The Bolshevik Revolution and the Peoples of the Colonies and Semi-Colonies

By G. VOITINSKY (Moscow)

IN the eighth year of its existence the importance of the Bolshevik revolution for the oppressed peoples of the East stands out with greater clearness than ever. China with its population of many millions, rent assunder by world imperialism more than ten years ago, is now in the eight year of the revolution experiencing a great revival among her population, who are uniting in order to resist the intervention of the imperialists of America, England, France, Japan and other countries. With an unprecedented absence of concealment, the great capitalist powers have undertaken a grand attack upon the toiling masses of China.

At this moment the only ally of the Chinese masses and the Chinese people as a whole, the only defender of their interests, is the Union of Soviet Republics. This fact is now known to the population of Southern, Northern and Central China as well as to the peoples of outer China—Thibet, Chinese Turkestan and outer Mongolia.

The treaty concluded by the U. S. S. R. and the Chinese republic has shown to the Chinese people that the new state is inspired by the spirit of real national equality in its relations to a people oppressed by imperialism The enslaving treaties which were violently enforced upon China by the imperialists of all nations and by the former czarist government, were disclosed to the Chinese masses by the Chinese-Soviet treaty and the great danger menacing China by further penetrations of imperialism became obvious.

OUR treaty which once and for all abolished the shameful privileges which permitted the czarist government to have its own streets (extraterritorial concessions) on Chinese territory, its own courts, its own armies, and its own laws, aroused a wave of enthusiasm among the Chinese masses. It also intensified the hatred of these masses towards the imperialists who still continue to exercise these privileges.

The annulment by the treaty of the Russian portion of the Boxer indemnity, the annulment of an imposition of many millions, laid upon the Chinese people in favor of the imperialists as a sign of the latter's victory over the Chinese people in 1900-1901, will have great influence in bringing the Chinese masses nearer to the revolutionary movement of the world proletariat.

THE Chinese people are beginning to understand the duel between our Red diplomacy and world imperialism on the territory of China. In the heart of China, Peking, after a bitter struggle, the red flag was finally hoisted in the stronghold of the imperialists, the legation quarter. The stone wall surrounding the imperialists' quarter in Peking, thru the openings of which guns bitterly menace the Chinese people, has collapsed where the concession of the czarist government was originally; from this side the Chinese people have secured the possibility of entry into the stronghold of imperialism. Here the memorial of Lenin, whose name is honored by the entire Chinese people, will serve as an inspiration to the toiling masses of China and as a symbol of our great Bolshevik revolution.

The Chinese Eastern railway, which was constructed by the czarist government with the object of enslaving the Chinese people, and which later served as the highroad for the plundering expeditions of world imperialism, has at last been torn from the cluthes of the imperialists, and will henceforth serve as the highroad for the victorious proletariat marching to the aid of the oppressed masses of China.

AT the other end of Asia, the small country of Afghanistan, heroically fighting for its independence, and struggling desperately to rid itself of the remnants of medieval feudalism, finds in the U. S. S. R. a trusty ally and a comrade who is prepared to defend it from aggression of British imperialism. The insurrections inspired and nourished by the "labor government" and headed by Prince Kherim Khan, who is aiming at the throne of Afghanistan, is serving still more to unite the Afghan people with the Union of Soviet Republics, which for many years has proved its sincere desire to help the people of Afghanistan to liberate themselves from the chains of feudalism and foreign intervention.

The flight of the red airmen, who, with the audacity of eagles crossed the Hindu Kush into Afghanistan, serves as a symbol of the assistance which the victorious proletariat is prepared to lend the oppressed peoples of the East in their struggle against imperialism.

THE people of Turkey, who experienced the revolution of 1908, the impulse to which was our revolution of 1905, who suffered from the intervention of imperialists after the world war, and who from peasant Angora fought for the independence of Turkey, found a trusty ally and a friend in the U. S. S. R. in every stage of its struggle.

With the aid of the Soviet diplomacy, and thanks to the firmness of Soviet policy, on questions of the Near East, the struggling Turkish people succeeded in retaining their independence at the Lausanne conference. The Turkish people know that their only friend both in the fight for political independence and in the future struggle for economic independence, is the Union of Soviet Republics.

OUR neighbor, Persia, who for long years has been the prey of the imperialist powers of England and czarist Russia, has since the revolution entered on the path of national independence. At the present moment, when British imperialism, backed by the flag of the Second International, is instigating insurrections in southern Persia with the object of overthrowing Riza Khan, the leader of the national-revolutionary movement of Persia who succeeded in securing the independence, the mighty influence of the Soviet Union is a wall against which the British schemes of plunder are being smashed.

The innumerable millions of toilers of India have since the revolution ceased to feel that they are alone in their fight against the British oppressors. They know that in the north a powerful force has sprung up and is ripening, a force capable of inspiring fear even in the heart of "invincible" British imperialism. The toilers of India know that the country of the Soviets is their one true and unselfish ally.

IT is not therefore surprising, that at the trade union congress in 1921, the Indian proletariat declared its fraternal solidarity with the workers and peasants of Soviet Russia.

It is not surprising therefore that on the death of Lenin the oppressed masses of India united with the general mourning of the toiling masses of the world.

It is not surprising therefore when the blind hatred of the British bourgeoisie towards the Soviets is urging them to break the agreement with Soviet Russia, the Indian revolutionaries are defending the Soviet Union against the attacks of British imperialists, even bourgeois and Indian newspapers, such as the Bombay Chronicle, are obliged to admit this fact.

The idea of the revolution is becoming familiar even to the most backward and oppressed peoples of the Near, Middle and Far East.

KOREA, a country with a population of 15 millions, struggling in the iron clutches of Japanese imperialism, has since 1919, and under the influence of the revolution, made heroic attempts to liberate herself; she has been swept by a revolutionary wave coming from the west, from the Amur and the maritime regions.

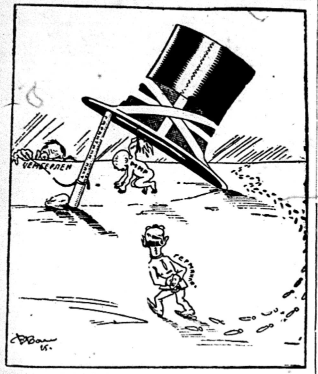
The cry "Hands off China" is being carried from the country of the Soviets thruout the whole world and will without doubt find a response in oppressed Korea, the fate of which is so closely bound up with China, and will serve as a further stimulus to the Korean liberation movement.

THE peoples of Arabia and the African colonies who are fighting an unequal duel with the armies of the imperialists, are turning their eyes more and more to the Soviet Republics, feeling that they are their sole friend and protector in their struggles.

These peoples have found the way to Moscow, and on the eight anniversary of the revolution the representatives of Arabia will be able to celebrate with us the victory of the working class over the deadly enemy of the peoples of the East—czarist Russia, and over international capitalism.

Greater and greater divisions of the oppressed sections of mankind are marching under the banner of the Bolshevik revolution. All forms of struggle against oppression are being dedicated to the great idea of the revolution; whether the struggle of the revolutionary proletariat in the capitalist countries, of the national-emancipation movement of dependent peoples or the struggle against theocrasy, against religious oppression—all these are becoming identified with the struggle of the vanguard of the world proletariat, the Union of Soviet Republics.

The Locarno "Peace" in the Making



Chamberlain Pulling the String in the Fake Locarno "Peace" in Which Germany Was Trapped.

NOVEMBER SEVENTH

By MORITZ J. LOEB.

VICTORY! The Greatest Victory! The first of a series of victories which will end "the final conflict." November seventh!

In every part of the world where workers strain against the chains of oppression and slavery, November seventh thunders to them, "The victorious Russian revolution means not only the liberation of the Russian masses but also the liberation of the toilers of the whole world. To the depth of every mine pit, thru and louder than the roar of blast furnaces, into every factory, into the fields and forests, unto the high seas, November seventh calls, "It is the beginning of the building of a new world."

Into marble pillared structures where "statesmen" do the bidding of their masters, into the skyscrapers from where bankers and captains of industry rule with the lives of thousands in balance, November seventh comes to warn, "For you and your power over mankind, this is the beginning of the end."

ALL over the world on November seventh workers pour into the meetings of celebration, to greet the Russian revolution on the day of its anniversary, to greet Soviet Russia and the world proletariat and to pledge themselves to the task of world revolution.

In America for the past years November seventh has meant all this and something more; something that symbolizes the growth of the American party of the workers, that which is dear to the Workers Party above any of its other possessions.

November 7, 1923. . . . Tens of thousands of workers in every part of the country coming together to greet Soviet Russia with a powerful new weapon of the class struggle. The final effort being made to bring into existence The DAILY WORKER. From thousands of throats a greeting to the world proletariat, to its leader, the Communist International, to its front line troops, the Russian working class. From thousands of pockets the funds which were to make possible the first English Communist daily paper in the world.

November 7, 1924. . . . Again the thousands assembled. Again our greetings, again our efforts for The DAILY WORKER, to insure it for 1925, to make our paper stronger and better for the fight in the year to come.

THE year has come and now draws to a close. For The DAILY WORKER it has been a year of great achievement, but also a year of desperate and bitter struggle. The DAILY WORKER has passed thru trying times and into a period of crisis. Danger threatens ominously. We may lose our paper; it cannot last long without immediate and substantial support.

Save The DAILY WORKER!

Like a stream of fire the slogan spreads thru the militant working class. What we worked for and sacrificed for in 1923 that we might establish our daily, what we have supported with all our strength in 1924, we will not give up in 1925.

November 7, 1925. . . . meetings arranged everywhere. We will celebrate the eighth anniversary of the Russian revolution. We will, we must utilize this day of greatest working class celebration to bring the campaign to save The DAILY WORKER to its height.

WHEREVER there is organization of militant wage workers there will be meetings this next week-end. If there are workers who willingly stay away from these celebrations they do not belong in the ranks of the proletarian vanguard.

November Seventh, Nineteen-Twenty-Five!

Save The DAILY WORKER!
Hail the Russian Revolution!

Put a copy of the DAILY WORKER in your pocket when you go to your union meeting.

The Eighth Anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution

Speech Delivered by Gregory Zinoviev in Leningrad.

IF I were asked, what is the most important result that we have attained during the eight years since the Bolshevik revolution, in November, 1917, I would reply: The most important thing is that today, all working men and women of the Union of Soviet Republics are supporters of the revolution.

We have followed the right path and if we have not completely attained that form of life which the working class must create, the fault is not ours. If we still have difficulties, it is because we have years of severe fighting behind us, during which the whole bourgeois world was proceeding against us.

General Results of Eight Years.

I BEGIN with the question of our home policy. I still have a vivid recollection that on the eve of the revolution one of the most powerful arguments against it was the meager bread ration in Petrograd. The town was only provisioned with bread for two days. If the revolution is carried out, said many, then tomorrow Petrograd (Leningrad) will be without bread, and the already existing starvation will be increased tenfold.

I recollect that on the first anniversary of the revolution our speakers pictured the time when we would be able to revert to white bread. For years there was no more urgent and actual question for our city, and for all the workers of Russia, than the question of the bread ration. Now it no longer troubles us.

There were times when the question of fuel was for us literally a question of life and death, when everything hung by a hair, and when we had to send the best workers of Petrograd to the Donetz Basin in order that they might be able to obtain for us some meagre consignment of fuel. Later we were cut off from the Donetz Basin; Russia began slowly to freeze before our eyes, one after another the factories closed down. Daily we received reports as to children frozen in our children's homes. Nowhere was there a ray of hope of our ever being able to escape from our situation.

AT present we have difficulties of quite a different nature; we do not know where we shall dispose of our coal and our naphta. The comrades from Baku who yesterday brot us 50,000 rubles, on behalf of the districts damaged by inundation, related that the productivity of the naphta industry is steadily growing, but it is difficult to find markets for it. This, however, in my opinion, is only a temporary difficulty.

You remember the fate of our Soviet money. Recently many of us were millionaires, even milliardaires, as our salaries were reckoned in hundreds of millions. But as millionaires we had a fairly hard time. We are no longer troubled with the question of stabilizing our currency. We have now a real genuine Soviet currency.

Call to mind the turn of affairs in 1921: the transition to the New Economic Policy, to the so-called Nep. That was a time of great uncertainty. Many workers stood at the cross road and hesitated. It was not only the non-party workers who vacillated, but many Communists too. It must now be understood that by means of the Nep we shall arrive at socialism and the complete emancipation of the working class.

Even a superficial glance at the events of the last seven years show that we have a considerable balance to our credit.

Among the questions of our inner political life there seems to me to be two of very great importance:

Our Tasks in the Village.

THE first question is the village, the peasants and our relations with them. The second is the raising of the productivity of labor.

The working class cannot maintain power without the support of the peasantry. And it is not sufficient when we speak of the alliance of the working class with the peasantry as being the most fundamental of all questions. The working class cannot raise the national economy, it cannot start with socialist construction, if we have no real union with the peasantry.

The working class, as the class which possesses power, must judge the situation from the standpoint of its rule. It must continually keep in mind that if the many millions of peasants are not perfectly clear as to what is taking place in the Soviet Union, we shall meet with innumerable difficulties.

We cannot stabilize our budget, our economy, and the wages of the workers merely by what is being done in the towns. We must always remember that side by side with us there live millions of peasants who carry on their undertakings in the most backward manner. Therefore we must get into closer contact with these backward sections of the peasantry.

War and other calamities have hitherto prevented us from engaging in building up the Soviet power in the village to the extent which was necessary. We have now taken the thing in hand; we shall attract more non-party peasants into the work and we shall devote much more attention to their opinion.

When, therefore, we consider the question of our inner political life, we must say that there is no more important question today than the necessity of promoting the work in the villages, of linking up the village with the Soviet constructive work, or raising the activity of the non-party peasants, of abolishing bureaucratism, and wiping out bribery and intemperance.

Increasing Productivity of Labor.

THERE was a time, let us say in 1920, when we issued the slogan of increasing the productivity of labor. But how was it then with the productivity of labor? Wages were either not paid at all, or when they were paid the worker received worthless money, and if the money still had some value, he was not able to buy anything with it. At that time the campaign for raising the productivity of labor was more or less futile. Today it is otherwise.

Today there exist the prerequisites for raising the productivity of labor.

At present we must somehow work with the machines which we have and carry out every possible technical improvement. For this we need thinking people. If we employ specialists, if we pay them better, then they must be really valuable workers, who are of indisputable benefit to the production. The increase of the productivity of labor depends, at least 50 per cent, not immediately upon the workers, but upon the government, upon the administration, and upon the trade unions. The other half, however, depends upon you, yourselves, comrades. This is what you must bear in mind.

Outer Political Situation of the Soviet Union.

WHAT was our international situation at the time of the revolution? We were in a desperate position. People said to us: Let us suppose that a miracle occurs, that you win the majority of the workers of Petrograd, of Moscow, and perhaps the whole of Russia; let us suppose that you seize power and drive the bourgeois government out of the Winter Palace; let us further suppose that you form a Soviet government—but don't you understand that that will be an absurdity, that the foreign bourgeoisie will drive you out, if not today, then tomorrow, if not the German, then the English, if not the English then the Japanese bourgeoisie? What will you do, with your inexperienced Red Army, with your feeble working class, against the English ironclads, against the German guns, against the French tanks?

The situation of the international revolution was at that time really desperate. Nobody knew what the morrow would bring. We were surrounded by enemies on all sides. Everyone of us still remembers the German ariplanes which appeared over Petrograd; we still recollect the occupation of Pskov, the occupation of the Ukraine, and of the Don area by the Germans, the capture of the Caucasus and of Archangel by the English.

Let us call to mind our relations with Germany. At the time of the revolution our chief enemies were the German imperialists. Their troops, who were armed to the teeth, were two steps from our frontier. We were compelled to accept the humiliating Brest-Litovsk peace, in accordance with which we had to pay a great indemnity in gold and to give up a whole number of provinces. Our workers had to accept this treaty, while they gritted their teeth, with the expectation that times would alter and that in any case we should not pay the indemnity.

Are we threatened today with any sort of immediate danger on the part of the ruling class of Germany? I think not. Their arms are too short. Of course there still exist in Germany the landowners, the fascists and junkers who would like to encompass our downfall. Now their only concern is how to retain their positions against their own workers.

Our Relations with France.

Let us consider another power which is hostile to us, bourgeois France.

We have already had a Franco-Russian alliance (an alliance between the czar and the French bankers) which only resulted in creating misery in our country (and also for the French people). It resulted in that the interest alone on the loans which the French bankers granted to the czar, in order that he might maintain his secret police, and his dungeons, and to enable him to conduct the war against Japan, amounted to many millions of rubles. We do not need such an alliance as this. By means of the Communist International we maintain connections with the French workers and peasants, as a real friendly bond between two peoples, which is independent of our recognition by the capitalists.

Even the most reactionary French bourgeois no longer dreams of compelling us to pay the old czarist debts. Of course they remain our bitter opponents. But behind the imperialists there stands an army, the army of their "own" workers, at the head of which there stand such comrades as Comrade Marty, who was ready to risk his head for the sake of the Russian workers, in the same way as our workers are ready to support the French workers with all their power. The old times are past.

Our Relations with England.

THERE was a time, it was some years ago—even before the revolution, when there was no other dictator in Petrograd than the English Ambassador Buchannan—the Russian workers know this name very well. At that time the English government held everything in its hands: first the czarist government, and then the provisional government of the Russian bourgeoisie. Before the revolution the workers did not know that the English ambassador lorded over everything. The Bolsheviks were persecuted. After the revolution, Buchanan sent warships against us and took possession of Archangel. It was with his active participation that the blockade was organized.

You are aware of the recent dispute between the leader of the English liberals, Lloyd George and the leader of the English mensheviks, MacDonald. MacDonald is prepared to guarantee a loan to us of 300 to 500 gold rubles, under conditions advantageous to both parties. Lloyd George, however, the representative of the "liberal" bourgeoisie, says: I will grant nothing, they must do without it. Thereupon the menshevik MacDonald replies that he, Lloyd George, has spent a hundred million pounds ($500,000,000) on interventions, in interfering in Russian affairs, and now he will not grant 30 million pounds ($6,000,000) under advantageous commercial conditions.

WHEN the mensheviks and the liberals quarrel, we learn a piquant detail, we learn the exact figures: a hundred million pounds ($500,000,000) has been expended in order to fight against our revolution. The English imperialists considered no sum too great in order to annihilate us.

Revolution Demonstrates Its Power.

THIS shows how the power of the first proletarian revolution is growing in the international arena. We were told at first: "If you attempt to seize power, it will not help you, because on the very next day the English, French or Germans will force you to restore power to the bourgeoisie," and now you see how the attitude of the foreign powers towards us has changed.

Today, nobody can force the working class of our country to hand back power to the bourgeoisie. In addition to this I must tell you that the English and French, as well as the German and Japanese bourgeoisie, are now in a position when they must rather think of saving themselves than of destroying others. They must take care that they do not lose power themselves. There has been an exchange of roles. At the beginning of the revolution they expended hundreds of millions of rubles in order to help the Russian counter-revolution overthrow the Soviet order; today the situation has changed considerably.

Our Soviet Union is the friend, the brother and the teacher of the workers of all countries.

Our Soviet Union, by means of the Communist International, has become the friend, the brother and the teacher of the working class of all countries, and also of a considerable portion of the peasantry. The best representatives of the working class of the whole world look to us for help and brotherly support.

It was a hard task for us and for the international working class to make the first breach in the capitalist front. The beginning was difficult. We have made the beginning and we have maintained power under such conditions as we never even thot. It is hard to enumerate those difficulties which our revolution has overcome since the blockade, up to the epidemics and famine of the year 1922, when it almost came to cannibalism. Nevertheless we have overcome them. Why? Because we relied upon the broad, powerful, iron foundation of the working class and its alliance with the peasantry; because the revolution revealed such powerful creative forces of which the boldest revolutionaries never ventured to dream; because the revolution has stirred the deepest strata of the people; because the working women, the peasants, the Communist youth and our entire generation have taken up the cause of the revolution.

The workers of all countries are interested in our success. In the difficult famine years of 1919 to 1922, the social revolutionaries daily prophesied our downfall. Now it is different. Now every worker in all countries feels instinctively that our cause is marching on, and that our revolution has become the tocsin rousing all workers of the world to struggle.

The Idea of Lenin Will Be Victorious Thruout the World.

THERE was a great man in our midst who, in the most difficult time for the working class, when the Russian workers hung their heads and the English and Russian capitalists danced for joy, was firmly convinced that the working class would be victorious. I speak of course of Comrade Lenin.

The result of all we have passed thru is:

When we percieve how pasionately and enthusiastically the working masses and huge masses of peasants are supporting our cause, when we perceive how, in spite of the desperate situation in which we have been not so long ago, a splendid young generation of workers is growing up before our eyes, who regard the cause of the state as their own, then we say: "Comrade Lenin is no longer with us, but his cause lives and will be victorious thruout the whole world."

Workers of All Countries! Conduct Your Own Revolutionary Struggles!

FROM THE SOVIET ANNIVERSARY MANIFESTO OF THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL.

PROTECT the Union of Soviet Republics from the intervention policy of the imperialist powers which is still being carried on. Prevent the encirclement of the Soviet Union by the Locarno pact diplomacy. But you cannot better conduct the struggle against a new capitalist attack upon the Soviet Union than by preparing, organizing and conducting your own revolutionary struggles and, in alliance with the broad masses, leading them to victory.

Eight Years of Proletarian Dictatorship---Seven Years of So-called "Democratic Government"

I.

THE proletarian dictatorship on the territory of the old Russia has now been in existence for eight years. Eight years of Soviet republic. Eight years of "experiment" as all bourgeois, learned and unlearned, choose to express it. Eight years of "dictatorship of an insurrectionary clique of conspirators, of a minority, over the great Russian people which groans under its yoke," as all democratic, autocratic and social-democratic worshippers of capitalism have declared for the past seven years.

In the course of these years—a complete change of stage and scenery over the whole globe. 1917-1918, an apparently victorious German-Austrian alliance; advance into the Ukraine, into the Caucasus, carnage in the Ukraine, in the Baltic provinces—the formation of which into an independent unity with constantly modified frontiers, was the invention of a German or Austrian Pole—the claim of the Duke of Urach to Lithuania (on the grounds that he was of equal stature with the Lithuanian princes of the seventh century); the democratic apostle Wilson with the well-managed steel trust, which supplied munitions, guns, railway material, whilst Wilson supplied the necessary cannon fodder; the campaign of honest old England for self-deterimnation of the nations (those which were not under the sphere of influence of honest old England); France playing the part of the noble martyr in the cause of civilization and culture; Italy as a champion in the fight for democracy (after it had become clear whose "democracy" would be victorious); the Second International in favor of war to a victorious end in their respective countries; German social-democracy suddenly against annexations (which they accepted with pleasure at the treaties of Brest-Litovsk and Bucharest) after they had got scent of the fact that things were going amiss for Germany.

THEN the bacchanal of the peace treaties of Versailles, St. Germain, Neuilly, Trianon, the orgies of "democracy" and "self-determination" thru the Balkanization of Europe, annexations on a most liberal scale, tributes, wars of intervention, secret treaties, military alliances, colonial intrigues (think only of Syria, Silesia, Mesopotamia, Armenia).

Added to this the change of scene in the governments: Wilson, the democrat followed by the republican Harding; his successor Coolidge already fighting against a new movement; Lloyd George replaced by the conservative Bonar Law and he by Baldwin, he again by MacDonald the labor leader who, in his turn, has been overthrown by the conservatives—all this in democratic England, where, as class antagonisms intensify, a fascist movement will no doubt not arise spontaneously, but be created.

In France the change from Clemenceau via Deschanel and Poincare to—alas, only to Doumergue the "brave garcon" of whom the best that can be said is that he has a "sweet" smile. An external change from Briand to Millerand. A change of ministers from Poincare to Herriot, to Painlev. But all along the supremacy of de Wendel family and M. Loucheur.

In Italy—from Nitti, the sighing hanger-on of liberalism, to Mussolini the whilom socialist, now a fascist.

In Germany and Austria the whole gamut of "socialist" (the lord preserve us!) governments down to the reactionary combinations of priests, generals and—"socialists" of course.

Everywhere unrest, lack of equilibrium, problems for which a new "patent solution" is found every three months, which holds good for exactly three weeks.

Colonial risings, new wars and dangers of war in the Far East and the Near East, in the Balkans. Germany a colony of a syndicate which is disunited in itself. No rest anywhere, not even a stable government anywhere, everywhere bankruptcy of fascism in Italy, Spain, Bulgaria, bankruptcy of the ideology of the Second International which differs in every country, is in every country, as occasion demands, nationalist, defends the "just" war of its "own" country, enthusiastically acclaims reparations and sanctions, praises or disapproves of the Dawes plan as occasion demands, works in close alliance with or loyally opposes fascism, as occasion demands (Bulgaria, Italy, Germany).

At the same time, everywhere, growth of the influence of the Communist International. In the colonies increasing anti-imperialist movements. Among the proletariat a growing deep longing for unity and revolutionary class-war, realignment of that proletariat which from the political and ideological point of view is most backward, the English.

II.

ONLY on the territory of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics do we see quite another picture. A picture which to the fools of the bourgeoisie and their heralds, the reformists, is still an insoluble riddle.

At the time of the blockade it was possible with a serious face to say to one's neighbor: "Do you know that in Russia the Bolsheviks only rule with the help of the Chinese; they have simply chopped off everyone else's head?" but nowadays it is hard to palm off such nonsense. It is, however tried, even if without success.

But not a single reasonable person believes a word of such silly fables.

On the contrary, every sensible being must ask himself: How is it in reality possible that 130-150 million people, of whom all the workmen carry arms, are indeed systematically armed (not only compulsory military service for all those who do not exploit the labor of others, not only a system of militia for them but also compulsory training in arms for the young), who have created a voluntary air force, who are creating a voluntary chemical (gas) war association, allow themselves to be "ruled" by a party of not more than about 500,000 members? And how is it that this rule, under exactly the same government, is again and again "tolerated," nay, accepted with enthusiasm or at least with confidence by Soviet congresses, conferences and peasants' organizations, without any disturbances or difficulties?

The "riddle" is easily solved; the answer is that the Soviet government, this dictatorship of the Communist Party (as the "democratic" fools say: "over the proletariat") is that form of government which best suits the transition from capitalism to Communism.

THE demogogic talk of the dictatorship of the party "over the proletariat" is easily refuted. The Communist Party is the party of the proletariat. The essence of Leninism is that it theoretically propogates and practically realizes the thesis; there is and can be only one party, the party of the revolutionary proletariat. Events in Europe have fully confirmed this doctrine. Wherever it has been disregarded (as in Germany in 1923) the proletariat has experienced a defeat. The reformists who claim that their party also is a proletarian party, know very well why they do it. As long, however, as the proletariat does not treat the reformist parties as enemy, bourgeois parties, it will enjoy the advantages of a "democracy" of a German, English, French, Italian or Bulgarian cut which, as occasion demands, will make use of martial law, special powers acts and fascist government monopoly, but will still remain a dictatorship of the bourgeoise leaders over the proletariat and lower middle classes.

But this already shows the difference between the two dictatorships. The dictatorship of the proletariat (the government affairs of which must naturally be organized; this is of course the party of the proletariat and as its party relies upon its sympathy and active help) is the dictatorship of an enormous majority over a very small minority. The dictatorship of the bourgeoisie, which calls itself democratic, is always the dictatorship of a small clique over a vast majority.

But there is nowhere a party of the bourgeoisie. For the bourgeoisie is in itself split up and therefore often consists of many not organized, but disorganized parties (Germany, France, Poland with its national minorities, also Jugoslavia, Czecho-Slovakia and Finland). Parliament, with its lack of definite grouping and majorities, only reflects this splitting up while it conceals the important fact that hardly anywhere in the bourgeois democracies does party rule, only marionettes in the hands of quite small cliques of the capitalists as in America, Germany, France, to say nothing of the small new states.

III.

THE other objection, that in Russia the proletariat represents only a small fraction of the population, only points out the particularly fine achievements of the Bolshevists. Russia is, it is true, a land with an immense peasant majority but, in contrast to the reformists, the Bolshevists realized that it was necessary to make an ally of the peasant population.

The proletarian dictatorship has only become possible thru the agrarian and peasant policy of the Bolsheviks which gives the dictatorship of the Communist Party the firm hold which it has. No serious student of Russian conditions, no matter to what camp he may belong, has been able to deny that the Soviet government is thus firmly rooted in the broad masses of the peasantry. And all enemies of Communism regard with indignation, astonishment and a lack of understanding this hegemony of the proletariat, rule of the Communist Party (dictatorship of the proletariat) which at the same time is a stable, reliable alliance of proletariat and peasantry. This is the solution of the riddle.

On the other hand, in no country does or can the bourgeoisie understand how to keep even the bourgeoisie together. If we consider the occurrences in Germany in 1923, the pitiless expropriation of the people with small possessions thru inflation and, instead of talking of the Dawes plan in empty phrases, seriously consider its consequences, it is easy to see that the governing cliques of the bourgeoisie themselves split up and differentiate the bourgeoisie and cannot fail to proletarize a portion of them and to drive some into the Communist, some into the fascist sphere of influence. This is true, on the whole, of all European countries and of the United States. The present desperate cry of Germany "co-operation of all classes," the symbol of which is a coalition of all parties from the German nationalists to the social democrats, has no more value than the hue and cry of pacifism; when wars are being prepared, the clamor for peace is loudest; when class structure is crumbling to the ground, the howl for solidarity of the people is wildest.

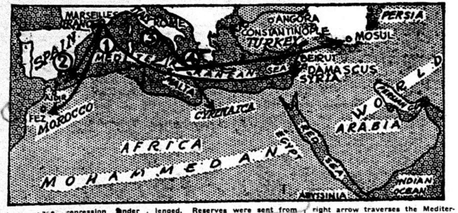
The process of differentiation is developing fast in Germany. It will also be accelerated in England and France. In England the way leads via class solidarity, but as class contrasts increase (which will result from the Dawes plan), the bourgeoisie even there will cry for solidarity of the people (in order to save the empire).

THE balance of the eight years of Soviet Republic is easily drawn. Thru all imaginable difficulties, the economics, culture and physical health in the Soviet Union have gradually and steadily developed, in spite of all natural catastrophies (famine in 1921, partial failure of the harvest in 1924), in spite of all the destruction thru war and civil war, in spite of all the evil which arose from the low level of culture of the Russian population.

And Europe? Its peoples are fed with promises while the difficulties increase. The Dawes plan will help—so say the promise-mongers in France and Germany, patented and "approved" for the last ten years; the league of nations will help—as those fools profess who will not see that the league of nations will soon help Europe onto her feet thru general mobilization for a war in which more or less all towns have the prospect of being exterminated by means of gas, like nests of vermin. The uncle from America will help—as those swindlers whine who have not yet had enuf of the American "help" of the late man of honor, Mr. Wilson. Oh yes, America will help, with fire and sword and the ledger of the chief agent for reparations.

Only the proletariat will and can help. For it must help itself and only itself. The eight years' balance of Soviet Russia is proof enuf that this is the case.

WORLD OF ISLAM CHALLENGES IMPERIALISM



The savage repression under which the peoples of the Moslem world are held in subjection to the great powers has lately been challenged in Syria. This nation is a French mandate under the provisions of the treaty of Versailles. Instead of treating it as a mandate, the French has literally enslaved the people of Syria. France, in a military alliance with Spain, already had a colonial war on its hands in trying to subdue Abd-el-Krim in Morocco. The refusal of France to allow native representation in the government of Syria and its dispatching an army corps there to wreak vengeance upon the inhabitants for daring to ask a voice in control of their own affairs, resulted in the French army being challenged. Reserves were sent from France, and Damascus was sacked and burned amidst scenes of indescribable horror.

Already the news of this vandalism has been carried to other parts of the Moslem world and the vast numbers of Moslems back of Syria, in the territory bounded on the east by the Persian gulf and on the west by the Red Sea and on the south by the Indian Ocean are beginning to stir restlessly.

The above map explains the outstanding strategic points in the struggle that is impending, when the colonial peoples of the territories bordering the Mediterranean will rise and challenge the imperialism of Europe and America.

1.—Left arrow from this point indicates the military advance in Morocco against Abd-el-Krim. The right arrow traverses the Mediterranean Sea and points to Damascus where French forces razed the town, murdered the inhabitants and near where the natives are mobilizing their forces to fight back. This territory is held under mandate by France and is at present the sore-spot in the Mohammedan world.

2.—Arrow indicates the scene of activity of the Spanish troops against Morocco.

3.—The arrow indicates the path of the Italian forces in their drive against the Senussi, who inhabit the regions of Sahara and Cyrenaica.

The Red Union and the Black Union

By Jay Lovestone

TWO hostile armies are massing against each other on the international political front.

On the one side we have the gathering hosts of imperialist reaction, the black united front. On the other side we have the growing armies of the proletariat led into struggle against capitalism by the revolutionary party of the world's working class—the Communist International.

There may be peace in the newspapers of the bourgeoisie. But every "peace" move of the imperialist powers only cloaks a war maneuver. Today, these "peace" moves are mainly war maneuvers against the rising prowess of the Soviet Union. The security pact, the Locarno conference and the other much-heralded "pacifying" agreements and conferences are, to a large extent, treaties and agreements entered into by the world capitalists to mobilize all of their resources for a war against the Soviet Union.

What is behind these feverish war preparations of the black union against the red union? What forces constitute the black united front? Who is to be found in the ranks of the red united front? What is the role of the American capitalists in this attack being planned by the forces of capitalist reaction against the forces of proletarian progress?

The Phantom Stabilization.

THE bourgeoisie may have succeeded in temporarily stabilizing to some extent their economic order thru the Dawes plan, thru the partial restoration of the system of international exchange, and thru a temporary improvement in the world agricultural conditions. But no one knows better than the imperialist junta itself the shaky foundation on which even this very limited improvement rests. The bourgeoisie realize full well that these over-advertised "reconstruction" efforts have not succeeded in removing any of the inherent contradictions of capitalism which were intensified by the world war and its aftermath.

But the international imperialist clique realizes even more the fact that their most dangerous foe is the Soviet Union.

The Soviet Union has been making tremendous progress in economic reconstruction despite the financial blockade still maintained against the workers' and farmers' republic by the international money lords. The Soviet Union is winning the confidence of the many millions of oppressed colonial masses thru its unflinching fight against the imperialist maneuvers of the capitalist powers in the Far and Near East. Africa, the "Dark Continent," is also beginning to see the light. Then, the Soviet Union is winning an ever-increasing hold on the minds and hearts of the proletarian masses of the countries today dominated by the capitalist class.

Soviet Stabilization Real.

THESE assets of the Soviet Union overwhelm the small stabilization gains made by the international bourgeoisie.

Each progressive step of the Soviet Union is substantial and paves the way for more and greater far-reaching permanent steps of building the workers' and farmers' Soviet republic on a sound, on an impregnable basis.

Each instance of friendship between the Soviet Union and a colonial country or an oppressed nation serves only to cement the relations between the Soviet Republics and the suffering national groups and only adds to the prestige of the Soviet Union amongst all colonial peoples.

Every occasion that the proletariat of other countries has to see the Soviet Union as it is, to come in contact with the workers' republic, to have dealings with the Soviet Union only brings these proletarian masses closer to the Soviet Union and makes out of these workers champions of the cause of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics which is the cause of the working class of every country.

Capitalist "Reconstruction."

NOW let us look at the asset side of the bourgeois ledger. What do we find?

Take the Dawes plan. It has been called the panacea of capitalist panaceas. But the bacillus of the transfer problem is rapidly eating the heart out of this life-saver of the bourgeois order. Secret negotiations are already reported to be under way to revise fundamentally this "Made in America" enslavement plan of Germany. Besides, the Dawes plan whose aim was to bring peace to Europe and the world is only sharpening the antagonisms between the United States and Great Britain over the question of who shall exercise financial hegemony over Germany and hence on the continent outside of Soviet Russia closed to the rapacious capitalist exploiters.

Let us glance at the vexing question of international debts. The failure of the Franco-American debt negotiations is of paramount significance. Of course, the French bourgeoisie will make another desperate effort at funding their deft to Wall Street. But there is an unbridgeable gap in these negotiations. France cannot fund its American debt and at the same time wage its wars against the Moroccan and Syrian peoples. A debt agreement may be patched up but the fundamental economic contradictions of imperialism cannot be overcome.

Germany may be "restored" economically. But the "restoration" of Germany brings in its wake the forces making for an intensification of international trade rivalries. Germany's capacity to pay is almost synonymous with Germany's unwillingness to pay.

These are only a few of the outstanding economic reconstruction steps so loudly commended by the buorgeois statesmen. Each of these steps has within itself the germs of deepgoing economic disintegration.

Can Not Fool Colonies.

EVERY attempt of the imperialists to fool the colonial peoples with fraudulent concesisons is meeting with failure. The wave of Chinese nationalism is a fitting answer to the manipulations of the imperialist consortium. The present so-called Chinese tariff conference is much more than a mere tariff conference. It is the beginning of a new wave of disillusionment on the part of the hundreds of millions of Chinese with the enslavement schemes of the world's bankers. The Chinese, as well as the other oppressed peoples, are also learning that the crucifix is as much an instrument of the foreign bourgeois exploitation as is the machine gun, the ambassador, the airplane, the battleship, and banker.

Red Unity Against Black Unity.

AND despite the treachery of the labor bureaucracy, every "treaty of peace" signed for the working masses by these labor lieutenants of capital turns out to be only a scrap of paper in the class war between the proletariat and the exploiters.

At the very moment that the bourgeois is straining all its resources to buy off sections of the working class itself against the other workers of the Soviet Union, the proletariat of an increasing number of countries is drawing closer and closer to the workers' and farmers' Soviet republic. We need but look at the increasing number of workers' delegations coming to the Soviet republics from the various countries in the clutches of the imperialist clique.

At the very moment that the European bourgeoisie are celebrating their supposed unification at the Locarno conference, the progress of international trade union unity is going on apace. Then, the Locarno "peace" conference is actually laying the basis for new strife between the imperialist national groups and letting loose new forces of disintegration in the political parties at home. A "united" continent of Europe promotes the antagonisms between American imperialism and among the European imperialist cliques.

Scarcely had the ink dried on the Locarno pact when the powerful German nationalist party enters upon a new crisis, the Luther cabinet is endangered, the Communists make tremendous gains in the German elections, the Caillaux cabinet falls, the flames of revolt envelop Syria, the Greeks clash with the Bulgars and the Balkans, the cockpit of Europe, are again seething.

Role of American Imperialism.

IN this international drama American imperialism plays a major role as the leading banker and manufacturing nation of the world. It is true, there was no American observer at Locarno playing the role that Colonel Logan played at the London conference of July, 1924. But it was only the heavy financing of the European governments by Wall Street that made possible this effort to unify the capitalist governments of Europe against the working class government of the Soviet Republics.

America is today the buttress of capitalist reaction. American capitalism is the mainspring of opposition to the Soviet Union everywhere. This is as true in the Far East as in Europe. In the Far East American imperialism is particularly irritated over the stinging defeat administered Wall Street hypocrisy and Washington "humanitarianism" by the Soviet Union. The latter fact accounts in a large measure for the apparent sharpening of the American anti-Soviet policy at a time when many superficial observers believed that the United States was already on the verge of Soviet recogniiton.

What the Fakers Are Up To.

WITH this as a background, it is not difficult to understand the why and the wherefore of the hostility of the American labor bureaucracy to Soviet recognition. The trade union bureaucracy is an integral part of the imperialist machinery of oppression. The American trade union bureaucracy being part of the most imperialist coterie, being a section of the capitalist group most bitterly opposed to Soviet Russia, is naturally and logically the most reactionary trade union bureaucracy in the world—the most bigoted enemy of the working masses of the Soviet Union.

No doubt the opposition of the American Federation of Labor leadership to Soviet Russia is an important factor in the determination of American capitalist policy towards the Soviet Union. The hatred of the Soviet Union by the labor bureaucrats is without doubt due to the fear on the part of these labor misleaders of the fundamentally changed attitude that the American workers would assume towards the Soviet Union and many other problems in the event of American recognition of the Soviet republics.

A Dangerous Situation.

IT is obvious to every worker in America that the United States, regardless of the increasing conflict of its interests with the interests of the imperialist powers of Europe and Asia, is the backbone of the black united front now being organized against the Soviet Union. This reactionary union is not merely an unholy alliance against the Soviet Republics. The black united front, at the head of which stands the Washington government of Wall Street, is an imperialist band of sworn foes against the labor movement the world-over, against every organization of the working class. Who can question the fact that if it should ever come about that the international clique of imperialists should succeed to weaken, or undermine the Soviet Union, that such an event would not be an occasion for the letting loose of all the blackest forces of reaction, of capitalist hooliganism, of murderous fascism against every organization of the workers thruout the world?

American Workers Must Act.

THE campaign for the defense of the Soviet Union is concretely the most urgent task before the American workers. Every worker who has the slightest bit of consciousness of his class interests, every worker who has the slightest bit of use for his union or other labor organization, every poor farmer who wants to get rid of his nemesis, the monopolist capitalist, must get into the campaign to defend the Soviet Union against the nefarious machinations and plots of the American and the other capitalists.

The American exploiter is in the front ranks of the armies of the black united front. The American worker must do his bit to save the world from imperialist tyranny and plunder by fighting energetically for the defense and strengthening of his own labor organization and by uniting with the workers of all other countries for the defense of the interests of the world's working class.

It is up to the American workers to strive to become in the red union of proletarian progress what the Wall Street financial and industrial barons have already become in the black union of capitalist reaction. The eighth anniversary of the victorious proletarian revolution in Russia is certainly a fitting occasion for the American working class working forward to this goal.

FACTS TO BE REMEMBERED ON THE EIGHTH (1925) ANNIVERSARY OF THE BOLSHEVIK REVOLUTION

THE profit press is nowhere this year predicting the "early overthrow" of workers' rule in the Union of Soviet Republics.

THE armies of 14 capitalist nations (Great Britain, France, the United States, Czecho-Slovakia, Germany, Japan, Poland, Roumania and many others) have participated in the military attacks on the Soviet Union.

THE Bolshevik revolution raised the Russian women from their former conditions of slavery and brought working and peasant women into the Soviets and trade unions as men's equals.

INSTEAD of the false bourgeois "democracy" acting as a screen for capitalist dictatorship (the Kerensky regime), the revolution has built up a power based on true democracy, on Soviets of workers', peasants', and Red Army deputies, elected every year by the masses.

THRU the Soviets hundreds of thousands of the foremost workers and peasants are brot straight from the bench and from the plough into the Soviets, the Communist Party and the trade unions, where they take a direct part in the administration of all the branches of social and economic life in the immense Soviet country.

THE Soviet Republic is steadily going forward with its task of reorganizing society on a socialist basis. It has expropriated the expropriators. It has declared factories, workshops, mines, means of communication, banks, and land, the property of the working population, and has handed over their administration to the Soviets.

THE Soviet power is concentrating all its energy on the development of state industries and trade and is building up co-operative trade under the control of the proletariat, in order by such means to secure complete state control of the economic activity of the country and its complete reorganization on a socialist basis.

THE revolution has put an end to national oppression. It helped people which but a little while ago were oppressed by czarism, to establish their own independent national Soviet Republics, and united all of them into one powerful "Union of Socialist Soviet Republics." The peoples of the Moslem East: Tartars, Bashkirs, Kirhgiz, Uzbecks and Turkomans, brothers to those who are brutally oppressed and exploited by the governments of Great Britain and France, and by fascist Italy, have become full-fledged members of the Soviet Union. The Soviet Republic has stretched out a helping hand to all colonial and semi-colonial peoples (to Turkey, China, Afghanistan and Persia), thereby giving powerful support to the revolutionary movement of the peoples of the east against world imperialism.

EDUCATION and the press, which previous to the revolution were the monopoly of the capitalists and landowners, and were used as a means of fooling and doping the masses, are now as a result of the Bolshevik revolution under the control of the victorious working class and are being utilized for Communist education and training.

Red International of Labor Unions and Soviet Russia

By HARRISON GEORGE

AMONG the many oustanding products of the Bolshevik revolution of eight years ago, not the least important was the surging demand that arose within the trade unions all over the world for a world-wide unity of all trade unions on the basis of the class struggle, for a united fight against capitalism.

The formation and phenomenal growth of the Russian labor union movement, born in the cradle of revolution with arms in hand and the International on its lips, posed the question of this movement's international connections.

BUT the war which had brot the revolution also brot an increase in reaction and its desire, by working thru the agents of the bourgeoisie in the ranks of labor, to prevent the workers of the world, instinctively turning toward the fabulous "Moscow," from doing as the Russian workers had done. The labor unionists of the world were demanding, moreover, some international center that would insure them against a recurrence of the horror thru which they had just passed.

The reformist socialists who had betrayed the masses in war, answered to the call of the ruling class and betrayed the masses again in "peace." While the Russian unions and the new revolutionary unionists of all the world were demanding an international center and the foundation was being laid for the Red International of Labor Unions, the reformists were laying the foundations of an international of class collaboration.

THIS was the Amsterdam International (the International Federation of Trade Unions) formed upon the basis of the "victory" of the allied arms over Germany and, therefore, the victory of the allied social patriots over those of Germany, Amsterdam took the most reactionary position, identified itself with the Versailles peace and set up organizational connection with capitalism thru the international labor office of the league of nations.

Small wonder, therefore, that those organized workers of the world who felt the urge of class struggle to overthrow capitalism, demanded a center of revolutionary nnionism, to clarify and unify the working masses upon a basis of class struggle on an international scale.

AND if the latest developments of this world movement for unity and struggle, which is the establishment of the famous Anglo-Russian Trade Union Unity Commission, has shaken the world and frightened the capitalists into a panic, it must not be forgotten that this latest forward step was built upon years of earlier struggle and arose out of the revolution which set up the Soviet power.

In the years from 1921 onward, this struggle had been carried into every land and every union by the Red International of Labor Unions, launched at a provisional conference in July, 1920, of representatives of the unions of Russia, Great Britain, Italy, Spain Jugo-Slavia, Bulgaria and minorities of the French and Georgian labor unions. The first congress was held in Moscow, July, 1921.

BUT at the first congress the British and Italian unions had already weakened under the tremendous assaults of the bourgeoisie. The Italian unions were in battle and their leaders were surrendering to the fascisti. The British workers had just been betrayed in the memorable Black Friday. Russia had just experienced the Kronstadt events, adopted the new economic policy and was facing the problem of famine.

It was seemingly the lowest ebb of the revolutionary labor movement. Under pressure of these events, the weaker partners in the original pact of unity gave up and did not come to the first congress of the R. I. L. U Standing with the R. I. L. U. in those dark days, even more than now, was no task of weaklings.

YET from the deliberations and decisions went forth a great rallying cry, and a process of clarification and organization, which brot into existence as a conscious world movement the revolutionary unionism of today.

The Second World Congress held in November, 1922, saw the R. I. L. U. exerting a most powerful influence in Europe, Asia and America for working class unity and struggle against capitalism. The center of revolution was being established for the labor unions of the world.

BY the Third Congress in July, 1924, the movement was prepared to lay down new tasks for completion of the work begun in the first two world gatherings, by reaching out for the working masses in the trade unions still adhering to Amsterdam. To this end proposals for world trade union unity were set forth, proposing the calling of a unity congress with the Amsterdam unions and pledging all unions to submit to the decisions of the unity congress.

The yellow Amsterdamers rejected the proposal.

Then followed the growth of relations between the British and Russian unions, which culminated in the recent formation of an official joint committee, approved at the Scarborough congress—the Anglo-Russian Unity Commission. It is in behalf of this commission and its program that A. A. Purcell is speaking in his present tour of America.

UNQUESTIONABLY the growing power of Soviet Russia has aided the unity movement thus begun by the R. I. L. U. The many delegations of trade unionists, of reformist and syndicalist unions for the most part, which have visited Soviet Russia and inspected the conditions of the workers under Soviet power, have brot back such favorable reports that the whole labor movement has been noticeably turned to the left and the revolutionary element strengthened. No instance proves this case better than the report of the British delegation to Russia headed by Purcell as chairman of the British Trade Union Congress.

The great work of uniting the trade unions of the world was thus launched as a result of the Bolshevik revolution of 1917. And this is one of the reasons why the name of Vladimir Lenin, the organizer and leader of the Bolshevik revolution, has been engraved in the hearts of millions of revolutionary unionists who fight under the banner of the Red International of Labor Unions.

IT is one of the reasons why every worker who looks upon the Red International as the leading organization of revolutionary unionism makes his or her most enthusiastic holiday the day on which the ragged Red Guards of Leningrad seized state power in the name of the workers and peasants and lit the fires of world revolution.

GARMENT WORKERS WIN STRIKE

HUMAN BUTCHER SHOPS IN MINES OF ANTHRACITE REGION KILL AND CRIPPLE 30,000 MINERS YEARLY

The story of the ghastly butchery of coal miners in the anthracite is here told by a coal miner, who better than any other can feel and express the horror of killing and crippling a whole army of workers each year in order to fatten the profits of the mine owners. This is the sixth of a short series of articles by Alex Reid, secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee, who spent some time in the anthracite recently, most of it in jail for trying to speak to the miners.

(Secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee.)

(Article VI.)

No words can picture the awful suffering thruout the hard coal regions as a result of the terrible accidents occuring in the mining industry. The anthracite mines have been well referred to as human butcher shops.

Picture an industry centered within 450 square miles, with 158,000 employes, with an annual death roll of over 500 men killed and 20,000 accidents of lesser degree. An average of 500 men per year for the last 20 years have been killed, and the rate

The Growing Movement for International Unity of World's Trade Unions

This is the beginning of a series of articles dealing with the question of World Trade Union Unity. Undoubtedly this question is one of importance at the present time. Following installments will deal with the International Federation of Trade Unions, the Red International of Labor Unions and the British Workers and International Trade Union Unity.

• • • •

By TOM BELL.

WHY trade union unity? Why is it that at the present time thsiquestion is being discussed in every country in the world?

The sentiment for unity of the forces of the working class has always been much to the fore in the labor movement. No labor faker ever attempted to split a union, or smash the solidarity of strikers' forces, unless he declared fervently for unity. Thruout the labor movement the workers hug the idea of the unity of the workers as a great thing to be accomplished. The reactionary bureaucrats know this, and denounce the left wing elements in the trade unions as "splitters" so that they will be discredited in the eyes of the workers.

But in spite of the sentiment for unity of the ranks of labor very little real unity exists in the labor unions. But the present situation confronting the working class is forcing the question of national and international trade union unity to the fore, and in spite of the efforts of the reactionary labor officials is making great progress.

The very development of capitalist production is forcing the workers to look upon the question of the unity of the trade unions as a practical question—a question of the preservation of their standard of living against the attacks of the bosses.

• • • •

The war of 1914-1918 besides murdering millions of workers and crippling millions more, cracked the basis of the capitalist economic system in Europe. At the same time the forces of production of the United Sates and Japan were enormously expanded owing to the fact that they played the role of salesmen to the combatants, supplying them with the munitions of war. The Allied powers came out of the war indebted to the United States for billions of dollars—the United States became the financial dictator of the world, the position once held by Great Britain.

The destruction of billions of dollars of wealth, and the destruction of productive forces, produced a crisis in the capitalist

LONDON, Nov. 8—According to the dispatch received here by the Daily Herald, liberal labor paper, from a responsible correspondent on the border of Italy, the alleged plot against the life of Mussolini is a fabrication, framed up with the idea of giving fascism, which is losing influence, a new opportunity to take drastic action against the opposition.

FRED MERRICK GOES TO TRIAL ON NOV. 30TH

Bosses Out to Jail Pittsburgh Communists

I. L. D. News Service.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 8.—Fred Merrick, veteran of the labor movement in the capitalist barony of Pennsylvania, and nine other Communist workers must stand trial in Pittsburgh on November 30, and show cause why they should not spend several years in jail for daring to assist the workers better their conditions by organizing them into unions and into political organizations that would fight for their interests now, and their ultimate emancipation from the yoke of capitalism.

The technical charge against Merrick and his comrades was the distribution of leaflets published by the Workers Party immediately prior to May Day, 1923. This was construed as a violation of the Pennsylvania "sedition" law. This law was placed on the statute books by the big bosses of Pennsylvania, headed by An-

ABOR THRONGS PARTICIPATE IN NOV. 7 MEETINGS

Chicago Toilers Defy Storm Saturday

Despite the continuous downpour of rain thru the day which later turned to snow, a great throng of Chicago workers attended the mass meeting arranged by the Workers (Communist) Party in the Temple Hall, Saturday evening, to celebrate the eighth anniversary of the Russian revolution.

Soviet Union Heartily Cheered.

Every mention of the victory achieved by the workers of the Soviet Union brot a hearty response from the assembled workers.

The meeting opened with the singing of the Russian funeral march by the Freiheit Singing Society in the memory of the dead Soviet war minister, Mikhail Frunze, who gave his life to the cause of the workers' revolution in Soviet Russia.

Following the funeral hymn and the International, the chorus then sang a song composed by the chorus leader dedicated to the memory of Nikolai Lenin.

After a number of encores, Martin Abern with a few introductory remarks introduced Max Bedacht, editor of the Workers' Monthly, and member of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party.

New War on Soviets.

"Eight years have passed since the news that electrified the world that the workers of Russia have taken power into their hands thru the workers' and peasants' Soviets," declared Bedacht in his opening remarks. He then showed that while we had gathered to celebrate the victory of the Russian workers, we must also see the dangers confronting them in the

METAL WORKER VOROSHILOV, NEW COMMISSAR OF WAR AND MARINE

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Nov. 8—A metal worker now commands the Red Army and Red Navy of Soviet Russia. Clement E. Voroshilov, an exprienced commander who won great victories in command of the tenth army division on the southwestern front during the years of trial has been chosen the successor of Michael V. Frunze, commissar of war, who recently died.

Voroshilov is 44 years old and attained prominence largely in the same way as did General Budenny, by effective organization of the Soviet cavalry which was the big factor in defeating the counter-revolutionary war waged by Denikin with the aid of British, French and American money and supplies.

The third of the Red Army's commanders takes his new post as a promotion from his command of the Moscow garrison. Leon Trotsky, the first commander of the Red Army, is now in highly responsible position with the concessions commission and economic reconstruction of Soviet industry.

ATTEND PURCELL MEETINGS, SAYS CAP UNION HEAD

Budish Issues Appeal to New York Workers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 8—In an enthusiastic statement issued by J. M. Budish of the Cloth Hat, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union, he calls upon the workers of the city to attend the two big Purcell meetings which have been arranged for Nov. 17.

The trade union committee which is organizing these meetings has been compelled to hire two halls on account of the great demand for tickets to hear A. A. Purcell the president of the International Federation of Trade Unions. Bith New Star Casino and the Central Opera House have been hired for the occasion.

The next conference of the trade union committee has been called for Sunday, Nov. 15 at 3 p. m., at Beethoven Hall.

Brother Budish's comment is but one example of the fine support coming from the labor movement for the Purcell meeting.

Urges Workers to Hear Purcell.

I would like to urge very strongly every laboring man and woman to attend the Purcell meetings.

The need for unity within the trade union movement of every country and among the trade union movements in the world was at no time as indispensable as at present.

The newspapers report attempts to break down the strike of the anthracite miners by importing Welsh coal from England. All restrictions on immigration cannot in the least remedy the effects of competition resulting from the oppression of labor in the less developed countries like China, India, North Africa, etc., by the imperialist powers. In this country the so-called open shop movement is becoming ever more aggressive and unscrupulous. A report just submitted to the 30th convention of the National Association of Manufacturers held in St. Louis, styles the union shop as the closed shop and declares it the social obligation of American industry to combat the closed union shop; the convention itself adopted the open shop slogan. The National Association of Manufacturers unscrupulously demanded the continuation of the privilege of coining the flesh and sinew of the helpless children into ever greater profits,

'AMALGAMATED' TRIUMPHS OVER INTERNATIONAL TAILORING CO., IN CHICAGO AND NEW YORK CITY

After 19 weeks of bitter struggle the strike of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union against the International Tailoring Company in New York City and Chicago came to an end with a complete victory for the union. The company was forced to sign on the dotted line renewing the old contract and recognizing the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

The announcement of the end of the strike was made by the president of the union at the Hod Carriers' Hall, corner Harrison and Green streets, yesterday afternoon where great numbers of the members of the Amalgamated had gathered to celebrate their victory.

The terms of settlement were decided on after a three-day conference in the Vanderbilt Hotel in New York City where a committee representing the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' general executive board met with Jacob L. Reiss, president of the International Tailoring company.

All members of the United Garment Workers' Union, that have acted the part of strikebreakers have been fired and union men will be on the job this morning.

Tried to Leave Town.

In Chicago the plant will not be working in full force for ten days as the company will have to bring the machinery which it sent to Rock Island and Moline, in the hope of establishing factories there and crushing the strike, back to the plant at 847 West Jackson Blvd.

The news of the union winning the strike had been rumored for a day or so before the victory celebration, but a final settlement had not as yet been made.

The Hod Carriers' Hall where the victory celebration took place, was a seething mass of joyous strikers. In the rear of the hall a band played the International and other melodies. On the stage were placed floral tributes from every local represented in the joint board.

Spell "Victory" in Red.

The Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union had a large floral tribute of red roses shaped like a horseshoe with a white bar across the middle in the center of the platform.

On the bar in red flowers was the one word "Victory." On the sides of the horseshoe were the dates June 25, 1925, the day they went on strike and November 7, 1925, the day the settlement was made.

Speaker after speaker representing the various Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America locals in the city and large garment factories, congratulated the 800 International Tailoring Co. workers on their victory and pointed out that not only was this a strike of the International Tailoring company workers, but that it was a strike of the entire union against the attempts of the bosses to crush the union and establish the open shop.

PITTSBURGH WORKERS EAGERLY WAITING TO GREET PURCELL MONDAY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 8.—"World Trade Union Unity" will be discussed by A. A. Purcell, president of the International Federation of Trade Unions at a mass meeting arranged in this city Monday, Nov. 9, 8 p. m. at Carnegie Music Hall, Federal and Ohio Sts., N. S. Pittsburgh.

Judging from the way tickets for the meeting are being sold in advance it is expected that the hall with a seating capacity of not less than two thousand will be packed to the doors.

The subject which Mr. Purcell will discuss is of vital importance to the workers the world over and no one knows this better than Mr. Purcell who stands at the head of the Amsterdam International. Mr. Purcell was head of the British trade union delegation which visited Russia and whose report on the conditions there is being read with greatest interest by the workers thruout the world.

Pittsburgh is fortunate enuf to be one of the nine cities where Purcell, who was fraternal delegate to the A. F. of L. convention from the British trade unions, will speak while in this country.

The meeting is arranged by a committee consisting of representatives of various trade unions of Pittsburgh and vicinity.

Every worker who is able to think for himself, should leave everything else aside and come to hear what Purcell has to say to the American workers.

Here's the Corn Husking King.

LITCHFIELD, Ill., Nov. 8.—Oscar Hagemeier, of Nokomis, was the corn husking king of Montgomery county today. He husked 27 bushels and 48 pounds of corn in one hour.

AGAINST CAPITALIST WARS!

DECLARING that the new international of trade unions must be based on open hostility to all capitalist wars, none of which he charged had ever benefitted the working class, Purcell said:

"The hardest blow that we, the industrial workers of the world can strike, is that when our masters call for wars, whenever they make threats of war, we must say to them, 'If you want war and must have war, get into it and fight it yourself.'"

Workers of America! Rally Against the Danger of New World Wars!

UNITE FOR THE DEFENSE OF THE RUSSIAN WORKERS' REPUBLIC!

An Appeal to the Young and Adult Workers on Armistice Day, November 11th

ARMISTICE DAY! The seventh anniversary of the ending the last imperialist war, again finds the capitalist class in preparation for new wars. Everywhere we find tremendous increases in armaments—greater military preparations, larger armies—preparations for another blood bath for the workers.

The capitalist class again is attempting to fool the workers and make them willing cannon fodder in the coming war. All over the country the reactionary forces are arranging demonstrations, parades, celebrations. These demonstrations—all of them of a military character—are living proofs of the preparations that are being made for new wars.

Capitalism Leads to New War.

New and greater wars confront the workers; new wars which bring death, misery and degradation to the masses and greater power and profits to the capitalist. The problems of the capitalist class were not solved by the last world war. The conflict of interests, the struggle for markets, control of colonies, spheres of influence, concessions, and financial power continue sharper than ever. These conflicts are leading swiftly to a new world war!

Remember the last war. The capitalists lied to the workers with their false words about a "war for democracy." But the workers got no democracy. They have none today. They returned from the war and found wage cuts, longer hours of work, worse working conditions and a national open shop drive. They found their unions attacked by the bosses and the government. They found the most progressive workers thrown into jail for defending their class.

The "paytriotic" bosses lied about "the war to end all wars." Today new wars threaten the people. American marines and soldiers are to be found in all four corners of the earth protecting the interests of Wall Street. Only recently in Panama, American troops fought against workers who were trying to improve their conditions. In every South American and Central American republic, American imperialism suppresses the will of the masses by force of arms. In Haiti, San Domingo, Nicaragua workers and farmers are killed by the hundreds for fighting for independence from Wall Street. In the Philippines, peasants are shot down by American soldiers. In China, Persia, Syria and Morocco, America's armies and navies fight the battles of the bankers and businessmen. In Germany, Austria, Hungary, France and Belgium, the workers feel the bitter scourge of American financial control in the form of constantly decreasing standards of living, which are helping to bring down the working conditions of American toilers.

Struggle for World's Markets.

The struggle between the imperialist nations for the control of the world's markets, colonies, oil supplies, iron, shipping, and other sources of profit is becoming keener every day. The conflicts of the giant imperialists are drawing to a head. And everywhere preparations are being made for another slaughter. The building of big armies and navies, a huge air fleet, military training in the schools, the citizens' military training camps, the celebration of "patriotic" holidays like armistice day are steps in that direction.

Now a new factor has entered the scene. Since the last world war a breach has been made in the armor of the capitalist world. The heroic struggles of the Russian workers and farmers have succeeded in building and strengthening the republics of the Soviets which stand as a splendid monument for the world's workers, an example for them to follow. The existence of the Soviet Union is a bone in the throat of the imperialists. All of their attempts to overthrow the Russian republic have heretofore failed. Now they are making a new attempt. Thru the so-called "security pact," the pact of Locarno, the imperialists, under the guidance of Wall Street, are trying to forge an iron ring for the destruction of Russia. Wall Street hopes not only to achieve sufficient stability in Europe for it to collect its millions of dollars in debts, but also to organize a mighty power for the elimination of its greatest enemy, the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

The workers of the world have a powerful weapon in the Soviet Union. It is the property of the working class as a whole. The working class everywhere must defend Russia against this new attack. The right for the defense of Soviet Russia is at the same time a fight against the danger of new imperialist wars!

Working Class Youth Are First Victims.

Young workers! You who are the first victims of capitalist war must organize to fight for the end of war which can be brought about only by the end of capitalism. You who are more bitterly exploited than any other section of the working class must join in the struggles of your class!

Working class mothers! Your sons whose bodies are torn and twisted and crippled on the battlefield for the profits of the capitalist class. Demand an end to imperialist wars!

Negro workers! Remember the infamous treatment accorded to the heroic colored soldiers of the 24th infantry for defending the honor of their rase. They were used as the tools of imperialism in the trenches of war and will be used once more unless you join the struggle against the ruling class which robs you in the industries and on the land and lynches you for demanding equality with white people!

Workers! Imperialist wars are wars for the benefit of the ruling class. You have only one war to fight, in which to sacrifice, in which to win victories and that is the war of the workers against the capitalist class. Join unitedly in the class war against the war of the imperialists!

Workers! Rally for the defense of the Soviet Union!

Demand the immediate recognition of the Russian republic!

Demand the withdrawal of American forces from all foreign countries!

Join the movement for organized political expression of the workers, a mass labor party!

Demand the abolition of child labor!

A six-hour day and five-day week for young workers!

Abolish military training in the schools!

Down with capitalist war and imperialism!

Unite in the struggle for a republic of workers and farmers!

PURCELL APPEAL IN CHICAGO FOR WORLD TRADE UNION UNITY GETS ENTHUSIASTIC RESPONSE

Chicago workers assembled in the Wicker Park and North Side Turner halls, enthusiastically greeted Albert A. Purcell, fraternal delegate of the British Trade Union Congress to the American Federation of Labor convention at Atlantic City and head of 22,000,000 trades union workers affiliated with the International Federation of Trade Unions, as he urged the unity of all workers in the struggle against international capitalism.

Both meetings were held under the auspices of a local Purcell Trade Union Committee whose members were interested in the movement now on foot to unite the workers of all lands into one international trade union body.

Morton L. Johnson, of the Electrical Workers' Union, acted as chairman at Wicker Park Hall.

Louis Look, chairman of District No. 8 (Chicago) International Association of Machinists, was chairman at the North Side Turner Hall gathering.

Unanimous approval greeted a motion from the floor to make the Purcell meeting committee a permanent body for the promotion of international trade union unity. Similar committees are being set up in the other cities visited by Purcell.

After a few introductory words, he introduced Purcell as the speaker of the evening.

Shows Labor Divided.

Purcell began by stating that he was proud of this opportunity to speak before the workers of Chicago in behalf of world trade union unity. He then began to vividly portray the disorganized condition which the workers of the world are in at the present moment.

The Versailles treaty, Purcell said, has not only split nations geographically, but it has also split the labor unions. Where there had been powerful unions once today the trade unions were split into small language groups and there was little of union organization in many centers. He then pointed out the great need for unity in France where three unions exist, in Poland with three, in Germany with three, in Italy where the unions had been split and partially destroyed by the fascisti, and in Holland the home of the International Federation of Trade Unions, here there were six unions and over 139,000 workers in unions that were not affiliated with any national or international union.

Discusses Immigration.

After he had shown the need for unity in these nations he dwelt on the effect that immigration laws passed in the United States had on the French workers. He stated that 2,000,000 workers, who would have gone to America, mostly from Poland and Italy, have gone to different industrial sections of France and there they have lowered the conditions of the French trade unionists. These workers were unorganized and a great task lay before the international workers' organizations to organize these workers.

He then described the conditions of the miners of India, who are forced to work 36 hours in one stretch and of women who often give birth to children while they are in the mines and of little children of eight and nine years of age working these hours. The men were receiving but one shilling and 10 pence and the women 1 shilling and 2 pence per day. The coal mined under these conditions was competing in the international market with that mined in America and Europe.

He proved that not only is this true of the mining industry but it is equally true of the cotton industry as well. Cheap labor in the colonies is more and more displacing that of the highly developed industrial nations and that the betterment of these conditions was not only the duty of the workers in India and China and the other colonial territories, but that it was the duty of the international working class.

Big Army of Unemployed.

In his speech, he brot out that in England at the present time there were at least, 2,000,000 workers unemployed, of which 1,500,000 were drawing unemployment benefits from the government, commonly called "doles" by the capitalist press which was the most insulting term that the capitalist class could invent to libel the working class, he declared. He showed that these workers were entitled to the benefits they received for they had paid the entire sum that was now being used by the government to pay them. He showed that the government quota had come out of their pockets in taxation and that the employers' quota had come out of the products they had produced.

He denounced the campaign of villification which the capitalist press has entered into against the unemployed workers of England terming them paupers, etc., forgetting that there was an army of 250,000 of the most highly skilled workers produced in England regularly unemployed, due to the economic condition of Great Britain.

He then spoke of the steps being taken to bring the 6,000,000 workers of Russia into a closer union with the workers of all other lands. He showed that in Russia the trade unions run all the economic institutions of the country and that they are a part of the directives as well as the productive forces of the nation.

Want the Russian Workers.

Purcell declared that it was no concern of the British workers, that are now trying to bring the Russian workers and the International Federation of Trade Unions closer together, as to the political opinions held by the Russian workers, but what concerned them was that the Russians had succeeded in organizing 6,000,000 workers and that it was necessary to have these unionists in the international drive against internationally organized capitalism. He showed that with this tremendous power behind them they could much more easily organize the workers of India, China and other colonial possessions to wring from the capitalist class better working and living conditions. He urged the American Federation of Labor to adopt the attitude of the British workers and to push unity of all workers in order to more effectively carry on the struggle against capitalist encroachments.

Another Hearst Merger.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 8.— Purchase of the Syracuse Journal, one of the oldest newspapers in the state, by William Rudolph Hearst, was announced here today. The Journal will be consolidated with the Syracuse Telegram, which Mr. Hearst established in Syracuse three years ago, and the combined papers will appear today as the Journal-Telegram.

GOOD NEWS!

For Daily Worker Readers

Wm. F. Dunne, editor of The DAILY WORKER, goes to the anthracite coal fields next week to stay for two weeks.

About Wednesday, Nov. 11, daily stories will appear analyzing the situation in this scene of bitter struggle, bringing to workers the conditions existing there, supplementing the series of articles now running written by Alex Reid, secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee.

The strike now in progress; living conditions; the trade unions; the betrayals of the workers by the officialdom; the police and the courts.

This picture of the struggles of miners, written by an outstanding writer of the American revolutionary movement, should receive the widest distribution.

thus revealing that grasping greed is their only real aim in the "open shop" campaign.

In the face of these aggressive attacks of capital, labor must unite its ranks both nationally and internationally to protect its positions and make possible the further improveemnt of its conditions; not to speak of gaining an ever increasing control in industry.

A. A. Purcell, the chosen spokesman of the British Trade Union Congress brings here a ringing message from our fellow workers in Great Britain for the world unity of labor. I was privileged to hear his appeal delivered at the forty-fourth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, and it struck me as if it was forged by the century-long experience of the British labor movement. I do not know of any better way of promoting the great cause of the world unity of labor than by bringing the appeal and message of Brother A. A. Purcell and the British Trade Union Congress which he represents, to every working man and woman of this country. I do not think there is a working man or woman here who can afford to miss the opportunity to listen to and benefit by Brother Purcell's great and convincing appeal on behalf of labor unity.

There are signs indicating that the working people in every industrial country are beginning to realize how indispensable the unity of labor is.

The splendid victory of the British miners which was gained as a result of the united support of the entire labor movement of Great Britain and the International Federation of Miners was a striking example of what can be accomplished by the unity of labor in the field of economic action. The splendid victory just gained by the working people of Germany during the recent elections in Berlin, is another striking example of what can be accomplished by unity of labor within the field of political action.

is increasing today with leaps and bounds.

Death List Growing Yearly.

Last year 538 men were killed in the anthracite mines. This year the rate is a great deal higher, and if the mines had continued to work and killed men for the remaining five months of the year as they did the first seven months there would have been well over 600 more slaughtered.

The figures prove conclusively that the flesh and blood sacrificed by the miners is but an insignificant item to the coal barons, and such instances must not interfere in the daily grind of profit, even when ground out of the lives of the murdered miners.

An Army of Cripples.

In 1923 there were 29,172 men injured in the anthracite hell holes, many of whom would have been better to have been killed outright. Hundreds of them as a result of their accident are totally incapicitated and doomed to a life of torture, a burden to themselves, their heartbroken wives and families.

Hundreds of those underground wage slaves every year have their backs broken, are blinded, or internally injured in a manner that leaves them totally helpless.

In 1924, 30,241 men were injured. Picture this army of toilers, 30,000 strong being carried home to their loved ones on improvised stretchers, torn, crushed, and bleeding and you will readily understand the degree of suffeing in the human butcher shops.

One-Fifth Killed or Hurt Yearly.

Nearly one-fifth of the total number of men employed in the collieries each year are victims of the industry and killed or injured. But what does that terrible toll of death and suffering mean to the ghouls of finance who are waxing fat on the life blood of those tortured slaves.

To bring this condition as forcefully as possible to the reader we will examine the official figures. Five hundred men killed per year means that every day the mines operate, two men die and they are carried home to two widows and their little orphaned children amidst scenes of suffering and anguish that no pen can describe.

In an attempt to hide the degree of this suffering at this time the coal operators thruout the anthracite region are pointing out that compensation benefits are paid the widows and orphans. Compensation benefits! Filthy lucre in exchange for the life of the father and breadwinner, and what a compensation it is!

A Benefit, Or a Sentence?

The great state of Pennsylvania decrees that twelve dollars per week be paid the widow to raise her family. Twelve dollars per week to pay rent, feed, clothe, and educate the children, mentioning nothing of fuel, sickness, doctor bills and taxes.

Twelve dollars per week means death to all their hopes and aspirations, and dooms the victims to a life of suffering and starvation.

In 1924, 30,000 non-fatal accidents were reported. For every man killed there were sixty toilers injured in the hell holes. Over 100 men are killed and injured per day. For every man killed there is another totally incapacitated—will never again be able to do any able bodied toil. Go into the hospitals situated in the heart of the anthracite region when the mines are in operation, and you will find a condition beyond imagination. You will see victims by the dozen in untold agony.

Like a Battlefield.

Men with their eyes blown out by coal shots at the working place in the mine, their heads and bodies powder burned and the flesh taken off to the bone, others gas burned with the skin completely ripped from their bodies. Others who have been caught in falls have their legs or arms amputated while the suffering of those with internal injuries is beyond description.

In commenting on this awful carnage, John L. Lewis in a speech at Hazelton, in the Altomont Hotel, August 25, 1925, said "they paid the price. If some had to die, they died like men. If some had to be injured, they took the chance. In return for all that, they ask the anthracite operators, and they ask the public of our country for proper consideration and the payment of a wage that will justify them in dying."

Killed Like Rats—Without a Chance.

Here is the Lewis value of life, the price of dying. Toilers who did not die like men, but were killed like rats without a fightng chance. Blown and burned by shots and gas, or buried by thousands of tons of treacherous roof, and to compensate them for that, they ask for consideration and an increased wage scale. And what is that particular demand?

Ready to Die for 50 Cents.

They are demanding a consideration of ten per cent increase in wages. Approximately fifty cents per day. No one knows better than Lewis that the demand is pitiably inadequate and ridiculous.

Fifty cents per day to workers whose wage is far below the average standard of living, and to men whose life and limbs are continuously in jeopardy. Such a demand is an insult to the workers' intelligence.

Small as this demand is, the anthracite barons are seeking to have it arbitrated. Seeking to arbitrate the price for which over 500 men shall give up their lives, or how much a man may earn before his back is broken of his limbs amputated, how much he may secure to his loved ones before his eyes are shot out, or the flesh ripped off his bones.

The mine workers must never arbitrate this battle, small as their demands may be. Spurn arbitration as you would a poisonous reptile. We have been the victims of arbitration awards before and not once have we ever been the beneficiaries of capitalist arbitration.

Lewis Fails to Reply to the Open Letter Sent Him by the Progressive Miners

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, President Coolidge, writing his message for the session of congress that convenes next month, declares he will have nothing to say demanding action in the anthracite coal strike situation. No recommendations are needed, he says.

That means that Washington like Wall Street is satisfied with developments in the Pennsylvania strike field.

• • • •

On the one hand:

The miners' funds are running low.

The bitter cold of winter is already here.

Hunger and misery spread suffering.

New York City, the New England states and other anthracite consuming districts, are beginning to freeze, especially the workers who were unable to put in an advance supply.

That results in demands for the ending of the strike. Time presses against the strikers.

• • • •

On the other hand:

The price of the dwindling anthracite stocks on hand mounts higher.

This means greater profits for the mine owners and their agents, the wholesalers and retailers of anthracite.

The profit press is on the side of the coal barons and helps place the blame for the continuance of the strike on the miners.

Time is on the side of the coal profiteers.

• • • •

Since the "Strikebreaker" Coolidge administration is the ally of the mine barons, it therefore joins in the waiting game. It does nothing. All that can be done for the mine owners has been done.

The militancy of the coal miners has been neutralized to some extent thru capitalist influence over their leaders, especially the miners' president, John L. Lewis, who refuses "to fight the government."

Jails are ready awaiting left wing spokesmen who urge a class fight by the mine workers against their exploiters.

The local police department, the county sheriff's office, the state militia, the infamous Pennsylvania "Cossacks," the federal troops, all rest on their arms waiting the moment that they may be needed to crush the least display of active discontent on the part of the strikers and their sympathizers.

There are laws galore upon the statute books to keep the coal miners in submission. These are ready for use. But when laws stand in the way of the mine owners' profits, like the anti-smoke ordinances of New York and other cities, these are set aside and made inoperative. Coolidge doesn't neet to act.

• • • •

The coal barons stand ready to smash the strike at any cost. The mine workers cannot afford to waste one ounce of strength in the struggle for their victory. President Lewis has not yet answered the open letter of the Progressive Miners' Committee that said:

> "We demand, Mr. Lewis, that you call out the maintenance men and make it a real strike to force the bosses to yield to our demands.
> "We are against any compromise which doesn't give us the thing that is most important to us, better wages, so that we can give our families a better standard of life.
> "We urge that you and the executive board take immediate steps to create a strike relief fund and pay strike relief. We have got to have this support to win this strike, and WE ARE DETERMINED TO WIN.
>
> "Ask the 25 million workers of this country to come to our aid, Mr. Lewis, by sending out a general appeal for strike relief funds.
>
> "We ask you, Mr. Lewis, to demand of the railroad unions that they refuse to haul coal while the strike lasts."

President Lewis has not answered those demands except, of course, to make new attacks on the left wing of the miners' union. Thus he plays into the hands of the mine owners.

The mine workers call upon Mr. Lewis to help them win the strike. But with his help, or without it, they will win.

LABOR THRONGS PARTICIPATE IN NOV. 7 MEETNGS

security pact which has been drawn up by the capitalist nations as a new weapon to be used in their war against the Soviets of Russia, which have resisted the blockades, and the invasions of the capitalist class and to prepare ourselves for these new attacks that the capitalists would make on the workers' and peasants' government of Russia.

"During these eight years we have heard the prophets of the capitalist class say the downfall of Soviet power was only a matter of minutes.

"The capitalist prophets thot that the workers were fools and that by continually predicting the downfall and suggesting the weakness of the Soviet power, it would cause them to give up hope and abandon the struggle.

"We have found that even many friends of Soviet Russia have given up hope and began to believe that capitalism is firmly intrenched."

He then decried the tendency as represented by Lore in America, Frossard in France and the recent renegades of the Communist movement in England who believe that capitalism is more firmly entrenched than ever.

Capitalism Growing Weaker.

"Is capitalism really the giant that it was before the war?" asked Bedacht, and then went on to show that tho American capitalism had become stronger, international capitalism had become weaker.

"From the body of international capitalism an arm has been cut off. That arm is Soviet Russia. That arm instead of rotting, has grown a head, feet, a body and has become a giant in itself."

In referring to capitalism in Germany, he said;

"The Dawes' plan is still alive. But Germany is dead. The Dawes' plan is an electrical injection that makes the dead body of Germany quiver every once in a while making it appear that it has life."

He then pictured the financial bankruptcy of France and the attempt of the Painleve cabinet to stabilize the franc.

"Financial bankruptcy must be followed by political bankruptcy," he declared, and characterized France as the feet of capitalism afflicted with locomotor ataxia.

"But the victory of the Russian revolution was but the winning of one battle in the world revolution and on this day it is up to us to consider what we the workers of America, can do to serve the best interests of the workers of Soviet Russia and of the workers of the world.

"The condition of victory of the Russian revolution was a Bolshevik Party; the condition of victory of the American workers will be a Bolshevik Party.

Prepare for Our Task.

"On this day we should not only celebrate the victories already achieved, but we should investigate how well we are prepared to do our duty; to not only insure the existence of Soviet power in Russia, but to extend it to other parts of the world." In referring the present reorganization and bolshevization of the Workers Party, he declared:

"It is an attempt on the part of our party to fulfill its task as leader of the workers in the United States."

He then dwelt on the necessity of the party becoming a really proletarian party reaching into every mine, shop and factory and becoming a part of the daily life of the worker. He urged those present to do all they can to strengthen those instruments that will be used to better bolshevize the membership, and declared that "our greatest instrument is The DAILY WORKER.

"It is easy to get a lot of enthusiasm over the celebration of the victories of the Russan workers, but we must not forget that these victories had to be paid for in sacrifices. It is up to us to show our appreciation of these sacrifices by strengthening our own organization so that we can better lead the American proletariat to victory."

The speaker to follow Max Bedacht was Herbert Zam, national secretary of the Young Workers' League, who called the security pact signed at Locarno an attempt on the part of capitalism to rehabilitate itself.

He pointed out that the weakest link in the chain of capitalism is no longer central Europe where capitalism was first introduced, but that it has moved to the colonial possession of Syria, Morocco, China, where revolts against imperialist domination have broken out.

He then reviewed the history of the formation of the Communist International and spoke at length on the part that Karl Liebknecht had played in the organization of the youth against militarism. He showed that the fight started by Liebknecht has been taken up by many others, mentioning Crouch and Trumbull as two of those in this country who are fighting the imperialist policies of their masters. He urged the workers to organize and to struggle for the establishing of a Communist society in America.

Sing Revolutionary Songs.

Following the talk by Herbert Zam, the Ukrainian workers' chorus, in the colorful costumes of their native land, sang a number of revolutionary songs.

Max Shachtman, who followed the Ukrainian chorus, called upon all to make sacrifices, just as the Russian workers had done in the struggle urging the assembled workers to contribute to The DAILY WORKER. A collection was then taken up.

Earl Browder, director of the research department, followed Max Shachtman.

Come to Rejoice.

"We wonder how it can be that people come here and stay very late at night and listen to poor speakers. There must be a reason. You don't come here to hear the speaker at all. You come here to demonstrate."

He showed how the Russian revolution stopped the imperialist world war and lifted Russia out of the mosaic of imperialism and showed the workers how to organize.

He showed that the greatest achievement of the Russian revolution was the organization of the Communist International for the organization of which the capitalist class will never forgive the workers. He called upon the assembled workers to stand by the Communist International and thus pledge their alliance to the workers of Soviet Russia.

Successful Demonstration in Detroit.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 8—Workers turned out in great numbers here to join the cellebration of the eighth anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution in Russia. Many nationalities were represented at the gatherng, which was held at Finnish Hall.

J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, was the principal speaker, showing how the Boyshevik revolution, the basis of the world proletarian struggle for power, had changed from the defensive during its first years to an offensive struggle against international capitalism. Edgar Owens, district organiser, was chairman. Barney Mass spoke for the Young Workers' League. Alfred Goetz made the appeal for DAILY WORKER subscriptions. The Finnish band and the Ukrainian, Finnish and other choruses furnished the musical program, with a program of gymnastics being given by a group of Finnish children. The program ended with an address by a Finnish speaker and a playlet in Finnish.

Altho an admisison was charged and in spite of the fact that many "subs" and much literature was disposed of, nevertheless, the audience also contributed $151.58 tho The DAILY WORKER collection.

Fred Merrick Goes to Trial Nov. 30th At Pittsburgh, Pa.

drew Mellon, secretary of the treasury and prohibition enforcement chief who is also a heavy owner of distilleries; Elbert Gary, one of the chief owners of Pittsburgh, tho he lives in New York City, and the big coal operators. As Merrick and his associates were active in fighting for the workers, exploited by those capitalist barons, they were slated for the prison and the charge of distributing a leaflet, was as good as any other to hold them on.

The capitalists of Pittsburgh would give their right eyes to get Fred Merrich behind the bars. They railroaded him once before and want to do it again. They have spent a lot of time and much money building an ironbound "frame-up". They have everything on their side, except the workers. They have money, and the government.

The battle line, in this case is, as in all cases of its kind: Fred Merrick and his comrades, supported by the class conscious workers against the masters of coal and iron, supported by all the powers of government from Coolidge down to the most contemptible local flunkey in Pittsburgh.

The International Labor Defense is conducting the legal defense of Merrick and the other defendants.

FORD WORKERS GREET DAILY AS THEIR ALLY

Welcome Expose of Henry Ford

By LENA ROSENBERG.

(Worker Correspondent)

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 8.—As the afternoon shift at the Ford plant is about to leave at 4:30, the whistle blows and the guards at the main entrance lock the doors and search the workers as they go out. They look into the dinner-pails, then the sleeves, then the pockets and after they have searched the workers they make them wait in the lobby until all have been searched. When the doors open the workers rush out, glad to get away from the flunkies, who would not hesitate to steal themselves, but are detailed to search them.

As the workers came out of the factory one day, and saw us there with the special Ford edition of the DAILY WORKER, their faces brightened when they saw that Henry Ford was being exposed for what he really is. From the remarks that we heard, we knew that they considered the DAILY WORKER their friend.

When we got there the next day with the second special Ford edition, the workers were very eager to get copies. A number of Ford stoolpigeons tried to scare us away by showing us K. K. K. membership cards. The other comrade that was with me was not a member of the party, but she refused to be frightened. She was carried away by the enthusiasm shown by the workers for the DAILY WORKER.

One thing that is very noticeable is the number of workers that leave with fingers bandaged. Some leave the shop with a handkerchief wrapped around their fingers. Under the speedup system that operates in the factory, many of the workers are injured and have no time to go to the emergency hospital.

Spearmint Magnate in New $25,000,000 Coal and Chemical Trust

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Nov. 8.—The $25,000,000 merger of the Bon Air Coal and Iron corporation, the Tennessee Consolidated Coal company of Chattanooga has been consummated, it was announced here to-day by T. R. Preston, a director. The combined interests will be known as the Tenn-By-Products company.

The new corporation will be headed by R. J. Immerfall, formerly of the Victor Chemical Works. It will manufacture charcoal, pig iron, methanol (synthetic wood alcohol), acetate of lime, wood oils, pitch, tar, ferro-phospatus and mine extensively coal and iron.

The board of directors of the new company are: William Wrigley, Jr., Chicago; James R. Offield, Chicago; John McE. Bowman, New York; Col. Jacob Rupprecht, New York; William Cummings, Nashville; R. J. Immerfall, Nashville; Frederick Leake, Nashville; J. J. Gray, Nashville; Paul M. Davis, Nashville; T. R. Preston, Chattanooga.

KU KLUX HEADQUARTERS IN DETROIT STORMED AFTER VOTES COME IN

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 8—More than a score of policemen responded to a riot call here to disperse a mob of several hundred election enthusiasts who stormed the ku klux klan headquarters following the election of the anti-klan candidate at the mayoralty of Detroit by an estimated majority of 33,000 votes. The crowd, which paraded to the klan offices in automobiles, stoned the windows and building until police dispersed them. Patrols are still on guard.

LOS ANGELES CIGAR MAKERS IN BIG DRIVE

Seek to Organize the Present Open Shops

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 8.—International Cigar Makers' Union, Local 225, of Los Angeles, is inaugurating an active campaign to organize the hundreds of cigar makers in the factories of this city, where the most unspeakable, intolerable conditions are prevailing.

Many cigar manufacturers who have operated union shops in San Francisco and San Diego have moved to this city because they were told by the chamber of commerce that Los Angeles is the white spot of the country, and that here they need not fear to exploit workers freely without the interference of the Cigar Makers' Union.

However, organized labor in general does not think that Los Angeles is going to become the safest nest of open shop profiteers.

With the backing of organized labor of Los Angeles, the Cigar Makers' Union intends to organize every cigar factory in the city.

A cigar maker in Los Angeles is the most underpaid worker in this country; his average wage is not to exceed $20 per week.

Such conditions cannot be endured any longer. The Cigar Makers' Union has elected a special organization committee to carry on the work.

A big mass meeting of all cigar makers, rollers, bunch breakers and cigar packers has been called for Thursday evening, Nov. 12, at the Labor Temple. Speakers in English and Spanish will make addresses. Representatives of the Central Labor Council will also speak.

Teachers Told "Sports" Are Biggest Thing Today

KANSAS CITY, Kan., Nov. 8.—Speaking before the sixty-second annual convention of the northeast district of Kansas State Teachers' Association, Branch Rickey, president of the St. Louis Cardinals, told the teachers that "sport is the biggest thing in national life today." Teachers crowded the auditorium to overflowing to listen to Edwin Markham, author of "The Man with the Hoe," speak on "Poetry."

The Drive for World Trade Union Unity

system of production which is chronic, and definitely shows that capitalism is in the period of disintegration and decay. The end of war brought the capitalists face to face with the problem of reconstructing their ruined economic system, and they immediately set about accomplishing this at the expense of the working class.

For two years after the war an industrial boom prevailed and then a crisis of great magnitude developed. First in Japan, then reaching every other capitalist country, factories were closed, millions of workers were thrown out of work. In the U. S. over six million workers were unemployed in the winter of 1921-22.

The capitalists seized upon this as the proper time to deflate the war-time gains of the workers, to wrest from the workers the comparatively high wages they had succeeded in securing owing to the war necessity, and to smash the unions which had grown enormously during the war period. The capitalists set out to place the full burden of the war on the backs of the workers by means of wage reductions, longer hours, unemployment, in a word, by reducing the workers' standard of living. The capitalists seeing their profits reduced by war debts and the economic crisis, set out to reduce the standard of living of the workers as a means of recouping themselves.

The trade unions led by devoted servants of the capitalists, corrupted by the patriotism of the war period were unable to stem the attack of the bosses. Unions were smashed, wages cut, hours lengthened—the workers lost nearly all they had gained during the war period.

The chief factors causing this defeat were:

1. The post-war economic crisis was not an ordinary crisis of capitalist economy, but one of the crises of the period of dissolution in which capitalism has entered. Two methods of solving the crisis presented themselves: Either that the workers would be driven to accept a coolie standard of living and allow capitalist production to continue, or the destruction of capitalism and the reorganization of production on a socialist basis. In other words, the workers were faced with the alternative of overthrowing capitalism or submitting to a lower standard of living to allow of the continuance of capitalist production.

2. The old forms of struggle were useless in face of such a situation. The trade union movement split up into national sections, into craft divisions in the various countries, and pursuing a policy of class collaboration instead of class struggle could not combat the capitalist offensive. Not only the antiquated forms of the trade union movement, but also the millions of workers still unorganized in the basic industries prevented any real opposition to the capitalists.

3. The treacherous leadership of the unions, men who had recruited the workers for the slaughter during the war, continued to serve the bosses after the war by opposing all atempts to fight the capitalist attack.

The lessons of this period are clear: Only by uniting the forces of the workers nationally and internationally on the basis of a class struggle policy can the workers hope to even defend themselves from the attacks of the capitalists.

The disunity of the trade union movement should be apparent to every worker. Not only are craft unions splitting up the workers of one industry, but in many instances several competing unions exist side by side. In the United States the system of craft unionism has vicious effects on the conditions of the workers. In an industry where the workers of one trade strike the other trades remain at work while the bosses cut the strikers to pieces by filling their places with scabs, etc. These craft unions with their hidebound craft prejudices, jurisdictional squabbles and isolation enable the bosses to defeat the workers.

The American Federation of Labor has 107 International Unions affiliated to it. But this does not bring unity into the trade union movement. The A. F. of L. has never acted as a coordinating center for the unions in this country. Its function is to settle jurisdictional disputes between rival unions, and in many cases its decisions are flouted. The 107 International Unions keep up a semblance of unity by affiliation with the A. F. of L. The A. F. of L. dare not attempt the organization of the unorganized because of the tangle of jurisdictional disputes that would ensue.

The Executive Council of the A. F. of L. is merely a propaganda machine maintained by the reactionary leaders of the International Unions to combat any deviations from the path of "safe and sane" craft unionism. In politics the Executive Council applies the policy of "non-partizan" endorsement of candidates of the democratic and republican parties. But these political decisions have no weight with the International Union leaders. In 1924, when the Executive Council endorsed LaFollette's candidacy for president, President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers was a member of the republican campaign committee, while Wm. Green, secretary-treasurer of the same union, was prominent in the democratic party campaign.

Measured by any working class standard the American Federation of Labor cannot be said to be a real national center for the trade union movement in this country.

In other countries similar disunity is met. In France, Germany, Poland and Czecho-Slovakia the reactionary officialdom has split the movment by mass expulsions of elements opposed to their policy of cooperation with the capitalists. In Holland there are six trade union federations competing. Out of a total membership in all unions of about 300,000 there are federations consisting of reformist, catholic, protestant, democratic, syndicalist and anarcho-syndicalist unions. These divisions in the ranks of the trade union movements all translate themselves into defeats for the workers, because the bosses take advantage of them to lower the standard of living of the entire working class.

So far as international trade union centers are concerned the two most important are the International Federation of Trade Unions (Amsterdam) and the Red International of Labor Unions (Moscow). The Amsterdam International claims a membership of between 14,000,000 and 15,000,000. The Red International of Labor Unions has between 12,000,000 and 13,000,000. Amsterdam has as its base the British and German unions. The R. I. L. U. has a firm foundation in the 6,000,000 trade unionists of Soviet Russia. The A. F. of L. is not affiliated with either. Even Amsterdam was too radical for Gompers, and the same applies to his successor Green.

International trade union unity is a burning necessity for the working class. The R. I. L. U. proposes the calling of a world congrss for the establishment of a united trade union international embracing all trade union movements so that the workers will be able to meet the atacks of the bosses. The British trade unions have united with the Russian unions for this aim. The Amsterdam International bitterly opposes this proposal for unity and thus takes upon itself the responsibility for the continuance of the divisions in the trade union movement. The A. F. of L., on the one hand, stands for the isolation of the American trade union movement and preaches a so-called "Munro Doctrine of Labor" as being most in keeping with the policy of the United States government, and on the other hand displays a tendency to aid the reactionaries of the Amsterdam International in their fight against the movement for unity conducted by the British and Russian unions.

SOVIET'S LIVE WIRES ASTONISH SWEDISH FIRMS

Get Phone Rights in Border Countries

(Special to The Daily Worker)

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Nov. 8.—The statement in an official telegram from the Moscow Soviet news agency concerning an agreement between the Ericsson and Svagtsroem factory trust for the exploitation of Ericsson's telephone system is causing much comment here.

According to the Moscow statement the Russian trust is to have exclusive rights to Ericsson's automatic telephones within the Soviet Union as well as in Persia, Afghanistan and Mongolia and the exclusive concession of Ericsson patents in Latvia, Esthonia and Lithuania.

Pending Since July.

The announcement adds that the Ericsson company will supply Russia with the necessary plant, including automatic telephone stations, on long credit terms. Mr. Sandberg, director of the Ericsson factory, declares that negotiations have been proceeding since July.

Sweden, alone, he said, would be unable to provide Russia with all the equipment necessary, altho any agreement on the lines suggested would necessarily bring great activity to the Swedish telephone industry.

Enterprising Reds.

Ministers representing the border states assure the correspondent that the Moscow announcement, if true, does not mean Russian domination over their telephone systems, but simply that those states must purchase Ericsson material thru Moscow instead of Stockholm.

Dagens Nyheter makes the comment that the Russian state trust must be animated by a remarkably active and enterprising spirit in view of the fact that it has obtained exclusive rights to Ericsson's automatic telephones not only within the Soviet Union, but in six other autonomous states.

Board of Aldermen Committee to Probe Shady Sidewalk Bids

Attempts by John J. Sloan, president of the board of local improvements and formerly head of the Wisconsin Granite company, to exclude all bids for paving Chicago sidewalks except those using cement, were nipped at the meeting of the board of aldermen's council committee on local industries and streets and alleys.

Before the council committee meeting it was brot out that Sloan had excluded all other bids for paving sidewalks except those using cement. In the course of the discussion it was brot out that sidewalks that were made of cement were not able to withstand climatic changes as well as those constructed of asphalt and it was decided to appoint a sub-committee to investigate the connections of Sloan with the cement company, that he was once head of, and the bidding on the $2,300,000 worth of sidewalk construction.

Workers' Education in the Union of Soviet Republics

Soviet Primer No. 5—From the little booklets in which the Soviet government tells its own folks what is going on in the country.

THE three and a half cent booklet on education is written by Hodorovsky, assistant head of education and a much more methodical man than Lunacharsky. He is a bit dry in style, too much like a catalogue, but he gives the first coherent picture of Russian education in all it ramifications. Only, unfortunately, his figures are already old; education moves fast these days, and the new figures for 1925-26 have made a bigger increase than ever over the year before. With this correction, that he doesn't tell all the latest progress, we'll let it stand.

Slowly, he says, but without a break grows and rises the industry of our land and with it grows also education. Let us see how it has improved in the past two years.

THE funds for education come from two sources, the central government and the local governments. From the central government 70 million was spent for education (in Russia proper) in 1922-23, but 115 million in 1924-25. from the local governments 62 million rubles was spent in 1922-23, but in 1924-25 they spent 234 million. Thus we see that the total amount spent for education is almost three times as great as two years ago.

The largest expenses for public education have gone for bettering the condition of teachers. In January, 1923 the village teachers got on an average of 6 rubles, ($3) a month. A year later in March 1924 the average was 15 rubles. But the central government realized that no teacher could live on this, and in June 1924 they advanced a special fund of five million rubles, which raised teachers' wages from 20 to 25 rubles a month. From October of that year it was established that village teachers should not get less than 25 rubles, and the central government set aside 20 million rubles to raise this still higher beginning with January of 1925.

Now certainly, 28 or 30 rubles a month is not enuf to satisfy all needs. We do not intend to stop there. But every honest citizen must admit that under the conditions, only a worker and peasant government would in so short a time and in our poverty have made such a large proportionate raise.

How People's Education Is Organized.

THE aim of our education, as stated in our party program, is to train up understanding citizens, capable of rebuilding all life on new socialist foundations. This means that our schools must produce workers, who understand the world of nature, and human society and industrial production, who are free from the task of destroying all chains and bondage.

All our education is linked together, from the smallest child to the university graduate. First comes the kindergarten, from three to eight years; then the first form of the regular school, from eight to twelve years; then the second form which has two divisions, from twelve to fifteen and from sixteen to seventeen. Above this comes the university and higher technical schools.

In the first form, which lasts four years, the children learn reading, writing arithmetic, and become acquainted with the simplest facts of the working life around them, the life of the family, social life and nature. In the second form they go deeper into their acquaintance with the life around them; they themselves make experiments with nature, become acquainted with her riches and forces, and with the use of these to enrich human society; they learn the economic organization of our land and other lands, the history of our revolution and the organization of our government.

ALL this we teach not only by books. But in the large cities the schools of the second form must have some connection with a factory or mill; and in the village, with agricultural work; and as the children reach the upper grade of this form, they must themselves take some productive specialty, farming, or factory work or teaching.

This is an absolute change from the old system under the czar where the gymnasium prepared officials, and was as remote as possible from life. In the towns and villages the peasants and workers were fighting for better conditions of life against landlords and capitalists, but the school was supposed to remain deaf to all this struggle; worse yet, the children learned that poverty, misery, darkness and slavery were made by the lord god himself, and whoever raises his voice against them, sins against god. They learned the laws of god and the lives of the saints, filling their heads with useless stuff instead of what they needed to know—which is how and whence nature produces her various phenomena, why and how the social life of man is built, what is human labor, why one man toils and another reaps the fruit. Of all these things the schools gave no information at all.

But perhaps some peasant says: "The school in our village still teaches after the old fashion." That is true; there are many such. Not at once do we find all the teachers needed for the new methods. But in the past two years there have been summer courses attended by tens of thousands of teachers. The teachers themselves take these courses very seriously and wish to learn, for they cannot now answer the questions which the children ask them.

There is also a growing movement of Pioneers outside the school but working closely with it, introducing the child to social life.

Professional-Technical Training.

BESIDES the general schools, known as Schools of Social Instruction there are schools for technical and professional training. These are of three grades—lower, middle and higher. The lowest trains workers, the middle trains the foremen, or assistant engineers of industry; the highest trains engineers and managers of our growing industrial and political and social life.

Under the czar the method of training workers was as follows: A boy in a worker's family reaches the age of eleven or twelve and his parents, driven by need, sent him to the factory. There he worked fifteen or more hours daily, at the most menial tasks, obeying everyone's orders, till after five or six years he was considered a workman. A more barbarous waste of youth can hardly be imagined.

Our lower trade schools are located in big factories, or, where there are many small factories, there is a district school. In the school itself is an educational work shop, where the boy works a certain number of hours daily, in connection with his school work. After two years of this he begins work for certain hours in the factory itself, still spending, however, two to four hours of the working day in school. There are about 100,000 students in these factory schools in the Soviet Union.

AGRICULTURAL schools come also under the head of professional training and are rapidly growing. Under the czar in 1914, there were in Russia proper 139 agricultural schools with 8,767 students. By 1921 these had multiplied four times, and in the depression which followed there still remained at the lowest ebb in 1923, 241 agricultural schools with 20,000 students, or two and a half times the number in the czar's days. Since that time they have been again increasing.

There are no lower professional schools for teachers but there are schools of middle rank, training teachers for the village schools. These middle schools are called technicums. Under the czar there were 20,000 teachers in such technicums, but we have 30,000 and are opening more schools.

Higher Education.

BEFORE the revolution, higher education was practically closed to the children of workers, for one must pass thru the gymnasiums or church schools or have private tutors and none of these were possible to workers. One minister of education, Delinof, actually boasted that the government would never let into its universities the children of scrub-women," and by this meant all children of workers and peasants.

Our first task was to open the higher institutions of learning to workers and peasants. But how? Preliminary training is needed for these institutions and this no worker possessed. So there were established the worker faculties, or so-called rabfacs. These are not factory schools or trade schools for teaching trades, but general preparatory schools taking workers direct from the bench and training them for higher institutions. They must know how to read and write and a little arithmetic—nothing more.

The course in the rab-fac lasts three or four years, and in these they are supposed to gain all the knowledge necessary for entering the university. How our enemies laughed at this idea! But we have now in Russia proper 75 worker faculties, with 35,000 students. And when the first graduates, 5,000 in number, entered the universities, they were found to be no worse prepared than those of the chosen gymnasiums of former days; indeed, in some ways they were better prepared.

THE universities came to us, as we said, with quite a different type of student. But in the past three years this has greatly changed. By the spring of 1924, 15 per cent of all students were workers or children of workers, and 23 per cent were peasants or children of peasants. With each year's entering class the proportion grows as the elder group of non-working elements leave school.

But we have changed not only the type of student but the whole form of life. In place of being aloof from life, every higher institution of learning must have vital connection with the economic life of the region where it is placed. In our pedagogical institutes, even, we produce not only teachers, who know books but teachers who know the life surrounding them.

One new measure in our higher schools is unique in the world. That is the government's material aid to students. Formerly students came from rich families, who sent them money to live on. But our students are poor; they receive stipends from the government, from 15 to 29 rubles a month for their food. Such partial support is given to 75,000 students by the government, which spent last year 25 million rubles for this purpose. Nowhere else in the world is this done.

Political Enlightenment.

UNDER the head of enlightenment of citizens must come first the fight with illiteracy. In 1920, 700 of every 1,000 of our population was illiterate. During our first two years of work we taught five million people to read and write. But then this too fell during the famine. Since 1923 these classes have grown, and at the end of 1924 there are 22,450 classes teaching 600,000 illiterates. If the plan laid down by Lenin to liquidate all illiteracy by the tenth anniversary of the revolution is not entirely accomplished, it will be three-fourths of the way to fulfilment at least.

The growth of reading huts has also kept up with the growth of reading knowledge, and this is very important, for an adult who has no practice soon forgets to read. Our reading huts grew in one year to 1923-24 from 4,511 to 10,417 and are still growing rapidly in number.

ONE special feature of our new education is the teaching of the many non-Russian nationalities in the Soviet Union, who formerly were not allowed schools in their own language. This barbarous suppression was especially true among the eastern people, Tartars, Kirghiz, Chuvash and others. Now among these people education is rapidly growing; tho in some cases they had no alphabet and no books, an dthese had to be first created.

We know that the greater the knowledge and understanding introduced among all these backward peoples and among our own untaught peasants and workers, the stronger will their mutual alliance grow, on which our state is based. In this mutual alliance and understanding is the guarantee of our victory over all foes; over foreign and Russian landlords; over foreign and Russian capitalists; and over economic ruin, beggary and misery, over darkness and ignorance.

FRANC RAPIDLY FALLS ON NEW YORK MARKET; GOING WAY OF MARK

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—The franc hit a new low mark on the exchange today, and with the exception of a short period in March, 1924, when it was rescued by the house of Morgan, is the lowest in history.

A seven points decline this morning at opening, followed a 15-point decline yesterday. It looks as tho the decline would continue thruout the day and by closing time this evening will toboggan to new low levels.

The movement is similar to the spectacular fall of the German mark in 1922.

Find New Source of Oil.

VICTORIA, B. C., Nov. 8.—As a result of the recent lifting of certain government restrictions on the catching of pilchards for oil refining purposes, the Oceanic Fish Oil & Meal company has been formed here for exploiting this comparatively new source of oil. They will shortly start an oil and fertilizer plant at Quatsino with a capacity of 30,000 gallons of oil per month.

Reorganization---How Far Are You Going?

By WILLIAM SIMONS.

A dangerous slogan is arising in connection with the reorganization campaign, one that must be combatted at once. Around it are gathering all elements that oppose reorganization, either consciously or unconsciously. "Long Live the Street Nucleus (International Branch)!" is being taken up with great enthusiasm by elements reluctant to abandon the present form of party structure. There is a rave danger to our reorganization campaign, unless we differentiate between the shop nucleus and the street nucleus.

We are carrying on an ideological campaign for reorganization of our party on the basis of shop nuclei, which the statutes of the Communist International prescribe as the structural unit of the Communisct parties. But it is manifestly impossible to place all our members into shop nuclei, because some do not work in shops and others are not compactly grouped in shops. Therefore largely as a transition form away from the present outworn federation branch, the street nuclei are permitted. But the street nucleus is not the basic unit of the Communist Party; it is mainly a transitional form, to be employed until one can get rid of them, as units with voting members on party policy.

Shop Nucleus the Basis.

When we reorganize our party, our first and foremost task is to establish as many shop nuclei as possible with the comrades eligible; and as the possibility arises thru influx of new members, to organize more, transferring to them eligible comrades from street nuclei.

Reorganization is not merely an escape from the evils of federationism; that is the negative, the destructive phase. But what are we going to establish in its place? How far are we going? A proper conception of Communist activity compels us to moor our party to the rock bottom of the factory activity. We must take up the everyday issues of the factory worker, and impart to them the fire of the class struggle. We must bring into the life of the workers of the factory the sweep and significance of the broad economic and political struggles of the world proletariat. To do this, successfully, our party cannot be based upon the present language, territorial branch. But when we get away from the present branch, it is not merely because it is a language branch, but also because it is a territorial branch. We must also choose between the territorial branch and the factory nucleus. We must reject the territorial form, as the basic structure.

The street nucleus is not on the same plane as the shop nucleus. True, members of the shop nucleus will sometimes be called upon to carry on propaganda after working hours, in some street nucleus, in the section where they live, if this is far from their place of work. But this will be simply another form of propaganda engaged in by the shop nucleus members, an additional task.

Street Nucleus Not Basis.

Nor is the street nucleus the basic form of the party, even for some time to come. Yet it is heralded as such by some party members, for example at a recent membership meeting of Local, Hartford, Connecticut.

Those who declared that it was impossible to establish shop nuclei in Hartford were strong for the street nucleus. No one openly defended the present form of organization; that no one would dare to do, at this stage of the game, when the Communist International has spoken so determinedly on the subject, and experience in other countries has proven the practicability of reorganization; but several did not accept the shop nucleus form of organization. If not actually opposed to it, then they showed that they could not understand the need for reorganization. They had to abandon the present form, but they were not ready to go the whole way and accept the Communist structure. One comrade declared that it was impossible to reorganize the party on the shop nucleus basis in Hartford, and maintained that you couldn't spread literature in the shop without being called a Bolshevik, and be fired from the job. To him, the writer replied in the words of Comrade Losovsky to the I. W. W. in 1920: "If you can't win the workers away from Gompers, how do you hope to bring about a revolution?" The same comrade, in his second speech, declared that the shop nucleus will not carry out Communist work in Hartford, and still held that if not all, then the bulk of the work would be done by the street nuclei.

No Stops!

The street nucleus will be used as a breathing space by all those who wish to retard reorganization. Some will cling to the street nuleus as to a life line pulling them back to their federation habits, if not to the actual form of organization. Such minds and action will still be centered in the language work, giving that precedence over the general party work, activity in the shops, etc. The evils of federationism cannot be overcome unless we are convinced that work in the shops, with comrades irrespective of language grouping, is more important than isolated action with comrades of one's own language among those speaking that same language. Those who are not so convinced will abandon the present form reluctantly, if at all; and will then cling to that form which in their opinion is closest to the present, and that is the street nuclei. Unless we establish our street nuclei with the proper conception of their role, the task of diverting members from them to the shop nuclei will be exceedingly difficult.

We must adopt as our slogan: "Go the whole road of reorganization!" No stopping on the road. A continual movement toward complete reorganization.

Build the shop nuclei!

CHICAGO WORKERS' SCHOOL OPENS NUMBER OF COURSES ON NOV. 15

Enrollments for the Chicago Workers' School are already coming in in considerable numbers, which indicates that there is a real desire on the part of Chicago workers to train themselves for more capable work in the revolutionary labor movement.

A central headquarters has been secured for the school at 19 S. Lincoln street, where the classes will be given. Definite days for the classes have now been decided upon. This should aid many prospective students in deciding upon what subjects they will be able to take.

Registration fee is $1.00 for each student for one class semester of eight weeks. All classes begin the week of November 15.

Class in Capital, Vol. 1, meets every Monday, 8 p. m. Earl Browder, instructor.

Class in Imperialism meets every Tuesday 8 p. m. Manuel Gomez, instructor.

Class in American Social and Labor History meets every Wednesday 8 p. m. Wm. F. Dunne, instructor.

Class in Elements of Communism meets every Thursday 8 p. m. Max Bedacht, instructor.

Class in Elements of Communism meets every Friday at 6 p. m. H. M. Wicks, instructor.

Class in Public Speaking meets every Friday 8:30 p. m. H. M. Wicks, instructor.

Class in Aims and Purposes of Young Workers' League meets every Sunday at 10:30 a. m. John Williamson, instructor.

English Classes.

English classes: Place of meeting to be announced later.

Elementary— Meets every Monday and Wednesday at 8 p. m.

Intermediate— One class meets every Tuesday and Friday at 8 p. m.; the other meets every Thursday at 8 p. m. and every Sunday morning at 10:20 a. m.

Instructors: Amy Shechter, Lillian Borgeson and Ida Dailies.

Arrange Dance.

Arrangements are already underway for a dance and entertainment to be given under the auspices of the Chicago Workers' School, November 26, Thanksgiving Day. An unusual program is promised. Details of this as well as the place will be announced in the next few days.

Finnish Co-ops Doing Well in Brooklyn, N. Y.

NEW YORK—(FP) One hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars of business was done by the Cooperative Colony of Finns in Brooklyn, N. Y. in the first half of 1925, reports the Cooperative league. There are 2,000 members. Their assets include $2,000,000 real estate. They have a dozen cooperative apartment houses, a cooperative garage, and other institutions, and run a large cooperative bakery, restaurant, meat and grocery store and recreation hall.

SECTION SIX

(NORTHWEST TERRITORY)

Attention!

The section membership meeting of Section No. 6 which takes in the following branches: North Side Polish, Russian, Northwest Jewish, Northwest English, Karl Marx Scandinavian, Lithuanian No. 3, Lettish, Car Shop Nucleus No. 6, Ukrainian No. 1, Slovak No. 1, Irving Park English, Slovak Jefferson Park, will be held Thursday, November 12, 8 p. m. sharp at the Workers' Lyceum, 2733 Hirsch Blvd.

Every member of the Workers Party attached to any one of the above named units, must attend this meeting, if he or she wishes to retain membership in the Workers (Communist) Party.

Registration of all members will take place here, for reorganization purposes and assignments, as to where the various comrades belong, will be made.

It is of the utmost importance to the successful reorganization of the party in the city of Chicago that every member belonging to Section No. 6 attend this meeting.

COURSE ON AMERICAN LABOR HISTORY OPENS ON WEDNESDAY, NOV. 18

The Chicago Workers' School has now complete outlines for the various subjects to be taught under its auspices this winter. One of the most interesting and instructive courses will be that conducted by Comrade William F. Dunne.

The class will begin Wednesday evening, November 18, at the school headquarters, 19 South Lincoln St.

Registration fee for the first semester of eight weeks is only $1.00. Enrollments and fees should be turned in at once to Oliver Carlson, secretary, 19 South Lincoln street.

Outline of Course in American Social and Labor History.

Instructor, Wm. F. Dunne.

Course to run thru three semesters of eight weeks each.

Meets every Wednesday at 8 p. m.

Texts: No single textbook will be used for the course. Mimeographed outlines of points covered each week together with detailed reading and references to be given to students at every class sessions.

Ground covered: First Semester—American Social and Labor History to 1894.

Second Semester—Rise of American Imperialism and the Modern Labor and Socialist Movements.

Third Semester— Problems of American Labor Today.

All students entering this course should understand the elementary principles of Communism. While the course is open to all who qualify, it is expected that it will appeal especially to those who are now active in the trade union movement.

Outline for the First Semester November 15-January 15.

First Week—The European Background to the New World.

Second Week—Colonial Development and the Revolutionary War.

Third Week—The Post-Revolutionary Crises. (1792-1812)

Fourth Week:—Westward Expansion; The Beginning of the Labor Movement.

First Week—Slave Labor versus Wage Labor.

Sixth Week—National Labor Movements and Class Conflicts.

Seventh Week—The Era of Industrial Development.

Eighth Week—Early Socialist and Radical Movements.

Common's, History of Labor in United States.

Beard's, Economic Interpretation of United States Constitutinn.

Beard's, Economic Origins of Jeffersonian Democracy.

Small's Man Defeated in Springfield Vote

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 8—Complete unofficial returns today gave O. B. Irwin, independent, a lead of 129 votes over Wm. H. Crum, republican, for county judge. Leslie G. Pefferle, democrat, polled scarcely more than 4,000 of the 30,000 votes cast. Irwin was understood to have been supported by the klan, which gave him a big vote in the rural districts to make up for his 2,000 votes minority in Springfield proper. Crum, the defeated candidate, was supported by Gov. Small and his defeat is a blow to the Small machine in this part of the state.

Invents Muffler.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—Eugene Royer, an engineer and inventor of Lyons, has invented a muffler to be attached to motor vehicles which consumes all smoke and changes the poisonous carbon monoxide gas to the non-poisonous carbon dioxide gas.

Health authorities in most cities of France hail this invention as one of the greatest discoveries of the age, as city populations are being slowly poisoned by the carbon monoxide gas and fumes of automobile exhausts have been the cause of many serious pulmonary and nervous disorders.

PITTSBURGH ORGANIZES SHOP NUCLEI IN NEWSPAPER OFFICE

From a report of Comrade A. Jakira, the Pittsburgh district organizer, we learn that one more shop nucleus, Shop Nucleus No. 6, has been organized. This nucleus is located in one of the progressive newspapers of Pittsburgh, has four members and is already functioning as the basic unit of the party.

The first street nucleus (international branch) was also organized in Pittsburgh November 3. This consists of about 18 comrades, South Slavic, English and Jewish. This nucleus has already held its first meeting, which, Comrade Jakira reports was very enhusiastic. Temporary officers were elected, several comrades subscribed to The DAILY WORKER, the distribution of the anniversary literature was organized, and the question of defense considered.

$250,000 CARGO OF SHEEP SENT SOVIET RUSSIA

Blooded Stock Bought for Wool Industry

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 8.—The representatives of the Soviet Commissariat of Agriculture, M. S. Pereferkowitch and Prof. Michael Ivanov who spent in this country about two months purchasing pure bred sheep for Soviet Russia through the agency of the Amtorg Trading Corporation, are leaving for Moscow tonight on the Mauretania.

Pereferkowitch, who is head of the livestock department of the Commissariat of Agriculture at Moscow, and Prof. Ivanov, of the Moscow Timiriazev Academy of Agriculture, have selected about 3,000 pure bred sheep of the Rambouillet type which were subsequently purchased by the Amtorg Trading Corporation.

Two Shipments.

The first shipment comprising over 1,200 head of sheep left New York October 24. The second shipment of the balance of sheep is to leave November 5th on the SS. Vestvard destined for the port of Novorossisk on the Black Sea. The two shipments are valued at about $250,000.

As was explained by Pereferkowitch these purchases are but the initial step in the extensive program of the Soviet Commissariat of Agriculture for the improvement of the sheep beeds in the steppe and mountain regions of the Caucasus, Turkestan and Siberia with a view toward obtaining the raw material necessary for the growing wool industry, which is at present compelled to import large quantities of wool from abroad.

More Purchases Planned.

According to Pereferkowitch it will be necessary to make additional large purchases of fine wool sheep during the next year and some years to come before Soviet Russia will produce enough wool to satisfy the need of its industry.

Pereferkowitch and Prof. Ivanov during their travel in the West and middle west have visited a number of agricultural colleges, experimental stations, breeding ranches, large industrially operated farms, stock yards, packing plants, veterinary laboratories, model dairies, etc., studying the advanced methods of agriculture in the United States which might be introduced to advantage in the Soviet Union.

They are also taking with them to Soviet Russia samples of various products of American agriculture, as well as of some of the machinery used here.

INDIANS SCORE CAPITALISTS AT N. W. REUNION

SPOKANE, Wash., Nov. 8—American Indians remember that it was the white man who deprived them of their means of self-support and still pride themselves on having been the only known race of mankind that had ever conquered the forest without destroying it. This was brot out here at the banquet ending the recent Northwest conference of American Indians.

The banquet was held at a "scab" hotel following a pow-wow parade with war paint and feathers. Local politicians and editors, also in their patriotic war-paint, were present in large numbers. Many of the Indians are wealthy and several of them college graduates—so it evidently behooves the bourgeoisie to patronize them. The Indians were addressed as "brothers" and were complimented upon their intelligence.

One politician, however, got off on the wrong foot by remarking that the Indians as a race were not sufficiently "self-supporting." This brot down on his head the wrath of one of the big chiefs, who pointed out how it was the white man who took away the Indians' means of livelihood. This Indian spoke at length on the grab-it-all psychology of white capitalists.

At the conference to be held here next year, all American Indians are to be invited to attend.

WILMINGTON, Del., Nov. 8—Lieut. Osborne C. Wood, son of Governor-General Wood of the Philippines, announced he will not contest Mrs. Wood's action for divorce. Wood said he would leave for Tampa, Fla., later.

COMPANY UNION OR LABOR UNION, IS THE QUESTION

Union Must Act Quick in View of Deal

NEW YORK—(FP)—Philadelphia street railway and Philadelphia taxi employes may come under the control of one company union, the Mitten Plan, or else be united into a single labor union, the Amalgamated Association of Street & Electric Railway Employes. These alternatives seem lively possibilities as the result of negotiations that financial papers say Thomas E. Mitten, head of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co., is undertaking for the purchase of the majority stock in the Philadelphia Yellow Taxi Co., now owned by the New York Yellow Taxi Corp.

This proposal to swallow up the leading taxi service firm is described as a program for a Mitten monopoly of all local passenger transportation in the Quaker City. He has already absorbed the motor bus lines, using them as feeders to certain street car lines and extensions of others.

The Mitten Plan of company unionism prevails over the Philadelphia Rapid Transit service. One of its features is the ownership of a few shares of stock by each employe, the proxies of which are voted by Mitten, giving him control of the company over rival financiers. It is expected that he will extend it to the taxi workers.

On the other hand if the street railway absorbs the taxi service the Amalgamated Association of Street & Electric Railway Employes may be given jurisdiction by the American Federation of Labor over the taxi employes who thus become street railway employes. The possibility of one union for the city's passenger carrying service thus becomes a matter of union statesmanship with much of the technical groundwork already laid. The need for consolidated unionism will become more evident. One union for streetcar men and auto passenger carriers would prevent Mitten from using his taxis to break a strike of his motormen and conductors.

Philadelphia has seen hard street car strikes in the past under the leadership of the Amalgamated Association: but that organization, though strong in many other cities and possessing over a hundred thousand members in the country at large, is today badly shaken in Philadelphia by Mitten. On the Yellow taxis the teamsters and chauffeurs union has few members.

More Machines and Less Men to Mine Mesaba Iron Ores

HIBBING, Minn.—(FP)— More machinery and fewer men will be the rule on the Messaba range and the job outlook will get worse from year to year, in the opinion of mining company officials who attended an unemployment conference in Hibbing. Production of ore was well over the average in the past year, the mining men stated, but the labor required was smaller.

Former "Socialist" and I. W. W. Founder Turns Out Renegade

NEW YORK—(FP)—The south will have to raise the wages of its cotton factory workers in the general opinion of New England mill men. The argument is that the southern mills are no longer working full time and that it will be necessary to raise the wage rate if the working force is to be kept alive.

But the boosters for southern industrialism are still lauding Dixie labor prices. The Sunday Times' last feature display was an article on the new south by Frank Bohn, formerly a radical socialist but now a conservative, emphasizing the south's advantages with a $2-a-day wage.

RUSSIAN CZARIST WANTS A. F. OF L. IN AMSTERDAM

Wants Fakers to Work for Reaction Inside

By LAURENCE TODD.

WASHINGTON—(FP)—Arguments that the American Federation of Labor should forget its fears of European socialism and should affiliate with the Amsterdam International Federation of Trade Unions are now coming from a new quarter—the Boris Bakhmeteff group of Russian whites, which last gave allegiance to the Kolchak enterprise.

The recent convention of the A. F. of L. voted instructions to the executive council to continue negotiations with Amsterdam, but it showed no anxiety to enter into affiliation unless on the terms laid down by the late Samuel Gompers and rejected by the I. F. T. U. Those terms were that American labor should not be bound by any action taken by the Amsterdam executive council—such as an appeal for a general strike or general protest at any situation arising in any country. The American position has been one of refusal to be morally bound to join in what it might consider a socialist move to prevent a war by general strike. The action of British labor in 1920, in defying the British government to start war against Russia, was cited as proof of the danger in any such affiliation.

But the Bakhmeteff propaganda sets forth the alternative as being still worse. It describes the steady trend of British and Russian labor leaders to form a combination, either inside the Amsterdam international or outside it. Hence the need for America to affiliate as an offset.

Seventeen Workers Injured.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 8.—An explosion in the Japaning department of the Yawman and Erbe company's factory injured 17 workers, 14 of them women, and shook the neighborhood for miles around.

Ambulanges and firemen were rushed to the scene. Two victims were sent to city hospitals while the rest, but by flying class, were treated in the company hospital.

HOW BANKS RULE UNDER CORPORATE SHARE DIFFUSION

The More Owners the More Centralization

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

The march toward banker dictatorship is progressing rapidly in this country since the war, according to an analysis of the trend of stock ownership before the Academy of Political Science by W. Z. Ripley, conservative professor in Harvard, railroad director and expert adviser to the interstate commerce commission.

"The present transformation," he says, "is merely in respect of the seat of power. All kinds of private businesses are being bought up by banking houses, and new corporations are being substituted in order that the purchase price (and more) may be recovered by the sale of shares to the general public. But the significant change is that the new stock thus sold is entirely bereft of any voting power, except in the case of bankruptcy."

Ripley cites the recent Dillon, Read & Co. reorganization of Dodge Motors where "the promoters paid themselves a handsome profit for the assumption of dictatorial power, having mortgaged the property to the full amount of its original cost including both assets and capitalized earning power."

He groups distribution of stock to employes and consumers, holding companies, voting trusts, trusts set up for the living or the dead, investment trusts and life insurance companies as devices which serve to isolate the owner from control and to insinuate the control of bankers and financiers.

The important point, he says, is that the wider the diffusion of ownership the more readily does effective control run to promoters, bankers, or management companies. In these few words he explodes the propaganda of the bosses about the spread of industrial democracy through widely diffused stock ownership.

Gets 2,000 Per Cent Profit Under Our Nice Little Old Capitalism

Profits of the Island Creek Coal Co. for the 3 months ended Sept. 30, 1925, amounted to $618,335, representing 457% on the common stock. In the same period of 1924 the stockholders made 340% off their coal diggers. Profits for 1925 so far amount to $1,555,376, a return of 1,120% on the common stock. With the boost in prices occasioned by the increased demand for soft coal during the anthracite strike the owners should take 2,000% for the entire year.

Negroes to Raise a $50,000 Fund to Aid Detroit Race Defense

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK—(FP)—Fifty thousand dollars is being raised to defend O. H. Sweet, colored physician and 10 other Negroes who aided in the defense of Sweet's home against an invading mob of white thugs. The announcement of the drive for support of this vital Negro liberty test case is made as the trial of Dr. Sweet and his associates is proceeding rapidly in Detroit on a murder charge. Twenty thousand dollars of the defense fund will come from the American Fund for Public Service (Garland Fund).

This defense of the 11 Negroes charged with slaying Leon Breiner in some respects parallels that of the 11 lumber workers of Centralia, Wash., tried and eventually convicted, in the defense of their union hall against a mob of invading American legion men. Sweet had, despite threats, purchased a house in a neighborhood that white middle class people had claimed for themselves though the law gave Negroes the privilege of living there. Sweet was threatened and announced he would defend himself. When the attack came Breiner dropped with a bullet.

The Association's fight will be carried through against the segregation restrictions, that by legal enactment, property holders' agreement or mob terrorism crowd the Negro population into black belts where congestion brings high rents and unsanitary conditions that put Negro mortality far above normal.

White Terror Murders of Workers Recorded in Murderer's Diary

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK—(FP)—The slaughter of the workers and peasants of Bulgaria by the Tsankoff regime is presented with terrible vividness in the international relations section of the Nov. 4 issue of The Nation where the fragment of a diary purporting to give the details of many group executions is given. The writer is aid to a captain in charge of several villages.

Six peasant prisoners are fetched in. The writer examines them. One is a schoolmaster who had been host to the writer a few days before. All are innocent. The aid reports to his captain. The captain is drunk. "Ha! Ha! Innocent men" he laughs uproariously, "that means guilty. In the decree it is said: no innocent men—do you understand?"

Then the execution, with axes by an open grave. There are orders against shooting; it might alarm the neighborhood. The victims fall into the pit, still alive. A soldier goes down with a bayonet but he is too sick with the ghastliness of the job to finish it. Another goes. The captain gives orders to fill the pit. "For God's sake, I am still alive," comes from the schoolmaster hoarsely and he raises his gory body. The aid draws his pistol to put his old friend out of his misery but the weapon is knocked from his hand and the pit filled.

ST. PAUL MAYOR TRIES FIGHT ON TEACHERS' UNION

Wants Open Shop and Drags in Communists

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. PAUL—(FP)—Attacks launched on one of the strongholds of the American Federation of Teachers, the St. Paul Federation of Women Teachers, are vigorously repelled by the union's board of directors in an open letter to the public.

Mayor Arthur Nelson accused the union of forcing teachers to become members and of spending the city's money paid to them as wages on questionable labor enterprises through their percapita payments to the St. Paul Trades & Labor assembly, the American Federation of Teachers and the American Federation of Labor. He further charged that a small clique ran the organization and that its delegates to the St. Paul central labor body had voted against the expulsion of the Communists.

The women teachers face and answer every charge in their reply. Certainly they entertain new teachers and ask them, but do not force them, to join the union and certainly they pay percapita but most of their dues, lower than the average union rate, goes to hospital and benefit funds for their members, maintenance of club rooms and the support of their professional activities, the teachers reply. Their delegates voted neither for nor against the Communists in the trades assembly, but registered their disapproval of the way the assembly kicked the radicals out, and the membership of the teachers union sustained the delegates, the mayor is further told.

And for good measure the mayor is courteously called a prejudiced liar in these terms: "In general the statements contained in the article and the editorial are biased and without adherence to fact." In his rejoinder he demands an accounting of the funds of the union. The teachers are preparing their reply.

Russian Wheat May Force Recognition by United States

Recognition of the Soviet Union by the United States is brought appreciably nearer, in the view of J. F. Essary, Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun, by pressure from big business interests in this country upon President Coolidge. He finds that large corporations that either are now trading with Russia or are seeking to get into the Russian market are active in this direction. And he hears that Russian agents are now in New York, hoping to negotiate a very considerable "private" loan.

"It is rumored," he says, "that this new loan is conditioned on the operation of several important Russian trunk line railroads by Americans and the control of Russia's wheat exports by the same interested group. The intimation is also given that cooperation with American wheat exporters in the interest of stabilization of world wheat prices is one of the objectives of the Russians."

This rumor as to the proposal of a Russo-American understanding on wheat price control follows the publication by Secretary of Agriculture Jardine of a warning to American farmers against planting so much wheat this fall as they have intended. Jardine tells the farmers that Russia is rapidly increasing her wheat production and will continue to plant for export, thereby weakening the export price.

Thousands Enslaved in N. Y. Sweatshops by "Home Industry"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK—(FP)—Women, children and old men toiling in one and two family houses in New York state on clothing, embroidery and other handmade articles of commerce are subject in practise to no factory laws limiting hours and providing sanitation. Nor do state inspectors visit to find out conditions.

This public indifference to the smaller sweatshops is brought out in the department's annual report setting forth its argument for legislation that would put these smaller homework shops under the jurisdiction that applies to licensed tenements, of which 16,059 are reported.

Investigators from the Women's Trade Union league have found cases where whole families, father, mother, little boys and girls, sit late into the night with flying fingers and haggard faces.

Communist

The first American English daily Communist newspaper is making Labor history.

The Daily Worker has become such an important factor, by voicing the aspirations of workers in this country—and by leading the fight for the best interests of the working class—at the head of the increasing ranks of revolutionary workers grouped in the Workers (Communist) Party.

The Daily Worker is a mine of information on each step in the progress of world Labor—and its interpretation of news, aided by special articles, explain the forces behind each incident of importance to a worker.

Such a paper deserves its increasing circulation—and should receive your subscription.

Crooked Lawyers and Crime

A loud clamor against crooked lawyers arises from the capitalist press every time the defense lawyers of individuals charged with spectacular crimes seem to be getting the edge on the prosecution. The bar association is implored to take drastic action against these lawyers. Aside from the interesting deviation away from the theory that people charged with crime are presumed innocent until proved guilty, and are entitled to the best defense available, the attitude taken toward criminal lawyers is noteworthy.

Not only do the newspapers endeavor to convict the suspect before the trial is completed, but they try to stigmatize the defense lawyers as accessories after the fact to the crime charged.

Viewing the legal profession as a whole, the methods of prosecution and defense are identical. Neither side endeavors to ascertain the guilt or innocence of the object of the trial. The prosecution ignores facts that tend to prove innocense and endeavors to frame-up the victim with perjured testimony of policemen, bribed witnesses and other mercenaries. Tho the prosecution may know the victim innocent, if they have succeeded in getting someone in their clutches that has been involved in crime before, or, what is more frequently the case, has been a victim of the frame-up and the frightfulness of the police third degree, they will endeavor to secure a conviction. Their political future depends upon an imposing list of convictions, regardless of how they were achieved.

On the other hand, the defense attorneys, tho they know the person they defend is guilty of the crime charged, will use every available loophole to liberate him. Not infrequently the defense lawyers have served their apprenticeship in the delicate art of the frame-up as prosecuting attorneys.

In choosing the jury the legend prevails that they seek unbiased people—the peers of the suspected criminal. But instead of trying to secure unbiased jurors, each side endeavors by hook or crook to obtain stupid, mercenary individuals, who may favor their own side.

Thus is the whole procedure reduced to a farce; a lawyers' game in which the fate of the victim becomes a matter of no moment.

To ask the bar association to stop this procedure is to ask them to abandon their profession. Instead of an honored profession it reeks with all the class corruption of capitalism. Its impersonal view of crime is a fiction. Its dignity is belied by its truckling to the basest elements in society.

To rail against this sort of thng, while leaving the capitalist system intact is Quixotic. It is by such methods that the lawyers demonstrate their ability to the ruling class to serve its interests. Facts ascertained in an unbiased tribunal regarding those suspected of crime will determine the outcome of trial only in a society where the impelling motive will be defense of the social organism and not truckling to every prejudice of a ruling slave-owning class.

Speedy Recognition

Both the United States and Britain have "provisionally" recognized the week-old Persian government of Reza Khan. Such haste is unusual in dealing with new governments. Those who have held the notion that the new head of Persia is the tool of Britain will view this recognition as vindication of their ideas. Nothing, however, is farther from the truth.

Reza Khan is of the nationalist democratic group, which has worked and is working in close touch with Russia. He has the army and the overwhelming majority of the population behind him. Tho he is not definitely committed to continue a friendly attitude toward Russia, there is slight probability that he will desire to throw his power into the balance on the side of Great Britain. Unquestionably he will be offered flattering inducements to betray Persia into the hands of Britain and aid that bandit nation in its efforts to form a "sanitary cordon" around Russia.

The people of Persia are not likely soon to forget that it was the Bolshevik government that returned to them property and concessions (railroads, telegraphs, waterways, etc.) wrested from them by the czar; that cancelled the debts and renounced all other financial claims on Persia and enabled the country to rise economically.

Furthermore, in spite of the provisional recognition by Britain and America, the nationalist Persians and their leaders know that of all the nations Russia only guarantees their independence. When they view the international diplomacy of Russia, they see on every hand the sincere desire to liberate the nationals from the yoke of imperialism. When they look at the awful devastation wrought by Britain, France and the United States, they see imperialism in its most malignant form. And they should not have difficulty knowing which policy guarantees the perpetuity of their government.

Correct—for Once

It is seldom one finds anything to agree with in the weekly news service of the American Federation of Labor, but its issue of Saturday, October 31, contains an observation that we ourvelves emphasized in relation to the expulsion of Joseph Shafir from the Bank Clerks' Union. It states that the bank officials "oppose the union and seek means to justify their course."

Precisely!

The accusation is well put!

The bank officials welcomed the expulsion of Shafir because they were aware of the driving force for improving the conditions of labor in the bank. The Amalgamated Bank thus proves to all labor, the A. F. of L. as well as the Communists, that its policy is anti-labor. Tho it blames Shafir, instead of the other members of the union who voted his expulsion and who crawl before the officials of the bank, its interpretation of the motives of the bank is correct. We cannot accept its premises, but its conclusion is irrefutable. It says:

> "Shafir's policy brought joy to bank officials, who oppose the union and who seek means to justify their course."

Again we say, this is something that should claim the attention of the rank and file of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, who are placed in the same ridiculous position of encouraging scab labor as was that other labor banker, Mr. Warren S. Stone, when his financial interests demanded a scab policy in conducting his coal mines.

Mandates in Syria and Irak - A New Threat of World War

By H. M. Wicks

DESPITE the optimism disseminated by British and French statesmen over the outcome at Locarno, the French colonial war in Syria carries the unrest of another world war. If the revolt in Syria succeeds, the whole mandate policy of the league of nations falls. It not only means the loss of Syria to France, but also seriously endangers the English control over Irak. Thus it is to the interest of Britain to prevent the liberation of Syria as a league mandate. That does not necessarily mean that Britain will aid France to maintain control. On the contrary it is probable that Britain will endeavor to take advantage of the Syrian revolt to charge France with incompetency in the administration of the Syrian mandate.

The mandates themselves, instead of preventing war are the sources of new wars. This is plain as day when the imperialist forces that motivated the struggle to secure mandates are known. During the progress of the war when the entente powers were indulging in expression of the most exalted sentiments regarding the unselfish motives involved, the foundation for future conflicts were laid.

IN the struggle against Turkey, during the world war, there had to be an understanding between Britain and France concerning the spoils of a hoped-for-victory. In 1916, such a treaty was completed, under the terms of which France was granted Syria and a part of Mosul. Britain played one of its shrewd diplomatic games here when it magnanimously refrained from openly demanding anything for itself. All the material advantages were to go to poor suffering France, then bleeding under the sledge hammer blows of the German forces. England insisted that the balance of Arabia, with the exception of Palestine, come under the domination of Hussein. But one little reservation was made. This territory was to become a "sphere of influence" for England. Hussein was the agent of Britain.

When the war closed and the victorious nations met at Versailles, they were no longer heroic allies, but grasping imperialist thieves and plunderers, each striving to secure the larger part of the loot. Mr. Lloyd George, representing Britain, harbored no illusions regarding the mission of the entente to bring the millenium on earth. Among other advantages he secured for Great Britain the mandates for Palestine and Mesopotamia. In the first discussions he demanded all of Syria. This demand was made for purposes of negotiations and to give the appearance of diplomatic yielding to preserve the entente cordiale. It is sometimes necessary to abandon temporarily a desired advantage and find other means to obtain the same result.

ENGLAND has a very definite in relation to Palestine, Syria, Arabia and Irak. That is to so manipulate the mandates, to transfer the control of territories that it can realize the dream of British imperialism: a Cape to Cairo railway and extension of this to Calcutta, thus joining the continent of Africa with that of Asia. The rapid expansion of new markets of the east and the development of industrial capitalism in India, create this necessity for British imperialism.

France also has imperialist ambitions that come into conflict with Britain. The struggle over Mosul oil finds France backing the Turks against Britain. In Morocco both France and Britain furnished guns and ammunition to the Riffs to drive out Spain.

That accomplished there will begin a struggle for domination between the two nations. Already French troops are taking up the struggle that Spain was losing, in order that France may intrench itself in northwestern Africa, and exploit the mineral resources of that territory.

While Britain had a hand in the Riff affair there is nothing to indicate that the revolt in Syria was encouraged from that source. This movement originated thru the despicable frightfulness on the part of General Serrail, the representative of Herriot, and the left bloc, to throttle the Druse tribesmen, and inflamed into insurrection the smouldering hatred of the Syrians for the French conqueror. But now that the struggle has started England will endeavor to take advantage of it.

THE revolt of the Syrians constitutes a grave menace to British control over the mandated territory of Irak, and the British press is non-committal on the ruthlessness of the French. That is because Britain itself may be forced to step in and aid in crushing the revolt.

But it does not mean that France will continue to exercise the mandate of the league. The last assembly (sixth) of the league of nations was a British triumph. Britain ousted France from the domination of the league.

While British troops are heavily concentrated in Palestine, on the border of Syria, preparatory to invading the territory if the situation becomes menacing, it will also use the league machinery to prepare the way for eliminating France under the terms of the treaty of Versailles on the grounds that France is incapable of carrying out the mandate.

Tho these mandates are enforced for the benefit of given nations and by the favored nation, the nations are responsible to the league and theoretically are carrying them out as the representative of the league. In case any nation fails in carrying out its mandate, then the league can revoke it and place another nation in charge of the territory.

FRANCE is desperate in face of this menace and therefore, is using all the frightfulness of modern warfare to maintain control. The cabinet of Painleve and Briand is tolerated by all capitalist elements in France in spite of the currency crisis because they are united in the Syrian campaign by fear of Great Britain and the consequences of failure to maintain control.

Failure in the Syrian war will place France in the humiliating position of being forced by the league to abandon its mandate. The inevitable result of such an eventuality will be to place the mandate in the hands of Britain.

This humiliation will not be tolerated if France has enough vitality to resist, or if she can get the backing of American imperialism, itself waging economic war against Britain in every part of the world. Unquestionably Wall Street will come to the rescue of its investments in Europe and aid France, first with money and munitions and finally, with arms.

The mandates constitute a powder magazine and Syria may be the spark that will set it off with a detonation that will rock the world, causing a conflagration eclipsing anything mankind has ever witnessed.

Capitalism has shown great resourcefulness thus far in avoiding open breaks between the victors of the last war, but each of the threats becomes more difficult to overcome. With the colonials and the slaves of the mandated areas rising against imperialism, the period of diplomacy will merge into open warfare.

Nothing can prevent it except widespread colonial resistance, combined with the rise of the proletariat in the home countries.

Such a war will be the last imperialist war, and bring forcibly onto the stage of history the next wave of the world revolution, carried out thru civil wars against the capitalist class in every country.

Better Schools, Under Teachers' and Labor Control Demanded by Gitlow

THE following letter sent by Comrade Ben Gitlow, candidate for mayor in the recent election, to the Teachers' Union, is of sufficient importance in showing the position of Communists on the questions raised to merit publication:

Dr. Henry R. Linville, President
Teachers Union
70 Fifth Avenue, New York.

Dear Dr. Linville:

In answer to the request of the Teachers' Union for a reply to certain questions, I wish to express the stand of the Workers Party. My replies herewith are subscribed to by the other candidates of the Workers Party, to which you have sent your questionnaire. Kindly regard this answer, therefore, as the viewpoint of the Workers Party and its candidates.

You have asked the following questions:

1. Would you, as mayor, favor a fiscally independent board of education?

2. Would you endeavor to secure legislation to create an elected board of education?

3. Would you take steps to eliminate the influence of partisan politics in the administration of the public schools?

4. Would you strive to build up a merit system by which the educationally qualified would be promoted to the higher positions in the school system, without regard to the political, religious or racial connections of the applicants?

5. Would you, as mayor, favor the establishment of the Rio schedules for the salaries of New York City teachers based as the schedules are on the principle of attempting to restore the purchasing power of the pre-war dollar?

6. Would you, as mayor, stand unqualifiedly for a reduction in the size of classes, as well as for a radical change in the school building program whereby the continued erection of huge factory-like schools would be prevented?

7. Would you favor the representation of organized labor and of the teachers themselves, on the board of education?

FIRST of all, we wish to take this occasion to assure your organization of our support in your efforts to organize the teachers: to establish academic freedom for teachers. The Workers Party is wholeheartedly in accord with the Teachers' Union in its efforts to re-establish the standing of Glasberg and in its struggle against censorship legislation of the type of the Lusk law. We shall support you fully in your efforts to establish the right of the teacher to his own opinions, and his right to place before the pupils all the facts, particularly in the social sciences. We hope that the interest the Teachers' Union is taking in the issues of the present campaign, will ultimately grow to the point where you will demand the formation of a party in this city which will speak in the interests of the organized workers—a labor party. As employees of the state and city government, teachers should be the first to realize the importance of a political party serving their interests. This is particularly borne out by the recent experience of the teachers at the hands of both political parties in the last salary campaign, where the moderate demands of the teachers were brushed aside without proper consideration. Only when the teachers are represented by a party of labor, a labor party, can they hope to have their interests protected.

In spite of every assurance of respect due your organization, we feel that we cannot fully agree with all the proposals which you have put forward in your questionnaire.

WE favor an elected and paid board of education, with labor and teacher representation. Such a board should be fiscally independent, in our opinion. The addition of teacher and labor representation would afford the possibility of insuring the welfare of the teachers and of the children of the workers of the city, to a greater extend than under the present board consisting of business men and lawyers.

We cannot, however, agree with Mr. Waterman when he demands the elimination of partisan politics from the schools. We are heart and soul for "partisan politics" in the school, not the present corrupt system of politics in the control of big business but rather political control by labor, through its own chosen representatives. Masking under the guise of non-partisanship there are hidden the most insidious forces of the capitalist class, as typified by Mr. Waterman. As long as the present social system with its control of the schools and other agencies of education in the hands of the wealthy classes exists, there will be partisanship in favor of that ruling class.

MR. Waterman also favors the merit system for promotion to higher positions in the educational system. With this stand, again we cannot agree. Examinations and merit qualifications such as the established by the board of education and the civil service board do not preclude the possibility of the selection of a supervisory officer with a most backward social viewpoint. Such an officer has the power to do great harm to both the children and the teachers over whom he has control. In the selection of supervisory officials, we should favor a system of democratic selection, supervisors to be selected by the teachers themselves through a system of teachers' councils.

We are thoroughly opposed to the present type of school. We are for smaller classes, and the introduction of all features which have been incorporated in the modern experimental schools—experimental methods, free lunches, dental treatment, medical care and physical equipment which will conserve the health of the children and the teachers, and make for a more congenial environment in the schoolroom than we find at the present time.

We are thoroughly in favor of the revision of teachers' salaries to meet the increase in the cost of living. Since we feel that the present division of teachers on the basis of grade of class is unfair to both teacher and pupil, we would ask that any revision which is made, be proportionately greater for the lowest paid teachers, so as to lead ultimately to the establishment of the single salary schedule, under which teachers of all grades would be placed upon the same schedule, with proper reward for experience and study.

IT is the opinion of the Workers Party which I represent that organized labor and the teachers, the two groups most interested in the progress of education, can look for little improvement in the public school system under the capitalistic system of society. It is our belief that the only basis for any fundamental change in the system of education is the overthrow of the capitalist system and the substitution for it of a workers' and farmers' republic like that in Russia. Russia today, as conclusively substantiated by the British trade union report, is the only country which is attempting to establish an educational system which is intended to develop the capabilities of the children, not in the interests of an exploiting class, but on the contrary, to develop those latent forces of childhood to further the interests of the working class and to promote the welfare of society as a whole.

If you desire to confer with me on the subjects mentioned, I shall be glad to meet your committee on Saturday. I suggest that you call up this number, if you desire to make an appointment.

Fraternally yours,
(signed) Benjamin Gitlow,
Candidate for mayor on the Workers Party ticket.

DOBROGIANU TELLS OF HORRIBLE PRISON CONDITIONS AGAINST WHICH GOLDSTEIN WENT ON HUNGER-STRIKE

By A. DOBROGIANU.

I made the acquaintance of Max Goldstein at the time of the first great Communist trial—in the so-called "trial of Deabul Spiral."

On the eve of the opening of the trial, we, the defendants, were transferred from Gilewa and Vacaresti to some barracks in Bukharest. Most of the arrests were made in the first half of 1920 thruout Roumania.

According to the state of the socialist movement then, the various groups of the arrested comrades were organizationally connected with each other. Moreover, most of the participants of the legal socialist congress of May, 1920, were also arrested because they voted for adherence to the Communist International.

The bourgeoisie scented its real enemy, who, in spite of all his "infantile diseases," is destined to overthrow it. Apart from justifiable feelings of hostility towards the newly formed Communist Party not a single punishable offense could be proved. The trial was postponed from month to month.

Goldstein Arrested.

Then came an unexpected incident. Max Goldstein was arrested while attempting to enter the country. Altho the investigation of our cases was already closed, the military prosecutor connected it with the senate-outrage. There was no legal connection whatever between these acts, but this was merely a detail for the authorities; the government and the military command could thereby get out of an unpleasant situation.

Thus at the end of January began the trial of the 275 accused, which was to last six months.

We were put up in four large adjoining barrack rooms, but Max Goldstein, whom all of us were anxious to see, was not allowed to come among us. All our inquiries remained without an answer. It was only known that he had been removed from the cell where he was kept in Vacaresti.

In the early morning accompanied only by the officer on guard Max Goldstein was brot to the lavoratory separate from us. He made signs to us thru the windows; he had been beaten during the night. During the trial he was brot into our department. The department of those charged with serious offences. Henceforth we "lived" together in the room of the 44 charged with serious offenses.

Use Terror Regime.

To intimidate us and to make our defense more difficult or even impossible we were subjected to a severe terror-regime. We were even deprived of writing material, and in court the barrels of three machine guns were levelled at us. But threats were not enough for the authorities. Ill-treatment and torture were resorted to. But the worst were the punishment cells. Seven coffins standing upright, provided with a small window, among them the so-called "Max-punishment cell."

This cell was specially constructed for Max Goldstein, it was even smaller than the others, altho Max Goldstein is of a powerful build. It was even impossible to turn round in these cells. The first time I was in it I found after the first half hour that I could not breathe, and I had an attack of incessant yawning.

One did not wait for reasons or even pretexts for punishment. In the evening the comrades who were to be punished were fetched according to a list drawn up by the military prosecutor. There were among them those whose parents had found the sums of money demanded too high and had not come to terms with him. A beginning was made with Bessarabian comrades and they did not even scruple to shut two young women comrades into one punishment cell, by slamming the door of the cell. They were left for a whole hour in this terrible position.

MAX GOLDSTEIN

Await Sentence in Torture Cells.

But generally comrades are condemned to days and days in the punishment cells before sentence has been passed on them. Comrade Max Goldstein was without much ado condemned to ten days in the punishment cell—ten awful days and nights, taken out of the punishment cell to be dragged to court, and from there back again into the cell. How terrible the waiting for the moment when one will be able to leave the cell for a little while. How cruelly slow seems the time when one is waiting to get out for a little fresh air. But the officers were waiting for Comrade Max Goldstein outside the punishment cell door (called coffin lid). As soon as he came out they began to box his ears, to beat him, they threw him on the ground and they kicked him. And directly after this "evening roll call"—back again into the punishment cell. If he protested the hangman-sergeant (who subsequently shot Comrade Filipeneu) thrust a stick thru the aperture and hit out blindly striking the head, the nose and the jaws. After he had served ten days he was given another ten days of which, however, five were remitted.

Beat Goldstein Daily.

Dead tired, tortured, in chains, beaten black and blue in the face and his feet terribly swollen, our comrade was dragged every day before the military court. But he did not flinch before any torture, he was brave, he accused the ministers who had come to give evidence against him (among others Argettorianu, today an ally of the peasant party) of being the cause of the vengeance of the working class whose instrument Max Goldstein considers himself to be.

And, in fact, he was not more than that. I knew this man well whom the bourgeoisie represents as a blood-thirsty anarchist—so good natured and sensitive. He was full of sympathy and solidarity with the sufferings of other comrades, always bent on establishing the truth against the attempts of the intelligence department to represent the Communist Party as a participant in the outrage.

He took part wholeheartedly in our struggles, and it was with extreme difficulty that we could persuade him not to join our hunger strike after the tortures he had undergone in the coffin cell for nearly a fortnight.

Try to Punish Him Morally.

The hangman wanted to punish him morally as well as physically. They warned me, for instance, not to play chess with him, which of course, was an incentive to me to play chess with him oftener than before.

Frequently, when the comrades were asleep, Max Goldstein was awake and thinking of the dark future before him. Being a thoroly sentimental creature, he was overwhelmed by feelings of love for his relatives, and in his weak moments I heard him sob and turn round on his bed. He told me: "It is true that I have a hard time of it now, but how will it be in Doftata?"

Labor Fakers Made Butts of Ridicule by Needle Workers

By A Worker Correspondent

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 8.—How reactionary union officials try to get control of meetings, called to discuss and protest against their betrayals of the workers, while at their own union meetings they not only limit the discussion but deny the floor to progressives, was demonstrated at this week's meeting of the needle trades workers, when Sister Ida Rothstein spoke to a tightly packed audience at the Labor Lyceum.

That her address was effective was proved by the fact that a number of officials of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers were present and got themselves thoroly ridiculed by the rank and filers.

Several of them spoke for as many as ten, fifteen or twenty minutes each. Later, they were seen slipping out of the hall when Sister Rothstein replied to their slanderous twaddle. She pointed out how she herself had been denied the floor at their meetings.

GITLOW TAKEN BACK TO PRISON

By M. SPIVAK.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 9.—This date must be recorded in the history of the Furrier's Union as an awakening of the rank and file at large against their own leaders and oppressors. On this date, November 9, a special convention will take place by the demand of thousands of fur workers at the historical Cooper Union meeting of April 25, who voiced their protest against the reactionary and despotic rulers of the International administration and its official so-called labor organ, the Forward.

The delegates at the convention will have to be forced to exert every effort to succeed in carrying out the orders and the demands of the workers whom they represent. At the recent conventions the majority of delegates consisted of reactionaries and machine boys who did not care for the interest of the workers at all, personal enjoyments were of greater interest to them than to bother with drafting new plans, participating in the discussions amending the constitution, adopting resolutions and helping to reconstruct our union on a new and solid foundation.

For many the call of a convention was not clear enuf and the ordinary worker delegate who was elected to the convention unexpectedly, got lost there. The politicians and their adjuncts immediately got him over to their side, making a tool of him for themselves.

How many delegates at the last convention of 1924 understood the intricate language of the amended constitution which they adopted by giving their votes?

The president was given more power by his clique than the sultan of Turkey. It was the president who hired a lawyer to amend the constitution and by his orders the amended constitution was adopted without giving a copy of the amended articles to the delegates to read and discuss.

A Fine Piece of Reaction.

Here is an extract of the intricate language of the amended constitution which was not put to a referendum vote of local unions for adoption:

"Article 21: Section 7: Any conduct which shall tend to undermine the solidarity of members, or to foster dissension among the members or shall otherwise be injurious to the interests of this union, or of any of its members or injurious to any other bonafide labor organizations or to the labor movement in general, and any conduct unbecoming a member of this organization shall be considered a violation of this constitution. To slander the union or its officers or to call or actively participate in unauthorized protest meetings against the union or its officers or to join an organization that is hostile to our union shall be considered a violation of this constitution."

Its Interpretation.

The following is the interpretation into ordinary working men's jargon:

"Any conduct which may be interpreted by reactionary officials as undermining the solidarity of the members or to create indignation among the members which may be injurious to the interest of this union, etc., shall be considered a violation of this con-

NEW YORK LABOR AWAITS PURCELL MASS MEETINGS

Toilers to Hear Speech on World Unity

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—The workers of New York City are impatiently awaiting the day of the two big meetings that are to be held in the Central House and the New Star Casino, at which Albert A. Purcell, president International Federation of Trade Unions and standard bearer of the British labor movement, will speak on the necessity of organizing on an international scale to combat the encroachments of the capitalist class. The date set is Tuesday, Nov. 17.

In contrast with class collaboration policy followed at the Atlantic City convention of the American Federation of Labor, Mr. Purcell stood as a stalwart enemy of capitalism. It was Purcell who introduced the following resolution on imperialism at the recent congress of the British trade unions at Scarborough:

"This Congress believes that the domination of non-British peoples by the British government is a form of capitalist exploitation, having for its object the securing for British capitalists (1) of cheap sources of raw materials: (2) the right to exploit cheap and unorganized labor, and to use the competition of that labor to degrade the workers' standards in Great Britain.

"It declares its complete opposition to imperialism and resolves: (1) to support the workers in all parts of the British empire to organize trade unions and political parties in order to further their interest: and (2) to support the right of all peoples in the British empire to self-determination, including the right to choose complete separation from the empire."

The trade union committee for organizing the Purcell meeting has announced that its next conference will be held on Sunday, November 15th, at 3 p. m. at Beethoven Hall, to take the final steps for the two big mass meetings.

DATES GIVEN PURCELL ON TOUR THRU THE U. S. AND CANADIAN CITIES

The trade union committee arranging the Purcell tour has announced the following dates for his speeches in several cities of the United States and Canada:

Cleveland, Ohio, Nov. 10, at 8 p. m., at the Engineers' Auditorium, corner Ontario and St. Clair.

Toronto, Canada, Nov. 11, at 8 p. m. at Central Labor Union.

Montreal, Canada, Nov. 13, at 8 p. m. at Central Labor Union.

New York City, Nov. 17, evening, at the New Star Casino.

CZAR KELLOGG AGAIN DENIES KAROLYI VISA

Promises to Tell Why Countess Is Menace

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 9.—The state department has refused to grant a renewed request of Countess Karolyi, wife of the former president of the Hungarian republic, for admission to the United States.

James F. Curtis of the law firm of Curtis, Fosdick and Belknap, laid the request before Secretary Kellogg. The firm had been retained by the countess.

COOLIDGE STILL RELIES ON LEWIS AND HUNGER TO BREAK THE STRIKE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Another appeal for presidential intervention in the hard coal strike was rejected today by President Coolidge.

Congresswoman Edith F. Rogers, republican of Massachusetts, presented a gloomy view of the New England fuel situation at the White House this morning, and asked the president to appoint an "impartial board of inquiry" to investigate and try to end the strike, but admitted that she received little encouragement. President Coolidge, was of the opinion, she said, that a federal board would not be of much help at present.

GARMENT STRIKE VICTORS RETURN TO THEIR JOBS

19-Weeks' Struggle of Amalgamated Ends

Yesterday morning [illegible] strikers entered the building of the International Tailoring company, 847 West Jackson Blvd., for the first time in 19 weeks. Production will not really start in the plant until next week, as the company has to dismantle the machinery it has in the Moline and Rock Island plants and bring it back to Chicago.

The workers entered the factory not as individuals beaten in their struggle, but as a group of workers, knowing that they had beaten the company, and that their fight was not only a fight of those employed in the International Tailoring company, but a fight of the entire union. This attempt on the part of the bosses to introduce the open shop into the clothing industry, by first destroying the union, turned out a complete failure, due to the solidarity of the strikers.

Refuse to Sign Agreement

When the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union made their demands upon the International Tailoring company to renew agreements with the union, the bosses refused to deal with the Amalgamated and the union members then declared a strike and demanded that the company sign the agreement and recognize the union.

The company officials immediately got in touch with the scabbing agency in the garment trades, the United Garment Workers of America affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, made an agreement with it and tried to operate the plant.

Try to Get Injunctions

Amalgamated pickets were thrown around the shop, telling workers who

FRENCH FINANCE IN AWFUL MESS AND GETS WORSE

Painleve Bill Would Add to Inflation

PARIS, Nov. 9.—The finance bill introduced by Premier Painleve, met with serious opposition as soon as it was examined. There is nothing in it of a levy on capital as demanded by the left.

The bill lays taxes, however, against every conceivable object in an effort to dodge a levy on capital so much hated by capitalists, but it angers these sensitive gentlefolk by an increase on incomes.

Moreover, there is concealed in the bill an intention to inflate the currency. This inflation has gone so far that already the franc reached 25.40 to the dollar. The statement of the Bank of France shows that during the past week note circulation went up by 1,333,000,000 francs, making a total circulation slightly over 48,000,000,000, and only 3,000,000,000 under the legal limit.

Advances to the government by the bank, to furnish funds for carrying on the wars in Syria and Morocco totalled 1,450,000,000 francs last week, bringing this to within 600,000,000 of the 32,000,000,000 limit legally set.

As the franc declined, holders rushed into the bourse and swamped it with orders for buying industrial stocks.

I. W. W. OPENS 17TH GENERAL CONVENTION

Regular Organization Survives the Split

The 17th general convention of the Industrial Workers of the World (I. W. W.) opened Monday at 10 a. m. at the headquarters 3333 Belmont Ave.

The organization has survived the attack of the so-called emergency split carried on during the past year by anarchistic elements who were expelled for appealing to the capitalist courts in Chicago to get control of the organization headquarters which they caused to be padlocked by the sheriff.

Split Joins Anarchist International.

This "emergency program" split claims to be the I. W. W. and affiliated with the Anarchist Internationa of Berlin at its convention held in July at Odgen, Utah. But the split while it took 3,000 to 4,000 out of the I. W. W. at first and caused a great falling away of confused and discouraged members, has steadily gone down, and its membership is so small at present that the anarchist leaders of it conceal its real standing by concealing financial accounts of dues and initiations. The split is estimated to have at present only from 1,000 to 1,500 members. The damage done to union organization and a solid front against the bosses in the lumber and construction industries is, however, incalculable.

Few Delegates Attend.

This internal war accounts in part for the declining membership of the legitimate organization, and the ruinous financial system based upon extremely low dues and cutting in two of the per capita paid to the general organization, have conspired to bring only a handful of delegates, 12 in all, to represent the approximately 16,000 members shown by dues payments to the industrial unions. This number permits of nearly 80 delegates.

The 1924 convention represented some 30,000 members, and the 1923 convention a little over 38,000. Thus it appears that altho the organization has survived the anarchist attack, it is greatly weakened in numbers, and some of its tactics may be held accountable for the losses which preceeded the split.

Problems to be Discussed.

Considerable time of the convention will be devoted, it is expected, to discussions of some of the tactics, and to the revamping of the financial system, hereto applied universally without regard for the special requirments of the various industrial unions, to allow for these unions to set their own initiations and dues fees to conform with the conditions they face in their particular industry.

According to reports preceding the gathering of the delegates the twelve to be seated are as follows: Agricultural Workers No. 110, three delegates, O'Neill, Thorpe and Foster (J. B. Foster); Lumber Workers' No. 120, one delegate, Frank Whiting; Metal Miners, one delegate, Paul Lundgard; General Construction No. 310, two delegates, T. P. Kelley and James V. O'Conner; Building Construction No. 330, two delegates, Joe Wagner and John Kiviniemi; Marine Transport No. 510, one delegate, Francezan; and from the combined small industrial unions, two delegates, Minkoff and Lamson.

In the rules committee's report was a recommendation usually voted down in other conventions, to exclude all but holders of I. W. W. cards from visiting the convention, this including reporters for both capitalist and labor papers. This convention also voted against the motion after some discussion over the matter of excluding only such papers as would print reports that displeased the delegates.

WASTE OF HUMAN LIFE FOR GAIN OF CAPITALIST PROFITS SHOWN BY DEATH LIST IN ANTHRACITE

That capitalist production wastes not only materials but human life, slaughtering and crippling workers for sake of profit, is illustrated in this article, one of a series, by Alex Reid, secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee, who recently was released from jail at Scranton, Pa., where the capitalist dictatorship confined him when he wished to speak to striking anthracite miners.

• • • •

By ALEX REID,

Secretary Progressive Miners' Committee.

(Article VII.)

The terrible suffering of hard coal miners, their wives and families, is but one phase of the anthracite question. An enormous industrial waste is involved thru loss of time, which is represented in the increased cost of anthracite, but which touches lightly—if at all—the profits of the coal owners, as we shall see in a succeeding article dealing with the coal magnates' monumental profits.

Four million labor days a year are lost to 150,000 mine workers thru accidents, fatal and of lesser degree. Three hundred and thirty-four thousand days each month, because of those accidents. Each man in the industry loses twenty-five days on an average per year as a result of injury sustained in the anthracite industry.

Lie Factories Busy.

The coal owners thru their publicity agents, and the capitalist press, have continuously stated since the beginning of the strike that the anthracite industry is a safe place to work in—similar to clerking in a department store or employment of a similar nature, in spite of the easily available statistics that give the lie to such a canard, and in spite of the wails of hungry children and woe of

MUST SERVE THE REST OF 5 TO 10 YEAR SENTENCE

First Released After 27 Months Behind Bars

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—Benjamin Gitlow, member of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party and candidate for vice-president of the Workers (Communist) Party in the presidential elections of 1924, has been taken to Sing Sing prison to serve the unexpired portion of his term.

Gitlow was sentenced to a term of from 5 to 10 years for violation of the New York criminal syndicalist law in the court of Judge Weeks in New York City, January, 1920. This verdict was later upheld by the state supreme court and finally by the United States supreme court.

Gitlow had been arrested in Nov. 1919 for his participation in the organization of the left wing movement in the socialist party and for the publication of the "Left Wing Manifesto," which was issue by the central committee of the left wing group.

His trial before Judge Weeks shortly followed his arrest. In this court the judge made no attempt to hide his bias against Gitlow and passed the sentence of from 5 to 10 years with great glee.

Serves 27 Months in Prison

After he had served twenty-seven months of his sentence, Gitlow was released on appeal to the New York state supreme court on May 1, 1922. The state supreme court upheld the verdict of the lower court and Gitlow was remanded to Sing Sing in the month of September.

Gitlow was released from Sing Sing on a writ of error, January, 1923, and the case was appealed to the United States supreme court. The United States supreme court upheld the constitutionality of the New York criminal syndicalist act and the verdict of the New York court and has now ordered Gitlow to serve the unexpired portion of his term.

The International Labor Defense is conducting a campaign for the release of Comrade Gitlow.

SPEECH ASSAILING HIM AS PROTECTOR OF BOOTLEGGERS SENT CAL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

Chicago, Nov. 9—The speech of Governor Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania before the convention of the anti-saloon league of America, in which he accused the Coolidge administration of sanctioning wholesale bootlegging by issuing dishonest permits at Washington, will be sent direct to Coolidge.

A resolution to this effect was passed unanimously today by the resolutions committee of the league. Support of the league is alleged to come from bootleggers who want to keep the Volstead act in effect so their business will be good, and the whole program of the thing is considered mere camouflage. The Pinchot speech will have little effect on the government bootleggers.

MINERS OF COKE REGION BEGIN STRIKE AGAINST THE WAGE CUT IN FORCE WITH THE 1917 SCALE

By GEORGE PAPCUN.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 9.—The unorganized miners of the coke region at Republic, Pa., have begun a revolt against wage cuts. Thompson mine No. 1, is on strike. Miners in other pits are coming out also.

A strike committee of action is being formed. The Young Workers League and the Workers (Communist) Party are assisting the strikers. B. L. Junic spoke at the meeting of striking miners on Nov. 7, George Papcun addressed the strikers Saturday.

The strike demands are for the 1923 scale and better working conditions. The strike committee is trying to pull out other mines with great prospects of success. George Papcun is in the field helping to conduct the strike.

The wage cut is being effected by forcing the miners to accept the 1917 wage scale.

DETROIT LABOR HEARS PURCELL PLEA FOR UNITY

Five-Minute Ovation Is Given Speaker

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Nov. 9.—Two thousand Detroit workers enthusiastically received the message of world trade union unity given by A. A. Purcell, president of the International Federation of Trade Unions, at the Cass Technical High School, Sunday, Nov. 8th, 1925.

The mass meeting, which was well attended by the trade unionists of this city was arranged as the first mass meeting of the Detroit Labor Forum, which was organized under the auspices of the Detroit Federation of Labor.

After Purcell had concluded his appeal for unity on the economic field of all workers regardless of whether they were red, black, brown or white, the assembled workers stood up as one man and gave him an ovation that lasted for over five minutes.

During his appeal, every reference to the attempt of the British workers to have the Amsterdam Federation of Trade Unions come into closer alliance with the 6,000,000 organized workers of Soviet Russia was most enthusiastically received.

Sister Bares Wretched Life of "Human Husk" in Effort to Save Father

LITTLETON, Colo., Nov. 9 — A large court crowd sobbed sympathetically as the daughter of Dr. Blazer on trial for the murder of his 34-year-old daughter, Hazel, known as the "human husk" told the tale of the most astounding devotion her father poured on the "helpless creature" whom he slew to save her from further misery after his own death.

"Her body was terribly twisted," the sister continued. "She couldn't walk, couldn't feed herself, and was not able even to brush a fly from her face. The noises she made were animal-like and frightened strangers. The sight of her eating was so revolting I couldn't bear to watch her.

"For thirty-four years father poured on her the utmost devotion, love and care."

The defense pleads that the death of Dr. Blazer's wife resulted in a morbid and despondent condition of mind in the physician which later resulted in insanity. Witnesses brot in by the defense told that Dr. Blazer was "cheerful and happy before his wife died, but depressed and unreconciled afterwards, often wandering around in an apparent daze."

GOOD NEWS!

For Daily Worker Readers

Wm. F. Dunne, editor of The DAILY WORKER, goes to the anthracite coal fields next week to stay for two weeks.

About Wednesday, Nov. 11, daily stories will appear analyzing the situation in this scene of bitter struggle, bringing to workers the conditions existing there, supplementing the series of articles now running written by Alex Reid, secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee.

The strike now in progress; living conditions; the trade unions; the betrayals of the workers by the officialdom; the police and the courts.

This picture of the struggles of miners, written by an outstanding writer of the American revolutionary movement, should receive the widest distribution.

Strike Victors Return to Jobs

were looking for work of the strike existing in the plant. The company unable to get competent workers thru the United Garment Workers' Union, which carried extensive advertising in the daily papers for workers on men's clothing and used its headquarters as an employment agency for the bosses, then attempted to get an injunction prohibiting picketing of their plant..

After a number of continuances, Judge Pam issued an injunction which was ambiguous in its wording and claimed to prohibit certain forms of picketing. It did not define what kind of picketing was legal and what was illegal. The injunction was nothing but a scrap of paper. It did not affect the union picket lines in the least. A few arrests were made for violations of the injunction, but as yet the cases have not even had a date set for their hearing.

Terrorize Union Pickets

The company unable to break the picket line thru the injunction process then began a campaign of terrorisation of the strikers. Pickets were beaten up and flivver squads would whick them away to cells, where after being held a number of hours and sometimes over night they would be released on charges of "disorderly" conduct. Many were arrested and held on conspiracy charges on high amounts of bail.

Homes of strikers were raided in the small hours of the morning. Strikers were pulled out of bed, brot to the detective bureau, there they were subjected to a grilling and later released on charges of disorderly conduct or no charges against them.

When these arrests and acts meant to frighten the union pickets went by unheeded, and instead of destroying the morale of the strikers, it strengthened their solidarity, the company began to "frame" the active pickets in the strike.

Company hirelings would throw bricks thru the windows of the homes in which the scabs, members of the United Garment Workers' Union, lived, and then blame this on to the union pickets.

The union headquarters were raided and a number of union officials arrested.

Every week of the strike was filled with acts of terrorization of the pickets. Recently, a number of union business agents were arrested and one of the business agents had four shots pumped into his leg, when an "acid bomb" was purported tohave been thrown at the scabs. The "acid bomb" was later revealed to be nothing more than a bottle of citrate of magnesia accidentally dropped by a passer-by. This "bomb" which was supposed to have been capable of disfiguring scabs, was nothing more than a mild laxative, but the union agents are still on bail awaiting the date to be set for their trial.

Another "Frame-Up."

A few days after the "bomb" throwing, an explosion occurred at the home of Raymond Reeder, one of the heads of the Chicago office of the International Tailoring company. This was blamed on the union. Upon investigation it was learned that Raymond Reeder was about to leave his home and go to Rock Island, where the company had moved some of its machinery and was attempting to recruit scabs to operate the plant. Suspicions then became quite strong that hirelings in the employ of company officials had placed the bomb and that the company would make a move to have some strike pickets arrested and charged with throwing the bomb.

Immediately following the throwing of the bomb, a truckload of parcel post, that was being brought to the postoffice, was burned under mysterious circumstances in broad daylight. Every truck and automobile that left the shop whether it had parcels or scabs always had a couple of policemen detailed to guard it. These policemen were armed and very quick to use their guns as was shown in the "acid bomb" throwing. This time there was no police guarding the truck.

Within a few hours of the destruction by fire of this truckload of parcel post, the capitalist press had stories in which the company officials charged the union with this act. This was scored as an attempt on the part of the company to have the federal detectives interfere with the union's conduct of the strike.

Use "Union" Scabs

The company attempted to run the plant in Chicago with scabs belonging to the United Garment Workers' Union, but did not succeed. Most of the help was incompentent and the company lost heavily in orders.

The company also tried to operate factories in Rock Island and in Moline. They leased a number of large factories and began to send some of their machinery to these places. They carried on an intensive propaganda in these sections in an attempt to get workers. All they were able to recruit was less than 100 in both places and they had reckoned on 1,000 to 2,000 workers. The workers in these towns refused to scab. The company's attempt to run away from the union and the strike met with defeat.

Federation of Labor "Support"

During the early part of the strike, a machinist local in Chicago introduced a resolution into the Chicago Federation of Labor pointing out that the Amalgamated was on strike and that the United Garment Workers of America were in the plant scabbing on workers who were on strike and using the name of the American Federation of Labor in an attempt to make it appear as tho there was no labor trouble in the plant. The resolution called upon the Chicago Federation to go on record as desiring the affiliation of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers to the American Federation of Labor and calling upon President William Green of the American Federation of Labor to investigate and take steps to bring the name of the federation out of the disrepute into which the United Garment Workers of America was placing it. This resolution was referred to the executive committee, where it was accepted and then brought before the Chicago Federation of Labor with recommendations that it be adopted. The resolution was unanimously adopted by the Chicago Federation of Labor. It was signed by Fitzpatrick and Nockels as heads of the Chicago Federation and sent to William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor. In a short time a letter arrived from President Green telling Fitzpatrick that the Amalgamated was considered a dual union and that it was the duty of the Chicago Federation to support the United Garment Workers of America.

Fitzpatrick Forgets Strikers

Instead of carrying on a battle against the use to which a section of the American Federation of Labor was being put, Fitzpatrick acquiesced to Green's viewpoint in his attempt to remain "respectable" in the American Federation of Labor. He came out in a statement accepting the line laid down by William Green.

But, despite this alliance of the bosses and the reactionary and self-styled progressives of the Chicago Federation of Labor, the strikers carried on their strike to a successful termination.

The strikers received a great deal of support from many of the other locals in the Amalgamated. Many locals levied a special assessment in order to aid the strikers.

Militancy Wins Strike.

The strike has been won due to the militant spirit of the 800 workers who went on strike. It was their spirit of self-sacrifice and their solidarity that won the strike and forced the International Tailoring company, which attempted thru this strike to break the power of the union, to come to terms. As long as the members of the union remain alive to their rights and their interests just so long will they be able to win and force their masters to fear them.

GREEK FURRIERS OF NEW YORK IN STRIKE VICTORY

Win Under Leadership of the Left Wing

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—Over forty of the largest Greek shops have acceded to the demands of the workers who have been recently organized into the Furriers' Union. The struggle for union conditions has been started many weeks ago.

The executive board of the Furriers' Union under the left wing leadership of Ben Gold, had concentrated its energies to organize the Greek workers in the fur industry.

The struggle started in one or two shops. Later on the struggle was spread in all the Greek shops. The Greek workers men and women carried on a bitter struggle with such a spirit that experienced trade union fighters were surprised. The Greek bosses tried to spread dissension in the ranks of the workers and were telling the workers that they have become the "victims" of the Jews and the Jewish propaganda.

Forty Big Shops Surrender

This and other similar arguments did not have any effect on the workers. It made them fight more bitterly. The bosses did not want to give in to the demands of the workers, but after several conferences with the union officials they at last agreed, and forty of the owners of the largest fur shops have accepted the demands of the workers and signed the agreement with the union.

On Thursday Nov. 5, early in the morning the union representatives were negotiating with the Greek bosses in the Martinique Hotel. Many workers were waiting outside the hotel to learn the results of the negotiations.

Celebrate With Special Ceremony

After the signing of the agreement the news was given to the workers who have been waiting there, and about 1500 Greek workers marched over to Bryant Hall at 42nd St., and 6th Ave., with banners and signs in Greek and English. From there a parade started thru the streets of New York.

The workers were enthusiastic when copies of the special edition of The DAILY WORKER printed in Greek and English were distributed at their mass meeting on Wednesday and at the parade celebrating their victory over the bosses.

New Jersey Carpenters, Hit by Coal Strike, Plead With Capitalist Agents

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, Governor Silzer of New Jersey, one of the states hard hit by the anthracite strike, announces that he will not call the legislature into special session to discuss the problem raised by a freezing populace living only a few miles from the hard coal fields.

Governor Silzer finds his excuse for failure to act in the same declaration that is used by every crooked capitalist politician. The governor claims that during the last three years he has tried to get the legislature to act on the fuel question, but that he has failed, adding that "no relief might be expected as long as the voters did nothing to compel respect of their wishes and consideration of their welfare."

• • • •

If the republican and democratic members of the state legislature were questioned, they would reply that it was the fault of the governor. Go a little further, the democrats would blame the republicans, and vice versa, the republicans the democrats. It is the old "pass the buck" game of capitalist politics that has a staunch ally and vindicator in the nonpartisan policy of the American Federation of Labor. Responsibility is passed back and forth until the muddled worker doesn't know where he is at, that is, unless he has decided to completely break with the old parties and carry on his political struggle on a class basis.

• • • •

It is interesting to note that the demand on the governor for a special session of the state legislature was made by the Perth Amboy, N. J., Local Union of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America. This carpenters' union pleaded that the legislature take "such steps as may be necessary to protect the public against extortioners who, thru their action, are endangering the lives of the workers and their families."

• • • •

Here is an example of where the "nonpartisan," class-collaborating politics of the A. F. of L. leads. Workers protest to the capitalist politicians, whom they have elected. The political henchmen of the profiteers reply, in the words of Governor Silzer, that:

> "If the people would only wake up and assert themselves, our reluctant legislators, state and federal, would be forced to respond to the wishes of the people, but so long as the voters do nothing we cannot expect relief."

• • • •

The indications are that the workers are awake. The protest of the Perth Amboy carpenters is testimony to that. The great strikes in the silk and textile mills of the state is added evidence.

The trouble is, however, that the workers have not yet learned to act as a class. First knowledge in this direction would reveal itself in the organization of a powerful state labor party, based upon the trade unions, that would send labor's own representatives into the state legislature and there raise and fight for working class issues. Governor's Silzer's declaration is a challenge to New Jersey labor to proceed in that direction. The challenge must be accepted.

• • • •

But if the workers really wake up, as they will when they enter actively and energetically into the class struggle with their oppressors, they will find that even labor legislators in New Jersey's capitol at Trenton cannot overcome the enemy, entrenched in the anthracite coal fields as in all the nation's great industries. They will find that the municipal councils, the state legislatures, the national congress are but the instruments of the capitalist class; that the capitalist state must be abolished, and the Soviet state of the workers and farmers established before "the endangering of the lives of the workers and their families," complained of by the Perth Amboy carpenters, will come to an end. The capitalist state lives for profits. Soviet rule, having abolished profits, will protect the interests of all thru the Communist social order. Capitalism must give way to Communism.

widowed women thruout the anthracite.

Every fourth man killed in the state of Pennsylvania, is an anthracite mine worker, yet they comprise only 158,000 workers out of a total of 3,000,000 in that state. One-fourth of all days lost thru accidents in the whole of the state are lost to the antracite mine workers, which is more than any other industry including steel. Here indeed, is a problem for some of our so-called efficiency engineers and industrial experts.

Three Times British Death Rate.

In the United States today with all its scientific and industrial progress, the mine workers are being killed three times faster than the mine workers in Great Britain. With the only available figures at hand for the last three years, we find that for every 100 miners killed in Great Britain, we have killed 322 the first year, the next year 332 and the next 367. Alarming figures indeed, 367 miners killed here, as against 100 in Great Britain.

The progressive hard coal miners in Pennsylvania know that the union demand of ten per cent increase in wages, even if granted, can never adequately compensate them for their work or risk in those slaughter houses of the anthracite. They know it is not a question of ten per cent, it is not a question of dollars and cents, it is a question of human values—human life itself, and the progressive the miners refuse to place their lives the lives and happiness of their wives and children on the scales to be weighed against a dollar cost of coal production.

Lives Versus Dollars.

This dollar and cent cost for coal production, and cost to consumer is continuously dangled before the eyes of the public; with the figures manipulated in such a way as to convince the uninitiated of their accuracy and mislead the "dear people" in the hope public sympathy will be turned against the miners and in favor of the operators.

In spite of all the coal owners' propaganda the facts will not down. Investigators have at various times reported steady and phenomenal increase of earnings by the hard coal owners thruout the last five years. While their profits have been increasing, the cost of living mounting ever higher, the value of the dollar ever decreasing, the hard coal slaves find themselves at the bottom of the ladder in misery and want.

Who Gets the Surplus?

The United States coal commission, commented upon the tremendous spread between the cost of mining a ton of coal and the cost of that coal at the consumer's cellar.

Governor Pinchot, at the 1923 settlement of the anthracite strike, found the margins of profits had increased three and one-half times over the pre-war margins. Those same profits have increased during the last two years, and set at naught the propaganda lie of bankruptcy of the industry.

Their "Legal Owners."

The United States coal commission said in its report of July 5, 1923, "That these limited and exhaustible natural deposits have been in the absolute private possession of their legal owners, to be developed or withheld at will, to be leased for such royalties as could be exacted, to be distributed at such rates and in such manner as a double-headed railroad and cost combination might find most advantageous from the point of view of private profit."

The coal commission found royalties as high as two dollars and eighty-four cents per ton, or more than half of the wage cost. In 1922, the royalties from coal lands owned by the Girard estate amounted to $1.20 a ton and brot a return of $18,980,000 on an original investment of $2,340.

Some Figures on Cost.

The following figures will interest the workers, who are likewise consumers of anthracite.

One ton of hard coal:
Labor cost, $4.05.
Total mine cost, $6.52.
Mine price, $6.27.
Freight, $4.48.
Retail price, $16.00.

The reader will notice he paid four times the labor cost for his ton of coal, and in many cities today is paying $24 per ton, or six times the labor co[illegible]

stitution. If a member belongs to the Trade Union Educational League or Workers Party which is considered by the manufacturers of the amended constitution as hostile organizations, he shall be considered a violator of this constitution. If a member is protesting against the beating of members at local meetings or in the office of the union or against the corrupting system of issuing books by the respective executive boards, he may be considered a violator of this constitution, and be fined, suspended or expelled. (Section 8).

The progressive and class conscientious delegates must fight against this paragraph as well as many other amendments, which will be undoubtedly discussed at the convention.

The following matters must be taken up and adopted at the convention:

Measures Considered.

1. Recognition of Soviet Russia.
2. Free speech, criticism, protest of members against wrong actions of officials or officers of the union, either on the floor or in the press, shall not be considered a violation of the constitution.
3. No paid official shall remain in office more than two years.
4. Article 8: Section 3, must be amended, and in case of a vacancy in the General Executive Board such a vacancy shall be filled by its respective local thru a vote and not by the appointment of the president.
5. An unemployment fund.
6. Sick benefit fund.
7. A tuberculosis fund, for establishing a department of six or more beds in Los Angeles sanitarium for consumptive members.
8. Amalgamation of the needle trade for one big union.
9. The fur worker shall serve the interest of the worker.

It is our wish that the triumphal march of our progressive delegates to the convention shall lead to our victory.

TWO SETS OF BUTCHERS HERE ON DEBT PROBE

Roumanian Mission Arrives While Italians Wait

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 9—The second fascist government debt commission is here to place its petition in bankruptcy before the capitalist government of the United States while the lackeys of original fascism are still striving to prevent the pawning of their industries to Wall Street, via way of the White House and the treasury department. The new arrival is the commission from the bloody Ruumanian government that has butchered thousands of Besarabian peasants to force them under Roumanian rule and is even now preparing more butcheries.

Following the Roumanians' appearance, the American commissioners plunged into further consideration of the Italian debt, now approaching completion.

The Italians received cable advices from the fascist tyrant, Mussolini, over the week-end bearing on the negotiations, and the substance of these will be communicated to the Americans at a meeting late this afternoon.

The tenor of the Rome advices is understood to have been favorable to a settlement, altho there are still some differences between what Italy thinks she can pay, and what the United States thinks she can pay. The American commission will strive to force complete capitulation in order to control Italian industries.

Count Volpi states that he was "here to settle" and would remain until an agreement was reached, "if at all possible."

KLANSMEN TRY TO BESMIRCH MURDERED GIRL

Defense Based on Tales of Debauches

NOBLESVILLE, Ind., Nov. 9.—New depths of depravity were sounded here by the defense for D. C. Stephenson, noted ku klux klansman, and his two associates, Earl Klinck and Earl Gentry, on trial for the murder of Madge Oberholtzer, when testimony of ku klux witnesses was introduced purporting to blacken the reputation of the dead girl. Not merely did they bring about her death, but now they try to befoul the name of the victim. More exquisite chivalry of this obnoxious order!

Klansman Testifies.

The witness thru whom the charge was made in refutation of the state's claim that her association with Stephenson was enforced was Ralph E. Ridgon, a real estate man.

Ridgon, a confessed klansman, swore that on one occasion he was called to Stephenson's room in the Washington Hotel to discuss politics and that Miss Oberholtzer was there.

"After he and I had transacted our business we three drank gin together," he added.

Miss Oberholtzer also was frequently at Stephenson's office last winter when he called, Ridgon said, while the moron klansmen in the audience grinned.

Fascist Police Raid Gorky's Italian Home

ROME, Italy, Nov. 9.—On the order of the fascisti dictatorship, police recently raided the home of the Russian author, Maxim Gorky, at Sorrento and searched thru the writer's papers in an attempt to connect Gorky and his secretary with the anti-fascist political movements.

The Russian Soviet ambassador protested this action of the Italian fascisti government.

Its Purpose is to Strengthen the Labor Unions by Amalgamation of Existing Unions, Organization of the Unorganized, and by Replacing Reactionary and Class Collaboration Policies with a Unified Program for the Transformation of the Unions into Organs of Revolutionary Class Struggle for the Overthrowal of Capitalism and the Establishment of a Workers' and Farmers' Government.

WORKERS POORLY PAID IN RAKLIOS AND THOMPSON CHAIN RESTAURANTS

By JEAN PERRIDES, Worker Correspondent.

The need for organization among the cooks, waiters and restaurant help in the Raklios and Thompson chain stores is felt very strongly. The workers in these restaurants must work 12 hours a day and seven days a week. The wages for cooks range from $18 to $28 a week. The countermen and cashiers get from $16 to $21, head counter men from $23 to $25 a week, but the lowest paid workers are the dishwashers, panwashers and porters who receive but $12 or $14 a week.

Little Time to Eat

The workers receive but little time to rest and eat. The manager of the restaurant is forever watching the restaurant workers to see to it that they are kept busy at all times. Fifteen minutes is all that they get to eat their meals.

The food that they get is none too good. The manager takes care of handling out the food to them and he sees to it that they eat very little meat, or vegetables.

Shifted Around.

The workers in the chain restaurants are forced to work at all hours. They are shifted around from one shift to another. If the worker objects to being shifted from one neighborhood to another or from one shift to another he is immediately fired and another worker is sent to fill his place.

The Negro worker is more and more displacing the white workers in the Thompson restaurants. The managers take advantage of the Negro in every imaginable way. The Negro worker is forced to do harder work and given the worst of food. Not only does the management of the restaurant "ride" the Negro worker but many of the customers make it very unpleasant for him.

Do Not Stay Long

Most of the workers that work in the chain restaurants leave as soon as they can get hold of another job, either in some other industry or in an independent restaurant.

What do you earn? What are conditions in your shop? How do you live? Write a story for The DAILY WORKER.

CAR WORKERS LAID OFF BY THE HUNDREDS

12-Hour Night Shifts Abolished

By JOSEPH PLOTKIN
(Worker Correspondent)

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 9.—After driving their night workers at top speed all summer long for 12 hours, the Nash Motors Co. and the Seaman Body corporation today laid off both groups of workers. Four hundred were discharged en masse from the Seaman Co., which supplies bodies for the Nash cars. All night work has been discontinued at both places.

And this is just the beginning of a general layoff. In the near future inventory will be taken at the Nash plant, forcing practically the entire staff out of work for a week or more.

This move by two of the largest companies in the city will put workers and their families in a critical condition, as it is not an easy matter to get a job in Milwaukee, especially during the winter. And the lay-off will extend thru the entire season, the company announces.

The discharged employes point out that if the companies had worked eight-hour shifts instead of two 12-hour shifts, that there would be winter work enough, not only for those now discharged, but also for hundreds of other unemployed.

Co-operative Creamery Turns Out Open Shop

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 9.—During the past three weeks, the building trades workers have been deeply agitated about conditions existing at the Minnesota Cooperative Creameries Association distribuiting plant, now being built, from whom The DAILY WORKER correspondent secured the facts contained in this story.

As we signalized in The DAILY WORKER last summer this association is ostensibly a farmers' cooperative, with the strange feature of having E. W. Decker, head of the Northwestern National Bank of Minneapolis, on its board together with several other capitalists.

A Reactionary.

Decker, as everybody knows, who knows anything at all, is one of the principal financiers of all anti-farmers movements and the open shoppers.

The fears which we expressed in our former study of the Minnesota Cooperative Creameries Association, are slowly materializing into facts, we are sorry to say. This association serves six thousand farmers within a 40 mile radius of Minneapolis.

Favors Open Shop

The hub-bub among the organized workers arises from the fact that this association has let its contract for the building of its large distributing plant, to the notorious scab firm of Pike and Cook.

This action on the part of the association, has disconcerted the building trades workers, who expected that a farmers' cooperative would treat them better than this, since this cooperative is continuously appealing to organized labor for the consumption of its products.

However, it is not for nothing that the big capitalist, E. W. Decker is on the board of the association.

Carpenters Negotiate

From the very outset, the Locals No. 7 and 87 of the carpenters, entered into negotiations with the management to build the plant under union conditions. The negotiations went on for quite a period. But they were fruitless.

The assistant manager of the cooperative, Mr. Johnson, informed the carpenters that "The contract would be let to the lowest bidder regardless of union or no union," and so it was.

It must be noted in this connection, that a part of the board representing the dirt farmers, actually favored organized labor.

However, the preponderance of the capitalist Decker influence, defeated the dirt farmers' point of view, as it will always do unless the farmers change the personnel of the board, if they can.

Carpenters Appeal to Building Trades Council

The carpenters, after being turned down by the management of the association, brot the whole matter up before the organization committee of the Building Trades Council. They presented a motion to strike the job.

They pleaded for a united front of all organizations involved, in order to protect the interests of all the workers. It was a splendid plea for real workers' solidarity and a credit to the representatives of the carpenters. The Minneapolis labor movement needs this kind of solidarity.

Craft Selfishness

There was an element present who were only interested in grabbing something for their particular craft, at the expense of all the rest, if need-be. But they were defeated, we are glad to remark. They do not speak for nor do they represent the best interests of the labor movement.

The motion of the carpenters was amended to declare a boycott against the Minnesota Cooperative Creameries Association. It carried.

The representative of the Electrical Workers' Union, Brother Guy Alexander, made a fine defense for unity. He declared that he was in favor of declaring the boycott as against the strike, and hoped that there would be a perfect unity between all building trades unions in the future, in a united front against the bosses. This is a very good omen for the workers of Minneapolis.

How They Voted

Organizations voting for the amendment were as follows:

Carpenters Nos. 7 and 87, Painters No. 186, Lathers No. 190 and Hoisting Engineers. The bricklayers were neutral.

At a later meeting of the business agents of the Building Trades, the vote on the boycott stood as follows:

For Boycott:

Bill Bennet of the painters, G. Alexander of the electrical workers, Walter Frank of the lathers, Bjorklund of the carpenters and a hoisting engineer.

Against Boycott:

Houston, business agent of the Building Trades Council, Christian, of the building laborers, and Malley of the steam fitters.

It is apparent of course, that those who voted against the boycott, believe in the philosophy of "everyone for himself and the devil take the hindmost." That is the road which leads to destruction..

Class Collaboration Called to Action

As a result of the action of the Building Trades Council on the matter in question, a meeting of the outstanding class collaborators was called to upset the work of the Building Trades, both from St. Paul and Minneapolis.

Old man Mahoney and Frank Starkey of the St. Paul Milk Wagon Drivers' Union were present.

So was Paul I. Smith, who, as an organizer is a good butcher. Also, Bob Cramer, who has swallowed with a wry face all of his former class struggle views. New winds demand a change on sails, and Cramer is the boy who can alter them fast.

Paul I. Smith told the Building Trades representatives "that the bankers want to destroy the cooperative of the farmers. No boycott should be declared."

What He Didn't Say.

What Mr. Smith did not say was that a banker, and one of the biggest in America, was actually dictating the open shop policy of the Minnesota Cooperative Creameries Association. That banker is E. W. Decker.

How Mr. Smith can, as a national organizer of the A. F. of L. uphold the open shop policy of E. W. Decker, can only be explained from the angle that Paul I. Smith is an agent of the capitalist class.

Workers don't have to organize into trade unions to support the open shop policies of capitalism, and pay fellows like Paul I. Smith a big salary and expense account, to advocate the open shop. Capitalists can attend to that themselves. How long is the Minneapolis working class going to bear this treachery of Paul I. Smith to its interests?

Backsliders

Frank Starkey of St. Paul supported Smith, as did old man Mahoney of St. Paul.

They took the position that it would be better to fight somebody else than the Minnesota Cooperative Creameries Association. What both Mahoney and Starkey revealed in their non-union attitude, was the fact that they are in political alliance with the rich farmers, whom they do not wish to slight.

That's all. Good lackeys of the middle class farmers, but poor spokesman for organized labor.

Cramer For 50-50

Bob Cramer informed the building trades delegates that "You should be satisfied with a 50-50 proposition and drop the boycott in your organizations."

Who he was speaking for nobody knows. However, it is plain that he was not supporting the interests of the building trades. Cramer is an enthusiastic follower of Paul I. Smith, whether by conviction or otherwise, is a question apart.

Bennett Different

Bill Bennett of the painters asserted to the meeting that "The painters are strong for the support of the carpenters, who are waging a fight for the whole labor movement."

Both Bjorklund and Findstrom of the carpenters, demanded in the name of the rank and file of their organizations, that there be action on the boycott. The rank and file cannot be ignored, they held.

Frank For Fight

Walter Frank of the lathers said: "The discussion should center about the question of making the boycott effective. It is our duty to the labor movement to uncover weaknesses which prevent a united front of workers in all trades, to uphold the interests of the rank and file.

"We must appeal to the dirt farmers to uphold a labor policy. When cooperatives serve the interests of the 'open shop' they must be fought in two ways: First, by a direct fight for union job and union conditions, secondly, by an appeal to the farmers who control the company (if they do) to insist the job be cleared up. The open shop must be smashed. The carpenters, painters and lathers are fighting the battle of all the workers."

The issue is hot in the labor movement, a distinct left wing orientation is on the way in quarters hitherto passive. Signs point to a general awakening from the pychology of despair.

REINISH, DISCIPLE OF AMSTERDAM INTERNATIONAL AND APPOINTEE OF SCHLOSSBERG, PILFERS UNION FUNDS

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 9.—The following expose of B. Reinish, an appointee of Schlossberg of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, shows the tactics the followers of the Amsterdam International stoop to when they are caught pilfering and using the union treasury for their own personal ends:

"After 20 months of continually fighting with one active member after another, framing them up, one by one, using all the dirtiest and filthiest tactics known only to the unscrupulous disciples of the Second International, B. Reinish, organizer of Local No. 266, Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, of San Francisco, stands convicted of petty thievery.

"Last November, a motion was made to donate $5 to the Sacco-Vanzetti defense. Reinish would not allow it, claiming that it would establish a bad precedent. A collection was taken up and turned over to him to forward. Time went by and no receipt was shown. The question of the receipt came up time and again these past six months. Each time Reinish, would wave the question aside as unimportant and talk about something else, villifying and abusing the member who had dared put the question. However, the subject came up again some eight weeks ago, this time, quite a lengthly debate taking place, Reinish claiming to have sent a check but failed to show the returned cancelled check. The secretary was instructed to write to the defense committee for information. The secretary requested a sheet of the locals stationary with the local's seal attached, for this purpose, but was refused, and a couple of weeks afterwards, was framed up on a technical charge of not, at the time, working at the trade, and made to resign as secretary thinking by this move to frustrate any official correspondence with the Sacco-Vanzetti committee. However the Sacco-Vanzetti committee was communicated with and wrote back that they had never at any time received any donation from either Reinish or the local union.

Expel Secretary.

"The former secretary on receipt of the letter reported this to the local meeting, but Reinish as usual butted into everyone who tried to speak, succeeded in turning the discussion into other channels, leaving the impression the executive board would handle the matter and report. The executive board met the next week and in its report to the next local meeting, never even so much as mentioned the matter.

"And at the next meeting of the executive board the former secretary was notified that he stood expelled, for bringing up this matter and securing the evidence.

Fight Over Finances.

"For 20 long months, ever since he was sent out here by Schlossberg, this man has been constantly fighting and framing up one active member after another. The fighting has always centered around tthe same subject.—finances.

"After the union was established for a few months, the first secretary and president demanded that an accounting be rendered of the locals income and expenses. So one dark and stormy night, Reinish's desk was broken into and some dues stamps disappeared. No charges were made but Reinish passed the word around that the secretary and president who were fighting him for a financial report, had done it to break the union. The members being green to the game, most of them having been in the union only a couple of months, swallowed the story. A new election was held, and the secretary and president who had been honestly fighting for the union were voted out and temporarily disgraced.

"Mr. Rubber-Tongue."

"The newly elected president, later on nicknamed Reinish "Mr. Rubber-Tongue."

"The new financial secretary read the constitution, and therein found that he was at least entitled to know what was coming in and what was going out, to say nothing of actually having the power to handle the money, which was one thing that he wasn't allowed to do. After a few weeks of wrangling with Reinish, and getting thoroly disgusted, he stopped even from coming to the meetings. Later on Reinish accused him, of having gotten away with $15 of the union's money, but it was positively proven that instead of the secretary ever having received the money, that Reinish had received this money.

Fights Audit of Books.

"On June 4, a new election took place. At the first meeting of the executive board a motion was made to get a public accountant, to examine the books and have him render a bona-fide report. Every delegate spoke in favor of it, Reinish loudly and strenuously objected to this, and fought the board until midnight, when out of sheer exhaustion and disgust, it was decided that a committee of the board would audit the books. The whole world knows that tailors are not bookkeepers. That is why some people would rather have tailors audit their books instead of public accountants.

"For the 18 months previous to June 4, the union never had a bank account, all moneys having been handled by Reinish himself, receiving every thing and keeping the "books" himself. The new executive board voted to immediately open an account on the union's name and empowered a committee of three, as signees and instructed Reinish to turn over the money to them. This has never been done.

Where Did It Go?

"When the books were being audited, three distinct entrys were shown on the books where Reinish was deliberately witholding money from the union, but this was quashed by the committee for political reasons, but the records still remain.

"Now comes the Sacco-Vanzetti case, and this contemptible scoundrel who has stooped so low as to withhold money, collected for the liberation of the very men who make it possible for the likes of him, to hold down soft easy jobs, now has the gall to accuse the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee, of stealing the money.

"If space permitted, a hundred and one more cases of this man's perfidious actions could be cited, such as sabotaging all communications. Time and again deliberately refusing to carry out the instructions of both the local union and the executive board; issuing labels, without the knowledge or consent of the union or executive board; refusing to allow a girl member, whom he had foully insulted, from preferring a complaint against him, etc.

Schlossberg's Understudy.

"From the very day that he came here he claimed to be General Secretary Schlossberg's best friend, his understudy, that they had lived together for years, that he was merely being sent out here to get some experience to polish up as it were. In his fights against the various local officials he threatened that if the union didn't stand with him and disqualify the member with whom he was fighting, that he would quit, and that the general office wouldn't send anyone else, because he and Schlossberg were such thick and intimate friends and the union would be destroyed."

BRITISH RAIL UNION AMALGAMATES WITH GENERAL TRANSPORT

LONDON, Nov. 9.—Of 80 per cent of the members of the National Union of Enginemen, Firemen, Mechanics, and Electrical Workers voting, 76 per cent decided in favor of amalgamating with the Transport and General Workers' Union.

A special conference of the former union is to be held at Sheffield tomorrow, to confirm the ballot vote.

The union has a membership of 25,000, while the strength of the transport and general workers' organization is over 400,000.

The Movement for World Trade Union Unity

This is the second instalment of a series of articles dealing with the question of World Trade Union Unity. This instalment deals with the foundation of the International Federation of Trade Unions, its policy and tactics. Following instalments will deal with the Red International of Labor Unions and the British Workers and International Trade Union Unity.

By TOM BELL.

The International Federation of Trade Unions (Amsterdam).

The characteristics of capitalism at the end of the 19th and the beginning of this century were: The capitalists created great combinations for the more efficient exploitation of the workers—trusts, syndicates, cartels, etc. Not only this, these great capitalist combinations did not confine themselves to one country, but reached out into other countries. This forced the workers to see the necessity of establishing contact with the workers of other countries for protection against capitalist aggression.

The political parties of the workers had already set up an international organization in the shape of the International Socialist Congress since 1889. But it was not until 1902 that any kind of trade union international center was organized by the establishment of the International Secretariat of Trade Unions.

This International Secretariat of Trade Unions held conferences at the same time as that of the International Socialist Congress. It was no real international center in the sense that it worked to establish unity of action beween the trade union movements of the various countries. It was merely a bureau for the exchange of information on wages, prices, etc. At the conferences labor leaders came together for a "dress parade," and between conferences nothing was heard of the "International." This international was merely set up to appease the desire of the trade union membership for international unity, but was never intended to function as an international center for common action against the capitalists.

Besides this, there existed internationals of the various industries and trades, such as the Miners' International, the Textile Workers' International, and so on. To these were affiliated the unions of these industries in some countries. Here again these "internationals" functioned as "international post offices." No attempt was made to really prevent international scabbing by the unions of the various countries.

It remained for the outbreak of war in 1914 to expose the utter fraud of these "internationals." When Europe plunged into war the trade union movement split into sections according to the countries they were organized in. The trade unions of Germany and Austria-Hungary supported "their" warlords in the name of "defense of fatherland." The unions of Great Britain, France and Belgium rallied to the support of "their" imperialist bandits under the slogan of "crushing militarism," and "defending democracy." The "international" automatically collaapsed as the trade union movements lined up to cut each other's throats in the interests of "their" capitalists. The trade union leaders became the best recruiting agents for the ruling classes. They abandoned all pretense of safeguarding the workers' interests. They urged the workers to sacrifice everything for victory over the "enemy."

In Great Britain the trade union leaders signed an agreement with the government in 1915 surrendering all trade union conditions, gained after 50 years of struggle, and solemnly agreed not to strike for the duration of the war. In Germany "civil peace" was declared between capital and labor in the interest of the "national intersets," i. e., the interests of the imperialist capitalists and war lords. The workers were firmly tied to the chariot wheels of capitalist imperialism by the very men who were supposed to lead them against the entire capitalist system.

In 1917 the trade unions of the "neutral" countries made an attempt to call a conference of the trade unions. The trade unionists of the Allied countries refused to "meet the enemy" at any such conference since the war was still on and they were dedicated to the caused of Allied victory. It was not until after the war that a trade union conference was held in Berne, Switzerland, in February, 1919. The only question discussed at this conference was: Who was guilty of starting the war? The Allied trade union leaders tried to force the German labor leaders to confess their "guilt." All that came of the conference was the decision to hold another conference in July, 1919, at Amsterdam, Holland.

The Amsterdam conference established the International Federation of Trade Unions. But it was organized under the hegemony of the trade union leaders who supported the Allies in he war. Again the question of "war guilt" was raised, and the Allied trade unionists presented the ultimatum to the German and Austrian trade union leaders that they must admit the "war guilt" of "their" countries or they would be excluded from the international. Finally Sassenbach, in the name of the German delegation, diplomatically gave in to the Allied trade union leaders.

In this matter the Allied trade union leaders were following the same course as "their" diplomats pursued toward the German representatives at the Paris peace conference. The International Federation of Trade Unions was, and still is, the labor wing of the Allied imperialists.

These imperialist lackeys formed the I. F. T. U. simply because the workers were demanding the organization of the trade union forces to prevent a repeition of the horrors they had gone thru in 1914-18. During the war millions of workers had flocked to the unions in revolt against their terrible conditions. In Russia the workers had conquered czarism, defeated the capitalists, established their own government, and converted the land and machinery of production into the property of the workers and farmers. The German masses had smashed the kaiser's throne and set up workers' councils and had been betrayed by the social-democratic leaders. In Bavaria and Hungary, Soviet republics had been established. The masses were straining at the leash—but the trade union "leaders" only saw one task: To aid their diplomats to draw up a peace pact at the expense of the masses. Such hideous treachery has never before been witnessed as displayed at the foundation of the International Federation of Trade Unions.

As it was at its birth so the Amsterdam International has lived—an organization dominated by the agents of the captalists in the labor movement. It is tied to the league of nations thru the international labor office established by the league. It has supported the reparation policy of the Allies. A few days before France invaded the Ruhr in 1923 Amsterdam held an international conference to abolish all war, but refused to call a one-day strike as a demonstration against the invasion as proposed by the Red International of Labor Unions. Instead the conference decided on principle to call a general strike in the event of war, and to fight war by means of moving picture propoganda.

The capitalist offensive on the workers' standard of living after the war was not opposed by Amsterdam. The British trade unions are the basis of the Amsterdam International, yet in Britain in 1921, wage cuts affected 7,000,000 workers who lost by these cuts £5,000,000 per week. Again in 1922 the British workers lost £6,000,000 per week by wage reductions. Amsterdam never even worries about this savage reduction in the workers' standard of living.

The British miners' strike at the beginning of 1921 received no aid from Amsterdam. As a matter of fact the triple alliance of miners, railwaymen and transport workers was betrayed by such leading lights of Amsterdam as Thomas, Hodges and Williams. Again in 1922 the British metal workers were forced into a wage struggle and were defeated because they received no aid either from Amsterdam or even the other unions in Britain. When the American miners were on strike in 1922 coal was shipped in from Europe and Amsterdam did not raise a finger to stop it.

Thus the Amsterdam International is dominated by national interests over working class interests—it serves the bosses and not the workers. Not only does it shun international unity, but it holds fast to craft unionism and by upholding sectionalism among the workers, aids the bosses to defeat them. Today the Amsterdam leaders are the spearhead of the capitalist offensive against the movement for international trade union unity. The Amsterdam International has never acted as the defender of the interests of the workers, and does not lead the workers in an international struggle against the capitalists.

WORKERS PARTY DEMANDS COUNT OF GITLOW VOTES

Estimate 10,000 Votes Cast for Communists

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—The Workers (Communist) Party thru its general secretary of the New York district, Wm. W. Weinstone, who was the candidate for controller on the Workers Party ticket, charged the election board with voiding ballots on which the name of Benjamin Gitlow, candidate for mayor, barred from the ballot because of his conviction under the criminal syndicalist law, was written in.

Void Gitlow Ballot

The examination of the official reports, by the Workers' Party, showed that not a single Gitlow ballot was counted, and thus about 55,000 ballots were illegally voided.

The watchers of the Workers Party reported that the ballots upon which the name of Gitlow was written in, were regarded as void and neither Gitlow nor the other Workers Party candidates on the same ballot were counted.

The vote recorded by the election officials not counting the thousands illegally voided is listed below.

William W. Weinstone, candidate for controller—3388. Charles Krumbein, candidate for president board of aldermen—3496.

Boro Presidents: Manhattan, Alexander Trachtenberg—871; Bronx, Jos. Manley—1131; and Kings, Edward Lingren—1053.

District Attorneys: Manhattan, Arthur S. Leede—828; and Bronx, Belle Robbins—1053.

Sheriffs: Manhattan, Martin—978; Bronx, Hoffbauer—1376; and Kings, Rosen—1460.

Register: Manhattan, Rose Pastor Stokes—694; and Kings, Margaret Undjus—532.

County Clerks: Manhattan, Van Praet—920; and Bronx, Epstein—1203.

For Assembly: 8th. Manhatten, Grecht—112; 17th Manhattan, Olgin—117; 4th Bronx, Marks—183; 5th Bronx, Darcy—179; 7th Bronx, Zimmerman—226; 14th Kings, Sam Nesin—157; and 23rd Kings, Bert Wolfe—139.

For Aldermen: 8th Manhattan, Brodsky—99; 17th Manhattan, Codkind 104; 25th Bronx Bourechowitz—250; 29th Bronx, Gross—200; 35th Kings, Masso—151; 52nd Kings, Lifshitz—124.

The Workers Party estimates that about 10,000 votes were cast for the Workers Party candidates of which a few thousand that did not contain Gitlow's name were thrown aside by corrupt and careless election officials. The Workers Party is considering legal action to compel the count of the Gitlow ballots.

Russian Branch in Chicago Holds 8th Year Celebration

An enthusiastic celebration of the eighth anniversary of the Russian revolution was held Sunday night by the Russian branch of the Workers Party, at Workers House, Chicago. Speakers in Russian and English addressed the crowd and a good musical program followed. The enthusiasm of the audience reached a high pitch when one of the singers began the workers' song "Dubinushka" (The Cudgel). Everyone in the hall joined in. The singer was forced to repeat the song to the great delight of the people.

The meeting ended with the singing of the International with piano accompaniment. A collection was taken up for the Russian Communist daily, The Novy Mir.

The speakers were: in English Comrade J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, and in Russian M. A. Stolar, B. Devlatkin. In the concert program there participated the actors Luganov and Namgova, a baritone singer Grigoriev, and the mandoline orchestra under the leadership of M. S. Spaulding.

SECTION SIX

(NORTHWEST TERRITORY)

Attention!

The section membership meeting of Section No. 6 which takes in the following branches: North Side Polish, Russian, Northwest Jewish, Northwest English, Karl Marx Scandinavian, Lithuanian No. 3, Lettish, Car Shop Nucleus No. 6, Ukrainian No. 1, Slovak No. 1, Irving Park English, Slovak Jefferson Park, will be held Thursday, November 12, 8 p. m. sharp at the Workers' Lyceum, 2733 Hirsch Blvd.

ELEMENTS OF COMMUNISM COURSES TO OPEN IN CHICAGO WORKERS' SCHOOL ON NOVEMBER 19 AND 20

One of the most instructive and interesting courses to be offered in the Chicago Workers' School will be the course in Elements of Communism, which will deal with the fundamentals of Communist theory and will be of great value to every member of the Workers Party.

Comrade Max Bedacht, editor of the Workers Monthly and member of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party and H. M. Wicks, one of the editorial staff on The DAILY WORKER, will be instructors of the classes that are to be opened in Chicago on Thursday and Friday, Nov. 19 and 20 respectively at 19 South Lincoln St.

This course should not be confused with an elementary course in Communism or Marxism as this course will deal with the fundamental principles of Communist theory.

Circuit School

Not only will this course be taught in the Workers' School at Chicago, but the following curriculum laid down by the agitprop department of the Communist International, will also be taught in the circuit school to be conducted by Oliver Carlson in Gary, South Bend, Waukegan and Milwaukee.

Registrations are under way and comrades desiring to take the course can easily do so by paying the enrollment fee of $1.00 for the eight weeks' course in Chicago. Those living in cities where the circuit school will be established can enroll by paying $1.50. The higher price is necessitated in the circuit schools by the additional expenses involved.

CLASS IN IMPERIALISM AT WORKERS' SCHOOL TO START TUESDAY, NOV. 18

Beginning Tuesday evening, Nov. 17, the Chicago Workers' School will open a class on imperialism and the national and colonial question at 19 South Lincoln street. Comrade Manuel Gomez, secretary of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League will be the instructor.

Imperialism and the problems of the revolutionary workers' movement in fighting against it is the biggest task before us. But to prepare ourselves for this fight we must know the roots of imperialism, the preverted theories regarding it that have been doled out to the workers by social-democrats as well as Lenin's analysis of the nature and rule of modern imperialism.

Anyone who has had some elementary training can register for the course. Enrollment must be made at once. The fee is $1. No student will be accepted after the class is organized.

Further information as to this or other courses can be obtained from Oliver Carlson, secretary Workers' School, 19 South Lincoln.

DULUTH FINNISH BRANCH ARRANGES MASQUERADE BALL FOR NOVEMBER 20

DULUTH, Minn., Nov. 9.—The Finnish branch of the Workers Party in Duluth is giving a masquerade ball at Camels Hall, 12 East Superior street, Saturday, Nov. 14, at which a number of prizes will be given to those who wear costumes of a working class nature bringing to the foreground the life of the worker. Those wearing the overworked clown and Uncle Sam suits will be on the "verboten" list and cannot expect to share in the prizes.

There will be three prizes: First, DAILY WORKER for 6 months; Second, Young Worker for 6 months and third, DAILY WORKER for 3 months. All radicals are urged to be on hand and enjoy themselves at this mask ball.

passed commending the board of elections for barring Ben Gitlow from the ballot. Voorhis said, after the resolution was passed by a standing vote, that he had done his duty. Gitlow, he said, was convicted of a felony thereby forfeiting his citizenship which has not been restored.

Prepare For Next Year.

A committee of three was elected to devise ways and means to keep the Workers (Communist) Party off the ballot at the next election. Objections were raised to the emblem of the party. It was pointed out that it is similar to that of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, and the assembled delegates did not want anything that smacked of Soviet Russia.

Reports were made of efforts made by the allied societies to offset Communist propaganda in New York and the country at large. A. I. Doty, dean of De Witt Clinton high school, drew attention to the Young Comrade. He read excerpts from an article which spoke of the churches serving as a "tool of capitalism" and which declared there can never be peace on earth until capitalism will be abolished from all lands of the world. The publication also contained a message from the school children of Soviet Russia calling upon the American youth to "fight against the capitalistic dope peddled in the schools, and to demand the right to be taught the truth."

Curb Language Papers.

A resolution was adopted for the societies to co-operate with the postmaster general in drafting a bill to be presented to congress, making it obligatory for editors of foreign language newspapers to print part of their papers in English.

PHILADELPHIA WORKERS CELEBRATE EIGHTH ANNIVERSARY OF UNION OF SOCIALIST SOVIET REPUBLICS

By BERNARD HERMAN.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 9.—The eighth anniversary of the proletarian revolution in Russia was celebrated Friday night in Philadelphia by a great throng of workers, who packed the Labor Lyceum, 6th and Brown streets.

Comrade M. Yusem acted as chairman. He opened this anniversary meeting by calling upon the gathering to rise and stand one minute in silence in memory of Comrade Frunze, the leader of the Red Army, who passed away last week.

Tallentire Speaks.

The first speaker was Norman H. Tallentire, district organizer of the Workers (Communist) Party for the Philadelphia district. In a stirring talk, he exposed the hypocricy of those, who raise their hands in mock horror at the thot of "force and violence" on the part of the Communists and the working class but who fail to see that in every instance force is used by the capitalist class hirelings to crush the workers. He closed with a picture of the workers, who have in the past fought the battles of their masters, now organizing and for the first time fighting their own battles of liberation.

Police Interfere.

The next speaker was Comrade Feinstein, a Russian speaker. It was at this point that the department of justice agants made their presence felt. The agents and a number of police stalked onto the stage and demanded that the speaker stop talking at once, claiming that Comrade Feinstein's name was not on the permit, and that there was nothing in the permit allowing a Russian speaker. The workers who thronged the hall started to boo the police for their action. One of the police then shouted, "If you make another boo or hiss, I'll break up this meeting."

Rather than have the meeting broken up, the workers ceased booing and the next speaker, Pat H. Toohey was introduced. He spoke in behalf of the Young Workers League, and then took a collection for The DAILY WORKER. The collection amounted to $132.

Lovestone Outlines Russ History.

The last speaker of the evening was Jay Lovestone, who aroused a great storm of applause when he referred to the example of free speech exhibited but a few minutes before in the city of the Liberty Bell and told how it was his honor and pleasure to stand in the Red Square in Moscow eight months ago and speak to the soldiers and workers assembled there, and speak to them in English without a permit.

Lovestone then outlined the history of establishment and rise in power of the workers' government of Soviet Russia. From Nov. 7, 1917, when the workers of Russia rallied around the slogans of the Bolshevik Party: All power to the workers—peace, land, bread, thru Nov. 7, 1918, which marked the ending of the imperialist war, which was brought to an end by the revolutionary activity of the Soviet republic amongst the war weary and war-torn workers of Germany, thru Nov. 7, 1919, which found the Soviet republic finally secure, with all its counter-revolutionary foes crushed and driven out. In 1920 the American soldiers in Siberia laid down their arms and refused to fight the workers' republic. In 1921 the Polish drive against Soviet Russia was broken, and these agents of French bankers were turned back.

1922 marked the end of the cordon sanitaire. Nov. 7, 1923, found the Soviet republic firmly established, with the famine conquered.

Nov. 7, 1924, found most of the capitalist countries brought to their knees and forced to recognize the Soviet Union.

Red Versus Black.

Nov. 7, 1925, finds the world divided into two battle fronts, black versus red—the black international of Locarno against the workers of Soviet Russia and against the allies of Soviet Russia: the workers of Great Britain, Germany, France and America, and the oppressed peoples of Asia and Africa.

Comrade Lovestone closed with an appeal to all present to join the Workers (Communist) Party.

The meeting closed with the singing of the International by the Freiheit chorus.

Celebration in Newark

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 9.—A celebration of the eighth anniversary of the Russian revolution was held at the Newark Labor Lyceum, 704 S. 14th St., before a representative gathering of workers.

Sylvan A. Pollack in opening the meeting said that the American workers should remember the words of Albert A. Purcell at the Atlantic City convention of the American Federation of Labor, who when speaking about Soviet Russia, said that we, the workers, are proud what the members of our class, the working class, have achieved in that country.

Recognize Soviet Russia

Irving Friedman of the Young Worker League introduced a resolution calling upon the United States government to recognize Soviet Russia, copies of the resolution to be sent to the president and members of congress. It was carried unanimously. A resolution was also passed protesting against the bloody acts of the Horthy government in Hungary.

Margaret Undjus then traced the history of the Russian revolution from 1917, showing the various stages thru which it had passed.

Join Workers Party

A plea to join the Workers (Communist) Party and fight the battles of the workers in this country was also made by Comrade Undjus.

Comrade Becker in Russian and Comrade Antoshes in Ukrainian were the other speakers on the program.

The Young Pioneers presented, "The Capitalists in the Hands of the Juniors." Mass singing by German and Ukrainian Singing Societies, and violin solos by Mr. Jack Rubenchick, received a good reception from the assembled workers.

CORRECTION

The article by H. M. Wicks on "Mandates in Syria and Irak" in yesterday's paper contained two errors originating in the composing room. The fifth line of the first column should read "THREAT of another world war." instead of UNREST. Also the fifth line from the bottom of the second column should have read "England has a very definite POLICY." the word policy being left out.

Dry Head to "Return."

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Demoted as head of the federal dry unit by Gen. L. C. Andrews, the new dry czar, prohibition Commissioner Roy A. Haynes is expected to retire from the government service within a short time, according to high treasury officials.

Shop Nucleus Training Course

"Fundamentals of Leninism." Instructor Jack Stachel, in the Workers' School, every other week.

THE Workers' School will train one worker of each shop nucleus, preferably the organizer, to lead political discussions in his shop nucleus, in the form of a course in the "Fundamentals of Leninism" in the theory and practice of Leninism in their concrete application to the American party in general and the needs and problems of the shop nucleus in particular. The course in the central school will both deal with the matter taught in every shop nucleus and the manner of teaching it or leading the discussion. The shop nucleus will select the comrade to take the training course, exact attendance from him and pay his fee.

With the reorganiation of the party on the basis of shop nuclei will come an intensification of the party's activities in all fields of work, and a thousand fold increase in our contact with, and influence over the masses.

In order that our reorganization shall not be merely a reallocation of our present membership, and in order that the nuclei shall be active, and alive, responding to the needs of the masses in the shops and factories, it is necessary that our entire membership, organized in the nuclei, shall be equal to the demands of the situation. This can only be done by a deepening of the understanding of the laws of the class struggle among our membership by giving to every member a political minimum education in Leninism. They must also be instructed in the performance of the daily organizational tasks.

THE shop nucleus training course is organized on a basis that provides the drawing in of the entire party membership into our educational work. Every nucleus will select one comrade who will go to the central school and take the shop nucleus training course. The comrades thus chosen will then lead the discussion of the subjects they have learned in their shop nuclei. A special phase of the course will therefore be, how to import the knowledge gained to the other members of the shop nucleus and the mass of workers in the shops.

THE course will combine the "Fundamentals of Leninism" and "Party Organizational Problems," the outline being approximately as follows:

1. Capitalist wage slavery—the system under which we live.
2. Imperialism, present dominant form of capitalism—the last stage of capitalism.
3. The breach in the imperialist front and the epoch of social revolution.
4. The Communist order of society—the abolition of the contradictions of capitalism and the emancipation of the workers.
5. The dictatorship of the proletariat—the unavoidable pre-requisite of the struggle for Communism.
6. Proletarian dictatorship and the allies of the revolution—colonies and the peasantry.
7. International party of the proletariat.
8. The party and the masses.
9. Structure and organizational problems of the party—shopnuclei, street nuclei, shop committees, etc.
10. Special campaigns of the party—electoral campaigns, Soviet Russia, recruiting campaigns, Communist press.
11. The work of the shop nucleus. a. Work of the different officers. b. The shop paper. c. Legal and illegal methods. d. How the nucleus brings the party into the shops. e. How the nucleus mobilizes the masses for the party campaigns.
12. Problems of bolshevization.

IN addition to meeting the needs of our educational work in line with the party's program of bolshevization the "Shop Nucleus Training Course" will also serve to maintain a steady personal contact with each of the shop nuclei through its best representative—the one chosen by the nucleus to take the course and be the leader in the nuclei educational work. The nucleus members will therefore have a direct means of bringing any special problem in the shop directly to the attention of the party, highe rcommittee, for solution. Thus the shop nucleus training course will help in the function of the nuclei.

The first class will be formed out of the existing shop nuclei and every nucleus must immediately choose one comrade and send his name to Comrade Wolfe, director of the Workers School, 108 E. 14 St.

New classes will be formed as the re-organization process progresses and new shop nuclei are organized.

The class will meet once every two weeks for six months, two hours each session. A fee of $2.50 will be charged to be paid by the shop nucleus.

FIGHT AGAINST EXPULSION WON BY UNION MINER

No More Public Trials, Say Officials

(By Worker Correspondent)

MINERSVILLE, Pa., Nov. 9. — Balked by the rank and file in an attempt to expel a member when he was recently brot before Local 1642, United Mine Workers of America, Hechschersville, Pa., for distributing leaflets on the anthracite strike, the union officials safe-guarded themselves against similar defeats in the future by forcing thru a resolution that, "hereafter any union miner caught distributing Communist propaganda will be expelled without special trial."

When Herman was called before the union this week to answer charges both of having distributed Communist leaflets and of being a member of the progressive miners' committee (alleged to be a Communist organisation), he was able to turn the attack against his accusers. The treachery of the Lewis policy in favoring separate agreements between anthracite and bituminous miners was pointed out by Herman. The leaflets, he demonstrated, were in opposition to this, being a plea to bituminous miners to "Stand by the Anthracite Miners!"

Herman pointed out that, if the anthracite miners win their hard-fought strike and return to work,—the bituminous miners will later be forced out on strike, after the expiration of their agreement, April, 1926. The anthracite miners will then be the official scabs. And that the bituminous miners are acting as scabs when they don't join in the present strike.

Charges against Herman were made by Martin Brennan, social renegade, who tried to get Herman expelled on the grounds that he belonged to a dual organization, for which he was distributing the leaflets. Over 100 miners attended the meeting at which Herman was put "on trial." Brennan, however, was unable to substantiate either accusation. But he succeeded in getting thru the resolution which, in the future, can be used as a means of expelling any members that the officialdom disapproves of, without bringing the case before the union members.

Pacifist Women Who Helped Last War Now Meet to Discuss Peace

Evanston churchwomen and women of the bourgeoisie, among the most ardent supporters of the last war, have started a "crusade" for a capitalist solution for the ending of all wars and have called a three days' conference for that purpose to kid themselves and others about their peacetime pacifist illusions.

The conference began at the Evanston woman's club when a United States senator, a minister and a clubwoman spoke.

WITH POPULATION INCREASED 15 PER CENT, FACTORY EMPLOYMENT IS ON LOWER LEVEL THAN 1914

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Factory employment below the level of September, 1924, is the astonishing story told by the department of labor general index of employment for the country as a whole. Taking average employment in 1923 as 100% it shows September, 1925, at 90.9%. On the same base September, 1914, was at a 94.9% level.

The significance of this drop appears no comparison with a growth of around 15% in the country's population and an increase of 20% to 30% in factory production.

Slight Increase Seasonal.

The change in employment from August to September of this year was an increase of 1.5%. This increase is seasonal. It brings the level 7.7% above September, 1924. This means nothing more than compensation for the comparatively lower level in the early months of 1925.

Out of 52 separate industries reporting to the department 40 showed gains in employment compared with September, 1924. Of the general groups food products alone showed a decline, with 7.7% fewer packing house workers, 4.7% fewer in confectionery and 2% fewer in baking.

How Industries Vary.

Textiles gained 6.6%, hosiery and knit goods 17%, silk 16.7%, men's clothing 6.4%, shirts and collars 15%. Iron and steel employed 8.4% more workers with 9.7% more in the steel mills, 7.9% more in foundries and machine shops and 19.3% more in machine tool plants. Chemical industries added to employes by 10.4%.

The number employed in the vehicle group was raised 17.3% chiefly by a 33.9% gain in the automobile industry. But car building and repair plants show a loss of 7.7%. Other important gains were 39.9% in agricultural implement plants, 47.6% in rubber boot plants and 11.2% in the manufacture of automobile tires.

Only 84 Per Cent Normal.

Even with these increases the country's factories were operating an average of 84% of a normal full force of employes and 93% of full time. By groups the industries showed the following per cents full time and full force:

Sept. 1925 Industrial Operation.

	Pct. of full force	Pct. of full time
Food products	86	88
Textile products	84	91
Iron and steel	76	92
Lumber, millwork, furniture	90	96
Leather products	85	93
Paper and printing	92	95
Chemical and oil	80	95
Stone, clay, glass	87	92
Stamped and enamel ware	83	96
Tobacco	87	93
Auto, wagon, cars, etc.	86	95
Miscellaneous	78	94

22 Per Cent Short.

These figures show industry as a whole operating 22% short of full-time capacity. The important iron and steel group including foundries, machine shops, machine tool builders as well as the steel mills operated 30% under capacity; the miscellaneous group which includes farm implements, auto tires and electrical apparatus, 27% under; and food industries, txetiles and chemical plants all 24% under full operation.

Coast Guards Fight Gale.

CALUMET, Mich., Nov. 9.—Coast guards here are battling a fierce gale in an effort to reach the disabled steamer Hamonic, adrift with a crew of 40 men about 25 miles off Caribou Island. Radio dispatches from the vessel broke off in the middle, leading to the belief that she is in serious straits. Another steamer, the William Roberts, is reported adrift off Alpena, in Lake Huron.

Fakers Would Rather See Strike Lost Than Accept "Moscow Gold"

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Nov. 9.—During the recent metal workers' strike in Belgium, the All-Russian Metal Workers' Union, thru the mediation of Jacquemotte, the Communist member of parliament, offered the Metal Workers' Union 56,000 francs for the support of the strike. The union officials declined to accept the money, and has now explained their reasons for so doing in the press. We quote the following extract.

"They are perpetually calling us traitors to the working class and the tools of the capitalists, and yet they send us money. If they have no dignity or logic, at any rate we have enuf to keep us from taking a cent from these people who are always calling themselves our bitterest enemies." They omit stating that this "Moscow gold" was meant to aid the rank and file who are not enemies of Moscow.

ST. LOUIS LABOR HEARS PURCELL TALK ON UNITY

Union Members Greet Labor Head

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 9.— The speech of Albert A. Purcell, president of the International Federation of Trade Unions and fraternal delegate to the recent American Federation of Labor convention, on world trade union unity was enthusiastically received by a large audience of St. Louis trade union men and women, assembled at the Sheldon Memorial Hall, on the evening of Nov. 5.

This meeting was arranged by a committee consisting of delegates from various local unions of St. Louis of which Charles Blome, president of the St. Louis Metal Trades Council, was secretary, he was also chairman of the meeting. The American standard of living and standards in all civilized countries are being undermined by the international capitalist exploitation of countries without a developed trade union movement, declared A. A. Purcell.

Not only must the organized labor groups of the entire world, including the 6,000,000 Russian trade unionists, come together in one body to raise the labor conditions and wages in Mexico, China, India and other international sweatshops, Purcell declared, but labor must also step in with united strength to prevent further capitalist wars.

"It is the duty of organized labor to oppose war by refusing to fight," he said amid enthusiastic applause. "We say when the capitalists get involved in the next war they alone shall do the fighting."

The Russian trade unions were credited by Purcell with having made tremendous changes for the better in the lives of the Russian workers since the revolution. As chairman of the British Trades Union Congress delegation to Russia in 1924 he looked closely into their work.

"The workers in other countries will sooner or later be compelled to follow the Russian example," he said. "When we workers in England crash thru and in the end we will have to crash thru, we will need the sympathy and co-operation of labor elsewhere."

The main body of his address was devoted to explaining the deep-flowing economic currents that are placing workers in all countries in the grip of a consolidated international financial octopus which can no longer be fought on merely national lines by the trade unions. When unions raise wages in their own country capital crosses the sea and makes the identical goods in low-wage unorganized countries, not only making more profit but putting the home trade unions out of business thru unemployment. Purcell showed. And then he hammered home his world unity argument, all unions uniting to organize the backward countries and by transportation and other boycotts crippling the capitalist offensive.

Interstate Commerce Body Member Upholds Jim-Crowing of Negro

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 9.—A recommendation that the railroads of the south and the Pullman company be acquitted of charges of racial discrimination was laid before the interstate commerce commission by one of its examiners who "investigated" the subject.

Reporting adversely on a complaint by E. Crosby, a Negro doctor, who asked for $120,000 damages, John McChord, the examiner, reported that "unjust discrimination or prejudice against persons of the colored race has not been shown as alleged."

The Crosby proved that in 1922 and 1923 Pullman tickets had been refused him and attorneys of his race in the south, the commission made the report to uphold the Pullman company.

Workers Look at—But Can't Touch—"Model" Bungalow

(By a Worker Correspondent)

MONESSEN, Pa., Nov. 9—Monessen workers are being given an unusual treat this week—it's better than going to the "movies." Thru the auspices of the Monessen Improvement Co., they have the opportunity of seeing the kind of home that Monessen business men live in. The affair is called a "model" home.

This company has opened for public inspection one of their newly-built houses in a "good and welfare" scheme to help local business men advertise their wares. Tho only six rooms are contained in the "simple but beautiful" abode, it took the cooperation of about a dozen firms to furnish it: Upholsterers, dry goods merchants, plumbers, jewelers, decorators, hardware dealers, etc. And it is located in a well-pruned neighborhood, with provisions already made for lawn, shrubbery, boulevards, etc.,—not to mention an embryo garage. Nothing is lacking to provide human comfort except perhaps such incidentals as a parlor maid and a cook, and eventually—a footman.

For the worker, of course, the exhibit amounts to a case of "look, but don't touch." The "model" home can be obtained only at the expenditure of the far from paltry sum of $10,000.

Workers of Monessen who make possible such homes (for others) live in "model" domiciles something like this: a two or three room shack, with no front yard—the porch extending to the sidewalk—and the furniture consisting mostly of boxes. This "model" workers' home also has the advantage being located near the mills, with all the conveniences of smoke, ore-dust and noise.

But it isn't for sale—just for rent—and from the "company," at that.

Work on Tax Bill with Doors Barred

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Behind closed doors, with even the democrats barred, the republican framers of the new tax reduction bill began the actual construction today of a measure that they claim will lop between $300,000,000 to $400,000,000 from the American taxpayers' bill.

They expect to have it ready for the immediate attention of congress when it convenes on Dec. 7.

The gross amount of the reduction and many other details are undecided and incomplete.

The democrats, headed by Representative John N. Garner of Texas, probably will bring in their own bill, the chief feature of which will be the total exemption of all incomes below the $5,000 class.

Weeks of work behind closed doors with the great masses of data and figures deposited during two weeks of public hearings confront the republican committee. The republicans themselves are far from united on the remedies the party will offer, and some sharp fighting is expected in executive session before a completed bill emerges.

Professor Discovers "Fountain of Youth"

VIENNA, Nov. 9.—Details of a new and highly successful method for rejuvinating women were unfolded to members of the Academy of Science here by Dr. Eugene Steinbach, internationally famous for his researches in rejuvenation.

Dr. Steinach said that he achieved his old age cure by introducing an extract obtained from the female organism into the bodies of women desiring to be young again.

Furniture Finishers to Form Union Nov. 11

An attempt to organize the piano, phonograph and furniture finishers that work in factories and for furniture stores, will be made Wednesday evening, November 11, at 741 Blue Island avenue, at 7:30, according to the committee attempting to organize workers at this trade.

The committee invites all those who work in the furniture stores and furniture manufacturing establishments in the city to attend this meeting.

GERMAN SOCIAL-DEMOCRATS ARE AGAIN FOR SALE

Won't Oppose Locarno If Given Jobs

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Nov. 9—Fourteen political parties are to fight in the German reichstag when it opens Nov. 20, over the Locarno pact. The division runs in three groups, the right with the nationalist; the center, with the people's party and the catholic party and the democratic party; the left opposition to Locarno at present containing the social-democrats and the Communists.

But the social-democrats, as usual, are opposing Locarno with the idea of many lean to support it with the powerful people's party, the party of the big employers and commercial powers.

The democrats, who support Locarno, are urging that the cabinet guarantee to the social-democrats that the German government and the Prussian government will remain in control of the center coalition insuring the social-democrats plenty of jobs in these governments if they will support the Locarno pact.

Sick Ex-Soldier Drops Dead at Mother's Door

LONDON, Nov. 9.—One hour after he had left the Newington institution, William James Philpott, twenty-six, an ex-service man, was found dying at his mother's door at Morecombe street, Walworth.

At the inquest yesterday it was stated that Philpott was gassed in France and received a pension until June, 1922, when it was stopped.

Since then he had been unable to work, and his mother, a hard working woman, had supported him and paid for his lodgings.

A policeman found him leaning against his mother's door groping for the handle. Asked what was the matter, he replied: "I am finished," and collapsed on the pavement and died.

The assistant master of the Newington institution said that Philpott was admitted as an urgency case, but discharged himself.

The coroner recorded a verdict that Philpott died as the result of gas poisoning.

Not in the Movies

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif., Nov. 9.—Matt Burt, a cow-puncher and an unidentified man have been killed in a running gun battle, climaxing a fight between cattlemen and bootleggers at Government Hole, Calif., a lonely spot in the desert, according to word received here today by Sheriff Shay. Deputies have been rushed to the scene from here.

Fenway Hotel Owners Apply for Injunction

By HERBERT BENJAMIN
(Worker Correspondent)

CLEVELAND Nov. 9.—Members of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes International Alliance, on strike against the Fenway Hall, a resident hotel for the "elite," have been named in a temporary injunction secured by the Euclid-Fairmont Co. owners of this and several other hotels.

Apply for Injunction

The strike was called Sept. 21 when the company not only failed to keep its promise to sign an agreement recognizing the union, but discharged all employes known to be members of the union. Several workers who previously were not members of the union joined in the walkout and the strikers have been picketing the hotel since. The owners have made every attempt to secure scabs to replace the workers on strike. Cooks have been hired thru a scab agency in Chicago and sent here. As soon as there workers found they were expected to scab on striking workers they refused to work and demanded that their transportation be refunded. This so infuriated the manager of the hotel, that he threatened the workers with a gun. Failing to intimidate the workers in this way, the owners have now turned to the courts for aid.

In their petition the owners claim that they have lost patronage and are threatened with bankruptcy unless they concede the demands of the union or obtain relief from the courts. There is a strong feeling among the membership of the union that the injunction made permanent must be resisted. The conviction is also growing among the membership that the union must remove the restrictions barring Negro workers from membership in the union.

Negro Workers Join Strike

It is pointed out that on several occasions, when the union called a strike, the bosses hired Negro workers who are denied membership in the union, to replace the strikers. Many Negro cooks and waiters have refused to scab on their white fellow workers. A number of them have joined the strike at the Fenway Hall, but when they applied for admission to the union, they were rejected. The removal of the restriction to the admission of Negro workers, would unite the restaurant employes of the city and assure the union control of the industry.

The union now has several resolutions dealing with the matter of resistance to injunctions and admission of Negro workers under consideration.

To those who work hard for their money, I will save 50 per cent on all their dental work.

The Official Report of the British Trade Union Delegation to Soviet Russia

RUSSIA TODAY

The first publication in England of this most complete report of the British Trade Union Delegation to Soviet Russia, caused a great stir in the world trade union movement.

From all parts of the world came high praise for this historical document, from those workers in and out of the organized labor movement earnestly working for world trade union unity.

This report (including charts and maps) is an impartial study of every phase of life under the first world's workers' government. Politics, Finance, Army, Religion, Education, Trade Unions, Wages—these and other subjects are analyzed by the Delegation who travelled unhindered and free to investigate in all sections of Soviet Russia.

It is a complete, impartial and dignified document of one of the world's leading bodies of Labor,—including a special report on the famous "Zinoviev" letter and the Red International of Labor Unions.

Gitlow to Prison

Ben Gitlow was committed to Sing Sing prison yesterday to finish his sentence of five to ten years, which sentence he received upon being found guilty of violation of the "criminal anarchy" statute, a law placed upon the New York statute books on the wave of hysteria following the assassination at Buffalo of President McKinley. Never intended for any purpose other than preventing conspiracy to assassinate public officials, and advocacy thereof, the law remained for years a dead letter.

But when the Russian revolution came and its reflex profoundly affected the socialist movement of the world, resulting in the Communist elements breaking away from the social patriots in the old parties, capitalism was confronted with the necesssity of devising legal excuses to crush the movement. The ruling class never feared the socialist party, but when the young, virile Communist movement sprang into existence, criminal syndicalist and criminal anarchy laws were placed upon statute books in many states. In New York the old criminal anarchy law was resurrected and used in an effort to crush the Communist movement.

Gitlow was one of the first victims of this revamped law and for participating in publishing the left wing manifesto of the socialist party was tried, convicted and sentenced to an indeterminate sentence of from five to ten years. This savage sentence proved to the world that the American courts were far more vicious and despotic than even the courts of the kaiser of Germany. In Germany, Karl Liebknecht received a sentence of but two and a half years for the admitted crime of treason to the imperialist government in time of war. In New York Gitlow was sentenced to ten years for merely aiding in publishing a manifesto of the Communist elements within the socialist party.

Comrade Gitlow's record in the left wing of the socialist party and in the Communist movement parallels the history of that movement itself. As an effective fighter in the ranks of labor he is thoroly hated and feared by the capitalist class and its instrument of oppression—the state, with its courts, police and prisons.

Gitlow in jail forcibly exposes the fraudulent character of the democracy that we hear so much about. It is a direct blow at free speech, and carried to its logical conclusion outlaws a political party embracing doctrines that challenge the supremacy of the capitalist class. The only reason the whole party is not still victimized is because the contemptible scoundrels serving the ruling class now try to revive in the minds of the workers the illusion of capitalist democracy that received such a rude jolt during and after the war.

The capitalist government has the power to jail Gitlow today, but the time will come when the working class of this country will batter down any jail that the ruling class may improvise to hold revolutionists, freeing them in order that they may aid in the revolt that will place the capitalists in jail for their crimes against the working class.

Furriers in Convention

The convention of the Furriers' Union that opened in New York yesterday is a mile-post in the struggle of the rank and file to wrest control of the organization from the hands of the reactionary officials and place it in the hands of representatives of the membership, who will strive to organize the industry and defend the interests of the workers against the employers. The present policy of the reactionary officialdom, led by President Morris Kaufman, is to crush the militant members and wreck every attempt to improve the conditions in the shops.

Like the whole reactionary officialdom of the American labor movement the petty despots of the Furriers' Union strive to enforce autocratic rules against the demands of the membership by endeavoring to exterminate those who fight to improve conditions. When they are attacked as officials they raise a loud clamor that the union has been attacked. Like the Gompersites of the A. F. of L. they visualize themselves as the union.

Organized under the influence of the labor-hating, reactionary Jewish Daily Forward and the socialist clique of labor lieutenants of capitalism, the Furriers' officialdom will fight to the last in order to continue in strategic positions that will enable them effectively to serve the employers.

The left wing is organized upon the principle of fighting for the elementary demands of the membership; a program that will strengthen the organization and enable it to function against the bosses.

This is the line-up: The left wing fighting against the bosses, challenging the power of the entrenched right wing defending the interests of the bosses.

Pawns of Imperialism

French frightfulness against the Druse tribesmen, that brought all of Syria into the struggle and reached a climax in the storming of Damascus, was carried out under the orders of General Sarrail, a staunch supporter of the Herriot radical socialist clique. In the anti-climax of this struggle the socialists expose still more flagrantly their role as agents of imperialism.

In the sessions of the chamber of deputies the latter part of last week the Communist members severely assailed the government's policy and demanded to know the facts regarding the revolt of the Jebel Druses, the storming of Damascus and the whole of the story of General Sarrail.

Aristide Briand, minister of foreign affairs, in an effort to save the Painleve government, proposed adjournment of the discussion until the return of Sarrail. Tho Briand despises the socialists and it is known that his political maneuvering is toward the creation of a powerful center bloc with Poincareites, the depraved socialists supported his move in the chamber, thereby enabling the Painleve government to remain in power.

The Communists alone fought against a continuation of the Syrian war and demanded withdrawal of French troops and the liberation of Syria, while the socialists, true to their type thruout the world again demonstrated the fact that imperialism can always rely upon their support. As betrayers of the working class and the colonial movement for liberation they play a role not less vile than that of the armed mercenaries who conduct the actual butchery.

Clara Zetkin Reports On Work Among Women

Before Communist Women's Congress

My report will be brief. The point of greatest importance is to hear the reports given by the representatives of the individual sections.

The task set the International Women's Secretariat was the execution of the decisions of the V. World Congress and of the International Communist Women's Conference. This task consisted of the complete ideological and organisatory incorporation of Communist work among women into the general work of the Party. This task has nothing to do with the question of the right and duty of women comrades to co-operate, on terms of perfect equality as members of the Sections, in all work, actions and struggles in the Communist Parties. This right and this duty are beyond question. Our task is to win over the broad masses of working women for the principles of Communism, and to make them so at one with these principles that their faith becomes action. The masses of proletarian women must be induced to take part in all the economic, political, and social struggles of the proletariat and to do this under the leadership of the Communist Parties and of the Communist International.

Organization Work Necessary.

The Communist Parties must create suitable organs for the accomplishment of this task. In every leading body—from the national Central down to the nucleus—one member is to be specially entrusted with the duty of systematically organizing the work among the masses of the women. This member—whether a man or a woman comrade—must of course receive the help of the necessary technical aids and auxiliaries. The work of the women's secretary or women's secretariat must be complemented by the co-operation of auxiliary organs: women's committees, women's agitation committees, etc. The International Women's Secretariat has set the example of complete incorporation. In every question it invariably co-operates with the corresponding working departments of the Communist International. It has done this with reference to the Department for Agitation and Propaganda, the Organization Bureau and the Co-operative Department. It invites representatives of the various Sections to take part in its meetings. It co-operates with the related revolutionary organizations: the Red International of Labor Unions, the Peasants' International, Youth International, International Red Relief and International Workers Aid.

Unfortunately the ideological and organisatory incorporation of Communist work among women is still exceedingly incomplete in the majority of the Sections of the West. Very few of the Communist Parties possess the required apparatus.

Guard Against Erroneous Tendencies.

The central incorporation of work among women has made the greatest progress in Germany. But there is still much left to be desired here in the districts and centres.

In France the central organ has been created by the appointment of a woman secretary, but until quite recently her activity was confined almost solely to Paris.

In Italy earnest endeavors have been made towards the organization of a good apparatus, despite Fascism. Here there is a national women's secretariat, reinforced by a national women's committee, composed of representatives of the large provinces. 29 federal women's agitation committees have already sprung into existence, but the Party has not yet organized and developed the work sufficiently in the various centres.

The apparatus is still exceedingly imperfect in England. The national woman secretary receives practically no technical aid, and in the various districts and centres there is a lack of organs making it possible to cooperate with the Central for the awakening and mobilization of the masses.

Czecho-Slovakia possesses a well developed apparatus for work among the women. Unfortunately, up to the present we have no definite information as to the relation between the various departments, as to the organizatory relations to the party executive, to the party press, etc.

In the United States the organization— so it appears to us— does not seem to have been commenced on right lines of our work.

This has however been the case in Austria and Holland. In Sweeden and Norway there are still many remains of the old social democratic forms of organization. We have no definite data of the state of affairs in Poland, the party there being obliged to work illegally or semi-illegally.

As a general rule we find the two following erroneous tendencies with regard to the incorporation of women's work into the general work of the party. Despite the repeated decisions of the World Congresses there are still independent women's communist organizations, working side by side with the party. And on the other hand there is a tendency to deny the necessity of special systematic work among the masses of proletarian women, by means of special organs. Both tendencies must be overcome.

What has been accomplished towards carrying out the work itself? The World Congress and the Women's conference laid special emphasis upon the extreme importance of reaching the working women in the shops and factories. This is closely bound up with the reorganization of the party with regard to factory nucleus work, and with the growing economic struggles of the proletariat. Unfortunately, work in this direction has not yet made much progress

Germany Accomplishes Most

The best work has been done by the Communist Party in Germany, though even more it is by no means perfect. A beginning has been made with the work of organization among the working women in large industrial centers, such as Berlin, Saxony, Thuringia and Wurtemberg. The initiative has been taken by the women's departments, these entering into communication with party and trade union functionaries. Special success is reported from the work among the women textile workers of Thuringia. In Gera it was possible to convocate a delegate's meeting among the women textile workers, and this elected a permanent women's commitee. A commitee of women home workers' was founded in Berlin. Systematic work towards organizing the women was interrupted by the election campaign undertaken by the party. This fact shows the weaknesses of our general party work in the shops and factories. The situation should have been utilized for mobilizing the women workers in the factories.

In France the Paris Federation drew up an excellent program for work among the women workers in the factories. The International Women's Secretariat forwarded this to all Sections as information and stimulation. Up to the present we have received no report on the actualization of this program, nor on the necessary extension of the work to the great industrial centres in the provinces: the Department du Nord, Lyons and its environs, upper Alsatia, etc.

Women in Ranks of Fighters.

In England, Party work among the proletarian masses has been chiefly confined to the miners, metal workers, and transport workers, these being the bearers of the Minority movement. Practically nothing has been done towards organizing the working women in the factories. The Minority movement has been extended too little to the trade unions in which women are organized. It is not sufficient to organize women merely for the struggles against the employers, they are to be enlisted in the ranks of the fighters against trade union bureaucracy; and among the champions of trade union unity.

This must be done in all the countries of the West. Here the women organized in trade unions are everywhere supporters of trade union bureaucracy, altho this betrays the interests of the working women.

Campaign Against Workers.

"In August the Polish intelligence department began a regular campaign to destroy the workers' and peasants' movement of the Belostok region. Every day tens and hundreds of arrested workers and peasants were brot into Belsk from the various parts of the region. Those subject to arrest included all prominent trade union workers, all peasants suspected by the intelligence department, workers in receipt of legal opportunist (social democratic) papers, White Russian teachers and anyone denounced to agents of the intelligence department or by provocateurs. Arrests took place in Belostok, Zabludove, Suprasl, Mikhaelovo, and other villages and localities. On the road to Belsk the arrested were beaten and ill-treated in every possible manner.

"Among the arrested there were old men and women and little children, who were taken in lieu of relations who could not be found and whose arrest was intended.

"Towards the end of August there were already 700 prisoners in Belsk. As the prison could not hold them all some of them were quartered in the hospital and in baracks.

How They Were Examined.

"The arrested people were taken to the hospital where they were stripped naked. Then they were taken to a room with drawn blinds where the higher police officials were awaiting them (the chief of the intelligence department, Kozlovsky, the Commissary Schlussaltchik, and others). Here the wild orgy began. The first question was: "Are you a Communist?" and if a non-party peasant or worker answered that he was not a Communist, forms of torurte were applied unknown during the czarist regime and during the inquisition; the unfortunate person was gagged, bound and in this condition was thrown against the wall, the legs and arms were tied with a string, a stick was inserted and the victim was thrown into the air. This procedure continued as a rule until the victim fainted. Then cold water was poured on him or her and 'the work' began again.

"Hot salt water mixed with urine was poured down the throat of the victims. Needles were pushed under the nails; needles were also made red hot and stuck into the soles; the soles of his feet were then beaten and if the person under examination had not yet fainted, fire was applied to the soles of his feet until he lost consciousness and then he was again revived.

Confessions Forced.

"But if a peasant or worker, unable to stand the torture, 'confessed' that he was a Communist, he was asked to give the name of the leaders, etc. As he did not know what answer to give to these questions, he was again tortured. He was beaten on the head with sticks. Water was poured into the nose until the stomach began to swell and a policeman sat on the swollen stomach, then the victim's hair was torn out by the root. Lips were burned with lighted cigarettes. Commissary Schlussaltchik applied the burning cigarettes, and the bruised and half-dead victim was thrown into the hospital until the next dose of torture.

"The prisoners were not allowed to see relations nor to receive food. It was only permitted to bring underclothes which had to be changed frequently, the old underclothes which were saturated with blood were burned.

People Move From Village.

"It is difficult to find words to describe the horrors inflicted on the inhabitants of Belsk. People were kept awake by the unearthly cries of the tormented prisoners. Many inhabitants of Belsk have left the place in order to escape witnessing this unheard of terror.

"Panic reigns in the whole of western White Russia. Peaceful inhabitants are living continually in the fear that the same fate will be meted out to them. Towns and villages are full of agents-provocateurs who bring more and more victims to the hangmen.

"At present about 200 people are subjected to these tortures.

Socialists Aid Hangmen.

"The Polish bourgeois press and the pseudo-socialists—the Polish socialist party—deliberately keep silent about these prisoners and the horrors perpetrated on them, just as they keep silent about the mass arrests and brutal tortures inflicted on the 3,000 Ukrainians and White Russians arrested in April, 1925, supplying the working class of Europe with lying statements on the position of the workers, peasants, and national minorities in Poland.

Send Delegations.

"These prisoners have no opportunity to tell anyone about their sufferings. Ill treated and bruised they are without any help whatever. The ardent wish of these prisoners is that the international proletariat and peasantry should send workers' and peasant delegations to Poland in order that they should see for themselves to what length the Polish bourgeoisie and intelligence department are going, in order that they might see the tortured and bruised bodies of their brother workers and peasants.

Protest Against Terror.

"In fulfillment of the request of the tortured prisoners, we, who have escaped from this hell, approach all workers' and peasants' organizations and all workers' and peasant parliamentary fractions with the request to help the workers and peasants lingering in Polish prisons, to protest against the unheard of brutalities and insults and to send delegations to Poland, where having convinced themselves on the spot, in Belsk, that all what we had said is only an infinitesimal part of the actual horrors, they will compel the Polish government to put a stop to the brutalities and atrocities, which are unprecedented in the history of the wdrlo.

"Stephan Savtshuk, Prushani district, Sherasheff, village Suikovstisena; David Lushka, Belsk district, Belovesh, village Kivatshino; Vikenty Sedon, Belsk district, Belovesh, village Kivatshino; Vladimir Bartassevitch, Belsk district, Belovesh, village Kivatshino; Vladisslaw Novitsky, Prushani district, Noskov, village Bartnovitsky; Pavel Komyuk, Prushani district, Noskov district, village Salesye."

Small Industry in China

By James H. Dolsen

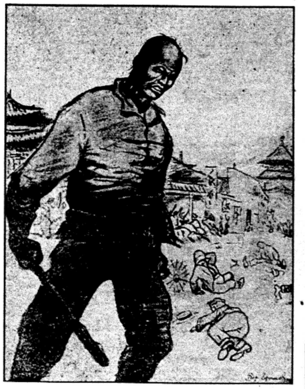
THE fact that all stages in the transition from primitive hand work to the most highly developed capitalistic industry may be found in large areas in China is evident from a study of economic conditions as officially reported.

While modern large-scale production takes place chiefly in the treaty ports and large cities of the coast the interior places, even those of great importance and size, may, like Peking, be characterized by a large number of small establishments in which a few workers and apprentices work under the direct supervision of the master. Indeed in the majority of cases the owner toils side by side with his employes.

Rug Industry of Peking.

OUT of the thousands of workshops in Peking, designated as factories, there are hardly a score which are of any consequence. Most of them employ under 100 workers and are only partly modernized. In the rug industry, for example, there were in 1920 a total of 354 establishments. Of the nineteen of these which were well-known to the public the largest employed 200 operatives and 8 apprentices. The use of a very large number of apprentices as compared to skilled workers is shown in the fact that the third in size hired 300 apprentices to 30 trained weavers. Another place employed five operatives with apprentices and another had but one craftsman with 31 apprentices.

The apprentices were from 13 to 20 years old and their term ran for three years. They received their board and lodging and a meager allowance at the end of each year. The operatives were paid 20 cents to 30 cents for each kung they finished, being required to complete 30 kung a month. A kung is a square foot of rug woven in 9 warps and the same number of woofs.



The simplest rug factory requires a capital of less than $100 and is operated by the proprietor with a few apprentices in a native shack.

Other Industries in Same Stage.

OTHER industries in Peking are in the same intermediate stage. Out of over 100 cotton mills only three have over 100 employes including hte apprentices. There are innumerable printing plants but only two of any size. Of the seven iron works the most important had 450 operatives and 170 apprentices. Only one other had over a hundred employes.

The making of clossonne ware is an important business. There is one large factory with 350 workers. The rest are very small family affairs using hand labor only. The manufacture of glassware has been known to the Chinese for countless centuries yet the plants are generally small, using the crudest and most primitive methods.

The largest employs 20 craftsmen to 110 apprentices. Two hosiery knitting mills out of the 76 were of any size. At that time the four modern flour mills were closed because the imported flour from mills in America was cheaper, an interesting illustration of the way in which the more efficient, highly-paid labor of our own country, scientifically exploited with capitalist control of huge sources of supply, can drive out of a native market its own home production.

Child Workers Preferred.

THE largest industrial establishment seems to have a branch of the Tanhua Match company. Here over 1,000 were employed. Of these one-half were children engaged in the packing department where it was stated they were preferred to adults "not because of the cheapness of their labor but because of the deftness of their hands." However, the fact of their working at less than half what the adults get very evidently played a considerable part in their selection. The Sonhoshin Brewery, the only Chinese-owned one in northern China, has 270 operatives and 200 apprentices. The Peking Electric Light company, which employs 290 men, accords the best working conditions and wages. Its employes receive from $10 to $70 a month with their meals. There is a pension for the injured and 30 per cent of the net profits go to the workers as a yearly bonus.

PROVES WHITE THUGS BEGAN DETROIT RIOT

State Witness Admits Stones Were Thrown

DETROIT, Nov. 9.—Clarence Darrow Saturday made his first successful assault on the contention of state's attorneys that the killing of Leon Breitner during a race riot here in September was unprovoked.

The state has produced many witnesses who declared that while there were crowds around the home of Dr. Ossian H. Sweet, colored physician and chief of the eleven colored defendants on trial for murder, there was no sign of violence and that the two volleys of gunshots came from the house without any move toward it being made by those outside.

But Saturday Edward Wettlaufer, a state witness, under cross-examination by Darrow, admitter that he had seen stones thrown at the Sweet house.

Lasky Is Optimistic That Fight on Movie Trust Will Be Fizzle

Charges of violation of the Sherman anti-trust law in the moving picture trust sponsored by the famous Players-Lasky does not phase the vice-president of the company one bit, he has made known to interviewers at the Drake Hotel wheer he attended a conference and feast of executhive and sales officials of the corporation. When asked about his guess of the outcome of the Nov 24th hearing on charges made by the examiner for the federal trade commission, Jesse L. Lasky replied that he was "very optimistic."

FRANKLIN COUNTY MINERS DEFEND FRAME VICTIMS

Farrington Machine in Hanging Conspiracy

(Special to The Daily Worker)

FRANKLIN, Ill., Nov. 10. — Mass meetings to raise funds for the defense of the Zeigler miners indicted as a result of a conspiracy between the coal operators, the Farrington gang and the Len Small machine, will be held in Belleville on next Thursday evening and in O'Fallon on Friday evening.

The miners thruout the entire Illinois coal fields are aroused over the attempt to railroad Frank Corbishly to the gallows on a charge of murder, for which Alex Hargis, a ku kluxer was originally arrested. The murdered man was a close friend of the Corbishly family and the bitter enemy of the ku klux klan.

The murder charge against Frank Corbishly, who is a brother of Henry Corbishley, the leader of the progressive miners in Zeigler, is looked upon as an effort to save the neck of Hargis the K. K. K. slayer.

The International Labor Defense is co-operating with the Franklin county defense committee to defend the Zeigler miners.

MAY DECIDE ITALIAN DEBT IN 48 HOURS

Consider the Fall of Mussolini Is Near

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 10.—Altho individual members of both the Italian and American commissions dealing with the Italian debt have stated that they believe a settlement will be reached within 48 hours, the real facts regarding the secrecy and the delay in reaching an agreement is based not so much upon any disputed question of economics as upon the political situation in Italy.

Recent events in that country and the alleged attempt on Mussolini's life indicate a widespread unrest that augurs ill for the fascist regime. The terror has created such a condition that there is no political weapon other than direct attacks upon the government and it is a question whether the present government can remain in power long enough to put into effect the provisions of any settlement that may be acceptable to Wall Street as represented by the government at Washington.

While still refusing to divulge details of the efforts to fund the Italian debt of $2,138,000,000, spokesmen for Mellon and Volpi state that they might reach a settlement even tomorrow.

May Prolong Stay

ROME, Italy, Nov. 10.—Mussolini has authorized the Italian debt mission to the United States to prolong its stay in an effort to procure a settlement, it was announced today. This action by the bandit premier is interpreted as an evidence of desperation on the part of the government that is known to be in such disrepute thruout the world that even newspaper reporters openly flaunt their contempt for the fascist chief when he leaves the soil of Italy. If the debt mission fails it will send the Italian currency down the disastrous path of the French franc, which will produce a crisis that not even the savage ferocity of the fascists easily can overcome.

Strike Against Wage Cut Spreads in Coke Region

By GEORGE PAPCUN

(Special to The Daily Worker)

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Nov. 10.—The coke region miners, unorganized, are striking for the demands of the 1923 scale, for the seven-hour day for better working conditions and against discrimination.

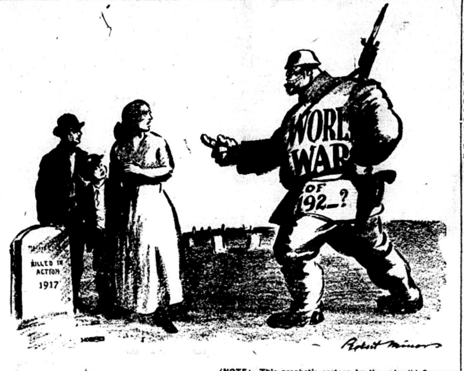
Eight or nine mines are shut down. Three strikers are arrested and four more have disappeared from the picket lines. The sheriff claims they are not in the county jail, but pickets saw deputies arrest them. It is suspected that the men arrested are being held incommunicado on company property of the company town.

An extra heavy force of deputies are on guard at all mines, but the strike is spreading and progressing. Mass meetings are being held at Republic every night. The meeting last night was three times as big as the night before and all could not get into the hall.

Calls are being issued in circular to all miners in the region by the strike committee of the Connellsville coke region, calling also for the organization of committees of action at all mines. The officials of the U. M. W. of A. are, as usual, conspicuous by their absence.

A big meeting at which George Papcun is to speak is to be held this afternoon at Republic. Over two thousand miners are expected to attend. Pit committees are being organized at every meeting to carry on the strike.

The present time is very favorable to the United Mine Workers' Union to reorganize the coke region, build up a 100 per cent organization in the district and unite these miners with the other coal miners of the nation.



"I want your sons!"
"But—in 1914—?"
"That was only a rehearsal."

LONG EXPECTED BETRAYAL OF THE ANTHRACITE STRIKERS LOOMS AS GOV. PINCHOT MOVES TO MEDIATE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 10.—The first definite move to betray the anthracite strike is in motion.

Governor Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania, who succeeded in betraying the hard coal strike two years ago, has taken the initiative. He was waiting today for replies to letters he sent to John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, and Major W. W. Inglis, chairman of the anthracite operators' wage committee, to meet with him and discuss the controversy.

Pinchot suggested to Lewis that they meet Wednesday in Philadelphia for a discussion. He proposed to Inglis that they meet in Harrisburg Thursday.

If, after talking separately with Lewis and Inglis, he feels that the differences of the two leaders could be merged and a resumption of wage negotiations brot about, Pinchot will suggest a joint conference with this object in view, it was said today. The differences of the miners does not matter apparently.

Both Lewis and Inglis are expected to accept the governor's invitation to meet with him.

DATES GIVEN PURCELL ON TOUR THRU THE U. S. AND CANADIAN CITIES

The trade union committee arranging the Purcell tour has announced the following dates for his speeches in several cities of the United States and Canada:

Miners! Stand Firm!

The Progressive Miners' Committee yesterday issued the following statement upon the report that Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania was trying to "mediate" in the anthracite coal strike:

• • • •

ANTHRACITE STRIKERS! The betrayal we warned you against is approaching. There is an attempt being made by your enemy, the governor of Pennsylvania, your enemy, the head of the mine operators, and John L. Lewis to negotiate a "settlement" of your strike.

No doubt another compromise, another betrayal, like the one by the same people which in 1923 surrendered your wage demands to the mine owners by arbitration and left you with nothing but defeat.

Continuous propaganda by the mine operators against your wage demands, for arbitration of these demands and for immediate resumption of work pending arbitration, shows what the operators will insist upon.

Miners, stand firm! Demand that your union officials do not consent to arbitration! It is not only your wages that will be arbitrated and betrayed, it will be your lives, the happiness of your wives and children, the bread upon your table! Insist upon no arbitration of your wage demands.

Miners! Organize in your local unions. Organize committees of action. Stop the betrayal of your wages and conditions. Demand by resolutions in every local, from every pit, that your officers stand firm against arbitration, against surrender of your wages. Stand firm for the demands of your Tri-District convention. Act at once!

PROGRESSIVE MINERS' COMMITTEE,
Alex Reid, Secretary.

ANTHRACITE OPERATORS PILE UP HUGE PROFITS WHILE PLEADING POVERTY AGAINST WAGE DEMANDS

The following article exposing the fabulous profits of the anthracite coal operators, comes at a time when these plundering plutocrats, living in mansions with every luxury, are using every agency of publicity to spread the idea that they are all going bankrupt and operating at a loss. This is the eighth of a series of articles by Alex Reid, secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee, whose speaking trip to the region was interrupted by his being sent to jail for a month.

(Secretary Progressive Miners' Committee).

(Article VIII.)

In view of the fact that the coal operators of the anthracite industry are pleading bankruptcy at this time, it is well we examine the state of their finances and profits.

The operators have consistently attempted to conceal their profits and the following figures will show why. They have consistently padded their production costs and valuations, hidden their books from the scrutiny of the workers and juggled their figures. If their business were in a state of bankruptcy, why do they refuse us the right to examine their books and enquire into their business?

$4,500,000 of a Reduction!

We are aware of the fact that the Lehigh Coal company, and Coxe Brothers company received a reduction in tax assessments last year of four and one half million dollars and apparently made about three and one half million dollars more. Chamberlain Hopes to Force "Security" Pact Embracing Balkans

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Great Britain will take no part in initiating a "security pact" until the Balkan states have settled their outstanding differences, it was said at the foreign office today, following the speech by Austen Chamberlain, foreign minister, in which he expressed the hope that such a pact would be concluded.

If present causes for dispute in the Balkans are submitted to the league of nations and setled in accordance with the spirit of Locarno then the powers would be ready to summon a Balkan security pact conference, it was stated.

The seventeenth general convention of the I. W. W. in session at the general headquarters at 3333 West Belmont, consisting of twelve delegates, reduced itself to eleven late Monday by unseating Warren Lamson, one of the two delegates from the combined small industrial unions.

It followed this up Tuesday by voting down a resolution passed thru the small industrial union convention because, apparently, Harrison George had had something to do with it as a member of the resolutions' committee in the small industrial union convention.

Cuban Deportations Laid to America by Anti-Imperialists

Blame for the deportations and arrests which have been going on in Cuba is laid directly at the door of Wall Street, by the Cuban section of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League, which points out that President Machodo is being regularly visited by General E. R. Crowder, the American ambassador.

The Cuban section of the All-America Anti-Imperilaist League, established only a few months ago, has been very active, demanding categorically that the United States government relinquish its "thinly-veiled protectorate" over Cuba, consent to the abrogation fo the Platt amendment and immediately withdraw all military and naval forces from Guantenamo Bay.

Headquarters of the Cuban section are at Gral, Suarez, 216-218, Havana. A special secretariat for foreign correspondence has been set up, under charge of A. Bernal del Rieszo. Julio A. Mella, arrested during the recent raids, continues as general secretary.

'INTERNATIONAL' TAKES DOWN ALL REWARD NOTICES

Injunctions Scrapped as Strikers Win

The injunction and reward notices pasted on the windows, and the banner, which the scabbing United Garment Workers of America had hoisted onto the building telling the passer-by to "watch us grow," were all missing when the members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, who have been on strike at this plant for 19 weeks officially returned to work yesterday morning.

Long before the hour at which they start work at the plant, had arrived, the strikers met and formed into a line of twos. They then marched from their union hall to the place of work amid the cheers of workers who had seen them on the picket line for the last 19 weeks.

Between 350 to 400 members of the union were back at work at the International Tailoring company. The remainder of the 800 workers, who are employed by the J. L. Taylor Co., a subsidiary of the International Tailoring company will be back to work within a week when the machinery which was taken to Rock Island is returned to Chicago.

England to Demand Locarno Security Pact for Balkans

GENEVA, Nov. 9.— Proposals for a Balkan security pact, similar to the Locarno pacts, will be made at the December meeting of the council of the league of nations, it was learned. Austen Chamberlain, British foreign minister, is expected to make the first step in this direction.

The Anglo-Russian Unity Committee and the Right Wing Amsterdamers

By A. LOSOVSKY.

I.

Scarborough—a New Defeat of the Amsterdam International.

THE British Trade Union Congress at Scarborough had to decide who was correct, the left or the right wing of the Amsterdam International. All the Amsterdam reactionaries had set their hopes on their English friends—Thomas, Clynes, Cramp, etc., who were expected to lead the English trade union movement, which had exceeded the bounds set by the Amsterdam International, back into the fold. The social-democratic press had maintained in a demagogic manner that the resolutions of the general council indicated merely a change of attitude of some trade unionists, but not of the English trade union movement. The congress was called to decide this question.

The most prominent leaders of the Amsterdam International (Jouhaux, Oudegeest, Leipart, etc.) did not appear at this congress, as they obviously could not hope to be received with approval. This was declining the fight before the battle began. This foreboding did not mislead the right leaders of the Amsterdam International; the congress in Scarborough, in spite of many weaknesses, was a brilliant demonstration of the anti-Amsterdam tendency. Has such a thing ever happened as that the Amsterdam trade unions declared themselves in favor of supporting the struggle of the colonial peoples even should they declare themselves independent states? Do not German social-democracy and German trade union bureaucracy dream day and night of receiving colonies, and here was what might be described as a Bolshevist attitude towards the most delicate question of world imperialism.

In comparison with the congress at Hull, this congress took a step forwards in the question of trade union unity. In Hull the unity was provided for by the Amsterdam International and round the Amsterdam International. In Scarborough it was a case of the creation of an all-embracing trade union international which is only thinkable thru an international unity congress. In the question of shop committees the congress also took an attitude opposed to that of Amsterdam. Let us bear in mind that the French reformists have frequently declared the abandonment of shop committees to be a prerequisite to unity. Finally the Scarborough congress took an openly revolutionary attitude towards the question of the Dawes' plan, the pet of the Second and Amsterdam Internationals.

SCARBOROUGH represents a defeat of the Amsterdam International not only in the question of unity, but in a number of other questions which are of the greatest significance for the whole English and international labor movement. Whether it likes it or not, Amsterdam must now take this decision into consideration, for the English trade unions represent a third of the whole Amsterdam International.

The congress at Scarborough further brot to light the deep-reaching differences of opinion which exist between the English trade union movement and the leaders of the English labor party. A curious phenomen may be observed in England; the political party lags behind the trade union movement. This must inevitably lead to a struggle which would mean a most serious upheaval in the British labor party.

APART from objective causes which are drawing the labor movement to the left, the systematic and deliberate tactics of the Communist Party of Great Britain and of the Minority Movement played an important part in the move towards the left of the English trade unions. Before the trade union congress, the conference of the adherents of the Red International of Labor Unions took place. At this conference, 750,000 workers were represented; this necessarily had an influence on Scarborough; with the growth of the revolutionary wing, the right and left wings had to take up a definite attitude.

As far as the Red International of Labor Unions is concerned, we cannot but rejoice at the results of the trade union congress. The resolutions of the Scarborough congress have already borne fruit; the Anglo-Russian Committee has begun to function and this is of enormous significance for the fate of the whole international trade union movement.

The Amsterdam right is still obstin-

PAINTERS WHIP REACTIONARIES IN LOCAL 300

Expelling Progressives Moved to Referendum

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 10.—The Seattle Painters' Local No. 300 once more administered the conservative element in that union a terrific blow, when by a vote om more than four to one it decided to submit for a referendum vote of the International the striking out of a clause in the constitution adopted in the last convention held at Montreal.

This clause, while it is weak and meaningless, nevertheless smacks as being originated in a class collaboration paint shop and, moreveor, it has a dangerous feature in it, as it tends to divide the membership according to their political opinions, while at the same time it puts a club into the hands of the officialdom to be used against all progressive elements and all opposition to the official machine, including Communists.

Conservatives Caucus

For weeks the conservative elements in the local union have been busy rallying their forces to defeat the resolution submitted, thinking that by such an accomplishment they would hurt the standing of two prominent leaders in the local labor movement and in that body.

The resolution follows:

"WHEREAS, This amendment, if allowed to stand and be put into effect can and will be used to expel any member who is opposed to class collaboration and advocates united and militant action by the workers against the bosses; and

Oppose Persecution

"WHEREAS, This amendment makes possible the persecution and expulsion of members who are not only complying with the laws of the union but who also worked tirelessly for the upbuilding and betterment of the organization for many years merely because of their political opinions and affiliations; and

"WHEREAS, This amendment not only discriminates against members because of their political views, but it also intimidates members by fear of expulsion so that they dare not expresses their convictions on important questions pertaining to the union in contradiction to ideas and wishes of the officialdom, thus creating gag rule; and Officials Disrupt the Union.

"WHEREAS, The effect of this amendment when enforced will be to divide our members instead of solidifying and uniting us in a common struggle for the better things or life; therefore be it

"RESOLVED, That Local Union No. 300 most emphatically disapproves and condemns this amendment because it is contrary to our right of free speech and minority expression; it gives the officialdom a weapon by which they can suppress any one opposing their rule."

Eleven Delegates of the I. W. W. at 17th Convention

overdue, according to the objectors to his being seated, and sufficient to disqualify him under the constitutional rule that to be eligible as delegate a member must be in continuous good standing for 18 months. To be in continuous good standing, it was pointed out, one must not have allowed his dues to become over sixty days in arrears.

In his defense Lamson pointed to the calendar and its illustration of the fact that January has 31 days but February had only 28—and as it was not leap year he would not be over sixty days in arrears until after the second of March, the day on which he paid up, had passed into eternal time.

Do Wobbly Secretaries Sleep?

The debate then turned on whether he had paid his dues before or after midnight on March second, and tho it is unusual for I. W. W. secretaries to do business after midnight, and altho Lamson asked for the floor to put his side of the question, he was ruled out by a vote of six to five, again missing out by a narrow margin.

A resolution presented by the small industrial union convention was brot up. It was very brief and contained the following resolve:

> ". . . that there is no conflict between the principles of proletarian revolution and the principles of industrial unionism as set forth by the I. W. W.."

A motion not to concurr with this was debated. It appears that in the small industrial union convention a resolution was offered by Alfred Kohn, manager of the I. W. W. printing plant which said that:

> "The I. W. W. is primarily a revolutionary organization and only secondarily a labor union."

The resolutions committee, to which Harrison George had been elected by the small industrial union convention, had unanimously proposed the substitute of "no conflict" given above. The small industrial union convention had accepted this substitute of its committee almost unanimously

Is the I. W. W. a Political Party?

But apprehension existed. Harrison George being on the committee the words of a resolution handled by it might not mean what they appeared to mean. Some of the delegates to the general convention took the point of view that they didn't mean anything at all. No one appeared to wish to say what they meant.

A debate on revolutionary principles was avoided. The resolution declaring that there "is no conflict between the principles of proletarian revolution and the principles of industrial unionism as set forth by the I. W. W," was voted down, indirectly upholding the views of the motion in the small industrial union to which it was a substitute, the effect of which was that the I. W. W. is a political party and not a labor union.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia., Nov. 10.—No indictments have been returned by the grand jury investigating the failure of the Central City Savings Bank. The jury, which has adjourned, was called by a depositors' committee considering the advisability of bringing civil action agaisnt officers of the bank.

NEW MURDERS IN DAMASCUS UNDER FRENCH

Battle Raging Outside Stricken City

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BEIRUT, Syria, Nov. 10—French frightfulness still rages thruout Damascus and the territory between that stricken city and Homs, extending even into Aleppo. Another grim chapter to the bloody crimes of the French occurred at Damascus on Sunday when three Bedouins were publicly hanged by soldiery in a public square and left suspended in the air for hours while the crowds milled in the streets reading the placards that were attached to each of the bodies warning the population that such would be the fate of all who did not submit in silence to the terror.

One placard read: "If more French officers are attacked you will hang like clusters of grapes from every public place in Damascus." Damascus is still a city of death and there is no sign of life except the sharp tramp of the feet of soldiery and the occasional fusilade of bullets as now murders are committed against the inhabitants of the city.

Battle Raging.

This morning there is a battle raging in the section between Damascus and Homs where French cavalry have engaged a part of the republican army. French troops have been roaming the country pillaging the farms, stealing and butchering sheep and other live stock, burning food provision houses and endeavoring in every manner to destroy the rations that might be available for the Syrians and Druses fighting against imperialist aggression.

Tanks, cavalry, light and heavy artillery, instruments for hurling liquid fire and poison gas equipment have been sent out of Damascus to meet the rebels and the French boast that they hope within the week to destroy the rebels.

Burn Villages.

In their campaign of ruthlessness the French are burning villages and murdering men, women and children wholesale, while thruout the whole countryside between Damascus and Homs groups of homeless families are foraging without food and sleeping in the open at night, only to aimlessly wander onward the next day—whither they know not.

Efforts are being made by the French to throw a line between Syria and Arabia in order to stop the desert people from swarming to the aid of the rebels. Reinforcements from Morocco are expected to arrive and will be used for that purpose.

Rebel forces are mobilizing for a second attack within the week in an effort to dislodge the French troops from their base of supplies in Damascus.

The rebels have destroyed railway bridges in order to prevent the French troops moving over the lines, thereby hampering the activity of the invaders. After cutting the railways Druse tribesmen succeeded in seizing Derat (Deraya, about seven miles south of Damascus) and will try to concentrate forces for an offensive against the southern part of the city where the French are encamped.

Feng to Fight Chang.

Major engagements are expected near Peking any day between the amies of Feng Yu-hsiang and the troops of Chang Tso-lin. On every side Chang is being pressed by hostile forces. His troops in mutiny, the soldiers of Yueh Wei-Chun, governor of Honan province and ally of Wu Pei-fu, together with the troops of Sun Chuan-fang, of Chekiang province, are advancing rapidly after driving Chang's armies out of Kiangsu province with a great battle at Huschow, where General Sun has taken control. Panic is spreading among Chang's followers at Tsinanfu.

HAYMARKET "RIOT" MARTYRS' MEMORIAL MEETING TONIGHT

The 38th annual memorial celebra- of the victims of the Haymarket "riot" will be celebrated tonight at the Prudential Hall, corner North avenue and Halsted St.

This memorial celebration is held in honor of August Spies, Albert Parsons, Louis Lingg, George Engel and Adolph Fischer, who were hung on a frame-up charge of throwing a bomb which killed a number of policemen during a demonstration at the Haymarket Square.

The celebration is being arranged by a number of labor unions, singing and benefit societies that have banded together into an association to keep alive the memory of those who were victimized during the strike for the 8-hour day which tied up the city of Chicago in 1887. Max Bedacht, Lucy Parsons and a number of others will speak.

K. K. K. DEFENSE RESTS CASE; MAY GO TO JURY SOON

Fist Fight Threat Over Perjury Charge

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NOBLESVILLE, Ind., Nov. 10.—After the prosecution's charges that the principal witness for the ku kluxers on trial here for the murder of Madge Oberholtzer was guilty of perjury the defense at 11:35 this morning suddenly rested its case.

Rebuttal testimony will begin by the defense this afternoon and after that will come the final arguments of the attorneys and instructions to the jury by the judge, when the case will go to the jury.

This move of the defense will probably result in the conclusion of the case this week.

Late yesterday afternoon, near the close of the session a fist fight was narrowly averted when the chief witness for D. C. Stephenson, the outstanding klansman of Indiana and Ohio and his two associates, Earl Klinck and Earl Gentry, was assailed by the prosecution as a perjurer.

"You know you came here for the express purpose of committing perjury and every word you have said on the subject is a deliberate lie," said the prosecutor.

The courtroom was in an uproar as the klansmen became infuriated at this assault upon their principal witness. The witness challenged the prosecutor to come out in the yard and fight him. The judge, trying to appear as dignified as it is possible for a Hoosier lawyer to be, reminded the prosecutor and the klan witness that it was not a police court and finally restored order.

"See, We're Alright!"

Anton C. Polak and Walter Zippman, United States deputy marshals, who were suspended some weeks ago following their five-hour trip from Chicago to the DeKalb county jail, a distance of fifty miles—with Terry Druggan, were finally discharged from government service by United States Marshal Anderson. Marshal Anderson said while there undoubtedly was an automobile wreck during the trip, other "irregularities" made the action "advisable."

A. F. of L. Officials Fear for Plight of Capitalist Rulers in Western Europe

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the American Federation of Labor officialdom joins with the international bankers in Wall Street to demand "partial cancellation of the debts" owed by the European capitalist governments to the United States. This unity of interest is developed in an attack on Senator Borah's demand that the loans be paid, and appears in the name of Matthew Woll, vice-president of the A. F. of L., considered a mouthpiece for the executive council.

• • • •

This outcry is nothing if not a guarded confession, perhaps even an unconscious admission, that America's labor heads fear the workings of the Dawes' slave plan imposed on Germany, in its effect on American working conditions. It is an indication of the growing dread that a similar plan may be imposed on other European countries, notably France, with similar results.

Since capitalist Europe, bankrupt and staggering under its burden of militarism and the cost of new wars, cannot pay the United States in gold, therefore, it must pay in goods, as Germany is trying to pay her late "enemies." An increase of the already great flood of European goods, coming into the United States, must have its effect on industrial conditions in this country, slowing down production and throwing large masses of labor out of work. This will happen in spite of all the capitalist nostrums proposed by Green, Woll & Co.

• • • •

It was this same A. F. of L. officialdom that supported and still supports, the Dawes' plan, the child of the Versailles peace and the league of nations.

It is partially correct to scoff at the remission of taxes resulting from the payment of the war debts because "remission of taxes goes largely to the very wealthy and in considerable part to swell the wasteful expenditures of the idle rich." But one can go farther. Secretary of the Treasury Mellon struggles to see to it that all remission of taxes redounds to the immediate benefit of great business, resulting in greater profits, wealth stolen from labor that is so great in extent that it cannot be entirely squandered by an idle parasite class, but must go forth seeking new fields of investment. This the A. F. of L. experts entirely ignore.

No wonder then, that these same A. F. of L. officials, who refuse to join in the world movement for trade union unity, shed their tears over the plight of the ruling capitalist class in Europe as follows:

> "The future prosperity of the debtor nation requires that enough should be paid to sustain its financial honor and its credit for future commercial borrowings but that no such excessive sums should be paid as would injure its productive power, its accumulation of capital—and its future 'ability to pay' its international debts."

That is what the House of Morgan says. Let the government remit the loans so that new "commercial borrowings" can be made from Wall Street's international bankers. Not for the benefit of the workers and farmers of western Europe. Only for the strengthening of European capitalism and its ability to exploit European labor. Remission of debts enhance the position of European profit takers, enabling them to attack their working class at home and carry on wars for the suppression of their colonial serfs. Just as the remission of taxes helps the capitalists in the United States. But the workers are in no way benefited.

• • • •

Labor in this country will learn that lesson in spite of its officialdom. It must know that the Green-Woll-Duncan regime at the head of the A. F. of L. has urged no remission of the czarist debts to the Russian workers and peasants. Instead they have used the repudiation of these debts by the Soviet Republic as an argument against recognition. Their worry now is that a weakened capitalism in western Europe will be unable to resist new onslaughts by rebellious workers and farmers.

• • • •

American labor must develop its solidarity with European labor. It must be prepared for the complete repudiation of all debts by European workers come to power. It must be made to realize that its interests can only be advanced thru courageous and militant class struggle; not thru collaboration with international financiers and great industrial overlords. On the question of the partial cancellation of war debts the A. F. of L. officials play the game of one section of the capitalist class. Senator Borah champions the cause of a different strata; the smaller industries and the well-to-do farmers, who vainly hope to improve their condition thru the payment of the European debts. The interests of the workers lead them to war against the whole capitalist class against Morgan, Borah, Green, Woll, etc., for the abolition of capitalism.

FURRIERS' LEFT WING BATTLES KAUFMAN GANG

Wins Victory as the Convention Starts

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 10.—The left wingers struck a militant note at the opening of the Furriers' convention by compelling the removal of scabbing taxi cabs and exposing the Kaufman machine's attempt to unseat three left wing delegates by maneuvers on Gold's credentials.

Hit Scab Checker Cabs.

The left wing opened their fight against the bureaucratic Kaufman machine with victory on an issue which symbolizes the fight of the left wing against class collaboration. The convention is being held at the American House, 56 Hanover street, where the Checker cabs, now on strike, maintain a stand.

Cabs were being operated by scabs under protection of police headquarters. The left wing immediately demanded that the convention change its headquarters and even move to another city if scab taxi cabs were not removed at once.

Kaufman hemmed on the issue and declared it impossible to change, ruling all motions on it out of order. But upon ultimatum of Ben Gold of New York joint board, that the New York delegates would not remain in convention under the circumstances, Kaufman was compelled to appoint a committee to investigate, adjourning the convention meawhile.

The cabs were removed and the convention proceeded after a two hours fight.

Kaufman opened with talk of his "successful" work, but his remarks were the joke of the convention because he discussed every place but New York, where eighty per cent of the members are located and where real organization is being done by the left wing Joint Board.

The credential committee brot in a majority and minority report. The majority Kaufman machine appointed, moved to seat 70 delegates and unseat three left wingers on the ground that they had not paid up their dues in proper time.

This attempt was exposed when right wing secretary Weiness who charged that dues payments were lacking in October, declared unwittingly that the International office did not have the October report of the New York Joint Board.

After this admission of the yellow socialist bureaucrat, the machine proposed that the Joint Board bring reports which will decide the seating of the contested delegates. These will probably be seated as the records of the Joint Board are correct.

The machine is resorting to maneuver to pospone discussion on the Ben Gold credential of the Joint Board by declaring they will issue a supplementary C. E. B. report on the question. But the left wing will make a determined fight to have immediate consideration.

The line up at this moment is not decided. There are twenty-five outspoken left wingers who may command support of other anti-machine delegates and make up a slight majority of the convention. The debate on the seating of delegates and Gold's Joint Board issue will continue tomorrow.

Armistice Day Will Enable Coolidge to Get His Picture Taken

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Nearly all government activity will cease in Washington for two minutes tomorrow at 11 a. m., in commemoration of Armistice Day, it was decided today at the cabinet meeting.

Coolidge will perform the routine of a pilgrimage to the tomb of the unknown soldier to deposit a wreath, in order to make the yokels think dead soldiers are to be envied and emulated by the workers.

Worker's Memorial Day

By PASQUALE RUSSO.

It is customary, annually, in the United States to commemorate the soldiers killed on the battlefields of capitalism. As we know these soldiers died victims of the two children of ignorance, fanaticism and patriotism. They died fighting the battles of their exploiters in the vain belief that they were fighting for their country which in truth belongs to the capitalist class.

Knowing these things, workers should not attend services designed to laud those who died in the service of capitalism. To call attention to a greater service to the country it is suggested that we set aside November 11 of each year as a memorial day to commemorate those soldiers of the working class who died in the service of working class freedom.

Looking back over the history of the class struggle we find that Nov. 11 is reddened with the blood of martyrs killed in the service of the working class. To dedicate this day to their memory would not only be a tribute to the great work which they did but it would hearten those who remain.

Tragic Facts of Nov. 11.

On November 11, 1887 four of our noble comrades were murdered in Cook county jail, Chicago. Their names were: August Spies, George Engel, Adolph Fischer and Albert R. Parsons. They fought the McCormick family interests and as a consequence were murdered, true martyrs to the cause of working class emancipation.

In November, about the same time in the month, Joe Hill the famous Wobbly poet was brutally killed in the penitentiary at Salt Lake City, Utah. A bit earlier in the same month five valiant workers were killed by agents of the lumber trust in the state of Washington. They gave their lives for the right of free speech and the right to organise the workers.

They were Felix Baran, Hugo Gerlot, Gustav Johnson, John Looney, Abraham Rabinowitz. This massacre took place in Everett, Washington, November 11, 1919.

On the evening of the very same day at Centralia, Wash., Wesley Everest, an American logger was lynched by a mob of 100 per cent American ruffians for having valiantly opposed the nefarious designs of the lumber barons.

Reminding ourselves of these events, it becomes our duty to commemorate the acts of our valorous comrades who died on the firing line in the war against the despotism of capitalism.

Organize!

Joe Hill, one of the above mentioned martyrs said: "Don't mourn for me, but organize!" Advice such as that is valuable. Merely shedding tears will get us nowhere. But we can recall their heroic deeds and give them their measure of due respect by following their example in uncompromisingly fighting the capitalist class. To carry the class struggle forward; to prepare for the battles of the coming social revolution, this is our task. By presenting a united front to the enemy; by giving blow for blow is a valiant way to commemorate Worker's Memorial Day.

vance the opinion that the plan is used as a measure to cover up and deflate the book earnings of the coal company.

As the Lehigh Coal Co. is one of the largest companies, and one of the most bitter against the anthracite miners' demands at this time we will expose its profits for a few years back.

The Poor "Bankrupt",

This company reports profits as follows: In 1922, $1,500,000; 1923 $3,500,000; in 1924, $2,500,000, and yet this company states it is bankrupt, and cannot pay the ten per cent increase asked by their wage slaves.

Couple to this amount the padded salaries and expenses of its owner officials and you will have an idea of the enormous amount of money crushed out of the lives of the workers by this one company.

More Profits.

The Lehigh and Wilkes Barre Coal Co. is another concern that is pleading poverty. The coal commission found this company earned in 1921 38.2 per cent on its investment, in 1922 it earned 38 per cent and in 1923 it earned 51.2 per cent—or $11,678,000.

This company is enthusiastic for arbitration, demanding that the underground slaves give up their demand for 50 cents per day increase to be arbitrated. Last year it earned $7,182,000 or 31.5 per cent. In the last two years it declared dividends of $15,292,000 in cash, and in 1924 it declared a 200 per cent stock dividend. In January of this year another dividend was declared of $3 per share to the bankrupt millionaire coal owners.

Good Business, We'll Say.

Another "bankrupt" coal company is the Glen Alden. The value of the stock of this company has climbed from 50 in 1920 to 130 in 1924. The income for 1923 was $9,411,000. The coal commission valued this property at $8,909,000, which indicates a 100 per cent earning rate.

The Delaware, Lackawana and Western sales agent for this company as pointed out by Gov. Pinchot, averaged fifty per cent profit for the last six years.

A Small Item of $30,000,000.

The Hudson Coal Co. is sales agent for the Deleware and Hudson Railroad Co., and is a new company formed to take care of the Hudson coal lands.

It was the representatives of this company who refused to explain the small items on their books—three of them — aggregating $30,220,302.71, to the coal commission. This small item of this one company is more than what is necessary to pay the increase asked of all the anthracite workers for one year.

Hundreds of millions of dollars profit per year, millions of dollars of royalties, millions in fancy salaries and padded expenses to the owners are part of the rake-off of those who are pleading bankruptcy. Juggling of figures beyond the imagination of a detective, accountant of financier are their stock in trade.

Starving Amid Wealth.

The workers in the anthracite are determined to win in spite of all the propaganda on bankruptcy and the new slogan of substitutes taking the place of the hard coal. Every conceivable means are being taken to break the morale of the miners, but the progressive miners thruout the anthracite with the other intelligent workers are not fooled by this capitalist campaign of misrepresentation and will fight for their meagre demands.

The hard coal miners are the poorest paid men in any industry in America considering the nature and hazards of their employment, and produce more wealth than any other group of workers of their size in the country. More wealth is produced in the anthracite mines in one day than gold in Alaska in one year.

ENGLAND IN EFFORT TO TRICK RUSS

Uses Soviet Reception for Spreading Bunk

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Nov. 9—British diplomacy is well schooled in the axiom that the best way to win support for war is to pretend to be anxious for peace. This is exemplified by the attendance for the first time since the war, of Great Britain's ambassador at a reception given by the Soviet embassy last night in celebration of the eighth anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution and in honor of Georges Tchitcherin, Soviet commissar of foreign affairs, who arrived yesterday from Wiesbaden.

British Ambassador Lord d'Abernon attended the function and engaged in lengthy conversation with Tchitcherin in an effort to make publicity for the hypocritical claims of Britain, that in its building an anti-Soviet bloc of western powers against Soviet Russia, Britain is moved solely by an earnest desire for peace.

Tries to Neutralize Soviet Influence.

Great Britain, moreover, has its worries lest Soviet Russia may wield such influence in Germany as to defeat the British move to fasten more firmly the chains upon Germany by Germany's full acceptance of the Locarno "peace" pacts. Lord d'Abernon undoubtedly was aiming in his talk with Tchitcherin to advance plausible argument why Soviet Russia should remain passive while the Dawes plan is being extended and permanently guaranteed by the Locarno pacts, the Dawes plan being a deliberate scheme for preventing a revolution by Germany's workers.

To accomplish such objects, British imperialism is willing to make any sort of promises, but more important yet is the need to make the masses of western countries think that the Locarno pacts are not a part of British plans for an ultimate war upon Soviet Russia.

Offers League Seat As Bait.

For this reason Lord d'Abernon let it be known that he had talked for more than an hour with Tchitcherin, assuring the Soviet representative of the "friendship of Britain," of Britain's alleged desire for peace and even offering to Soviet Russia membership in the league of nations.

Tchitcherin has nothing to say for the press, but he gave no indication of having changed his views since a few weeks ago, when he announced the Locarno pact as an anti-Soviet move which would lead to war, denounced Great Britain as the leading spirit in this menace to world peace and stated that the league of nations is dominated by British imperialism.

About 800 guests, strangely mixed between diplomats who have come to respect the power of Soviet Russia, and Communists who have built up this power in spite of their guests' armed attacks and blockades, attended the reception which was marked by plenty of red flags, revolutionary music and blunt assertion by the Soviet representatives of power in international affairs of the Russian workers and peasants.

The monocled German and British officers and diploments were required to stand respectfully while the orchestra played the Intrenational.

ately resisting the international unity congress and the creation of a united international. The only result that they will obtain by their tactics is that they will detach themselves from the international trade union movement. The unity of the international trade union movement has taken a serious step forward at the Scarborough congress, whether the Amsterdam right wished it or not.

II.

"A Disgraceful Document."

THIS description is taken from the Vorwaerts, the central organ of German social "Barmatism." It refers to the last proclamation of the Anglo-Russian Committee which, as is well known, was finally constituted after the Scarborough congress. The Vorwaerts is extremely disconcerted at the "remarkable paths" along which the English trade unionists are marching towards unity. The Vorwaerts quoted the most important passages from the proclamation published by the Anglo-Russian Committee and adds:

"One cannot lay down this document without a feeling of shame: the fact that the Russians could demand that the English members of the committee should accept such a manifesto, is an irrefutable proof of how completely the latter were under their thumb. The analysis of the present economic situation is Russian, the inclusion of the Dawes' plan is Russian, the formulation with regard to the guarantee pact in the west as a military alliance is also Russian as is finally the echo which the Anglo-Russian discussions are said to have found among the workers thruout the world, the description of which in no way corresponds to reality. It is anyhow a piece of impudence merely to record enthusiastic assent and to quote this as an incontestable "proof that the way taken was the right one, and not to breathe a word of the fact that millions of organized European trade unionists have looked on at these negotiations for unity with a mixture of incredulity and horror and have only observed silence because they wished to avoid giving the British bourgeoisie the chance of exploiting their protest against the English workers.

With the latest document however, the British trade union representatives have allowed themselves to be maneuvered by the Russians into such a position that it should be impossible for the international trade union movement to maintain silence any longer. It is high time that the other trade unions organized in the Amsterdam International should give emphatic expression to their dissentient expression to their dissentient attitude; for there is good reason to suppose that the members of the British trade union executive are no longer in the least aware how for they have already alienated themselves from their colleagues on the continent for the sake of their friendship with Russia."—(Emphasis by me, A. L.)

THESE expressions of opinion of the Vorwaerts with regard to the approach between the trade unions of the Soviet Union and of Great Britain deserve very serious consideration. The Vorwaerts had no feelings of shame at the time of the Barmat scandal. The Vorwaerts had no feeling of horror when Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg were murdered, with the moral participation of German social-democracy. The Vorwaerts felt neither shame nor horror when thousands and thousands of German proletarians were thrown into prison; the Vorwaerts never lost its sangfroid when the German proletariat, helped by German social-democracy, lost day by day, one after the other of the positions it had conquered and gradually became a European coolie.

No, this is all in order, this is all as it should be in accordance with the new Heidelberg program. When, however, the trade unions of the Soviet Union and of Great Britain come to an agreement on the basis of mutual concessions, when a way is found for the creation of a united international, when the English labor movement gets on to the lines of class war, then the Vorwaerts becomes hysterical and is overcome by feelings of "shame" and "horror."

SIMULTANEOUSLY with the demand that pressure should be exercised on the English trade unions, German social-democracy is making endeavors to draw the reactionary bureaucracy of the American Federation of Labor into the Amsterdam International thru the delegation of the A. D. G. B. which is at present in the United States. The cynical venality of the reactionaries in America produces no feeling of horror in German social-democracy, but the move of the English trade unions towards class war produces a feverish attack in the whole social-democracy, the most secret thots of which are so crudely expounded by the Vorwaerts.

The appeal of the Vorwaerts to the right wing of the Amsterdam International has not failed to take effect. Amsterdam has appeared on the scene with explanations which explain nothing except the feeling of horror of the Amsterdam right for the growing will of the masses for unity.

We are proud of this "disgraceful document" which causes German social-democracy to shudder with horror.

'DICK' ESCAPES PUNISHMENT FOR BOMB THROWING

Striker Shot in Legs in Frame-up

By PATRICK SARSFIELD.

(Worker Correspondent)

JOLIET, Ill., Nov. 10—Attempts of the Burns Detective Agency to fasten bomb "plots" on the striking auto mechanics here have ceased suddenly with the return to Chicago of "Dan" Botte, leader of the dicks, following his sensational capture, arrest and cross examination by the police for several hours for throwing a rag bomb into the passageway between the Studebaker and Buick garages.

After his release, Botte with his gang of four beat it, declaring that they are "thru," after having admitted being hired by the National Automobile Protective association of St. Louis.

Police Shoot Striker.

The victim of their frame-up, Atello Dallapiazza, one of the strikers, is in St. Joseph's hospital, recovering from bullet wounds received in both legs when police shot at him believing him to be the one who threw the bomb. When the truth came out, however, it was Botte and not the worker who was arrested.

Members of Machinists' Lodge No. 124 are continuing on the picket line to compel four scab companies to sign union agreements. They consider the "mystery" of previous bombings and window breakings solved.

Frame-up Revealed.

The detectives have been in Joliet for some time attempting to "learn" who bombed the Winston Motor Co. garage and broke windows in others. Seeking "information," Botte made friends with Dallapiazza, posing as an insurance man. The night of the frame-up, he played cards with the striker until 12 o'clock and then suggested that they go out for lunch. On their way to lunch, the detective threw the bomb.

According to the information obtained by Chief Corcoran of the Joliet police force, the Burns detectives planned to capture Dallapiazza in the act of placing the "bomb" in the passageway between the garages and then obtain a statement which would implicate him and others.

Police Warned of "Plot."

First indication of the plans was given to police when Edward Powers of the state's attorney's office and H. L. Kendricks and A. A. Lapitz of the detective agency appeared at police headquarters declaring they had information that a bomb was to be placed between the garages.

Captain McCarney was told that J. A. Wise and J. J. Garvey of the detective agency also would assist the police in the capture of the bombers.

Hid Across Street.

Captain McCraney and Detectives Lehner and Talkie, together with the quartet of Burns detectives hid across the street from the garages until 1:20 o'clock in the morning when Detective Botte and Dallapiazza appeared.

Then when Detective Botte lighted a match the detectives dashed across the street, believing Dallapiazza would stay between the buildings.

Instead, Dallapiazza ran north on Scott street. Police and detectives fired several shots, but Dallapiazza refused to stop until he was shot in the legs after climbing to the track elevation at Clinton street.

Members of Machinists' Local 124 are now beginning their sixth week on the picket line, in their strike against the four scab firms, the Buick, Hudson Essex, Studebaker, and Dodge Motor companies. They are supported by the largest local union in this territory, Carmen's Local 882, and they have already signed agreements with seventeen local garages.

GOD BLESS OUR BIG FAMILY, SAYS WILLYS-OVERLAND, INC., BUT DEVIL TAKE AGITATORS!

By A Worker Correspondent.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Nov. 10.—Every week when the workers who make the Willys-Overland "Fine Motor Cars" get their forty or forty-five cents an hour pay, they are given as extra compensation for their long labor a literary treat in the form of a sermon, printed on a card and enclosed in their pay envelopes.

This week's text was, "This company believes in every man's happiness," and lest the workers would not accept this as "gospel," the card goes on to show what Willy-Overland has done to make everybody happy; it has established clean working quarters, good ventilation, fine lighting equipment, athletic facilities, and "many unusual things to safeguard the welfare of our employees that are not found elsewhere."

Workers Fired For Thinking.

The entire rhapsody is entitled "Thots of an Executive." However, it happens that the workers in this particular shop have "thots," too, and quite different from those of executives. Just recently, eight of them were taken from the paint shop by a squad of guards, marched to the time office, and fired for agitating for better conditions.

Executive's Thots Are "Padded."

But the executive doesn't have any "thots" about this, at least, not out loud. He doesn't "think" about the paint shop being a breeding place for lead poisoning. Nor does he stop to speculate publicly over the idea that that the "company" doctor, who is one of the "many unusual things to safeguard the welfare of our employees," almost always writes on his medical reports, "and the above party is not entitled to compensation."

At least, these are not the "thots" that Willys-Overland executive thinks when he is preaching to his employes about how he cherishes their happiness. Deep down in his pocket book or in his "profits" book, he may think this over quite comprehensively, nonetheless, as he teeters himself gently in his padded office chair.

A Lean Pay Envelope Thinks.

The thots of a worker far off in the clanging shop, as he pulls the "thots of an executive" from his lean pay envelope, run just cross-wise to what he reads.

"A good living assured everyone." What to hell? Over 12,000 employes paid on the basis of 45 cents an hour straight time, 40 cents for piece work. Piece work is cut so low that even in the body department, where the rate is highest, a man has to slave to get $7.00. And all straight time work is $3.60 per, and they call this a 'good living' "?

Let some of these fiction circulators come down from their perch and try it for themselves and they'd change their views. They'd soon find out about the "athletic facilities." Nerve-wrecking work under speed-up artists in an unventilated work shop; that's what their "gymnasium" consists of.

"God bless our big family," says the Willys-Overland executive. But the worker says, "If this be blessedness, give me some other damned thing!"

Taxi Bosses Get Injunction.

BOSTON, Nov. 10—Checker Taxi Cab strikers have been served with an injunction of the usual sort intended to hinder picketing activities. Six strikers were sentenced in connection with charges growing out of the fight which occurred when strikebreakers tried to take cars out on the streets. Two were released; two held on $500 bail when they appealed one year and eight months' sentences respectively; one appealed a $50 fine and another a $5 fine. A tear gas bomb, clubs and iron bar found in the taxis were produced in court as evidence, but strikers denied their use.

Carpenter Commits Suicide

Because he was out of a job and could not find another, Michael Thomas, 56, a carpenter, decided to put an end to his troubles. He opened a gas jet after locking himself in his room at 1408 W. Madison St. where he was found dead.

The Movement for World Trade Union Unity - By Tom Bell

This is the third instalment of a series of articles dealing with the question of World Trade Union Unity. This instalment deals with the Red International of Labor Unions, its policy and tactics. Following instalments will deal with the British Workers and International Trade Union Unity and the Communists and World Trade Union Unity.

The Red International of Labor Unions.

The other trade union international of importance today is the Red International of Labor Unions. This interiational unites the revolutionary trade unionists of the world and has as its basis the 5,500,000 trade unionists of Soviet Russia, and adherents in every counrty in the world. The R. I. L. U. grew ov of the revolutionary period of the victory of the Russian workers and the revolutionary upheavals in Europe following the world war.

The R. I. L. U. differs on every question from the Amsterdam International. The R. I. L. U. policy is based upon the class struggle, while the I. F. T. U. practices class co-operation. The R. I. L. U. fights the capitalists, while Amsterdam is a weapon in their hands against the workers. The R. I. L. U. initiated the movement for international trade union unity and leads the movement for it, while Amsterdam splits the trade unions and fights against the unity of the workers' forces. The R. I. L. U. stands for the dictatorship of the working class, while Amsterdam is one of the greatest props of the capitalist dictatorship. The R. I. L. U. stands for the socialization of production while Amsterdam aids capitalism to maintain private property by reducing the workers' standard of living and suppressing the workers.

The R. I. L. U. was started in 1920 by the establishment of an international propaganda committee at a conference of representatives of the Russian unions and representatives from minorities in the British, French and Spanish unions, known as the International Council of Trade and Industrial Unions. The imperialist war and the Russian revolution created revolutionary elements among the trade unionists of all countries. To unite these elements and combat the capitalist influence of Amsterdam over the other trade unionists is the function of the R. I. L. U. But the R. I. L. U. does not issue the slogan of "Destroy the conservative unions." On the contrary, the R. I. L. U. issues the slogan: "Win the trade unionists for the revolutionary struggle against capitalism."

The R. I. L. U. was founded in July, 1921, when a definite constitution was decided on as well as a program and the tactical line to be pursued.

The R. I. L. U. views the post-war economic crisis as the inevitable development of the contradictions inherent in capitalism. This crisis shows that the economic basis of capitalism has been cracked and makes the recovery of capitalism and further organic development impossible, i e., capitalism has entered upon its period of dissolution. In this period the class antagonisms will increase, class conflicts will increase in size and bitterness and history will place on the order of the day the question of the workers seizing power and socializing the productive machinery as the only solution of the economic crisis.

In such a period the duty of the revolutionary trade unionists is the mobilization of the workers for the destrucion of capitalism. The capitalists seek to solve the crisis by reducing the workers' standard of living to the lowest minimum, by placing the whole burden of the solution of the crisis on the backs of the workers. The workers are faced with the choice of submitting to a coolie standard of living or overthrowing capitalism and organizing production on a socialist basis. The R. I. L. U. chooses the latter and issues the slogan: "Mobilize the trade unionists to resist the reduction of their standard of living, the struggle for the socialization of the means of production, and the establishment of the rule of the workers and farmers."

The fundamental economic crisis renders impossible any victory for the workers waged upon the old craft union and nationalist basis. The trustification of capital has overcome the national boundaries and takes on international scope. This removes the basis for the narrow craft form of organization and makes necessary industrial unionism based on factory and shop committees and international co-ordination of all struggles of the workers if they are to be successful.

The wage cuts and chronic unemployment forced on the workers by the capitalists during this period places before the workers the question of workers' control of industry as the only effective means of fighting these effects of the economic crisis. The only organs adapted to lead the struggles for control of industry is the factory and shop committees. These factory committees are the mass organs of struggle capable of mobilizing all workers irrespective of trade union membership in the struggle against the bosses.

The decline of capitalism makes impossible any permanent betterment of the workers' living conditions. Gains in wages can at best only maintain the present standard of living—a higher standard of living is impossible for the workers under capitalism. Only when the capitalists have been defeated and workers' rule has socialized industry will it be possible for the workers to realize a higher standard of living.

Recognizing the lack of unity among the workers, split up into competing unions the R. I. L. U. issues the slogan of a united front for the defense of the elemenary needs of the working class. In the struggle for the achievement of this united front of the working class forces the actual process of mobilizing the workers against capitalism is being carried on. The central slogan for the achievement of the united front is: "International trade union unity."

The development of capitalist industry in the colonies is producing a growing industrial working class which is an ally of the workers of the more developed capitalist countries. This industrial working class of the colonies is not bound by traditions of craft prejudices as are the workers of Europe and America. Thus they are more fitted for revolutionary forms of organization and struggle against their oppressors both native and foreign as has been shown in the Hongkong seamen's srike of 1922 and the great textile strikes in Shanghai and Bombay this year. This new force must be linked up with the trade union movement of the developed capitalist countries. The R. I. L. U. does not base itself exclusively upon the European workers as does the Amsterdam International but becomes international in the most complete sense by linking up the trade unions of the colonial countries with those of Europe and America.

The clear revolutionary program and tactical line of the R. I. L. U. has met with the bitterest opposition of he leaders of Amsterdam. The exposure of their treachery by the R. I. L. U. has driven them to the length of splitting the unions and individual and mass expulsions of the adherents of the R. I. L. U. Unable to hide their treachery the Amsterdam leaders have resolved to smash the trade unions rather than allow them to become organs of struggle against the capitalists in the defense of the interests of the working class.

Amsterdam is responsible for the being two trade union federations in France today. The R. I. L. U. in 1921 offered as a basis of negotiations to preserve uniy of the French movement the liquidation of the revolutionary fractions inside the unions. Amsterdam refused this and precipitated the split. Repeated offers by the left wing federation (United General Federation of Labor) to heal the split have been refused by the Amsterdam leaders of the reactionary General Federation of Labor.

On the shoulders of the Amsterdam leaders rests the present division of the trade union movement. They know that their masters—the capitalists—fear a united trade union movement as this would render the workers capable of fighting against the misery and degradation capitalist rule forces upon them and finally topple capitalism into ruins as the first step toward the establishment of a workers' republic.

Tomorrow: The British Workers and International Trade Union Unity.

BELLAIRE MAYOR BANS MEETINGS OF THE WORKERS

Has Little Czardom in Open Shop Steel Town

By W. J. WHITE.

BELLAIRE, Ohio, Nov. 10.—The Soviet's birthday anniversary meeting for Bellaire was stopped by Mayor William Komport and chief of Police Leo Corbett. They ordered the janitor and owners of the hall to lock it up and under no circumstances to permit "then damn Jugo-Slav Bolsheviks" to hold the meeting. This was the remark made to Fred Walch and committee by Corbett.

The Young Workers League intended putting on a playlet "The Capitalists Day, Mayor," they were also going to have recitations, and singing. Because of extensive advertising the comrades expected a very large crowd.

Under Steel Trust Rule

Ku kluxers are strong here. The Carnegie steel is located here and is a branch of the U. S. Steel, and the Wheeling Steel Co., a large independent steel company. Many big corporations are deeply interested in the open shop mines. The Bethleham Steel and Carnegie Steel and U. S. Steel are vitally interested in keeping the district open shop.

The work of the Young Workers League under the direction of Comrade Marie Suskalo had caused so much comment and had attracted so much attention by their singing the International and the Red Flag that the children in the Bellaire schools were talking about the play the children in the Shady Side school were going to put on.

One of the Bellaire school teachers had to promise her pupils to go and see the play because her scholars talked so much about their play.

The Y. W. L. had also attracted the attention of the children by singing the revolutionary songs of the working class and even some of them had started singing the songs on the streets.

Comrade Wicks had trouble here about three years ago at a May Day celebration. The same sinister forces here—the chamber of commerce, board of trade, Kiwanis and Rotarians are the mouth-pieces of big business.

The open shop mines of the Wheeling Steel Co., is just across the river from Bellaire, where 115 members of of our class were killed in an explosion at this mine about two years ago. The strike of the iron and steel workers against this same company has been going on for the past four years. Their plants are all open shop.

The only force here that stands for the rights of the workers are our comrades—hence they are fought. The unions are mostly A. F. of L. and company unions.

Many girls work in potteries and glass houses and in the enamel plant. Mayor Komport was recently defeated for reelection.

The Bellaire Leader had a front page story about the meeting being stopped at the Bohemian Hall. The police patrol was visiting the hall just before the meeting to see that the orders of the mayor and police were obeyed. Fred Walchlj was the American comrade who went with our South Slavic comrades to see the mayor about why the meeting was stopped. The comrades are active in the progressive miners. They are also active among the colored workers.

The Bohemians have instructions not to rent halls to "reds." If the comrades want to hold any kind of entertainment they must go to St. Clairsville and get permission from the county authorities. This was the statement made to the comrades by the hall owners under the instructions of the police and the mayor.

Terrific Storms in Spain

PARIS, Nov. 10.—Due to terrific storms that are raging in Spain telegraph communication has been interrupted in almost every section of the country and between Madrid and Paris.

SECTION SIX
(NORTHWEST TERRITORY)
Attention!

The section membership meeting of Section No. 6 which takes in the following branches: North Side Polish, Russian, Northwest Jewish, Northwest English, Karl Marx Scandinavian, Lithuanian No. 3, Lettish, Car Shop Nucleus No. 6, Ukrainian No. 1, Slovak No. 1, Irving Park English, Slovak Jefferson Park, will be held Thursday, November 12, 8 p. m. sharp at the Workers' Lyceum, 2733 Hirsch Blvd.

Every member of the Workers Party attached to any one of the above named units, must attend this meeting, if he or she wishes to retain membership in the Workers (Communist) Party.

Registration of all members will take place here, for reorganization purposes and assignments, as to where the various comrades belong, will be made.

It is of the utmost importance to the successful reorganization of the party in the city of Chicago that every member belonging to Section No. 6 attend this meeting.

NEW YORK WORKERS PARTY ISSUES STATEMENT ON RECENT ELECTIONS

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—The Workers (Communist) Party has issued a statement on the results of the municipal electoral campaign in the city of New York in which they declare that from the standpoint of labor, the most obvious conclusions deductible from the results of the election are that a single, all inclusive, labor party, separating the workers from the two capitalist parties, is the most vital necessity of the workers. Their statement attacks the socalist party for "sabotaging such political labor unity." The statement follows:

"The election campaign just closed demonstrates strikingly the weakness of the workers on the political field. The vote for the successful Tammany candidate, Mr. Walker, was about 750,000 the overwhelming bulk of which was the vote of politically unconscious workers. A couple hundred thousand workers also voted the republican ticket. While we do not know the vote of the Communist candidates as yet, nor that of the socialist and socialist labor candidates, it seems probably on the face of the returns that less than 100,000 workers voted for the candidates of parties pretending to appeal to the workers as a class. This means that the overwhelming majority of the workers of the city of New York are still tied to the parties of big business, and while fighting the bosses economically are following them politically. The continual rain of injunctions in preventing strikes and picketing, the use of the police to break up picket lines, and the general service rendered by the city to landlords, food profiteers, traction and public utility interests and the employing class generally, have not yet taught the workers that this is a bosses' government and that their economic struggle is also a political struggle in which the political power of the master class state machinery is used against them. Thus a striking worker will, on election day, scab on his fellow strikers by voting along with his boss for a judge who will issue injunctions against his going on the picket line. The crying need of the workers of the city of New York is an elementary one of understanding the class nature of politics and separating themselves from the democratic and republican parties in order to form a single unified, powerful labor party of their own.

"At the beginning of this campaign, as continually thruout the last three years, the Workers (Communist) Party approached all forces claiming to appeal to the workers as a class and demanded that they unite in putting forth a single united labor ticket as a first step toward the formation of a labor party. As usual, the socialist party rejected this invitation, thus being responsible for the division of labor's forces politically during this campaign. Even up till the last moment, our candidates declared themselves ready to withdraw if the candidates of the socialist party would do the same, in the interests of the two parties and other labor organizations getting together to issue a joint call for a conference to unite on a united labor ticket. The result of these divisional tactics on the part of the socialist party was what was to be expected. The workers, confused and divided into small fractions did not win the more backward of their brothers away from the democratic and republican parties and the total vote for all these organizations claiming to represent labor was smaller by far than the vote cast for the millionaire candidate of big business, Mr. Waterman, not to mention the vote for the victorious servant of big business, Mr. Walker.

"In a statement issued by Mr. Thomas to today's papers, he says: 'The rise of a strong labor party in New York is inevitable, but the conditions under which such a party will show its strength do not now exist.' We agree with Mr. Thomas as to the inevitability of the rise of a strong labor party in New York and we point out to him that one of the 'conditions that do not now exist' is the unity of all of labor's forces. This is the basic 'condition' and the socialist party is directly responsible for its non-existence. A labor party can be successful only if it is based on the trade unions. While it is true the great bulk of the trade unions in New York city have not yet expressed themselves in favor of the labor party a large number of trade unions whose membership numbers to 150,000 workers have already expressed their readiness for a labor party. If the socialist party would join in a campaign with the Workers (Communist) Party against the sham nonpartisan policy and against the labor bureaucrats in the unions and in favor of the labor party in a very short time the great mass of trade unions in New York would be won away from their present disastrous policy and in favor of independent working class political action.

"The Workers (Communist) Party feels satisfied that it has remained true to the interests of the working class during this campaign by its intense agitation for the united labor ticket and for a labor party as well as for world trade union unity and other vital demands of labor.

"The Workers (Communist) Party will continue its fight for the building of an all-inclusive labor party based on the trade unions and other workers' organizations of the city and the country until such party is a reality. After election, as before it, this remains our major campaign."

GOOD TURNOUT AT SECTION THREE PARTY REORGANIZATION MEETING

Sixty-two members were present at the shop nucleus reorganization meeting of Section No. 3, Local Chicago, Workers (Communist) Party on Wednesday, Nov. 4, at 3116 S. Halsted St. Two shop nuclei were organized in this section. Another member was added to a shop nucleus already organized in this section and two shop nuclei belonging to Section No. 4 were formed. A number of comrades living in this section were found to be working where shop nuclei are organized in other sections.

Shop Nuclei in Packing House.

The shop nuclei are: Armour Packing company, four members; International Harvester Co., nucleus four members; machine shop nucleus previously organized now has five members. Four street nuclei were formed, containing nine, thirteen, eleven and twelve members respectively. These nuclei were organized from members belonging to Lithuanian, Czecho-Slovak, Slovak, Ukrainian and English branches.

The street and shop nuclei elected provisional officers and provisional section committee to get down to work.

The attendance at the meeting was on the whole, quite good and efforts will be made to reach the additional comrades who were not present.

The classification indicated that the comrades are very widely scattered in industry and most of them working either alone or else in small shops.

Must Organize Shop Nuclei.

This adds many problems to the reorganization and very concerted and energetic efforts will have to be used to develop the existing shop nuclei and to organize additional shop nuclei from the members now belonging to the street nuclei.

It will be necessary, altho comrades were organized into the street nuclei to work toward separating and dividing even more than at present the language blocks which tend toward consolidation in the street nuclei. This can be done by impressing upon the members in street nuclei the necessity of making genuine efforts in their shops to organize shop nuclei.

Twenty-three members belonging to labor unions were found as follows: Amalgamated Food Workers, 1; bricklayer, 1; International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, 2; Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 2; United Garment Workers, 1; carpenter, 1; millmen carpenters, 2; cement finishers, 1; building laborer, 1; presswriter, 1; machinist, 1; typographical, 4; molder, 1; street and electric railway, 1; office worker, 1; barber, 1; pressman, 1.

The smaller sections in Chicago have now been reorganized either into shop or street nuclei. Sections Nos. 4 and 6 which constitute the major membership in Chicago, are yet to be reorganized.

Section No. 6 membership meeting will be held on Thursday, Nov. 12, at the Workers' Lyceum, 2733 Hirsch Blvd.

When that argument begins at lunch time in your shop tomorrow—show them what the DAILY WORKER says about it.

N. Y. WORKERS' SCHOOL FILLED WITH SCHOLARS

All Classes Crowded as Courses Start

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 10.— The pressure of heavy registration in English continues at the New York Workers' School and has obliged it to open additional classes for the teaching of English to foreign-born workers. Tonight a new class in higher intermediate English will begin at 8 p. m. This class will be run once a week for a period of three months, fee is $2.50, the instructor will be either Anna Jacobson or Ray Bennett.

Another new class in elementary English is being formed by the division of the over-crowded elementary English classes. This new class will meet Tuesday and Thursday at 8 p. m., the instructor is Sonia Ginsburg, the fee for this course is $4.00 for three months.

The last week in November will see the opening of the shop nucleus training course, the party training course and all courses in economics, politics, sociology, history, literature, workers' correspondence, and public speaking. Registration are now being taken.

Altho high qualifications as to activity and previous preparation were set for the party training course, and altho there is still a week or two to elapse before it begins, nevertheless, 120 odd active party and trade union workers have registered for this course and passed the preliminary test. These names will be submitted to a committee for final selection as only 50 students can possibly be admitted to the party training course.

Those wishing to be considered should hasten to get in their names this week, otherwise they will be too late. Registrations can be made any afternoon or evening at the Workers' School office, Room 34, 108 East 14th street. The names of the accepted party training course workers will be published shortly.

Milwaukee Active in Reorganization Work

Local Milwaukee, Workers (Communist) Party, District No. 8, is proceeding swiftly to the reorganization of the party on the basis of shop nuclei. Milwaukee has been sub-divided into four sections.

Section No. 1 is composed of those comrades living and working north of Minominee Valley to the south of Walnut street and west to the city limits, east from Minominee river, north to Milwaukee river, including, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad shops.

Section No. 2 includes all comrades from the South Side, St. Frances, Town of Lake, Cudahy, South Milwaukee and those in the International Harvester company vicinity.

Section No. 3 comprises, West Allis, Wauwatosa, Johnson Woods and including the area about the Allis Chalmers corporation and Pawling Harneschweger.

Section No. 4 takes in those comrades living north of Walnut street, North Milwaukee, East Side and North Milwaukee river.

Meetings have been held in each of these sections and reorganization of membership into shop and street nuclei has taken place.

The results have not yet been sent in. The comrades have dealt with the reorganization energetically and good results can be expected.

There are 150 members in Milwaukee and Comrade Karl Mikalachky, sub-district organizer, reports that most of the members will be drawn into the reorganized party.

Young Workers League to Organize in Pullman

Former members of the Young Workers League in the Pullman and Dauphin Park sections are being called upon to attend the reorganization meeting that is to be held in Stancik's Hall, 205 E. 115th St., Friday, Nov. 13, at 7 p. m. Max Salzman, present district organizer for District 8, will be present to aid in the reorganization.

All former members are invited to attend as well as any other young workers that may be interested in joining the league.

Wrap your lunch in a copy of the DAILY WORKER and give it (the DAILY WORKER, not the lunch) to your shop-mate.

MINOR TO SPEAK AT RUSSIAN REVOLUTION MEET IN LOS ANGELES

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 10.—The workers of Los Angeles will celebrate the eighth anniversary of the Russian revolution at the Music Arts Hall, 233 South Broadway, Sunday afternoon, Nov. 15, at 2 o'clock with Robert Minor, member of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party, as speaker. This meeting is being arranged under the joint auspices of the Los Angeles branch of the Workers Party and the Young Workers League.

This meeting is one of a series of meetings that Robert Minor is now making in the western states. Comrade Minor has been in Russia a number of times. Every worker is urged to attend these meetings.

Comrade Minor will also speak on the bolshevization and reorganization of the party at meetings arranged for that purpose.

If you want to thoroughly understand Communism—study it.

Death of Millionaire Starts Poison Search

Following upon a request from a brother of Francis Jones, 66 year old millionaire president of the Melba Manufacturing company who died Saturday, an inquiry was ordered by Coroner Oscar Wolff. An autopsy on the body by the coroner's physician, Irving A. Porges, found symptoms of diabetes and of bronchial pneumonia. The dead man's organs were sent Dr. William D. McNally, coroner's chemist for an analytic search for poisons. Suspicions have been aroused by the signing of a deathbed will last Sunday by Mr. Jones.

Furniture Finishers Form Union Tonight

Every piano, phonograph and furniture finisher regardless of whether he works in a factory or in any of the furniture stores and wants to join the union, is requested to attend the meeting, arranged to organize a union in Chicago, at 741 Blue Island avenue, tonight at 7:30 o'clock, by the committee that is arranging the meeting.

TO THE RESCUE!

ALL HAIL to The DAILY WORKER rescue party—and all its modifications! In Denver, Colo., it took the form of a banquet and $50.00 was sent to The DAILY WORKER as just part of the receipts, with more to come! And in Cambridge, Mass., there is to be not one rescue party, but a series, every Saturday night, given by the Scandinavian branch of the Workers Party of Boston. Fifty per cent of the proceeds will go to SAVE THE DAILY WORKER, with $56.00 coming today as the first instalment.

With Detroit, Mich., sending in $93.85 from several branches, and $44.00 coming from a good friend in San Francisco, Calif., who has just heard of The DAILY WORKER'S critical condition,—the total was raised to $17,902.37, not yet one-half of the total amount necessary, however.

The complete list for today is as follows:

San Pedro, Calif., English Br., Workers Party	$ 15.00

SCHEDEL TO BE DEPORTED BY U. S. GOV'T

Secy. Davis Gives His Sarcastic "Sympathy"

(I. L. D. Press Service.)

John C. Schedel, of Fort Wayne, Ind., piano polisher by trade, will be deported to Germany, according to a decision handed down by James I. Davis, secretary of the department of labor.

Schedel was one of the victims of Palmer's red raids in 1920. In January of that year he was seized in his Fort Wayne home, separated from his wife and five small children and deported to Germany. The only charge against him was that he held membership in the Communist Party.

Victims of Capitalist Government.

The separation reacted bitterly on the Schedel family. One of his children died and Mrs. Schedel broke under the double strain. She became mentally afflicted and was for a time a patient in the East Haven Asylum, Richmond, Indiana. The four other children were placed in the Allen county orphanage.

The plight of his family prompted Schedel to make an effort to return to the United States. On his return he was immediately arrested. Attorneys employed by the International Labor Defense conducted a legal struggle to prevent his second deportation.

His case attracted widespread attention, even business men interceding with the department of labor in his behalf. Letters from college heads, writers, professional men of all kinds poured in to Secretary of Labor Davis.

Davis' "Sympathy."

With unctuous hypocrisy, Mr. Davis' hired man, White, in a letter to David Starr Jordan, the noted educator, expressing the regret of his superior over the necessity for such harsh action. This is the language used to picture the heart ache of the owner of the Loyal Order of the Moose, over the separation of Schedel from his family:

"It is hardly necessary for me to say that the secretary's sympathies go out to the wife and American-born children, for they are the real sufferers. Where the circumstances permit and the law gives him the discretion, he always takes a sympathetic attitude when it means suffering and hardship to children whether they are natives or foreign-born, but where the law vests in him no such discretion, he can do no more than to sympathize and say that it is indeed a pity that the husband and father brot upon them this sorrow."

PURCELL ACTS AS KINDERGARTEN INSTRUCTOR IN LABOR ECONOMICS TO CAPITALIST PRESS REPORTERS

By CARL HAESSLER
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

The girl reporters sent by the city editors of the Chicago daily papers to interview Albert A. Purcell on world trade union unity were rather taken aback when they came to the Hotel Morrison to find this member of the British parliament, this president of the 22,000,000 trade unionists in the Amsterdam International Federation of Trade Unions sitting without a dollar and with his shirt open at the neck, talking simply and painstakingly about the fate of labor in terms of world organization. It was something the girls had never before heard of, much less thought about. Purcell, in his natural, human almost fatherly exposition upset their ideas of imperial lawmakers and of highly placed labor chieftains.

"Couldn't the welfare societies remedy the 12-hour day, 7 days a week that the 6-year old boys and girls of Shanghai have to work now?" the girls asked, "Wouldn't the missionaries change all that?"

"They might but they don't," Purcell patiently replies. "We have found that trade union organization and trade union action is far more effective in these matters than prayers or welfare resolutions."

And when they left to beat their deadlines Purcell turned to the Chicago trade union committee that sponsored his coming: "My word, am I a kindergarten instructor on labor problems to American reporters?" he asked.

Rice or Warships, Issue Before Japan

TOKIO, Nov. 10.—Japan must make its choice between rice fields and warships in the demands that are now being presented by Governor General Saito of Korea for $125,000,000 with which to double the Korean rice production in ten years thru water conservation and providing of new seed loans to farmers, and the demands of the naval authorities for $325,000,000 for naval construction in the next five years.

Farmers Get No Relief

If the Japanese government gives the navy the sum that it demands, the rice farmers will get no relief.

The anti-militarists of Japan are endorsing the program of the Korean governor general and are calling upon the government to grant the loan to the farmers. The militarists seem to have the upper hand and a discussion is now going on between the finance and naval departments as to the sum of money and the period over which the building program will be carried out.

Another "Disarmament" Conference

The naval authorities program calls for the building of four 10,000 ton super-submarines, ten super-destroyers and a number of vessels for special services.

Another Member of the 24th Infantry Released on Parole

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LEAVENWORTH, Kansas, Nov. 10.—James Gaffney, former 24th infantryman, was released from the Leavenworth federal prison on parole. At present there are but 22 of the original 67 sentenced to long terms and life imprisonment for their participation in the "riots" that took place in Houston, Texas.

These Negro soldiers incensed at the vicious attack of a white policeman on a Negro woman, attempted to defend the woman. In the attempt to defend her, some confusion was created causing a race riot. These martyrs of the Negro race were railroaded to prison later for their defense of their race.

"IMPROVEMENT" SOCIETY BACKED FIGHT·ON NEGRO

State Witnesses Admit Membership

DETROIT, Nov. 10.—The attorneys defending Dr. Ossian Sweet and ten co-defendants for the alleged murder of a white gangster who was killed in an attack of a white mob on the Sweet residence, have established that an organization of 700 "whites" had been formed to keep the Negro doctor and his family from the neighborhood.

"Whites" Organize Against Negroes.

Three of the four witnesses used by the state, in its attempt to convict the Negro doctor and send him and his friends to the gallows or to prison, have admitted their membership in the Waterworks Improvement Association, formed to combat the entrance of Negro residents into the district in which they lived.

The lawyers for the defense, among whom are Clarence Darrow, a noted Chicago lawyer and Arthur Garfield Hays of the American Civil Liberties Union, in their cross-examination of Police Inspector Schuknecht, showed that the officer was not telling the truth when he stated that there was no disturbance at the Sweet home when he arrived. This inspector had all he could do at the time of the assault of the Negro home to disperse the mob.

Try to Acquit Negroes.

An attempt is being made for an acquittal of those on trial as they fired in self defense when a mob advanced on their home with stones, clubs and weapons intent on not only destroying the home of the Negro doctor, but also to "get" the inhabitants and "teach" them a lesson.

Gunman Dodges Prison Term.

Walter Stevens, notorious gunman, defeated the government in its efforts to remove him to Miami, Fla., on charges of violating the prohibition law when Federal udge James H. Wilkerson held that he was immune until next June when his parole from Joliet prison, where he was serving a term for killing an Aurora, Ill., policeman, expires.

Run Cicero Mayor for Sheriff.

If the deal with the Deneen faction of the republican party "falls to pieces," the Crowe-Barrett-Weber combination threatens to run John C. Klenha, mayor of Cicero, for Hoffman's job of sheriff of Cook county. Hoffman, was recently implicated in the release of two booze kings before their terms had expired.

MILITARY COURT TO HANG RAKOSI AND WEINBERGER

Prosecution Charges "High Treason"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Nov. 10.—Due to the protests of the workers on an international scale, the Horthy hangmen were forced to change their plans. Telegrams of protest arriving in Hungary condemning the Horthy white terror, forced the "Hangman's" regime to turn the trial material over to a "prosecution" which took a little time to "sift" the "evidence" and which after "deliberating" on the "evidence," decided that Rakosi and the 100 others must stand court martial trial for "high treason and revolt."

The sentences of the Hungarian court martials, however, can only be death sentences and must be executed within two hours.

To Hang Rakosi.

The intention of the prosecution is to sentence Rakosi and all the other prisoners to death; to execute Rakosi and Weinberger and, after having given this example; transform the other death sentences into 10 to 15 years of imprisonment. All this is permissible according to the Hungarian penal code.

The international proletariat must intervene more energetically than in the past, to save Comrade Rakosi and his group from death.

Our Readers' Views

Disagrees with Dunbar.

To The DAILY WORKER: In a recent issue of The DAILY WORKER, the play "White Cargo" is reviewed by Comrade Dunbar, and in my opinion, his comment is a sample of everything a Communist critic should not be.

To begin with, I wish to align myself with Bernad Shaw in his opinion of art, which is to the effect that "if it is not propaganda, it is not art." To me, art for art's sake, is the bunk. And to me, "White Cargo" is a piece of very effective anti-imperialist propaganda.

To be sure, the play is full of sex obsession and so are men who are shut off from (what is to them) normal sex life. All that Comrade Dunbar could see was the sex exploitation of the native women and immediately he reacted to the defense of the native, without questioning the effect of the scene on the audience.

What (if any), effect is there, when a raw exposition of sex exploitation of Negro women by white man is portrayed, when all the instinctive sadism of the male is brot out to public view? It seems to me that the effect is to strip the romantic veil off the face of the colonial ventures into which the young men of a nation are enticed, by glowing pictures of adventure, which totally ignores the sex needs of the aforesaid young man.

And then the play proceeds to take away even the advanture of the thing and show it in all its beastly dullness as a drab routine of herding native labor; so dull that only whisky and a drunken stupor brings any relief to a brain satiated with heat and monotony. My bet is that any young man filled with a longing for adventure and the notion that it can be found in one of the tropical colonies of this or any nation, whose brain is filled with visions of grass skirts and ukeleles, will come away from a performance of "White Cargo" with his brain much clearer than when he went in; and if then he still has a desire to try it—well, our propaganda isn't intended for the digestion of a moron.

The acting of the players was competent and the lead was exceptionally done.

Comrade Dunbar should know that Communist criticism doesn't consist of merely calling names—Wm. E. Browder, Kansas City.

Christmas and Class War Prisoners

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Christmas is the time of glad tidings for political prisoners. Christmas is the time when we can instill hope into the hearts of hundreds of men who are now rotting in the capitalist dungeons. The labor-hating state of California holds more than 75 of our stout-hearted bothers in arms. The state of Washington is well-known thru the Everett massacre and the Centralia outrage. Idaho, Oregon, Utah, Texas and other states hold members of the Industrial Workers of the World just because they dared belong to that labor organization.

The G. Ad. Uthmann Sanger-Chor has arranged an entertainment and dance on Nov. 28, in the Labor Temple on 84th street and 2nd avenue, at 8 p. m., the proceeds of which will go to sending a few luxuries and necessities to working class political prisoners on Christmas Day. We urge all workers to attend this affair.

AMONG THE JUNIORS

RED RUSSIA EIGHT YEARS OLD TODAY.

By H. BERGLUND.

Born Nov. 7th—eight years ago today,
Red Russia fought its way to life.
Since then the world has been arrayed against it;
Struggle, famine, and nakedness has passed its way;
Yet it emerged victorious from the strife.

While the rest of Europe slowly dies,
Red Russia works to live.
While other nations weep and sigh,
Red Russia seeks to give—
To all its people things worth while.

Where famine stalked a sun-parched land,
Great fields of grain now grow;
Where mills, and mines, and factories stand,
The hum of industry we know;
Russia, Red Russia, eight years old today.

Hospital Nurses Have No Cinch; Work Long Hours for Small Pay

By SLYVAN A. POLLACK
(Worker Correspondent)

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 10—The conditions under which the nurses in New York City have to work, is far from what the superficial observer would be led to believe. Long hours, small pay and ill treatment are a regular part of their job, which is a tedious nerve-racking occupation.

In the Beth David Hospital, the nurses have to work 12-hours a day, 7-days a week, with no days off whatsoever, (not even holidays).

Nurses Bill Defeated

About four months ago the nurses attempted to have a bill passed by the state legislature to obtain a shorter work day, but it was defeated by the doctors, who are now discriminating against those nurses that were active in the fight for a shortening of hours.

Student Nurses.

The student nurses course ordinarily takes three years, tho by hard work it can be finished in two years and four months. Their salary ranges from $5 to $18 a month, including board and laundry. They are compelled to sleep in drafty rooms without windows, and whenever it rains the rain comes thru the leaky roofs. They are crowded together, anywhere from four to six in a room, working twelve hours a day and obtaining one half day off every week. They do not receive any extra time off during holidays.

Sentiment for Union.

Nervousness and backaches are the occupational diseases amongst the nurses. They have to stand for a lot of abuse at the hands of the hospital doctors. To be insulted and called vile names is a common occurance.

There is no union of nurses at present, altho the sentiment for the organization of one is strong, for they are beginning to realize that the only way they can improve their conditions is by a united struggle side by side against those who are responsible for these conditions.

Oil Sets Town on Fire.

DURAND, Ill., Nov. 10.—Spontaneous combustion of oil in a hardware store is believed to have caused the fire which destroyed two store buildings, a church and several sheds at a total loss of $33,000 early today. Fire fighting apparatus was rushed from Freeport, Ill., a distance of 20 miles, to save the remainder of the village.

Philadelphia Teacher Lauds Care of Children in Bolshevik Russia

By LENA ROSENBERG.
(Worker Correspondent)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 10—Dr. Lucy Wilson, principal of South Philadelphia girls' high school, the largest high school in Philadelphia, who spent all summer in Soviet Russia, spoke on trade unionism and factory conditions in Russia at a meeting of the Women's Trade Union League of Philadelphia.

She started out by describing the conditions in a certain factory but in doing so she emphasized the fact that this factory was an example of hundreds of other factories in Russia today.

In brief, the conditions in the factories are what the workers of the factory want them to be, she stated. These conditions are enforced by their shop committees and trade unions. She stated there is nothing in Russia as strong as the trade unions. When there are profits made by the factory, the workers of the shop decide whether to dispose of those profits thru an increase in wages or the improvement of the factory conditions or improving the machinery or lowering prices.

Radio "Newspapers"

They also have radio loud speakers in the factories, which are called the "factory newspaper" and during the lunch hour the workers get news of what is actually happening in world politics and of economic conditions. Even the school chileren receive this type of news.

She pointed out that altho tuition is not free in the higher schools, workers pay as little as 40c. while the nep man has to pay as high as 200 rubles. The tuition fee is arranged according to the workers' income. The workers' child always gets the preference whether it is in school or in any other place.

Children Taken Care Of

When questioned about an article that appeared in the Philadelphia Ledger claiming that there are 40,000 children homeless in Moscow, she declared that was a revolting lie. "There are no homeless children in Moscow at the present time," she declared, for they are all taken care of by either the trade unions or the government.

On the question of whether her investigations were interfered with, she assured the questioner that she went where she cared to and was not hindered from doing anything she wanted to. "There is more freedom in Russia" she stated, "then in the United States or any other country."

ROUMANIAN WAR MINISTER TELLS COURT, 'SPEED-UP'

Have Night Sessions in Peasant Trial

(Special to The Daily Worker)

KISHENEV, Bessarabia, Nov. 10.—The war minister has ordered the court martial, that is now trying the 500 peasants for their part in the Tartarbounar uprising, to speed up the trial so that it will end this week.

The Bratianu government is doing all in its power to keep news of the trial secret, so that the workers of other lands would not hear about the tortures under which "confessions" have been extracted from the peasants.

Preparations to end this trial quickly have already been made as the court is now holding night sessions. The holding of night sessions adds another hardship to the peasants, as they must stand up all day, then work three hours at hard labor and then stand up thru the night sessions.

The public is excluded from the court sessions and the defense lawyers are hampered in any direction they may turn. No attempts are made at pretending impartial justice will be given in this trial. The court judges thruout the trial have showed that this is a court where class justice will be rendered, and that the court is a class court, representing the Roumanian boyars.

The military court martial has now decided to limit the questioning of the peasants and will also restrict the lawyers defending the peasants the right to raise objections. In a tilt with the lawyers for the defense, military auditor, Zeclu, gave the following reason for this restriction:

"We know the motives for the uninterrupted protests of the lawyers. The accused are to be put thus into a position to tell still more stories of horror. We will not permit, however, that the honor of the Roumanian nation and of our army be trodden upon. The accused have to answer in such a manner as we think good."

On the protests of the lawyers against the tortures and the maltreatment of the prisoners, this inquisitor replied to the lawyers: "Do not excite yourselves, gentlemen, because these bandits have been maltreated in the preliminary examination. Beating is in all countries an excellent means for the promotion of investigation."

As a protest against this expression of the court, the lawyers left the hall.

The only thing that can save these peasants from the fate that awaits them at the hands of the Roumanian boyars is an international protest against the terror regime of the Bratianu brothers.

Armistice Day

Seven years have passed since the last of the guns re-echoed over the western front in the world war. The glorious war had come to a close, with the armies of the "Hun tyrant" at the feet of the defenders of "democracy, liberty, justice." Delirious mobs filled the streets celebrating the event. It was the dawn of a new era wherein all would enjoy "freedom for all, forever."

After the hysteria had vanished and the grim realities of the aftermath of the war asserted themselves doubts began to arise as to whether the war had been so glorious after all. Soon people other than revolutionists began to question the motives of this country's participation in the war. Beneath the glamorous platitudes that veiled the real motives the malignant features of Morgan began to emerge. It was not long before every observing person knew that the slogan of Woodrow Wilson to "make the world safe for democracy," literally interpreted read: "Make the world safe for Morgan's billions."

In spite of the lies, the patriotic buncombe, the ignorant clamor about patriotism, one fact stands out clear and that is the United States entered the war not out of exalted concern for that trilogy of capitalism—democracy, justice and right, but for the single purpose of defending the European investments of the sordid, venal, murderous House of Morgan, and Woodrow Wilson, who is eulogized as an idealist and humanitarian, was merely the apologetic servant, the high priest and psalm singer for Morgan. Nowhere can there be found a better example of the truism that language is used to conceal thought than in the stilted palaver of Wilson during the world war.

As to the ghastly illusion that the world war was the last war, no one, even the most backward dolt, believes it today. On every hand preparations are going forward for the next world war that will eclipse in horror a thousand fold the last war.

Workers on armistice day ought to refuse to participate in the celebration of a lie. Instead they should determine relentlessly to fight against every imperialist venture of the United States, fight against militarization of the youth in public schools, disrupt and destroy if possible the military training camps established for the purpose of preparing for the time when the working class can again be led into the imperialist slaughter house, perfect organizations that can stifle production of war materials and munitions, thereby crippling the so-called national defense at its most vulnerable point, in every conceivable manner and with every weapon at hand resist the conspracies of the jackal pack of imperialism preparing more carrion feasts.

Let armistice day be the occasion for reviewing the lessons of the past war and preparing to use the knowledge thereby gained to cripple and crush the imperialist machine as it enters the next war, thereby clearing the ground for the conquest of power by the workers.

The New Commissar of War

A foundry laborer is the new chief of the most invincible army in the world. Clement Voroshiloff takes the place left vacant by the untimely death of Comrade Mikhail Frunze.

Like his predecessor, Comrade Voroshiloff is first of all a Communist fighter of long standing, a member of the central committee of the Russian Party and always a supporter of the dominant group, the Old Bolshevik Guard. Born in 1881 of peasant parentage, Voroshiloff as a youth was a foundry laborer, becoming active in the revolutionary movement against czarism. In 1904 he became a member of the central committee of the Bolshevist faction in the social democracy. The next year he participated in the revolution by organizing armed detachments against czarist soldiery. His military experience dates beyond that either of Comrade Trotsky or Comrade Frunze. After the 1917 March revolution that overthrew the czar he maintained an attitude of bitter hostility against the provisional bourgeois government and led attacks of workingmen against it. He participated in the July action, and in the final overthrow of the Kerensky government in November, 1917. He commanded a detachment in the Ukraine and aided in forming red army cavalry units on the southern front. Later he led forces against Denikin. With the reorganization of the general staff under Frunze he became commander of the Moscow garrison, which post he occupied until his appointment as commissar of war.

Altho he is unknown except in Russia and to the most intimate Communist circles thruout the world, the appointment of this former foundry worker indicates the tremendous reserves of the magnificent red army and the party that made possible the revolution.

We, the reserves of the world revolution in the United States, hail the new chief of the red army, standing guard at the outpost of the revolution.

There is one war that knows no armistice day, the war between the workers and their oppressors—the capitalists, that must end only with labor's triumph.

A Day of Shame

November 11 has long had a significance to the workers of this country that is not connected with any fanfares of world war armistice. It is remembered because on that day in 1887 from one scaffold in the Cook county jail four men were hanged on perjured testimony furnished by a degraded police official because they challenged the industrial and commercial might of the Marshall Fields and McCormicks.

Every worker who knows anything of the history of this country remembers the story of the famous trial of the so-called anarchists, who were arrested during the great eight-hour agitation of 1886, charged with throwing a bomb that resulted in the death of policemen who were brutally endeavoring to suppress working class gatherings. It is generally conceded that a police agent set off the explosion as an excuse to stifle the eight-hour movement.

It is well for modern rebels to review this case occasionally in order to maintain a proper contempt for courts, capitalist laws, policemen and the United States constitution that is utilized as an apologetic instrument for what Governor John P. Altgeld characterized as judicial murder

Before Communist Women's Congress
(Concluded from Yesterday)

In Germany the women Party functionaries held a conference participated in by the women shop stewards from different districts. This conference proposed that the elections to the factory councils and to the local trade union administrative bodies should be utilized for systematic work among the women, and for their trade unionist organization and education. For this purpose working women are to be nominated as candidates in the oppositional or Communist lists.

In France the C. G. T. U. has appointed in Paris a woman secretary for the furtherance of trade union work among the working women, and is arranging a national conference at which this question will be dealt with. The C. G. T. U. intends to co-operate systematically with the national women's secretariat of the French C. P. for the organization of the women.

Up to now there has been but little party activity in England towards the trade union organization and schooling of the women workers in those industries in which women's work plays a great, if not decisive role: the textile industry, ready made clothing and foodstuff trades, etc. The International Women's Secretariat proposed to utilize the last unemployed conference for this purpose, as also the conferences held by the Minority movement. The work being done by our trade union fractions among the working women who are not organized in the trade unions, and among women trade union members, must be greatly increased. Detailed representations on these questions have been sent to England by the International Women's Secretariat.

Delegates' Operations.

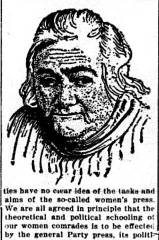
In districts where women take a smaller part in industrial work, but where the attitude adopted by the housewives is of decisive importance in strikes and political struggles, auxiliary organs and organizations must be created for the activization of the masses of proletarian women, and these must maintain a permanent and regular organized connection with the Communist Party, working under its leadership. These organs and organizations, which we require at the same time for the non-Communist working women, must begin at once to develop on Russian lines into delegates' corporations. This must of course not be done by mechanical imitation, but the actual given circumstances ruling in the separate countries must be taken into account.

The beginnings of such a development were noticeable in Germany, in the form of control and action committees, during the movement caused by the high prices. In England the proletarian women's guilds comprise the proletarian women in sympathy with us.

Organizations of sympathizing proletarian women have been founded in Italy; these however appear to include Communist women as well and thus go beyond the limits of their actual character. In the United States we had the "Council for working class women" to which not only many leading women Communists and individual members belonged, but more than 40 non-Communists women's organizations. This was dissolved by the Workers Party, but it is certain to be reorganized and called back into existence.

It will be one of the leading tasks of this conference to follow Comrade Nikolayeva's address by a detailed discussion of the practical ways and means to be pursued for creating the organs and organizations which are to keep up the contact between the broad masses of proletarian women and the Communist Party. Methods of works among the peasant women have been indicated by a circular with question form sent by the I. W. S. to all Sections. Most of these have sent no reply. Reports on small holders' conferences, press notices, etc., show that slight efforts are being made to take up this important work in Germany.

CLARA ZETKIN



With respect to our press, our Parties have no clear idea of the tasks and aims of the so-called women's press. We are all agreed in principle that the theoretical and political schooling of our women comrades is to be effected by the general Party press, its political and scientific women's question and women's demands, for these are at the bottom the problems and demands of the proletariat. The "Women's Pages" and "Women's Columns" in the general Party press should be adapted, like the special women's papers, to the broad masses of working women. This object is but partially attained, owing to the double character of their publications. Their contents are adapted in part for women comrades, and in part for the masses of women just awakening. This is explained by the fact that the general press organs of our sections do not adequately fulfill their tasks of schooling the women comrades theoretically and politically, so that the need arises to deal with urgent question in special "Women's Pages" and women's papers.

Organs which are already fairly well adapted to the needs of the broad masses of women are the following: in Germany the "Kommunistin", organ of the German Communist Party and various working women's newspapers appearing in the provinces; in France the Party papers "L'Quvriere". Our Party press in Italy appeals to the women comrades, to the Party functionaries, and to the masses of the proletarian women. Almost all articles, notices, etc., are written in such a simple and popular style that they can be understood even by backward women. In this respect the character of our women's press in Czcho Slovakia is extremely contradictory and unclear.

As a general rule the purport of our women's newspapers of every description is not yet sufficiently permeated with Communist principle. The events and facts dealt with are not linked up vitally with the daily slogans of the Party, of the trade unions, or of the proletarian struggle. We receive valuable material from the women of the proletariat in support of our charges against capitalism, but this does not raise our women's press to the level of an organ for training and leading the masses of women.

Working Women Correspondents.

It is of leading importance for overcoming this drawback that Worker correspondents should be organized and schooled from among women, workmen's wives, and if possible peasant women. It need not be said that the letters sent by these women must be carefully examined, and brought into line with the principles of Communism, naturally with the agreement of the writers. This must be done with the requisite fine feeling for the modes of expression of the correspondents. Their contributions must lose nothing of their freshness and originality, and on the other hand our women's papers must not be permitted to become the gathering place of petty bourgeois and un-Communist views, and even of unconsciously anti-Communist views. The correspondence carried on by working women, the contributions sent by working women to factory newspapers and other organs, educate proletarian women to independent thought, to independent activity and self-reliance. Besides this, they form personal, reliable and zealous fulcrums for our organizatory work in the factories, and give us canvassers for our press. I confine myself to this abbreviated and general survey of the progress of our work among working women.

The experience gained by the I. W. S. shows that outside of the Soviet Union there is an international shortage of men and women comrades who, schooled in theory and practice, have actually grasped the whole complex of the women's question as a part of the social question in the sense of Marxism and Leninism, and have there seen clearly that at the bottom every so-called woman's question is also a man's question, a children's question—in a word, a social problem concerning the whole proletariat. Our comrades are not yet thoroly embued with Lenin's view that without the participation of millions of women the proletariat is not in a position to seize and maintain power and is unable to reconstruct society on Communist lines after seizing power.

We must call theory and practice to our aid clear away the Philistinism still clinging to many of our comrades. The whole of the institutions and organs of the Communist Parties are to be so adapted that they not only serve the purpose of general enlightment, but ensure at the same time the development of Marxist understanding in the women's question. Thus for instance the treatment of this question must be made part of the educational program of the national sections. It is of the utmost importance to ensure that the largest possible number of women comrades utilize the educational opportunities. Lenin emphasized that we can only have a good revolutionary movement if we have a good revolutionary theory. Until this has been realized by both men and women comrades our work among the masses of women is but patchwork. Our utmost endeavor must be towards gaining the right to say: In this sphere too we are Bolsheviks, understanding pupils of the master, ready to convert good revolutionary theory into good revolutionary practice.

The I. W. W. Convention

The 17th general convention of the Industrial Workers of the World now meeting in Chicago could do much not only to bring the I. W. W. out of the slough of despondency and disintegration into which it has fallen under anarchist leadership, but also to encourage the working class, largely unorganized, that there was some economic organization in the field which really wished to organize them and had a realistic program to do it.

Nobody can believe—at least we cannot—that out of the 4,500,000 agricultural workers, mostly residential, the Agricultural Workers' Industrial Union of the I. W. W. could not build a powerful union even under present conditions, of at least 500,000. That is, of course, providing the A. W. I. U. really wants to do it. That's the question.

The same goes for the other industrial unions that have a field where they don't have to spend most of their time, money and energy fighting another union instead of the bosses. So these unions, which are running this convention, have great possibilities in agriculture, marine transport, metal mining, general construction and lumber—providing they work out a practical program for organizing the unorganized in all these enormous fields waiting for such action. But will they?

There is nothing to guarantee that delegates to any convention will do the wise thing. Chances would be better if the convention were better representative of the membership, if there were present the full delegation of 80 the constitution allows, instead of about a dozen—which is more of a committee than a convention. The way the A. F. of L. cheats the membership of representation is dangerously near being copied by the I. W. W.

And then, out of this dozen, one was ejected Monday, because he had, in some distant past, paid his dues two days too late. Other technical objections are being made against one or more delegates. We are forced to wonder whether this be the workings of "pure democracy" of which the I. W. W. is so proud, or whether it is a method of dissolving the I. W. W. convention by constitutional quibbles and due process of union law. Whatever else it is, it is a mistake, as is the limitation on the voting power of the delegates that has already robbed a fourth of the membership from being represented by votes—thru the difference in dues-paying membership, about 16,500, and the per capita payments for 12,150.

It is an appalling fact that in each I. W. W. convention nearly every industrial union's delegates start out to use every means possible, raising the most hair-splitting arguments, to prevent the members of other industrial unions from having any representation. It would only be making the constitution to conform with facts if a clause should be written in it that each union's delegates should regard all the others as under suspicion and set out to debar them as if they were representatives of the employers instead of fellow workers in one great fighting fraternity.

This recurring battle for control of the convention is, of course, natural when one considers that unions wish to get control to advance their particular sectional interests. But it is also proof of the necessity of a political organization of the workers which looks to the interests of the working class as a whole, which tries to minimize this warfare between industrial unions in the I. W. W., the warfare between the I. W. W. and other unions, and endeavors to get them all to work for the whole working class, including the unorganized masses which are suffering most.

So we hope that the I. W. W. convention, which has such great possibilities, will cut out futile tinkering and give hope to the unorganized with a real program of unionizing them. We think this is the spirit which moved the boys in prison when they faced the sacrifice of freedom to carry on work in hostile territory. We think this is the spirit of Frank Little, Joe Hill, Wesley Everrest and the rest who died for the I. W. W. For this we say that on this sixth anniversary of the battle of Centralia the walls of Walla Walla mutely call to the I. W. W. convention to "never forget" and to throw aside all obstacles to building a bigger and better I. W. W.

The membership of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America is to be congratulated on the victory won against the International Tailoring company. Let the membership build its union to be able to win many such victories.

Thoughts for Armistice Day

By EARL R. BROWDER.

SEVEN years ago the world war came to a close. Today, with several small wars being fought in Africa and the Near East, with the Balkans seething on the verge of war, with China in the throes of a great natianalist upheaval while the imperialist powers of the earth jealously maneuver for position in the Far East, with the colonial masses stirring in millions—another world war is on the order of the day. Under these circumstances it is particularly timely for the workers, who pay the costs of all wars, to recall some facts about the latest one, the cost in blood and sweat paid by the proletariat.

The Price in Dead and Wounded.

WORKERS and peasants furnished the sacrifice of blood demanded by the world war. Figures can give but the slighest idea of the monstrous horror that is war. But only figures can add to the knowledge of these horrors the further understanding of the terrific mass scale to which this horror was expanded.

More than ten and one-half mililons of men were killed in the imperialist struggle, between August, 1914 and November, 1918. More than twenty millions were seriously wounded. This amounts in all to almost one-third the total population of the United States; it is about half the population of Germany; it is two-thirds the population of France. It is more than five times the total population of Greater New York City, the largest city in the world.

The number of killed and wounded for the principal countries, with comparison to population, are:

Country	Total Killed	Total Wounded	Casualties per thousand and population
Russia	2,758,000	4,950,000	46.5
Germany	1,887,000	4,248,000	94.4
France	1,359,000	4,200,000	138.9
Austria-Hungary	1,200,000	3,200,000	86.3
Great Britain	744,000	1,693,000	54.2
British Dominions and Colonies	202,000	420,000	1.7
Italy	507,000	950,000	41.6
Belgium	267,000	140,000	54.3
United States	107,000	246,000	3.5

(Figures based upon Official Year Book of the German Republic, 1923).

The consequences that followed upon this slaughter, the millions of cripples thrown helpless upon society, the enormous toll of disease, the more millions of dependents deprived of their bread-winners, the deaths among the civil population, the impoverishment of whole populations—all of these costs in life are so staggering that they can hardly be imagined, much less measured. The definite knowledge we have relates only to the fighting forces.

The Cost in Wealth.

LIKE the cost in life, the toll of wealth taken by the war extends far beyond the direct costs for which figures are available. But even the direct costs stagger the mind, and are beyond ordinary comprehension.

According to Findman, in "International Finance and Reorganization" (quoted by Varga, Inprekorr, Vol. 4, No. 45), the actual expenses of the war totalled two hundred and forty nine billions, three hundred and sixty two millions of dollars. ($249,362,000,000).

Do you think that you can understand what this figure represents?

It amounts to almost half of the total wealth of the world at the time the war began. It is more than three times the total wealth production of the yehr 1913. To obtain some dim idea of how much it is, imagine this sum of money distributed among the population of the United States; it would provide each family in the country with more than $6,000 each.

All of this mass of wealth was, in the final analysis, wrung from the same working class and peasantry which paid the war-costs of life and limb.

THE next war, towards which the world is rushing, will be even more destructive than the last. Since the world war closed, all the "civilized" nations have had their "best brains" busy at work devising yet more poisonous gasses, inventing yet more powerful explosives, building yet more complicated machines and larger guns—all for the purpose of killing more workers, to gain greater power for the imperialist masters of the earth.

And the United States will be in the vanguard of the next war. The dead of America's working class will then be counted in millions, instead of the tens of thousands of 1918. There is but one thing that can prevent this—that is the overthrow of the capitalist system and the establishments of a workers' and farmers' government.

INDIAN TEXTILE STRIKE HEAD ACCUSES BRITISH GOVERNMENT OF HOLDING UP STRIKE FUNDS

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Secretary Jabhwalla of the Bombay textile strikers says in an interview in the Bombay Chronicle, which has reached New York, that he has not yet received the 10,000 rubles ($5,000) sent by the Russian textile workers to the Indians and that he thinks the British government of India has held up the money transfer. The textile mill strikers are on the verge of starvation, he declares. Not one mill is now working and about 75% of the 150,000 strikers have left Bombay for their homes in the agricultural districts. Many of the mills did not give the strikers their August pay, due the middle of September. But the workers reiterate their determination not to return at the 11½% cut wages, saying they will return to agricultural work instead.

A large police force is on duty in the mill districts and several strikers have been arrested and fined or sent to jail on charges of throwing stones at the mills. A second deputation of workers has appealed to the government for an inquiry into the situation but vainly.

LEFT WING OF FURRIERS' UNION SMASHES REACTIONARY KAUFMAN MACHINE AT SPECIAL CONVENTION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 11.—Ben Gold, the delegate of the suspended New York joint board, was seated yesterday by the Furriers' convention. The machine received a decisive defeat after employing every bureaucratic device to trick the left wing of victory. The machine even walked out of the convention to try to stampede the delegates.

The second day of the Furriers' convention opened with the machine withdrawing its objections to the three left wingers, Skolnick, Kolenberg and Mensher, and ended with a clearcut victory of the left wing by the seating of Ben Gold by a roll call vote of 41 to 34.

Wanted to Dodge Main Issue

As reported yesterday the reactionary Kaufman machine counted upon the success of a well worked-out scheme to postpone action on the New York question until late in the convention and prevent proper consideration of the question, meantime keeping the New York delegate unseated.

The issue of non-recognition of the New York joint board compelled this special convention in place of the regular May convention.

Gemeiner, vice-president and secretary of the credential committee argued like a shyster and employed every sophistry to postpone the question. But the delegates were determined to have the New York joint board seated before any argument of the case was made.

Makes His Own Rules

Kaufman illegally ruled the motion out of order, deciding on his own parliamentary procedure, specially created for the case, that no other motion could be entertained than one of his credentials committee—that even the minority report to seat Gold was not before the convention.

But this cunning bureaucrat could not prevent discussion and was compelled to give Gold the floor, even after his chief lieutenant, vice-president Silverstein, objected.

Not Here as Penitents

Ben Gold declared that the New York joint board was not at the convention as being guilty of anything. It had the mandate of 10,000 members which categorically demanded its rights. He attacked the machine in its attempts to evade the issue, as they had constantly done with various means at different times, employing detectives, sluggers and going even to the point of attempted murder.

The left wingers maintained their ground, and after an unsuccessful attempt to adjourn the session and specious pleas to the delegates by Kaufman and Gemeiner to read the 32 page special report on the New York joint board, the vote was put and the motion to debar turned down.

Walk-out—By Themselves

The machine again tried vainly to adjourn the session so as to avoid certain defeat—then walked out, endeavoring to stampede the delegates. But the delegates could not be budged. They very patiently watched Kaufman trying to avoid defeat expecting a break among the left wingers and other anti-Kaufman elements. Then they forced him to call a vote on the motion to seat Gold, resulting in 35 for seating, five abstaining and the remaining delegates out of the hall.

The report issued by the executive board yesterday showed that in fifteen months the New York joint board paid dues to the extent of $106,000 out of a total dues paid the international of $148,000, and during the last month, October, $10,000 out of $12,000.

Today's session is expected to be devoted to fundamental issues. The machine is desperate and will again endeavor to unseat the delegate of the New York joint board. The left wing will carry the fight to the enemy's ground and attack the ruinous class collaboration policy, reckless expenditures and the rule or ruin policy. The left wing will demand to know why the machine violated the policy of the union on the labor party, the recognition of Soviet Russia, the immigration question and so on at the A. F. of L. convention.

The left wing will raise the issues of amalgamation and of the shop committe system in the union.

DATES GIVEN PURCELL ON TOUR THRU THE U. S. AND CANADIAN CITIES

The trade union committee arranging the Purcell tour has announced the following dates for his speeches in several cities of the United States and Canada:

Montreal, Canada, Nov. 13, at 8 p. m. at Central Labor Union.

New York City, Nov. 17, evening, at the New Star Casino.

'MOTHER' BLOOR SPEAKING FOR LABOR DEFENSE

Veteran Campaigner in Gary's Balliwick

Ella Reeve Bloor, veteran campaigner who is known among militant trade unionists from coast to coast as "Mother Bloor" is now touring Western Pennsylvania on an organizing campaign for the International Labor Defense.

On November 17 Mrs. Bloor will address a special meeting of the International Labor Defense in Pittsburgh on the subject: "The aims and objects of the International Labor Defense."

A big defense protest meeting is arranged in the same city for the evening of November 29, immediately before Fred Merrick and his comrades stand trial on a charge of violating the sedition law of the state of Pennsylvania. The meeting will be held in the International Socialist Lyceum.

NEW PROPOSALS BY MELLON ON FASCIST DEBT

Mussolini For Sale to Highest Bidder

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11—Amidst the secrecy that has prevailed since the Italian debt negotiations began here a new proposal for the settlement of the $2,138,000,000 debt was formulated at this morning's session that started at 11 o'clock, the anniversary of the armistice, and submitted to the fascist representatives shortly after noon. While the terms were closely guarded it was given out that this is the best offer the United States is "prepared to make." It is supposed to be based upon a thoro consideration of Italy's unfavorable economic condition, but represents what many American "experts" think she is capable of paying.

There was no indication on either side that failure of Italy to accept would lead to an open break in the negotiations. The Mussolini regime is for sale to anyone that will keep it in power and it is only a question of conditions that will be imposed by Mellon and the Wall Street brigands back of him.

Schools for Nomads.

MOSCOW, Nov. 11—The people's commissariat of education is organizing a series of resident schools for the nomad races. Schools are to be opened, in the first place, for Kalmuck, Kirghiz, Samoyed, Ostyak, Kamtchadal, Zyrian, Oirat Orotchen, Komi and Sortzi people. Prior to the revolution there were no schools at all for these people.

ARMY AND NAVY AGREED TO DIVIDE PULITZER AIR RACE VICTORIES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—A bombshell burst during the afternoon session at the court martial of Col. William Mitchell, when the flying colonel produced official documents to prove his charge that the army and navy agreed to divide equally all victories in the Pulitzer air races.

The documents were offered in evidence at Mitchell's insistence by Major Hubert R. Harmon, junior aide at the white house, and they revealed the agreement was entered early in 1924 between Major-General Mason M. Patrick, chief of the army air service, and Coy. Theodore Roosevelt, then assistant secretary of the navy.

The offer was made by Roosevelt and accepted by Patrick, the official correspondence disclosed.

COKE MINERS WANT STRIKE AID BY U. M. W.

Are Fighting Bravely Against Wage Cut

(Special to The Daily Worker)

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Nov. 11.—The unorganized coke miners are striking against the enforcement of the 1917 scale, which means a wage cut from the 1923 scale, for better conditions and no discrimination. There is a lot of disorganized strikes every year in the region, but this one may develop into a much larger conflict that usual.

Great Discontent.

The miners all over the coke region are dissatisfied with the present wage scale, forced upon them after a long period of unemployment—the customary "starvation cure." Thompson Mine came out Nov. 5th, other mines are following and the strike may spread over the region.

Meetings are being held and a strike committee is trying to bring the strike over as wide territory as possible. George Papcun at the meetings is advising the formation of pit committees and urging strong picket lines. He urged the miners to demand of the U. M. W. of A. that it enter the field and aid the strike with organizers and funds.

Want Union to Come In.

Negro miners are striking even better than the white miners. The conditions in the mines are terrible. All work has been shut down for a long time and now the operators are trying to open them on the 1917 scale. If the union would make an effort the whole region would be on strike. The miners are ready to come into the union. Young miners are generally the leaders of the present movement.

The famous "cossacks"—the coal and iron police of Pennsylvania are still guarding the mines as they have since the 1922 strike. Now their numbers are increasing and posses are going from house to house trying to get the miners back to work—but without success.

Norwegian Steamer Tied Up by Strike at Brooklyn Pier

By SYLVAN A. POLLACK
(Worker Correspondent)

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 11.—The Norwegian steamer, Start, has failed to start, for the last two days due to a strike which has been called by the seamen of that ship under the direction of the International Seamen's Union.

According to Erick Skblorn, one of the leaders of the strikers, the steamer Start, a Norwegian vessel, which is at Pier 3, army base, South Brooklyn, is completely tied up. The seamen who are now receiving eighty cents an hour, demand an increase to $1.60 an hour. The steamer is alloted three days in port to unload. Almost two days have already passed and nothing has been taken off the boat as yet.

STRIKE RUINS HOSPITALS IN THE ANTHRACITE

Shortage of Crippled Miners Pinches

By AUGUST VALENTINE,
(Worker Correspondent)

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 11.— With the anthracite coal strike well in its third month, the miners are beginning to feel uncomfortable in the region of their stomach. The chief topic at the present time is "relief" in practically every local union meeting. It is only natural that it should be for the miners know of no other source to obtain a cent [illegible] which to live other than from their union.

As yet the bureaucracy fails to heed the demand for relief. Many local unions have already exhausted their relief funds with no other income in sight. If the strike will continue very much longer, which present indications point to it will, much suffering will be experienced by the miners of the anthracite field.

Petty Shopkeepers Pinched.

The miners are broke, that is no secret. Those who have at least a few dollars are economizing very diligently. The business element, too, feels the strike when the miners are in a position of this kind. Their business is affected. They must rely exclusively upon the patronage of the mining population for their profits. When the miners go broke they, too, are affected.

This is one of the reasons why the business men of the anthracite field are so anxious to have the strike settled, by attempts thru their organizations, the chambers of commerce, the Rotary, the Kiwanis clubs, etc. The little robber is getting the worst of it. They don't get the big profits, the coal combine gets that.

Shortage of Broken Backs.

Something else is affected by the prolonged tie-up also. There is much worry over this particular proposition. The hospitals are losing their patronage. For the past two and half months no miners with broken necks, backs and bodies have been guests at these cheerful institutions, much to the sorrow of the directors of the Wilkes-Barre hospitals who are

ATTACK ON REBELS IN SYRIA FAILS AS FRENCH FALL BACK

Armistice Day Not Observed There

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BEIRUT, Syria, Nov. 11. — There was no celebration of armistice day in this part of the world where French frightfulness is still raging. This day was marked by the launching of a fierce offensive on a large scale against the rebels.

French cavalry, supported by squadrons of bombing planes started operations in a fan-like movement from Damascus, but were met with determined resistance by the native forces seven miles outside the city. Heavy casualties were suffered by both sides before the drive was broken and the French are now retreating toward Damascus, with the rebel forces cautiously following.

Try to Mine Ground.

The slow advance is due to the fear that an ambuscade may have been prepared by the French to lead the rebels into a trap, as yesterday a squadron mining the ground with explosives was dispersed and the ammunition captured by rebels.

Workers! Demand the Release of Gitlow!

DECLARATION OF THE DISTRICT EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY, DIST. TWO, NEW YORK.

The sudden recall of Benjamin Gitlow to Sing Sing is part of the whole attack which the capitalist class of America is conducting against the workers. It is the first fruit of the victory of the capitalist class in the last elections.

The imprisonment of Gitlow again goes hand in hand with arrest and clubbing of pickets, the widespread issuance of injunctions and intended as a blow struck against the rights of workers to speak, to assemble and to organize. Gitlow is returned to jail because of his activities on behalf of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in their struggle against the injunction issued against the workers of the International Tailoring company; for his activities in behalf of the miners; for his campaign for world trade union unity and recognition of Soviet Russia and for the unity of workers on the political field thru a labor party, which he conducted during the election campaign.

The barring of Gitlow from the ballot was the first step in the attack of the capitalist class against the workers; the refusal to count the votes cast for him was was a further indication of the systematic policy to silence the champions for these rights of the workers. His return to prison is another step with which to silence a champion for the unity of the workers against the capitalist attack.

In every section of the city, in all factories, all unions, in working class organizations, the demand for immediate release of Comrade Gitlow must be made by all progressive minded workers. The demand for his freedom is a demand for the freedom of the working class to strike and picket, to speak and assemble—is a demand for organization of workers against injunctions and the open shop drive, for unity of the workers in the industrial field, for world trade union unity, for a united front of labor on the political field, for a labor party.

The Workers Party of America will carry on a tireless campaign for the immediate freedom of our comrade.

Workers of America! Show to the capitalist class that you will not tolerate this attack upon your rights! Pass resolutions demanding the immediate release of Gitlow! Support the campaign of the International Labor Defense for his freedom! Demand the abolition of the criminal syndicalist law and similar laws infringing upon the rights of the workers!

THE FIGHT OF BENJAMIN GITLOW FOR FREEDOM IS THE FIGHT FOR YOUR RIGHT OF EXISTENCE.

District Executive Committee, District Two,
William W. Weinstone, Secretary.

TALK OF SUBSTITUTES PUTTING ANTHRACITE OUT OF MARKET IS SHOWN ANTI-STRIKE PROPAGANDA

The use of substitutes for anthracite coal has been heralded far and wide since the strike began September 1. Particularly has the anthracite region been propagandized by the operators with the alarming information that hard coal users would use something else and the miners of anthracite would be out of work forever. What this propaganda is worth and who does it and why, is told in this article, the ninth of a series by Alex Reid, for 29 years a miner and now the secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee.

• • • •

By ALEX REID,
Secretary Progressive Miners' Committee.
(Article IX.)

This article deals with the bugaboo that is being given wide publicity thruout the anthracite field;—anthracite substitutes, that capitalist papers claim will displace hard coal.

The mine workers are being doped with the statement that unless the strike is settled at once, or the miners return to work pending a settlement, the industry will be partially ruined by the use of substitutes for hard coal, namely—oil, gas, coke, semi-anthracite and electricity, but mostly fuel oil.

One Scare Flivered.

During February 1916 the hard coal operators first put forth their alarmist propaganda, that oil heating plants were being installed in the homes of those who could afford it, in New England states. The statement was partially true. Many wealthy people who could afford the high initial cost of installing an oil plant, and an engineer to operate it, had done so.

The mine workers at that time replied, that they knew the tendency would be, amongt he wealthy, to use the high priced oil plants, but pointed out that the natural growth of population in the industrial sections of the Atlantic seaboard country, would call for a vastly increasing amount of the anthracite commodity, that would more than make up any displacement made by fuel oil, gas, electricity, or any other substitute, and since 1916

PROPAGANDA FOR PLANE INTERESTS AT COURTMARTIAL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11—Armistice day during the trial of Col. William Mitchell before an army court martial was marked by the spokesmen for the airplane manufacturers having another day in court.

The manufacturers of armor plate for battleships also received another jolt today as Major Gerard C. Brandt, an aviator attached to the army general staff, repeated the oft-heard testimony to the effect that the island possessions were completely at the mercy of foreign planes.

Brant substantiated Mitchell's charges that the island defenses would be inadequate in time of war against an enemy fleet supported by airplanes. He declared Mitchell had called this condition to the war department's attention but the recommendations were brushed aside as "personal opinions." Brant told of a series of recommendations on improving the air service in the Pacific made by Colonel Mitchell in October 1924, while assistant chief of the air service.

"When did the general staff get that Mitchell report?"

"Last Saturday," said Brant, while the crowd roared with laughter.

NEW YORK LABOR DEFENSE SCORES GITLOW JAILING

Calls on Unions to Demand Release

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—The following resolution is now being sent out to all unions in New York City for their adoption by the International Labor Defense, showing up the nature of the persecution and calling for the immediate release of Benjamin Gitlow, convicted under the criminal syndicalism act of New York state:

"WHEREAS, the conviction of Benjamin Gitlow under the criminal anarchy law has been sustained by the supreme court of the United States, the decision also declaring the law constitutional and thereby forging a powerful weapon of the capitalist class against the militant labor movement and the revolutionary political movement of the working class of this country, and

"WHEREAS, this is a denial to the labor movement to the right of freedom of speech, and

"WHEREAS, it is part of the general policy of using the courts and machinery of government against the workers in the form of injunctions against picketing and striking and of persecution of the militant leadership that is found at the forefront of our political and industrial struggles, and

"WHEREAS, the sustaining of Gitlow's conviction by the United States supreme court supplies a precedent which will mean the railroading to long terms in prison of many other well known fighters in the ranks of the labor movement and will make easier the suppression by the capitalist controlled government of all and any working class organizations which dare oppose their open shop rule, and

"WHEREAS, the experience of the labor movement has demonstrated that such statutes, when once adopted and sustained, are gradually extended in scope thru judicial interpretation until they can be used against any sort of working class movement, and

"WHEREAS, the solidarity of the entire working class is essential to its welfare and requires that those in the forefront of the struggle must especially have the support of all workers, and

"WHEREAS, in freeing James Larkin and others, charged jointly with Gitlow, for the same offense and under the same act, Governor Smith stated of those convicted: 'They are not criminals and I can see no useful purpose that will be served by holding them in prison any longer'; and more specifically, Gov. Smith said of the Larkin case, because it was the first of those taken up by him and was therefore considered more at length: 'Moreover, there is no evidence that Larkin ever endeavored to incite any specific act of violence or lawlessness. What he did was to voice a faith that in the ultimate development of our political institution there should be the radical changes which I have described and condemned.'

"'Moreover, I believe that the safety of the state is affirmatively impaired by the imposition of such a sentence for such a cause.'

"'Political progress results from the clash of conflicting opinions. The public assertion of an erroneous doctrine is perhaps the surest way to disclose the error and make it evident to the electorate. And it is a distinct disservice to the state to impose, for the utterance of a misguided opinion, such extreme punishment as may tend to deter, in proper cases, that

CAPPELLINI IN ATTEMPT TO EXPEL 'REDS'

Local Union Refuses to Oust Valentine

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NANTICOKE, Pa., Nov. 11.—After postponing definite action on the demand of Rinaldo Cappellini, bureaucratic official of the anthracite miners, that they immediately expel from the United Mine Workers, August Valentine, "alleged red," Local Union 838, Nanticoke, Pa., refused to take action other than definitely stating if Valentine was to be expelled, Cappellini must appear before the local union and prefer his own charges and prosecute the case himself on behalf of the district executive board.

This was the fourth meeting the subject was under deliberation since Valentine was arrested late in September when the Scranton police and department of justice dicks broke up a progressive miners' mass meeting in West Scranton. The reactionary miners' officials immediately clamored for his expulsion and by a unanimous decision of the district board, Local 838 was instructed to remove him from membership.

Organizers Fail to Disorganize

At this particular meeting there appeared for the district board two organizers, faithful henchmen of Cappellini, who demanded the local immediately sentence Valentine as he was already expelled by the district board. This, in view of the fact the constitution is quite specific relative to charges being preferred against members first in their own local union with the privilege of either prosecutor or defendant appealing to the higher units for redress.

Organizers Sweeney and Shifcok could not quite convince the local membership they should expel Valentine, particularly after Valentine spoke in his own defense quite extensively, and quite conclusively proved the officials flagrantly violated the constitution they claim is so sacred and undefiled.

Will Come Up Again

The case will come up for final disposition at the next meeting. Progressive forces are organizing to prevent the fakers from expelling Valentine and at this writing it is quite possible "there will be a hot time in the old town that night."

Local 1483, Plains, as yet has refused to expel Pat Toohey after the district board demanded same.

to the present time their theory has proved correct in that respect.

Went Up—Not Down.

Since 1916, anthracite production has been on the increase. The mines have produced more steadily in the last nine years than in any other nine years prior to that in the last one hnudred years—since anthracite operations were started.

The hard coal operators are spending a large publicity fund to get across their "substitutes" propaganda, and it will be interesting to the miners to know that other large sums are used by the same hard coal operators —when no strike is on—to show the workers and public, that these no danger to the industry from the use of substitutes. One may take his choice, apparently.

Prominent among leaflets and periodicals issued by the hard coal operators to prove that no danger besets the anthracite fuel is the following—"Anthracite fuel holds its own," "Experience proves coal cheapest fuel," "All tests prove coal cheaper than oil."

"George Otis Smith, director of the United States geological survey, said, "Coal will be the main source of power as long as the nation lives."

Believe January or November?

In the January, 1925 issue of the Burning Question, a leaflet that was distributed by the hard coal operators' conference, is the following statement. "During the past year millions of dollars have been spent in the effort to establish substitute fuels, for heating the homes of the country, but all this effort has had no appreciable effect in the anthracite industry, for the consumption of anthracite fuel shows no falling off."

In another statement we find the following: "That in all the advertisements of the use of fuel oil thruout the country, the Standard Oil company has never turned its refineries or machine companies to the use of oil, but continues to burn coal. Why? Because coal is the cheapest fuel the Standard Oil company can burn. They don't burn oil. They sell it to the people who believe it is better than anthracite fuel."

Operators' "Information."

Bulletins issued by the hard coal operators thru their bureau "Operators Bureau of Information," have consistently listed changes, made back to anthracite by concerns that have tried fuel substitutes and found them too costly.

We quote the mine owners' leaflet further: Says the Burning Question: "Experiments with other fuels are found to be too expensive, or in other ways unsatisfactory. The experimenters are returning to anthracite. Of the thousands and thousands of new homes built each year the greater number are equipped to use the fuel that has been found to be the most economical and satisfactory after a test of more than one hundred years."

No Strike—No Substitute Peril.

Now in November, 1925, the substitutes question is again brot to the front by the coal owners—that substitutes are making inroads on anthracite—and crippling the industry. When a strike is on we have one kind of statement to the workers about substitutes, and when there is no strike, we see the contrary kind of statement.

The mine workers of the hard coal region will not be fooled with this cry of substitutes taking away their employment. They know that oil or bituminous cannot take the place of anthracite. No one believes that it can, and the owners themselves have furnished that proof in the leaflets that I have referred to and quoted from.

The government has this to say, "The peak of oil production was reached in 1923 and if kept up at that rate, the total oil supply would be exhausted in thirteen years. It is the part of economy to use coal and people will continue to do so until they find a real substitute."

In reference to bituminous as a substitute there is no consumer of coal but knows the relative merits of anthracite and bituminous for domestic purposes. Bituminous is not equal to, but is a long way behind anthracite in quality for domestic use, and no user of hard coal will ever junk their baseburner for soft coal stoves.

This substitutes propaganda is but one of the many weapons used to cloud the issue in the anthracite by one of the best organized cliques of organized capital in America, whose unlimited resources are being used to crush the workers—not only in the anthracite but all over America as well.

ReallyMeans—Go Back to Work.

With this cry of substitutes, is going the demand for resumption of operation of the coal mines, pending a settlement of the dispute, and a demand for arbitration, which I will discuss in my next article.

Every effort is being made to scare the hard coal miners back to work, and this propaganda about substitutes is calculated to cause a resumption of operation of the mines. The operators know that if the miners go back to work pending a settlement, arbitration will have been accomplished and the miners' strike lost.

PAT TOOHEY TOURS COUNTRY TO ACQUAINT WORKERS WITH ANTHRACITE MINERS' STRIKE

In order to counteract the poison propaganda of the employers against the union miners that are now on strike, the Workers (Communist) Party is touring Pat Toohey, member of the National Executive Committee of the Young Workers League, thru the country to explain to the workers the issues involved in the present strike of the anthracite coal miners.

Comrade Toohey has been active in the United Mine Workers of America for many years and has attended many of the conventions called by the miners' union as a delegate.

Meetings Being Arranged:

Meetings are being arranged for Comrade Toohey at the following cities and dates (halls will be announced later):

Boston, Mass., Nov. 17; Paine Memorial Hall, 9 Appelton St.; New York, Nov. 14, 15; Providence, Nov. 16; Worcester, Nov. 18 or 19; Rochester, Nov. 21; Buffalo, Nov. 22; Detroit, Nov. 23, House of the Masses, 2646 St. Aubin St.; Chicago, Nov. 24, 25, 26, 27; South Bend, Nov. 28; Toledo, Nov. 30; Cleveland, Dec. 1, 2; Youngstown, Dec. 3; Pittsburgh, Dec. 4, 5; Baltimore, Dec. 6; Washington, Dec. 7; Philadelphia, Dec. 8 or 9.

PINCHOT AND LEWIS SECRETLY DISCUSS ENDING COAL STRIKE

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 11.—In an effort to "mediate" the coal strike, which is entering its 12th week, Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania completed a secret two-hour "breakfast conference" here today with John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, and left in excellent spirits for Harrisburg where he will hold a similar conference tomorrow with W. W. Inglis, spokesman for the coal operators.

Observers of the coal situation noted that these tactics were similar to those undertaken by the governor when he betrayed the 1923 coal strike.

Governor Pinchot declined to make public what occurred during the conference. Miners who fear Lewis is agreeing to surrender the wage demand of a ten per cent raise are demanding that Lewis publicly reveal why he entered into secret conference with their enemy, Governor Pinchot.

THE REVOLUTION

The Russian Revolution

NO EXCITEMENT ON ARMISTICE DAY IN CAPITAL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 11.—There was no special observance of armistice day in the national capitol today. Everything went on as usual and the unknown soldier who, four years ago today, was buried at Arlington in the Virginia hills, amidst great pomp with the stricken ex-president, Wilson, in attendance and the late Harding officiating, was practically forgotten.

The unknown soldier, like others, in all entente nations, is supposed to symbolize the unknown war dead so that all the war widows and war mothers can derive vicarious satisfaction from the thot that he might be their dead, and to perpetuate the notion that there is something heroic about being slaughtered in an imperialist war.

Drab Commemoration.

When Coolidge motored to Arlington to place the customary wreath on the tomb of the unknown soldier, he was accompanied only by the secretaries of war and navy and his wife, who placed a cross on the tomb. Of course, there were movie photographers to take pictures so the yokels in the village movies could see the replica of the performance.

KU KLUX KLAN DEFENDANT IS PROVED LIAR

Alibi Knocked Out in Murder Trial

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NOBLESVILLE, Ind., Nov. 11.—Earl Klinck, one of the trio of ku kluxers on trial here for the murder of Madge Oberholtzer in one of the most revolting crimes in the annals of the country, was proved to be a liar and perjurer on the witness stand today.

Klinck tried to prove an alibi based upon his story that on the day he was supposed to have taken Miss Oberholtzer from D. C. Stephenson's garage to her home he was in reality in his capacity as deputy sheriff, taking three prisoners from the Marion county jail to the Indiana state prison farm.

Prisoners Prove Lie.

The three pisoners, Peter Major, Thomas Tuttle and Harry Mescall, testified that another deputy, "Red" Koffal, had taken them to the prison and that Klinck was not with them at all. Officials at the prison testified to the same effect.

Klinck is on trial with Earl Gentry and their ringleader, D. C. Stephenson, the leader of the klan in Indiana and Ohio, charged with the murder of the girl after committing a series of bestial assaults upon her of such depraved nature that the evidence presented against these "defenders of womanhood" cannot be printed.

FIGHT OVER TAX PLAN WILL RISE IN NEXT CONGRESS

Attempts to Reach Compromise Fail

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 11—In spite of the lopping off of $300,000,000 from the Mellon-Coolidge tax proposals a fight on the floor of the house when congress convenes is unavoidable. Powerful leaders of the republican group in opposition to the Mellon plan will unite with the democrats to further reduce the revenue from taxes another 75 or 100 million.

The democratic party is a unit against the proposals of the president and secretary of the treasury, not because they represent the small taxpayers, but because they want an issue that can be used as a base of operations against Coolidge. The republican opposition represents very definite economic groupings among the small industrialists of the middle and far west who resent the heavy income taxes imposed upon them.

This will be the first fight in the coming congress and all elements claim it will be settled by Christmas in order to be effective in the 1925 tax.

Enough Remains.

Representative Madden of Illinois, chairman of the powerful appropriations committee, states that the house could raise the cut to 350,000,000, or even higher and still not unduly disturb the treasury.

The watch-dogs of capitalism are careful not to cut too much revenue off the tax bills else it might endanger the maintenance of a sufficiently powerful oppressive government to keep the workers in subjection and defend abroad the interests of the imperialist masters of the country.

No matter which group they represent in congress, they are united in one question—the workers must be held in slavery to the capitalists.

Strike Ruining the Hospital Business in Anthracite Field

losing their revenues and income due to this strike.

The following is taken from the Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader of Tuesday, November 3, 1925, bemoaning the fact they are losing out also due to the strike.

"This most acute situation will probably be remedied, but it serves to prove the seriousness of the shortage here. Both Mercy and Wilkes-Barre General Hospitals are feeling the pinch of the strike thru a curtailment of their revenues received in compensation for mine accident cases. In the case of the latter institution, it was officially stated that the loss of General Hospital is about $3,500 a month, and with Mercy Hospital the loss is said to be more than $3,000."

The above spasm concretely demonstrates how little is the life of a human being worth in the anthracite mining region. It is apparent they do not care or wish the workers well but regard the strike from an economic standpoint also, that while it lasts their revenues are curtailed.

Mercenary U. S. Airmen in Morocco Are Planning Return to This Country

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the American mercenaries, who joined the aviators on the French side in Morocco to hurl death and destruction from the skies upon the heads of the rebellious Riffs, are planning to return home. The so-called Sheriffian squadron, in which they were enrolled as volunteers, is being disbanded and these Hessians of this modern imperialist war may now return to Paris and New York.

• • • •

Let the wrath of American labor fall upon these murderers of the men, women and children of North Africa, who killed from the air when they know that the Riff defenders had no planes to return the attack or send in pursuit.

The American jingo press will hail as heroes these craven cowards upon their return to the United States. Let thousands of workers demonstrate against them upon the waterfront wherever they may set foot upon these shores again. On huge placards and banners, held aloft over the heads of the demonstrators, so that all the world may see, let the story of their many crimes be told in words that live and flame.

The news dispatches say that their work has been completed, "for the time being at least." Their work of butchery! They won the highest praise from the French hangmen, leading the war against the Moroccans, for their two months of shedding blood. They dropped 49 tons of bombs upon the "enemy"; not upon soldiers able to fight back, but upon old men, women and children. They tell of their success in their own words thru the admission that the entire civilian population had deserted the villages and fled to the mountains. They argue that it wasn't bad for these peoples to be driven from their homes, because they are nomads anyway, and accustomed to roam the deserts and the hills.

• • • •

Let American workers make it so uncomfortable for these killers in the United States that they will be compelled to leave the land and seek shelter elsewhere. Force them to wander the face of the earth as they forced the Riffian peoples to scatter for their lives.

Let American labor declare its solidarity with the oppressed colonial peoples of North Africa by showing that crimes committed against the peoples of Morocco are equally attacks upon the working and farming masses of the United States.

• • • •

In apology for their many murderous deeds, these American airmen declare that, "the French are now waging in Morocco the most humane war in history." This contention bares completely the depravity of the killer caught with blood still warm upon his hands. The French imperialists have shown how they wage colonial wars by the fiendish massacre of thousands in Syria, especially in Damascus. The war in Morocco is no different, except that the French hireling soldiers have found their more than equals in the brave fighters led by Abd-el-Krim. The Syrians are learning.

• • • •

Solidarity of American workers with oppressed colonials, whether of France or Great Britain, and especially the United States, develops the unity of toil the world around, the unity that spells the doom of capitalist imperialism everywhere.

LADIES' GARMENT UNION OFFICIAL AT PURCELL MEET

Joint Board Head Will Speak on Unity

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Louis Hyman, general manager New York joint board of the International Ladies' Garment Workers of the city of New York will speak at the Purcell meetings which have been arranged in this city. Two meetings will be held at which Purcell will be the principal speaker. The huge demand for tickets has forced the trade union committee to hire two tremendous halls for the evening of Tuesday, Nov. 17, the New Star Casino and the Central Opera House.

World Trade Union Unity.

The theme of the meetings will be the topic which is stirring the masses of the workers thruout the world today—the topic of world trade union unity. It will be remembered that Purcell was one of the principal factors in promoting the cordial relations between the English and the Russian trade unions. He was a member of the delegation which recently visited Russia and issued the report which has been so widely read thruout the labor movement thruout the world. When the report of the delegation to Russia was submitted at the Scarborough conference it was approved unanimously and the following resolution was adopted by acclamation: "This congress records appreciation of the general council's efforts to promote international unity, and urges the incoming general council to do everything in their power towards securing world-wide unity of the trade union movement thru an all-inclusive international federation of trade unions." Mr. A. B. Swales, the president of the congress, in his address, emphasized this point in the following emphatic way: "When economic conditions forced the unions to assume a defensive attitude, the employers did not hesitate to take advantage of their stronger position, and they are still plotting and planning to undermine trade union standards. But there is a limit to the concessions the unions can be forced to make. Union policy henceforth will be to recover lost ground, to re-establish and improve our standards of wages, hours and working conditions, and to coordinate and intensify trade union action for the winning of a larger measure of control in industry for the workers. And this policy renders necessary a greater degree of trade union unity."

Union Conference Sunday

Purcell is at present touring thruout the United States and is being enthusiastically received in every city where meetings have been arranged. It is very evident from the reception being given to Purcell that the masses of the toilers are behind him in his mission for promoting world trade union unity. The trade union committee for organizing the Purcell meeting has arranged for its final conference before the big mass meetings. This conference to which a number of additional unions are sending delegates will be held on Sunday, November 15th, at 3 p. m. at Beethoven Hall.

PHILIPPINES DEMAND THAT U. S. KEEP PROMISE OF INDEPENDENCE

MANILA, P. I., Nov. 11.—The Philippine house today passed the senate plebiscite bill substituting the word "immediate" for "six years." The measure provides for a popular vote on independence from the United States. The Philippines were promised self-government in the Jones act, and the only interference with them getting it is that of Governor-General Wood and his constabulary.

A legislative committee was then appointed to visit America to work for independence. It will be headed by Manuel Quezon, president of the senate and Manuel Roxas, speaker of the house. A group is already in America headed by Senator Osmena.

WOBBLIES PUT SKIDS UNDER UNIVERSALISM

Adopt Sliding Scale of Finances

The 17th general convention of the I. W. W. is demonstrating that on some fields at least it is not afraid to lay hands on sacred mistakes and traditional folly by putting the word finis on the theory that any member pould step right in to any official position, secretary or editor, and function right.

At Wednesday's session the delegates voted to make it definite that officials, elected each year, can be allowed to hold office for three years —so as to learn how to run the office before they leave it. Some few kind words for Bill Haywood were elicited by the debate on the matter, who "held office for years and did good work."

Sliding Scale Adopted

Another rather progressive step which did violence to tradition is the adoption, subject to referendum, or course, of a sliding scale of initiations and dues, initiations to be from one dollar to ten and the dues from fifty cents to a dollar, according to the sum fixed by the various industrial unions internally.

Dollar dues was the sum adopted by nearly all industrial union convention held in preparation for this general convention.

The report on finances of the general organization given Tuesday revealed a mild scandal concerning the taking by P. J. Welinder, interim general secretary-treasurer and member of the general executive board prior to his resignation not long ago, of mileage amounting some $80 on the ground that it was his fare back to Seattle where he came from. It appears that instead of using it for that purpose, he used it to take a trip to Sweden, presumably disliking the climate of the Pacific northwest.

The convention also recommended, without making it mandatory, that all the industrial unions with headquarters in various cities should move into the building housing the general headquarters.

MACHINIST HEAD STOLE VOTES IN GREEN BAY, WIS.

Johnston Agent Fakes Election Returns

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11. — J. F. Anderson, former vice-president of the Intl. Assn. of Machinists, now appealing to the membership for removal of the suspension order issued against him by his recent adversary in the grand lodge election, Wm. H. Johnston, president, has made public another affidavit.

This one is from the secretary of the lodge at Green Bay, Wisc., asserting that he did not tamper with the ballots or tally sheets, but that the stuffing of the lodge's vote in favor of the Johnston ticket was done after a Johnston grand lodge agent, Paul Huybrecht, was entrusted with the mailing of the ballots and tally sheet. He offers a comparison of the actual vote with the one reported at Washington headquarters, whereby it appears that Huybrecht's own vote was boosted from 100 to 181, Johnston's from 92 to 168, Davison's from 100 to 176, and all others on their ticket in similar degree. Opposition candidates were given reductions.

Negro Congress Is Ku Kluxers' Scheme, Delegate Is Warned

By A Worker Correspondent

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 11.—A mass meeting of Negro workers will be called here in the near future to carry out plans for organizing colored workers, as the result of the return home of the local delegate to the Negro Labor Congress recently held in Chicago.

And this, despite the fact that the delegate was met at the train by flunkeys of local capitalism and warned that white workers who were sympathetic to the Negro Labor Congress were ku kluxers.

The opposition of these capitalist morons to the unionizing of the colored workers made the workers determined to push their organization.

Your neighbor will appreciate the favor—give him this copy of the DAILY WORKER.

MINER BLACKLISTED FOR SELLING PAPERS; SICK AND NEEDS AID

Comrade Tony Stanfi of Mystic, Ia., is making a brave fight for a chance to live. He is a miner stricken with paralysis,—but despite this attempting to find work to keep him supplied with food. Besides, he has no overcoat and his clothes are thread-bare.

For thirty-two weeks, he has been without work, yet can get no aid from the union. Militant to the last, however, he will make another appeal at this Thursday's union meeting that he be given a job or unemployment relief.

The fact that he has distributed the DAILY WORKER is the reason given by the union president for Comrade Stanfi's being put on the blacklist.

"If you think to send me any help, please send it by return mail,—I need it very bad," writes Comrade Stanfi. "Yes, I beg some relief again in my bitter need. And might the local union membership, not the officials, take steps to correct the injustice that is done to me in depriving me of my living so many long months!

"The doctor says that I must not worry, but keep smiling,—the doctor is 'bunk.'

"Yours in misery and suffering,

Tony Stanfi

Sears Roebuck Has 25,000 Working Now; Highest Wage Is $27

By S. Heller.
(Worker Correspondent)

Twenty-five thousand are now employed at the Sears Roebuck and Co., as it is the mail order rush season. Need for organization is strongly felt here, especially to resist wage cuts.

New methods of reduction are continually being worked out, tho there is no system of increasing wages. No matter if a man works here 10 years, there is no difference made in his pay. If he is married he gets $27 a week, first and last.

And the boss will snap up a chance to displace a married man with a single man, as the latter only gets $25 a week, that is, if he is above 25 years old. If under that he may get $22 or $18.

HILLCREST SILK MILL STRIKERS TIE-UP FACTORY

Loomfixers and Twisters Join Weavers

By ALBERT WEISBORD.

WEST NEW YORK, N. J., Nov. 11—The strike at the Hillcrest Silk Mill has now reached the end of its second week and finds the strikers more firm and with better spirit than even before. Mass picketing is being conducted each morning with better and better spirit. The few people working in the mill—mostly relatives of the boss—have dwindled down to only three. No scabs can be procured that can stand the persuasion of the strikers. The moment the first scab walks in, all of the loomfixers who belong to their own independent organization, walked out leaving the boss flat on his back. The twisters thave joined the strikers altho they had no demands to make immediately. Yesterday for the first time, twisters, loomfixers and weavers could be seen meeting in one council of the workers.

Boss Threatened Worker.

The boss is worried. He has sent letters to the workers to come to work, but they have laughed at his effort to frighten them to his face. He has sent his foremen around to the strikers' homes but his efforts were in vain. Yesterday he sent "conciliators" around. The workers decided if they came with any concrete proposals from the boss they would talk and if they have no real offers to make, they were to slam the door. The workers know that the "federal conciliators" are only tools of the bosses.

The big problem is to broaden the strike and the united front committee of Hudson county is already on the job to arrange for mass meetings, dances, socials, etc., for the relief of the strikers, should it be needed, and also to bring home the message of the strike to all the silk workers of Hudson county and to build up a more powerful united front of the workers against the united front of the bosses.

Workers Party Aids Strikers.

The Workers Party arranged to have all the strikers attend the November 7th celebration and all the workers were very glad to get tickets. Much enthusiasm marked the announcement that part of the proceeds would go to the strike fund.

WORKER'S FAMILY BURNS TO DEATH; CAUGHT IN APARTMENT HOUSE FIRE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

EAST ORANGE, N. J., Nov. 11.—Five persons were burned to death when flames swept their apartment on the third floor of a six-story frame dwelling at 400 Amherst St. early today.

The victims, a father and his four children, were trapped in their bedroom. The mother escaped death by leaping into the arms of a neighbor, with one of her babies in her arms.

Seismograph Records Intense Earthquake

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—An earthquake of more than usual intensity was recorded on the seismograph of Fordham University. Estimates placed the scene of the disturbance approximately 5,000 miles from New York.

The disturbance began at 9.25 and continued until after eleven o'clock, reaching its greatest intensity at 10.05 a. m.

To Spend $75,000,000 on Educational Program

SANTIAGO, Chile, Nov. 11—Chile is seriously considering the expenditure of $75,000,000 for an educational program which will take in the construction of school buildings and remodeling of the old ones.

POLICE HAVE NO RIGHT TO ARREST WITHOUT WRITS

Citizens Can Resist Illegal Search

When minions of the law attempt unlawful arrests and are so bold as to point their pistols, they may be killed and there is no punishment, declared Attorney Michael Ahern, in his speech before the jury in the trial of the two Genna gunmen, Albert Alselmi and John Scalisi, for the killing of two Chicago policemen.

"Olson and Walsh (the two policemen who were shot by the Genna gang) when they leaped out of that car with guns in their hand, put themselves in a position where the defendants had a right to shoot them," stated Ahern as he turned around to pick up a number of lawbooks to prove his contention.

Must Have Warrant.

He then quoted a decision of the United States supreme court in the case of a Chicago gunman "getting" a policeman, that the circumstances under which an officer may arrest without a warrant are when he witnesses the commission of a misdemeanor, or when he has knowledge of a felony and sees the perpetrator. He must know beyond question that his man is guilty before he may arrest him.

Crowe Plays "Big."

State's Attorney Crowe, who always furnishes trial spectators with much amusement in his attempt to make himself appear as the "defender" of "law and order," chimed in with, "What if Marty Durkin were to go automobile riding and a policeman saw him, but was not quite positive of his identity, could not the police man seize him?"

"If the policeman did not know that the man was Durkin," Ahern shot back, "the man would have a perfect right to tell the officer it was none of his damn business."

Falls Into Cistern.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia., Nov. 11.—Miss Anna Wilson, 58, accidentally lost her life at the home of a friend near Coggon, Ia., when she slipped into an open cistern. Friends found her body head downward in several feet of water.

N. Y. Superintendent of Schools Would Tax Wealth for Education

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 11.—The governor of New York again holds out the lure of an increase in salaries to school teachers. At a conference of 150 educators, legislators and school authorities of the state which met with Governor Smith, he appointed a committee to work out a program of school legislation and finance to be presented to the 1926 session of the legislature.

Stewart Browne, representative of real estate owners, immediately began objecting to any increase in taxes on real estate property.

Dr. William J. O'Shea, superintendent of education, showed his annoyance with Browne saying that that gentleman always tried to be funny. "If real estate owners were taxed to provide additional aid for the schools," he said, "it would be the poor who would be forced to pay. The landlords would pass the increase along to the tenants. I do not subscribe to this policy. I believe that additional moneys should come from the wealthy. Tax luxuries for the money."

UPTON SINCLAIR SCORES GOV. OF CALIFORNIA

Points Out Taft's Book to Aid C. S. Victims

I. L. D. News Service.

Governor Friend W. Richardson of California is not a slave to public opinion tho he is not known to be so cold to suggestions coming from that section of society that derives its income from exploiting the many.

Richardson's contempt for public opinion was learned when he replied to a letter written by the noted novelist, Upton Sinclair, appealing to the governor to pardon Charlotte Anita Whitney, who was convicted under the criminal syndicalism law of the state of California and whose conviction was upheld by the United States supreme court, in its refusal to accept jurisdiction on her appeal.

Claims He Enforces all Laws.

In his reply to Sinclair, Governor Richardson declared that he was in receipt of letters and telegrams asking for pardon for Miss Whitney. The governor disclaims responsibility for passing the law but asserts that he has taken an oath to support all laws winding up with the statement that: "It is my duty to stand up for the laws and to protect society, and I will not issue pardons merely because of popular clamor."

To which Sinclair replied:

"I am deeply touched by the governor's loyalty to the code of laws of this state, but I would like to ask the governor, as a practical man, how many thousand laws there are on the statute books which he does not enforce and which he has entirely forgotten.

Better Read Taft's Book.

"I would like to remind him also, upon the highest possible authority, that of Chief Justice Taft of the United States supreme court, that the great bulk of the laws of this country are enforced in the interest of the rich and not in the interest of the poor. Governor Richardson has, perhaps, not read Justice Taft's book, entitled, 'Justice and the Poor'; I ask him to read it."

The International Labor Defense is conducting a campaign for the release of Miss Whitney and all other victims of the California syndicalist laws.

The Movement for World Trade Union Unity - By Tom Bell

This is the fourth instalment of a series of articles dealing with the question of World Trade Union Unity. This instalment deals with the British Workers and International Trade Union Unity. Following instalments will deal with the Communists and World Trade Union Unity, and the American Federation of Labor and Unity.

The British Workers and International Trade Union Unity.

WHY is it that the British trade unions are the first to join hands with the Russian trade unions in the struggle for international trade union unity?

The answer is: The decline of British capitalism, and the growing knowledge of the British workers that the economic crisis which has gripped Britain since the war is insoluble within the limits of capitalism—without breaking the capitalist grip on the industries and organizing production on a socialist bascis.

In the basic industries the decline of British capitalism is clearly shown. In 1913 Britain exported 98,000,000 tons of coal while in 1924 she exported only 61,650,000 tons, and this figure includes the exports to Ireland not included in the 1913 figures. Compared with 1923, the 1924 export showed a decrease of 17,000,000 tons. For the first four months of 1925, 7,000,000 less coal was exported than for the corresponding period of 1924.

The British output of steel fell from 8,500,000 tons in 1923, to 8,200,000 in 1924, which figure is only slightly higher than the steel production fifty years ago. The annual report of Vickers Co., great steel corporation of Britain, has the following to say on this subject:

"I quote the figures for the production of steel because steel is the best index of the state of our engineering and shipbuilding industries, and because these figures show that our country is the only industrial country which is passing thru a period of depression in this respect. We have long lost that foremost place we occupied fifty years ago. . . We have no chance of recovering our predominant position."

We know the important part shipbuilding plays in the economic life of Great Britain. Shipbuilding is also on the decline. The tonnage of vessels under construction fell from 1,297,000 tons at the end of 1924 to 1,165,000 at the present time. This decline becomes striking when it is remembered that in 1913 vessels were being constructed in British yards to a total of 1,898,000 tons per annum representing 59 per cent of the world ship construction. At the present time the amount of vessels being built in Britain is less than 50 per cent of the world tonnage.

The textile industry is also declining. In April of this year Sir Charles Macara stated that the loss incurred by the cotton industry since the beginning of the crisis amounted to about £200,000,000.

The decline in industry means an increase in unemployment. Since the beginning of the crisis the number of unemployed has hovered around a million, and at the present time is 1,500,000. The number unemployed in May, 1925, was 1,178,800, as compared with 1,040,600 the previous year, According to the Ministry of Labor Gazette out of the eleven and a half million insured workers at the end of March, 1925, the number of unemployed amounted to 11.47 per cent.

The standard of living of the British workers has declined altho the money wage has increased. Altho wages as compared with 1914 have nominally increased by about 45 per cent for metal workers generally, and from 70 to 75 per cent for other workers, they have actually fallen because during that period the index of prices has risen by 80 per cent to the end of 1924.

In the mining industry 400 mines have been closed down and there is no prospect of them ever opening again. About 160,000 miners are unemployed with no prospect of employment in the industry.

The well known English economist places the national income of Britain in 1800 at £174,000,000 and in 1920 at £4,000,000,000, or 28 times more. Sir Josiah Stamp calculated the national wealth in 1919 as £15,023,000,000. Prof. Henry Clay, of Manchester University, declares that two-thirds of the national wealth was in the hands of less than two per cent of the population.

Regarding the physical fitness of the British working class, Premier Baldwin stated in a recent speech that of eight volunteers to the army, five are rejected on grounds of physical unfitness.

Regarding remedies for unemployment the minister of labor, Steel Maitland, in a recent speech, during the debate on unemployment in the house of commons, stated: "Therefore, when people like General Thompson with impatient insistence asked what schemes have been prepared, we reply that none have been prepared, that there are no schemes to prepare."

This amounts to an official admission by a spokesman of the British capitalists that they cannot solve the problem of unemployment.

The decline of British industry is caused by (1) The effects of the world war and the peace-burden of debts, increased French competition by use of reparation coal and Alsace-Lorraine iron ore. (2) The growth of capitalist industry in the colonies such as India and the dominions such as Canada and Australia, competing with British industry because these countries now export commodities themselves. (3) The increased competition of the United States.

The exploitation of cheap labor in the textile mills of Bombay throws thousands of textile workers into the streets in Lancashire. The growth of great capitalist enterprises thruout the empire causes the starvation and misery of the British workers.

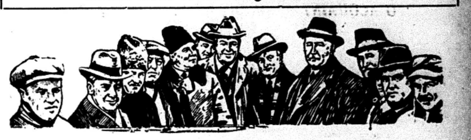
In the past the imperialist psychology of great numbers of the British workers had an economic basis in the fact that the superprofits derived from the exploitation of under-paid colonial slaves was used to supply them with a comparatively high standard of living. The skilled workers—the aristocracy of labor—were imperialists to the backbone. But today the British capitalists, burdened by taxation growing out of the effects of the war and the curtailment of industry, can no longer afford to bribe these workers with better wages and conditions as in the period of capitalist expansion prior to the world war. The significance of the recent wage conflicts in Britain lies in the fact that it was the wages of skilled workers—the railroad workers, engineers and building workers that the bosses attacked. Recently Mr. Stanley Machin, prominent member of the British Chamber of Commerce, stated that the wages of the 9,000,000 workers in the "sheltered" trades must be reduced. By "sheltered" trades he means the highly skilled workers organized in unions who occupied a privileged position so far as wages and hours are concerned.

These hard economic facts are the basis of the radicalization of the British labor movement. Besides this the British workers have gone thru great political experiences which are enlightening millions of them to their class position in society.

In 1920 the Polish war on Soviet Russia was supported by the Lloyd George government, and Churchill was planning to declare war on the workers' republic and crush it. All over the country the workers organized councils of action to prevent war on Soviet Russia, Lloyd George was forced to abandon the offensive and declared sickly that "the councils of action were swinging at an empty door with a sledgehammer," attempting to pretend that it was never intended to declare war on Soviet Russia. But the workers saw what could be accomplished by united action.

In 1921 the attack of the mine owners on the wages of the miners made the question of the triple alliance of miners, railroadmen and transport workers going into action together one of practical importance. The workers were defeated by the "Black Friday" betrayal of Thomas, Hodges & Co. in calling off the strike of the triple alliance. But the workers added to their experience by seeing Lloyd George put the country on a war footing to crush them. Troops were quartered in the public parks, navy crews were used to man mine pumps, an automobile transport service was organized—all the forces at the disposal of the bosses were mobilized to defend the workers. The capitalist state was openly revealed to the workers as the organized instrument of oppression of the bosses against them.

British Trade Union Delegation in Moscow



In 1924 the British labor party elected the strongest single group to the house of commons. The split between the liberals and the conservatives was so great that they could not unite to form a coalition government with the result that MacDonald formed a minority government.

Since the beginning of this century the British workers had been educated to rely upon the formation of a labor government as the means of conquering capitalism. The theory of the peaceful development of capitalism into socialism by means of constitutional action as opposed to harsh Bolshevik methods had been thoroughly hammered into their heads. The advent of the MacDonald government contributed to their political education by somewhat destroying their faith in the "inevitability of gradualism" to use the phrase of Sidney Webb, the "theoretician" of the labor party.

The MacDonald government continued the imperialist policy of its capitalist predecessors. Plans were laid for building more cruisers, Macedonian villages were bombed, the Indian masses threatened with terrible reprisals if they dared to challenge British rule in India, and the Egyptian nationalist movement suppressed.

In internal policy MacDonald pursued capitalist strikebreaking methods when he threatened to smash the longshoremen's strike with force. Philip Snowden's budget was praised by the capitalist press.

No more subservient creatures had ever kissed the king's hand than these "labor men," and the workers began to doubt. The energy and devotion of hundreds of thousands of workers had gone to make this MacDonald government possible—and they were rewarded by seeing "their" government pursue the old capitalist policy of keeping the workers and colonial peoples in subjection to the capitalists.

As Zinoviev has put it: While the MacDonald labor government in no way served the interests of the British working class, the very establishment of such a government gave the British workers a "taste of power" and this has been signalized by the quite definite sweep toward the left on the part of the masses of the British trade unions.

Owing to the terrible economic conditions of the British workers they have broken away from their conservative moorings and are rapidly moving to the left. The question of how to combat the capitalist offensive and at least maintain the standard of living of the British workers forced the leaders of the movement to take up the question of abandoning the policy of class collaboration and to move toward a policy of class struggle.

JEWISH BUTCHERS OF LOS ANGELES OUT TO ORGANIZE

Launch New Drive for 100 Pct. Union

By A Worker Correspondent

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Nov. 10.—A delegate from the Central Labor Council of Los Angeles, M. R. Grunoff, one of the vice-presidents of the Amalgamated Butchers of North America, walked up to a group of Jewish butchers here one day and said, "Boys, will you help me organize a Jewish Butchers' Union in Los Angeles?" That question started what is now known as the Los Angeles Jewish Butchers' Local 326.

The concrete achievements from circulars immediately distributed among Jewish butchers and notices in the Jewish newspapers inviting all Jewish butchers to come to a mass meeting for the purpose of organizing for better wages, shorter hours and better conditions, is demonstrated by the union cards that adorn the windows of 17 newly organized Jewish butcher shops.

But the Jewish butchers tho proud of their accomplishments do not propose to stop here. Our aim is to organize the entire city of Los Angeles. There is a Jewish population of 100,000 in Los Angeles. We therefore urge every Jewish housewife to stand by us in our organization drive. Especially do we make our appeal to the Women Consumers' Educational League to put their shoulder to the wheel and help the butchers come thru 100 per cent organized. We can do this if the women will help!

When that argument begins at lunch time in your shop tomorrow—show them what the DAILY WORKER says about it.

CLEVELAND HAS ENTHUSIASTIC NOV. 7 MEETING

Workers Celebrate the Bolshevik Revolution

CLEVELAND, Nov. 11.—The Cleveland demonstration commemorating the eighth anniversary of the Soviet government was one of the finest and biggest that has been held in this city for years. Altho the weather was very bad, a crowd of about 1,100 turned out and sat thruout the program, listening attentively to the speeches and the entertainment provided by the district commitee.

The eighth anniversary celebration was an unusual affair. First of all, we had Comrade Jay Lovestone as the main speaker. Lovestone received an ovation as he stepped on the platform. His speech was a clear analysis of the world situation, the attacks that have been made on Soviet Russia—and the meaning of the Locarno pact, as a new attack on the Soviet republic.

Lovestone paid his respects to the police of Philadelphia who attempted to interfere with the meething there on Friday night.

Workers Must Control.

"I learned a new word in Philadelphia. They intend to celebrate the Sesquicentennial of the signing of the declaration of independence in Philadelphia next year. It has not been a declaration of independence, but of dependence for the workers of this country. We workers must sign our own independence—and that will be when we have taken control of Washington, and the flag of the working class is flying in New York, Washington, Cleveland and all over the country," declared Lovestone.

Lovestone pointed out the dangers confronting the workers today—the danger of war, the danger of a call for a new invasion of Soviet Russia. He pictured the growth of the Soviet power thru the different years and showed that today the Soviet government is almost invincible. "The powers have refused to grant Soviet Russia credits. But Soviet Russia can be proud that she has built up her power without the aid of American dollars."

Lovestone's speech was frequently interrupted by the enthusiastic applause of the audience.

Workers Want Unity.

"Millions of workers are struggling for trade union unity. The British and the Russian workers recognize that that is the only thing that will prevent a new war," declared Lovestone, "The workers of several countries whose minds were poisoned by the capitalist press as to what is going on in Soviet Russia, have sent delegations to that country to see with their own eyes what is going on there. Bona fide trade union delegations from Germany, Great Britain, Norway, Sweden, Denmark have gone to Soviet Russia. It is to be hoped that the day is not so distant when a trade union delegation will go from the United States and see what is going on in the state of the workers and peasants."

Honor Mikhail Frunze.

The meeting opened with a memorial for Comrade Mikhail Frunze, the commander of the Red Army, who recently died in Soviet Russia. Comrade Amter, chairman of the meeting, reviewed the life of Comrade Frunze, and declared that his life and activities were symbolic of what is taking place in Soviet Russia.

"The capitalists always maintain that the workers and poor farmers are unable to construct and manage a state. Franze, the son of a Turkestan peasant, gives the lie to their contentions," declared Amter. "He drove out the agents of the imperialist powers—Denikin and Koltchak—and fought them on the Siberian front. And as head of the Red Army, he proved to the imperialists that no army can ever invade Soviet Russia. And Frunze is succeeded by a metal worker, who up to the present was commander of the garrison of Moscow."

The audience rose in honor to Comrade Frunze, while the Star Mandolin Orchestra, composed of Russian comrades, played the Russian funeral hymn.

Comrade John Brahtin dealt with the meaning of a real government of the workers and peasants, showing what the Bolsheviki understand by a real government, as against the democrats and mensheviki.

Urges Youth to Organize.

Comrade Martin Gordon, acting district organizer of the Young Workers League, spoke of the meaning of militarism to the youth of the country. He declared that every worker should join the ranks of the Young Workers League, which will do everything in its power, should an imperialist war again be declared to open the eyes of the young workers to the meaning of the war and to mobilize them against it.

The enthusiasm of the audience was unbounded. It was heightened by the contributions to the program by the Freiheit Dramatic Singing Society, the Star Mandolin Orchestra, the German Liedertafel, the Ukrainian Chorus, the Hungarian Chorus and the Slovak Chorus. The Czecho-Slovakian comrades gave two tableaux, depicting life in Russia before the revolution and the life of the workers and peasants in the new world—after the revolution. The applause that greeted these two pictures was tremendous.

Appeal for DAILY WORKER.

A collection was taken up for The DAILY WORKER, which was pointed out as the only organ in the English language in this country which carries on the fight for the entire working class. "The capitalist newspapers are busy poisoning the minds of the workers as to the class struggle. It endeavors to make the workers believe that they are not a class against the capitalist class. 'Americanization' plans of the government, the American legion and other patriotic organizations, have as their aim to make the worker forget the class he belongs to, and believe that all citizens in this country have equal rights. The DAILY WORKER is the organ of the working class of this country, and every friend and sympathizer with the Communist movement must come to its aid at this critical moment," declared the speaker in his appeal for The DAILY WORKER.

The collection amounted to $181. In addition, a large number of buttons were sold, one sympathizer paying $10 and another $5 for a button.

Supper was served in the dining room, having been prepared by the Hungarian and Jewish comrades. Dancing followed and lasted until 11 p. m.

The Coal Miners Celebrate.

WEST FRANKFORT, Ill.—That John L. Lewis is helping to break the anthracite strike by playing off the bituminous miners against those in the hard coal fields, becomes every day more plain. Mines opening up in West Frankfort, Christopher, Valier, Royalton, Zeigler and thruout the southern Illinois field, are supplying coal that makes it easier for big business to combat the anthracite strike.

John L. Lewis is charged with having deliberately planned this. Miners cite as evidence the seperate agreements signed with the operators of the various fields by Lewis.

Progressive sentiment still persists among the miners of southern Illinois. The eighth anniversary of the Russian revolution was celebrated by mass meetings in Christopher and West Frankfort. Manuel Gomez of Chicago spoke at both meetings. William Schroeder addressed the West Frankfort gathering on the subject of International Labor Defense, citing specifically what the defense organization was doing in the cases of Henry Corbishley and the other framed-up miners in Zeigler. E. B. Hewlett was chairman.

NEW YORK WORKERS TO HOLD EDUCATION WEEK PROTEST NOVEMBER 15

NEW YORK, Nov. 11—The Workers' (Communist) Party and the Young Workers League are arranging a joint meeting for Sunday, Nov. 15, in the Manhattan Lyceum against "education" week at which Pat Toohey, recently released from jail will be one of the speakers.

DETROIT NUCLEUS ISSUES BEST SHOP PAPER IN THE COUNTRY

SHOP Nucleus No. 3, of the Detroit district, organized in the Fisher Body Plant No. 12, in Detroit, Mich., is setting the pace for all the shop nuclei of the party in its activities.

In The DAILY WORKER and in the other party campaigns, Shop Nucleus No. 3 has shown its heels to most of the other shop nuclei in the country.

But especially in the matter of getting out a shop nucleus paper has this party unit been topnotch. The first issue of the Workingmen's Shop News appeared October 19. It was a one-page paper. It certainly aroused considerable interest and enthusiasm among the working men. It immediately irritated the boss.

THE second issue of the paper appeared November 7. It is a considerable improvement on the first issue, not only in volume and contents, but also in general make-up. It is a four-page paper, the best of its kind that we now have. It has punch, deals with living questions, and puts across the Communist message quite effectively.

We quote in part from the second issue of the paper:

"Every worker on approaching his bench picked up the paper (first issue) and read it carefully, folded it, and put it in his pockets, as a precious thing. Later, they gathered in groups of four and five and discussed the contents of the paper, with approval and expressed their desire to regularly have such a paper, with its published facts about slave-driving, sweating, and the damnable piece work system."

"HOW did the bosses receive the first issue of our paper? The bosses and their tools, the lickspittles and stoolpigeons did not like it at all. They were exceedingly alarmed and went on a hunt thruout the shop trying to discover who was responsible for its distribution. They tried a scurvy trick to trap the distributors. In the door finishing department, where the workers are driven more than in any other place in the factory, one of the lickspittles, a slimy foreman, procured a copy of the paper and hung it up on a post. Then he, with an inspector stood aside watching to catch anyone who would step up to read or take the paper. But the trap failed.

"Take this one illustration. The day following the distribution of the first issue of the Workingmen's Shop News, the general office of the Fisher Body corporation ordered the foreman and inspectors in the metal finishing department to open the tool box of one of the metal finishers while he was away to try to discover if he was one of the 'dangerous men' who was giving information, thru the Workingmen's Shop News, regarding conditions in the factory."

AMONG the other topics dealt with in this issue of the paper are: "Our Working Time," "Send in your Grievances," giving the address of the Workers Party district office as the place to send grievances, "Lenin, and the Trade Union Movement," by Losovsky; "What is the Workers (Communist) Party?" "Hunting," a short but effective complaint against the bosses searching the tool boxes of the different workers in order to find out who is reading or who is distributing the Workingmen's Shop News and finally "Our Paper," being a further introduction of the Workingmen's Shop News to the workers in the Fisher Body plant.

Every shop nucleus in the country should try to follow the lead of Shop Nucleus No. 3 of Detroit. We must have more shop papers. We must have living active shop nuclei, and there is nothing that can make a shop nucleus a more vigorous party unit than a shop paper. In getting out a shop paper, the entire membership of the nucleus participates and keeps in touch with the conditions and sentiments of the workers. The getting out of such a paper, develops the initiative of our party members and increases their responsibility and ability.

The getting out of such a shop paper teaches our comrades how to keep in contact with the masses and how to win them over by delivering to them a message that will carry.

(NORTHWEST TERRITORY)
Attention!

The section membership meeting of Section No. 6 which takes in the following branches: North Side Polish, Russian, Northwest Jewish, Northwest English, Karl Marx Scandinavian, Lithuanian No. 3, Lettish, Car Shop Nucleus No. 6, Ukrainian No. 1, Slovak No. 1, Irving Park English, Slovak Jefferson Park, will be held Thursday, November 12, 8 p. m. sharp at the Workers' Lyceum, 2733 Hirsch Blvd.

Every member of the Workers Party attached to any one of the above named units, must attend this meeting, if he or she wishes to retain membership in the Workers (Communist) Party.

Registration of all members will take place here, for reorganization purposes and assignments, as to where the various comrades belong, will be made.

It is of the utmost importance to the successful reorganization of the party in the city of Chicago that every member belonging to Section No. 6 attend this meeting.

South Slav Workers of Akron Rally to Appeal to Save Daily Worker

AKRON, O., Nov. 11.—A concert and drama was given by the South Slavic Club where hundreds of workers gathered to see the old social drama called "Ciganin" (Gypsy) and to hear Comrade Fred Biedenkapp of the International Labor Defense.

Comrade Biedenkapp made a stirring appeal for funds for The DAILY WORKER showing how important it was for workers to support the only working class daily in America. A collection was taken up and brought $45.78.

WORKERS' SCHOOL IN NEW YORK TO BEGIN CLASSES

Registration to End Next Week

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—The official opening of the Workers' School takes place the last week of November when the political, economics, party training, shop nucleus training, and other major courses will begin.

One hundred and twenty-seven active party members have so far registered for the party training course, and as only 50 can be admitted, the school is planning a special elementary party training course for the less qualified applicants as preparation for their taking the regular party training course next year. This elementary party training course will cover much the same ground as the more advanced one but will not go so deeply into the question discussed. It will consist of a course in trade unionism, with Bert Miller as instructor, a course in the fundamentals of Communism, with Siskin and Benjamin as instructors. The students will be advised to take either Marxian Economics, instructor, Mindel; The History of the American Working Class, instructors, Bimba and Trachtenberg; or the History of Revolutions, instructor, Paul Keller. The student in the elementary training party training course will thus take two required and one elective course for the first three months and further required and elective courses for the second three months. The second three months period will include a course in the History of the Three Internationals and the Problems of our party.

To Close Registrations.

A committee has been named by the district office which will go over the records for activity and the previous preparation of all of the applicants for the party training course and divide them between the preparatory and the advanced courses. Registrations will still be accepted until the close of next week at which time all those who have applied, will be referred to the committee for further examination. Anyone desiring to get into the course should register at once. Many of those who have already registered have not yet paid their fees. These fees must be paid before their names are referred to the committee as the payment of fees is one of the evidences of their intention to carry on the work. Those comrades who are on strike or unemployed will be exempted from fees, all others must make whole or part payment at once. The fee is $4.00 for three months.

New Courses.

Other new courses include an advanced course entitled "A Materialistic Philosophy of Life," instructor, D. Kwitko; a course in the Russian Language, instructor, Chramoff; and a popular lecture course entitled "The Living Revolution," instructor, Moissaye J. Olgin.

Another course which promises to be over-registered is the public speaking course to be given by Carl Brodsky. Those desiring to get into that course should register at once. Additional courses will be announced if registrations warrant. A few registrations each have been received for an advanced course in Historic Materialism, an advanced course in the Economic and Politics of the Era of Monopoly, and other similar courses.

Anyone desiring to take any course at the school, should register this week or the next at the latest because only courses for which there is sufficient advance registration will be given. Register by mail or in person at the Workers' School, 108 East 14th street, Room 34. The fee for all three months, one a week courses is $2.50 for the three months' period.

YOUNG WORKERS WILL HOLD 'EDUCATION' WEEK PROTEST IN CLEVELAND

CLEVELAND, Nov. 11.—In order to counteract the capitalist propaganda that will be instilled in the minds of the young workers during "Education Week," the Cleveland Young Workers League will hold a mass meeting Friday evening, November 20, at the Insurance Center building, 1783 East 11th street. The speakers who will expose this attempt to instill patriotic bunkum and religious idiocy into the minds of the youth attending Cleveland schools will be Israel Amter, district secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, Martin Gordin, district organizer of the Young Workers League, Phillip Shatz and Edward Shatz, the latter representing the Junior section of the Young Workers League.

Leaflets exposing the true character of "Education Week" and telling the young workers of the mass meeting will be distributed in front of the public grammar and high schools as well as to young workers in the factories.

Y. W. L. Sub-District Conference Called in New Jersey on Nov. 14

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 11.—Saturday, Nov. 14, 7 p. m., a conference of the executive committee of the New Jersey branches of the Young Workers League will be held at the Newark Labor Lyceum, 704 S. 14th St., Newark, N. J.

The D. E. C. of District 2 is calling this conference for the purpose of organizing a sub-district committee for New Jersey.

New Jersey is one of the largest sections of the country. Thousands of young workers are exploited in the big factories in New Jersey. The Young Workers League must build a mass organization in this territory.

The organization of a sub-district will help us greatly in increasing our influence among the young workers in New Jersey.

Pittsburgh Branch Is Officially Dissolved

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 11. — At the last meeting of the N. S. English branch of this city it was officially decided to dissolve the branch in view of the fact that the members of the branch have been attached either to shop nuclei or to the international branch which was formed in this section of the city.

This was the first branch in District No. 5 to dissolve as a branch in view of the reorganization of the party on a new basis. All the property of the branch was turned over to the district office so that it may be used to help in the work of the newly formed shop nuclei. The action of the branch was taken after Comrade Jakira, the district organizer, made a brief report on the reorganization of the party.

All members of the branch who have not been attached to a shop nucleus must join one of the international branches which were formed in the city. The meeting of the international branch formed on the North Side will meet on Friday, Nov. 20. The meeting of the Hill international branch will be held Tuesday, Nov. 24.

All other branches in the city were instructed to liquidate their old affairs and to disband as branches within two weeks' time.

Dance in Pittsburgh.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 11.—A big dance is being arranged by the International Socialist Lyceum, 805 James street, N. S., Pittsburgh, on New Year's eve. All working class and sympathetic organizations are requested not to arrange anything on that night and participate in the dance of the lyceum.

The International Socialist Lyceum is owned and controlled by workers and used by various unions, benefit associations and lodges for their meetings and social entertainments. It is an institution well worth while supporting and every worker is invited to attend the dance on New Year's eve. Watch this paper for further announcements.

Daily Worker Builders of New York Meet This Friday Evening, Nov. 13

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—The DAILY WORKER Builders' Club of New York will hold an official meeting at 8 p. m., this Friday evening, Nov. 13, at headquarters, 108 East 14th street, to consider the matter of arranging another hike to launch the campaign which will culminate in the anniversary banquet on January 16, and to assure the building of The DAILY WORKER during the period of party reorganization.

The presence is requested not only of all members of The DAILY WORKER Builders' Club, but of all those that intend to become members of the club that is putting The DAILY WORKER on the map in New York.

Red That Does Not Fade.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—That their red is a fast color, a color which does not fade was proved by one hundred and fifty of the New York DAILY WORKER Builders last Sunday, when they gathered for their hike thru Jamaica Woods in spite of threatening clouds and completed the entire hike in spite of downpouring rain with an enthusiasm that was splendid. Two groups of the Juniors, Brownsville and Williamsburg, helped to enliven the occasion. Comrade Cowdery's trusty flivver, which has climbed the Rocky Mountains in the west and traveled back ond forth across the entire continent, got stuck in the mud and lost its way in the wilds of Jamaica Woods. The fact that it contained all the eats makes this an event of historic importance. But DAILY WORKER Builders "do not live by bread alone." And all want to try another hike one week from next Sunday, Nov. 22. Better arrange to come along.

Widow Donates Andreyev's Works.

MOSCOW, (Tass.) Nov. 11. — The Russian Academy of Sciences has received a letter from the widow of the celebrated Russian author Leonid Andreyev, now residing in Finland. In her letter, Madame Andreyev donates to the Pushkin home all the manuscripts, books and various collections left by her late husband.

AKRON, O., W. P. MEMBERS TO HOLD THEIR SECOND REORGANIZATION MEET

(Special to The Daily Worker)

AKRON, Nov. 11.—A membership meeting will take place in Akron, on Sunday, Nov. 15, at 7:30 p. m., at Liberty Hall, 601 S. Main street, to discuss bolshevization and reorganization of the party.

Altho the Akron comrades have already discussed the question the problem is so important that another membership meeting will be held with Comrade Israel Amter, district secretary, as the speaker.

No comrade should miss this important meeting. It is being held on a Sunday night, so that every member can attend. No excuse will be taken for failure to be present.

Aged Denver Lawyer Pleads for End Like That of "Husk Girl"

DENVER, Colo., Nov. 11.—Members of the board of directors of the liberal church here, this morning announced that a vote of 9 to 1 in favor of "warm blooded murder" for Barney Haughey, 66-year old Denver attorney, had been polled by their organization.

Haughey, who is confined in a local hospital, said to be suffering from cancer of the stomach, read of the sensation trial of Dr. Harold Elmer Blazer, 60-year old Colorado country doctor, charged with the murder of his 32-year old "husk girl" daughter, now in progress at Littleton, Colo., and decided that he would like to be put out of his misery.

POLITICAL HOLD UPS IN DUBLIN STARTLE IRISH

Many Queer Things Are Pulled Off

DUBLIN, Nov. 11.—Political holdups have recurred in Dublin during the past few days, leading to fears that there may be a recrudescence to the days of the black and tan warfare.

Armed men kidnapped Patrick Sheehan, formerly secretary to De Valera, but now a member of the prisons' commission, took him for a taxicab ride and delivering a lecture to him on prison conditions, warned him that his life would not be spared unless conditions were immediately improved.

Armed men entered a motion picture theater and stole films showing the battle of Ypres.

The books of the British legion were seized by armed men, apparently in an effort to frustrate plans for an armistace day tag day. Motion pictures of the Prince of Wales South American tour were seized from another theater.

Two Hegewisch Children Lost.

Two children, missing from their home since yesterday afternoon, are believed lost and wandering, or perhaps, frozen to death, on the prairies in the vicinity of Hegewisch, a suburb of Chicago. They are Stephen Zuberski, 10, and his sister, Rose, age 6 years.

BOSTON CHECKER CAB GETS WRIT AGAINST DRIVERS

Try to Break Strike by Injunction

BOSTON, Nov. 11—The Checker Cab company of this city has had an injunction issued by Judge Carroll of the supreme court against the striking cab drivers which forbids the drivers from letting prospective customers and employes know that a strike exists.

In the municipal court the following three strikers were sentenced for an alleged attack on a strikebreaker: Henry Capozolli was sentenced to one year in the house of correction, Dominic Draffone, eight months and John Alvin was fined $50. The strikers have appealed their cases to a higher court.

Judge Sullivan, also sentenced William Tully to three months for an attack on Samuel Shapiro, who drew a revolver in an attempt to kill one of the strikers. The strikebreaker was released with a small fine.

Maurice Rosenberg, one of the strikebreakers, was caught with a tear bomb on his person, but the court instead of sending him to prison as he had done with the strikers, allowed the scab to go free.

Drastic Injunction.

The following excerpts of the injunction are reprinted to show the sweeping powers it gives the company to persecute the strikers: "That the defendants and each and every one of them and all persons acting in aid or in conjunction with them, be and they hereby are enjoined and restrained from interfering with the plaintiff's business by intimidating, threatening or annoying the plaintiff's customers or intended customers or any person now or hereafter in the employ of the plaintiff or desirous of entering the same; or by maliciously inducing or enticing any person having contracts of employment with the plaintiff to break the same; or by paying any money or offering any reward or emolument to persons now or hereafter in the employment of the plaintiff or desirous of entering the same for the purpose of inducing them not to enter or not to remain in said employment; or by annoying or intrefering with such persons in proceeding to or from their places of abode and said premises or in pursuing their respective ways about the public streets; or by congregating in squads in the vicinity of the cab stands of the plaintiff or its premises, establishing or maintaining patrols in the vicinity of such places and from causing others so to congregate or to picket or patrol in the vicinity of said places; or by maintaining, aiding or abetting a boycott by outcries and solicitation or by the use of written or printed matter, or the carrying of banners or devices intended to persuade patrons or prospective patrons not to patronize the plaintiff; or by any scheme or design, among themselves or with others, organized for the purpose of interfering with or injuring the plaintiff's business by intimidating, annoying or obstructing customers or intending customers or persons now or hereafter in their employment or desirous of entering the same."

FATHER, SON AND HOLY GHOST APPEAR BEFORE MILL WORKERS AS BOSS, PRIEST AND GOV'T

By ALBERT WEISBORD.

PASSAIC, N. J., Nov. 11.—The regular meeting of the Hillcrest silk strikers of Hudson county, New Jersey, last Friday was the scene of one of the finest comedies that ever took place since Jesus wore knee pants when the rich owner of the mill "father of his children" stalked into the meeting arm and arm with his "son" federal government spy and betrayer of the working class going under the title of "federal conciliator" and the "holy ghost," the catholic priest of the neighborhood.

A Sight For Communists.

There the trio stood, the fat rich boss, the large and big bellied federal conciliator, government agent always at the service of the bosses, and the pale "humble" servant of god—and mammon. It was a picture that only a Communist could enjoy to the full. Was there ever a plainer lesson to the workers that the boss controls the state and the church?

These "pillars of society" were they not clearly seen, as they glowered at the workers, to be parasites and bloodsuckers sucking the very life of the workers and producers?

The workers decided to give each one of the precious trio five minutes each to show their stuff. First the boss began. He told the workers how good a "friend" of the workers he was, that really in time the workers would make more money with him than with anyone else and that they should listen to him and not to anyone else who was not their friend. Indeed in time, he pointed out, all would be on the road to wealth.

By this time all of the workers had appreciated the delicious humor of the situation and greeted each whining plea with laughter and derision.

Friend Boss!

The boss, the "friend" of the worker! He had taken off the 10 per cent extra always given night workers. He had cut the rate per yard of cloth produced from 10½ cents to 8 cents per yard. He had added more picks to the inch of cloth so that the workers could never turn out anywhere near as much yards as before and had not added any increase, indeed had cut the rate as stated before from 10½ cents to 8 cents. He had tried to introduce the three-shift system in the mill which would have meant a great deal more stoppage and trouble for the workers.

He had tried to force the workers to work three and four looms while they had only worked two before, altho he knew that such work would be absolutely ruinous to the health of the workers. He had most filthy conditions in his mill. He had constantly tried to slip over different and more difficult qualities of cloth without increasing the pay. And when the workers had gone out on strike he had spread lies about the workers in the papers.

He had his plant "protected" by police who tried to cause trouble. He had tried to import scabs into the mill and was even now sending his strikebreaker agents to the different cities in search of scabs. These and many other things had he done, and this was the friend of the workers.

God Speaks.

Then the meek priest had his say. And stealthily, little by little crept over the five minutes given to him. All so nicely all in such a christian spirit that only "heathen" workers could have the heart to rudely awaken him.

This the workers did. The good priest spoke in Italian and, of course, spoke for the boss and how bad fighting is and could there not be a compromise, etc. The workers listened in stolid silence and said nothing.

Then the State.

When the "conciliator," Mr. Moffett, saw that the workers were standing firm, that got his dander up. His fat neck always flushed and red from gorging, got redder than ever. He rose in all his height and denounced the workers for giving only five minutes to these "distinguished" gentlemen. That there would be a great outcry if the public knew how the workers treated these "distinguished gentlemen" who had done the workers the honor to be at their meeting. This was the "conciliator," this was the vermin who claimed to be "impartial,"' this was the "arbitrator" who "was once a workingman!"

Then They Were Shown the Door!

And when they had gone, the workers enthusiastically repudiated them. It was pointed out just how the priest was sent to divide the workers, to set protestants against the catholics, to set the other workers against the Italians and to appeal to the religious views of the Italian women workers present. It was also shown the part that the church, particularly the catholic church, had played in the textile strikes of the past and how it had been so invaluable to the textile bosses in defeating the child labor amendment in Massachusetts last year.

Expose "Conciliator."

The smug hypocrite, the federal conciliator, was then exposed. His role and the role of the capitalist overnment in Washington was carefully explained to the workers. The workers all saw in its nakedness the capitalist dictatorship that exists here. They saw Coolidge the strikebreaker, Dawes the open shopper, the courts and injunctions, they saw all of these things and that their real enemy, the boss, had many agents and his class controlled the state and government.

How Different in Russia.

By that time it was ripe to speak of how the boss controls the church and state and how he robs the workers daily at their work. This the workers saw and when the speakers who spoke on this topic contrasted this situation with the situation in the the textile plants in Soviet Russia and concluded with the determination that the workers would not let up their struggle against these parasites until the industries and the government belonged to the workers there was great enthusiasm and applause.

This meeting has strengthened the workers more than ever. Their spirit is such as to insure victory.

Mines Barricaded with Fences Open; Scabs' Pay Falls

(By a Worker Correspondent.)

MONESSEN, Pa., Nov. 11.—Bethlehem Steel Co. is opening their mines in and around the Marianna district. They have imported non-union miners from elsewhere to operate the mines on the 1917 scale.

Pittsburgh Coal Co. is preparing to open additional mines in this district. They are building high fences around their property to protect the nonunion men, and every week the local papers publish articles about how many thousands of tons of coal the Banning mines of Banning are producing and each week the sum grows larger. From reports by the strikers at this mine they state that it is impossible for this to be true.

Soviet Government Extends Privileges to Some Industries

MOSCOW, Nov. 11.—In order to encourage the growth of the tin, lead, zinc, aluminium and nickel industries it is proposed by the authorities to extend various privileges to such enterprises for a period of 10 years.

All the enterprises engaged in the mining and conversion of these metals whether state-owned, cooperative or private, will be exempted from the payment of all taxes, duties and local rates.

These privileges apply also to custom duties on the importation of machinery and appliances which cannot be manufactured in Russia at the specified time.

Police Chief Tries to Get Away with Diamond Bracelet

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 11.—Louis D. Oaks, former Los Angeles chief of police, was charged with embezzlements in a complaint issued by the district attorney's office today, involving a diamond bracelet valued at $750.

AMERICAN MOVIE INTERESTS WANT GERMAN CONCERN

"We Control, or We Wreck," Ultimatum

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Nov. 11. — According to reports prevalent here, the American "movie" interests are attempting to gain control of the largest "movie" producing company in Germany, the Universe Film Association. In case the American "movie" interests fail to get the control of the company moves are being made to wreck the concern.

Germans in Dire Straits.

The Universe Film Association has been in hard financial straits and has obtained credits from the Deutschebank, amounting to 18,000,000 marks ($4,320,000), which constitutes 12 per cent of the bank's capital. The issuance of this loan has endangered the bank and the bank is searching for some American concern to take over the credits.

Samuel Rachmann, a representative of the American film interests is negetiating for the loan and it is understood that the American company will take up the company's credit and allow the company to produce films provided, certain concessions are made the American "movie" interests.

To Control 150 Theaters.

The Universe Film Association is the only independent film producing company that has been able to meet the international competition and produce a better grade German "movie." The American concern wants to take over the chain of 150 theaters that this company controls. If the American company takes over the chain of theaters as the price of the loan, the German company will be forced to either abandon production of "movies," or produce the type of "movies" that the American "movie" trust is now cramming down the throats of its movie patrons in the United States.

While the officials of the Universe Film Association deny that these reports are true, its officials are meeting with Rachmann and are attempting to negotiate the loan.

Darrow Takes Slam at Emancipation Edict in Detroit

DETROIT, Nov. 11. — At a meeting of 1,500 Negroes in the Negro Y. M. C. A., Clarence Darrow, Chicago attorney now defending Dr. Ossian Sweet and ten codefendants for the alleged murder of a white hoodlum, ridiculed the emancipation proclamation that was issued, purporting to free the Negroes from slavery, as a club to be used over the heads of the rebellious South to drive it back into the union.

"Well, it told the South if it quit fighting it could reenter the union and keep the Negroes as slaves. Lincoln was not an abolitionist of the stripe of Sumner and Garrison. He only resorted to emnacipation later. It was not a part of his program from the first," declared Darrow.

Little of value was otherwise said in his entire speech. He kept the audience amused with his witticisms, but witticisms don't go very far in the emancipation of the working class and especially the Negro worker from the evils he now suffers.

Foreign Educators Praise Detention Houses in Rússia

MOSCOW, Nov. 11.—A delegation of German, French and Belgian educators inspected the Moscow houses of detention. One of the delegates, Dr. Herman Anders-Krieger, professor of sociology and an inspector for the chief administration of German prisons, after visiting one of the Moscow prisons, made the following entry in the visitors' book:

"The regime at the Soviet industrial correction homes is a great deal more humane and free than in similar European institutions. We hope that such a regime prevails also in the other detention houses of Russia."

Azerbeidjan Oil Explorations.

MOSCOW, (Tass.) Nov. 11. — The Oil Trust of the Azerbeidjan Republic ("Azneft") has organized exploration works on a big scale with the project to find new oil deposits. The works are started under the supervision of the Moscow Mining Academy and over a big territory between Kura River and Caspian Sea.

Larger Science Budget.

MOSCOW, Nov. 11.—The peoples commissariat of finance has approved the budget of the Academy of Sciences for 1925-26 to the amount of 2,178,176 rubles, while in the last year it amounted to 1,606,000 rubles.

Long Island Notes.

MIDDLE VILLAGE, Long Island.—Business meetings of the English branch, W. P. of Middle Village, L. I., will be held every Friday at 8 p. m., at 35 Pulaski St., Middle Village, L. I.

NEW YORK WORKERS SCHOOL TO CELEBRATE OPENING WITH DANCE

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—A dance and vetcherinka to celebrate the opening of the Workers' School and library, will be given on the top floor of the school building at 108 East 14th street, on Thanksgiving eve, Wednesday, Nov. 25. An entertainment, appropriate for the occasion has been devised.

Admission to the dance, entertainment and vetcherinka is only 35 cents. Every member of the party, every student of the school or sympathizer with it is expected to attend. Get your tickets early.

St. Louis Socialists Fail in Attempt to Hinder Purcell Meeting

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 11.—In an attempt to hinder the meeting active trade unionists had arranged for Albert A. Purcell who spoke on world trade union unity, the decrepit socialist party local here, arranged a birthday party for their stock-in-trade, Eugene Victor Debs, at the Jeffla Hall, corner Jefferson and Lafayette Aves.

At this "birthday celebration," Debs, as he passed his 70th milestone gave a speech which showed that instead of progressing since the world war, that he had gone backward. In his talk he created the impression that all one had to do was sit down in some corner and talk about the coming of socialism and capitalism would disappear and socialism appear on the scene.

As far as the attendance was concerned, very few workers attended the meeting.

Ex-Prisoners of War Failing to Register Lose Citizenship

MOSCOW, (Tass.) Nov. 11.— The council of people's commissaries has passed a decree depriving of citizenship of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics ex-prisoners of war who remained abroad and who failed to register their citizenship with the Soviet representatives in their country of residence. This applies to those who had served in the czarist as well as in the red armies. It also applies to participants in white armies which fought against the Soviet government, who afterwards received amnesty, but neglected to register their citizenship of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

The decree does not apply, however, to those who were not able to register their citizenship owing to the absence of a representative of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics in the country of their residence.

Russian State Bank Arranges for Large Credits in Germany

WOSCOW — (Tass.) — Nov. 11. — Sokolnikov, people's commissary of finance, told a "Tass" correspondent that the State Bank has concluded an agreement with a group of largest German banks granting to the State Bank credit of 75,000,000 German marks, which combined with the trade credit will facilitate purchase in Germany of various goods on credit of one hundred million gold marks, the credit being extended for several months, owing to this arrangement, it will be possible to import immediately machinery and equipment for the Soviet industry and merchandise for general use. Sokolnikov emphasized that the German credit is only the first of a series of large credit agreements projected by the State Bank.

In conclusion, the finance commissary stated that the budget of the union for the financial year 1925-26 will reach 3,550,000,000 gold rubles and together with local budget will amount to 5,000,000,000, exceeding that of the last year by 40 per cent.

COOKS ASSIST COAL MINERS FIGHT BOSSES

Cleveland Local Sends Contribution

CLEVELAND, Nov. 11.—The Cooks' Union, Local No. 167 of this city, realizing that the fight of the anthracite miners is a fight of all union labor against the open shop, passed a resolution at its last meeting expressing its solidarity with the miners of Pennsylvania and pledging its moral and financial support. The local upon passing the resolution immediately sent a donation of $25 to the striking miners and had a number of its members appointed to take up a collection for the benefit of the striking miners.

The resolution follows:

Fight For Better Conditions.

"Whereas, 158,000 anthracite miners have been on strike for two months fighting for rights that they have had for years, and for an increase in wages; and

"Whereas, In this fight against the employers, the workers are divided, thus forcing the anthracite miners to conduct the fight alone against a combine of capitalists controlling hundreds of millions of capital; and

"Whereas, This general offensive is evidence of the open shop campaign which has the backing of the emplyoers of the entire country; therefore be it

Financial and Moral Support.

"Resolved, That Local No. 167 of the Cooks' Union, in meeting assembled on Thursday, Nov. 5, 1925, expresses its solidarity with the striking anthracite miners and pledges them its moral and financial support; and be it further

"Resolved, That this meeting calls on the anthracite miners to resist any attempt to break the strike either thru injunctions or the threatened interference of the government; and be it further Instruct Central Council Delegates.

"Resolved, That this local instruct its delegates to call upon the central labor body to take steps to initiate a campaign to point out to the workers of this city the danger confronting them in the resistance of the coal operators to the demands of the miners, which is expressed in the words of Mr. Warriner, representative of the coal operators, that it is time to fight it out to the end; and be it further

"Resolved, That this campaign shall point out the menace of the open shop campaign which is gaining momentum and threatens the life of the organized labor movement of the country; and be it

Demand Government Keep Out.

"Resolved, That this meeting demand that the government keep its hands off the strike of the miners, since it will clearly be a blow on the side of the employers against the organized labor movement of this country."

Checker Taxicab Strikers Will Defy Bosses Injunction

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 11.—Checker taxi cab drivers on strike for better conditions declare that they will make every effort to break down and defy the injunction issued against them in the supreme court by Judge Carroll.

The injunction is sweeping, prohibiting not only picketing or gathering in groups before the taxi cab stations, but also any attempts to carry on a boycott "by outcries or solicitations, or by any written matter, or by any scheme of design among the strikers to interfere with the Checker Co.'s business."

This is the fourth week of the strike, with courts and the police lined up solidly with the company. Strikers, however, are militant and declared that they will not let the injunction interfere with their rights to fight for better working conditions.

Collins Spills Can of Whitewash Over Police Department

When Martin Durkin slipped thru the police net, which was laid to "get" him for the killing of the red-baiting prohibition "enforcement" officer Shanahan, the chief of detectives and one of his subordinates began to throw accusation at each other. When things became so that one of them might "spill the beans" and let Chicago workers know how the police department is "managed," Chief of Police Collins, called a halt.

Now in order to be able to spill a can of whitewash over themselves, and appear "pure and spotless guardians of the public peace," Captain Michael J. Lee of the Englewood station, has been suspended and charges are being made against him of "neglect of duty and inefficiency" which he must face before the police trial board. Capt. Lee, who was in the squad that allowed Durkin to escape, claims they are making him the "goat" for some of the "higher-ups."

Another Recruit for Morgan

Is there no depth of depravity to which the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor cannot sink? Just when we reconcile ourselves to accepting some nauseating event as the lowest level in which any human being can grovel, some other official crawls beneath him.

The latest belly-crawling stunt is that of Matthew Woll, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, who horned in on the Italian debt controversy with the stupid declaration that America furnished money to the allies in place of men who should have gone to the front, but were not yet ready. He argues for a modification or cancellation of debts, thus enabling the fascist tyranny of Mussolini to re-establish its credit system. He states that Italy and France should not be deprived of the ability to pay international obligations in the future, thru injury now to their productive power and their currency. He engages in an ignorant attack upon Senator Borah, stating that that representative of industrial capital is responsible for enmity against European peoples by demanding payment of debts.

We have had occasion before to stigmatize the role of Borah as the spokesman of the isolation policy of the small industrialists, a class that is doomed to failure. That is neither here nor there in the consideration of the new role of Matt Woll.

Woll's argument is the open and brazen formulation of the identical policy of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, Secretary of Commerce Hoover, President Coolidge, and the House of Morgan.

The Italian debt is based upon liberty bonds sold to the public in this country. The bonds can be deflated and their holders will stand the loss. But the Italy of Mussolini must be given an opportunity to re-establish its credit so that the plethora of gold flowing into the hands of the imperialist despots of this country can be reinvested in that country to a little longer stem the rising tide of the proletarian revolution.

This is the same Woll who berates the Communists with the legend that they are subsidized by Russia. His scope of action has now been broadened. Long a betrayer of the organized and unorganized workers of this country he now tries to serve his masters as a new recruit to their foreign propaganda department.

The Amalgamated Victory

The determined rank and file of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union is to be congratulated for its notable triumph over the International Tailoring company. After a 19-week struggle the strikers go back in a united bloc as victors. The strike was provoked by the efforts of the International concern to destroy the union. This large company refused to consider the demands of the tailors or recognize their union. There was but one weapon available against such an attempt—the strike.

Always ready to play the debasing role of scabs in order to crush the Amalgamated, the United Garment Workers, affiliated with the A. F. of L. and a mere travesty on unionism, tried to fill the places of the strikers.

The usual injunction was issued against the strikers, but the injunction was ignored and the picketing of the plant continued.

In the early days of the strike the Chicago Federation of Labor went on record supporting it and protesting against the action of the United Garment Workers. William Green, president of the A. F. of L., informed Fitzpatrick and Nockels, respectively president and secretary of the Chicago Federation, that the Amalgamated was considered a dual union and it was the duty of the Chicago Federation to support the United. Instead of exposing the vile role of Green, the president of the Chicago Federation, following his usual policy of truckling to every reactionary whim of the labor lieutenants of capitalism, came out with a statement upholding the Green policy.

Even this repudiation did not dampen the ardor of the strikers. It only made them more determined than ever. With the support of other Amalgamated locals and of the left elements in the trade unions the workers continued the struggle and their triumph is a deserved rebuke to the labor fakers as well as to the International Tailoring company.

THE DAILY WORKER congratulates them on their victory as an achievement that vindicates their claim to serve the interests of the workers in the men's tailoring industry in Chicago.

Politics in the I. W. W.

Reports of the Industrial Workers of the World convention reveal that in a subordinate industrial union convention a proposal was made that the I. W. W. should declare that it is "primarily a revolutionary organization and only secondarily a labor union." A resolutions committee, on which Harrison George chanced to be elected, proposed the substitute that "there is no conflict between proletarian revolution and industrial unionism."

The substitute was adopted. But the general convention turned thumbs down on this measure which contains the essence of a wise correction of a glaring mistake in I. W. W. theory—the idea that there is some rigid dividing line between "politics" and "economics" and the consequent leaning to one side or another of the individual wobbly and setting off of two functions and forms of organization as necessarily hostile. Dialectics is evidently foreign to these otherwise informed workers.

The one who proposed that the I. W. W. was "primarily" a revolutionary organization actually wants it to be a political party, for what is it if it isn't a labor union? It seems queer, but true, that the I. W. W. is turning away from industrial unionism. A resolution before the convention provides for abolishing the small industrial unions for a "recruiting union"—which is a political organization in reality. This should be killed. We hope the convention will kill it, even tho they have to agree with Harrison George, who sharply opposed it in the lower body.

The I. W. W. preamble says the industrial unions must be organized "not only for the everyday struggle . . . . but also to carry on production when capitalism shall have been overthrown." Who's going to do the overthrowing? The worker who wants the I. W. W. to be a political party says "the economic organization," but tries to do away with industrial unions. The Communist says both unions and party are necessary—that's why there is "no conflict."

Our Bourgeois Labor Leaders - -

By Earl R. Browder

IT is a favorite form of attack upon the Communists, that we are guilty of "slander" against the trade union officials. But no "slander" can be such complete proof of the unfitness of these officials to direct the labor movement as is the information which these officials furnish about themselves. For out of the financial reports of the labor bureaucrats comes the irrefutable proof that these men have been completely divorced from the working class. They live like capitalists, they eat like capitalists, they act like capitalists, they draw incomes that compare very favorably with the capitalists. In fact they have become capitalists, of a lower and servile order, and they become more so each day.

One of the worst features of this situation is that these officials have convinced the labor movement that it is a "normal" and correct order of affairs. So much so, that the unions regularly and as a matter of course pay salaries to these officials which alone would make them bourgeois. The official salaries in the labor movement compete successfully with the official salaries of the capitalist government, national as well as state.

LET us examine the comparative financial incomes of the labor leaders and cabinet members, governors, army officers, etc.:

There is, for example, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. The president of this organization, William B. Prenter, receives a salary of $25,000 per year.

This is more than the combined salaries of two members of President Coolidge's cabinet. The annual pay-checks of Andrew Mellon, secretary of the treasury, and Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, combined would still fall short by $1,000 of that of Mr. Prenter. The salary of the governor of South Dakota, for eight years, would still be less than Prenter's salary for one year. Prenter's salary is two-and-one-half times that of the governors of Massachusetts, of New York, of Pennsylvania, and of Ohio, and more than twice as much as that of the governor of Illinois. These are the greatest and richest states in America. It would require a capital of more than half a million dollars, invested in government bonds to produce the income that Prenter receives from the union.

AND how about the other big-bugs of the labor movement?

There is William Green. He inherited from Samuel Gompers not only the title of president of the American Federation of Labor. He also took over an annual salary of $12,000.

This is the same amount that is paid by the U. S. government to the members of the president's cabinet. It is the same as that of the governor of Illinois. It is greater than the salary of any of the other governors of the 48 states in the United States. It is four times the salary of the governor of South Dakota. It is 20 per cent more than the salaries of admirals in the U. S. navy and of generals in the U. S. army.

Then there is William G. Lee, head of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen. Not content with his private position as president of a great railroad equipment manufacturing concern, he draws a salary from the union of $14,000 per annum. This puts him in a salary-class above the presidential cabinet members of the U. S. government, higher than all the state governors, and 40 per cent more than the highest officers of the U. S. army and navy.

Numerous of the national labor leaders are in the $10,000 per year category. Among the most prominent are the presidents of the railway clerks, the railroad conductors, the bricklayers, the street railway employes, and the secretaries of the A. F. of L., the locomotive engineers, and the trainmen. Only a small handful of the most select capitalist government officials are in a salary-class above these prosperous labor leaders.

WAGES of workers in industry are being steadily reduced. Not so the salaries of our labor union officials. There is the case, for example, of Daniel Tobin, president of the Teamster's Union. Up until September this year Tobin received a niggardly $9,000 per year. But at the Seattle convention, this salary was raised, in appreciation that Tobin was "just as good" as his colleagues, to $15,000. This little "appreciation" placed Tobin ahead of all the heads of the U. S. government except Coolidge, considerably ahead of the highest-paid state governors, and 50 per cent higher than the leading officers of the U. S. army and navy.

Many local officials receive even higher rewards than the national leaders. We are not, of course, referring to illicit and secret rewards for service rendered that come from the camp of the class enemy. That is another question entirely. Beside the point of this discussion, also, is the matter of investments in real estate and industrial securities, which often make millionaires of even the most "respectable" leaders (such as the deceased John Mitchell of the miners' union). But such a man as Brindell, of the New York building trades, in addition to his illegal activities, drew a strictly legal salary of $18,000 per annum.

It may be imagined by some that this, repeated for a number of other examples, would exhaust the story. But no. Salary is only the beginning. In addition, each of these aristocrats received a nice fat "expense account." This account ranges in size from a few thousand per year, to tens and even hundreds of thousands.

An example, taken at random from one of the smaller unions: In the report of the Sheet Metal Workers' Union to the 1924 convention, it is shown that President Hynes received during the year, in addition to salary of $17,875, expense money to the amount of $24,070.74, or a total of more than fifty thousand dollars.

Even the minor officials do not fare so badly in the matter of expense accounts. When they are "on the road" they receive from $8 to $25 per day extra. It is common law that a traveling official must have the best there is to be purchased without having to dig into his "regular" income. And the "best," in these post-Volstead days, costs a lot of money.

BEHIND these "millionaire incomes" paid to these "labor leaders" out of the dues of the membership, there is quite a definite theory. Briefly stated, it is that the unions must pay the officials enough money to keep them "loyal" so that the generous offers of the capitalists may not tempt them. This theory found classic expression in the words of John L. Lewis of the Miners' Union, when he pleaded for an increase in salary before the Indianapolis convention of 1921. Lewis said.

"Mine superintendents are paid thruout the central competitive field and other substantial mining districts amounts nearly equal that paid your international vice-president and your secretary. Your officers have to deal with these men. . . they are expected to compete with them in the industrial field, and surely if you are going to regard efficiency and loyalty, diligence and energy, you will at least accord them the treatment they would receive if they worked for a mining company."

In short, the labor unions are told that they must bid against the capitalists for the services of their "leaders." And inasmuch as the American capitalists are so rich, and have such a keen appetite for "labor leaders," it has followed that the salaries of the officials have reached phenomenal heights.

These are the conditions and the ideology which have created of the labor officialdom of America a very definite bourgeois sub-class, divorced from the working class in almost every respect, and functioning by its very nature as the ideal "labor lieutenants of the capitalist class."

Workers Party and Young Workers League to Combat "Education" Week

Monday, Nov. 16, "Constitutional Day"

The constitution is the bulwark of capitalist rule and of the oppression of the workers.

1. The constitution protects and maintains the bosses in their exploitation and oppression of the workers.
2. The constitution suppresses every attempt of the workers to get better conditions and to free themselves. (Class war prisoners in America, etc.)
3. The workers must overthrow the rule of the capitalist maintained by the constitution and establish a workers' and farmers' government as in Russia.

Slogans.

Tuesday, Nov. 17, "Patriotism Day"

Patriotism means slavery and obedience to the bosses; international solidarity of the workers is the road to freedom.

1. Patriotism is loyalty to the bosses who are the workers' worst enemies.
2. Patriotism means fighting for the bosses and against your brothers and fellow-workers of other countries all for greater profits for the bosses. Patriotism means war, death, destruction, poverty and starvation for the workers; wealth, luxury, and power for the bosses.
3. The American legion (which is helping to promote American Education Week) is a tool of the bosses to spread patriotism and militarism and to be mobilized against the workers in their struggle.
4. The boy scouts are organized by and for the bosses. They poison the minds of the workers' children and make them into obedient wage-slaves and patriotic citizens; they are used against the workers in their struggles; they are used to draw workers' children into the capitalist armies to fight for the bosses.
5. International solidarity is the union of all workers and oppressed masses of the earth for the struggle against capitalism and imperialism in this struggle lies the road to the emancipation of the workers.
6. International solidarity means the common struggle of all toilers for their common interests. The toilers of all lands must unite to defend the Soviet Union, the republic of the Russian workers and peasants.
7. The duty of every worker, young worker, and working class child is to stand shoulder to shoulder with their fellow workers in the struggle against the bosses.

Slogans.

Wed., Nov. 18, "School and Teachers' Day."

Schools are the instruments of the bosses to poison the minds of the working class children.

1. Schools are used by the capitalists to turn the children into good wage slaves and patriots. Workers must fight against the capitalist control of the schools.
2. Soviet Russia, the schools are in the hands of the workers and are used in the interests of the working class to bring up the children in the spirit of the workers revolution.
3. Children of the rich have the best of school conditions; the workers' children go to school under the worst of conditions.
4. Millions of children in America cannot get any education at all because they have to work their lives away to grind out profits for the bosses.
5. Millions of children in America cannot get any education under proper conditions because their worker parents are too poor to clothe and feed them properly.
6. Teachers are workers exploited and oppressed by the capitalists; teachers must not let themselves be used to poison the minds of the workers' children.
7. The workers must see to it that their children grow up into militant and conscious fighters for the proletariat.

Slogans.

Thursday, Nov. 19, "Conservation and Thrift Day."

The natural resources of this country should belong to the toilers; they have been stolen by the capitalists.

The conservation of lives of the workers' demands the abolition of child labor and better conditions for young workers.

It demands the abolition of capitalist militarism and war.

Thrift is a delusion and mockery for the workers. They have nothing to save.

1. The "conservation of natural resources" means the conservation of the property of the capitalists—stolen from the toilers. The workers must seize their stolen resources back from the capitalists.
2. The workers must see that their power is conserved. Children must not be crippled and stunted mentally and physically to the profit of the bosses. Young workers must not be destroyed thru the intolerable conditions of life and work. The flower of the working class must not be destroyed in capitalist wars to the interest of the bosses.
3. Under capitalism children and young workers always suffer worst from any attack of the bosses. They always have to endure the lowest conditions and the worst of treatment.
4. Under workers' rule in Russia children and young workers have the best there is. All improvement in the lot of the workers brings them the most immediate and the greatest benefits. No child labor exists in Russia. The 5-day week and the 6-hour day for young workers exists in Russia. The young workers have the greatest opportunities for cultural and political development.
5. "Work and save" is a mockery for the workers. The harder the workers toil the less they get and the more the bosses get. The toil of the workers means the wealth of the bosses.
6. "Thrift spells prosperity" is a delusion for the workers. It makes them believe that they can be saved from their miserable conditions thru thrift. Only thru overthrowing the bosses thru the proletarian revolution, can the workers free themselves.

Slogans.

The natural resources belong to the toilers—away with the thieves, the capitalists!

Abolish child labor!

A 5-day week and a 6-hour day for the young workers!

Friday, Nov. 19, "Know Your School Day."

The American schools are the strongholds of reaction.

1. The American schools are factories for turning out blind, obedient slaves of the bosses.
2. The platoon system (Gary system, etc.) is a scheme for producing machine-like unthinking and uncomplaining workers at a lower cost to the masters. It is a reactionary move in educational methods and is a danger to the workers.
3. The schools are centers for the propagation of reactionary superstition and religious dope (religious instruction in the schools, anti-evolution teachings, etc.)
4. In Soviet Russia, the schools are used for scientific and political enlightment of the masses.
5. The workers must fight against the public schools being centers of reaction.

Slogans.

Out with the capitalist anti-labor propaganda from the schools!

Out with the religious dope from the schools!

Saturday, Nov. 20, "Community and Health Day."

Service to the working class is the highest duty of every worker.

Brutal capitalist oppression and exploitation destroys the health and life of the working masses.

1. Equality of opportunity is impossible when there are rich and poor, bosses and workers, masters and slaves. The rule of the capitalists must be destroyed.
2. "Health" talk to workers' children is a mockery when capitalism condemns the whole working class, especially the children, to the most miserable and unhealthful conditions.
3. In workers' Russia the first regard is for the health and development of the workers' children and young workers.

Slogans.

Away with the capitalist parasites!

Only thru the struggle of the workers to overthrow capitalism can tolerable conditions be obtained for the workers' children and the young workers!

Abolish child labor!

We Must Win the Fight For The Daily Worker!

Our Paper in Danger of Suspension Unless Immediate and Redoubled Help Comes

THE DAILY WORKER, its plant and building in the hands of its creditors thru court action, would mean a calamity for the Communist movement in the United States. That danger is staring The DAILY WORKER in the face.

It is an immedate danger. Unless all the members of the party and the sympathizers with our cause rally to the defense of The DAILY WORKER thru a redoubled effort and quick action to send funds, that danger may be a reality during the coming week.

THE situation has come about because of the failure to rally quickly enough the support of the funds to save The DAILY WORKER. A working class paper, particularly a Communist paper, cannot be published daily without a deficit. Last year we made up the deficit of The DAILY WORKER thru raising a $30,000 "Insure The DAILY WORKER for 1925" fund. As a consequence of this magnificent support for The DAILY WORKER, the paper went thru until September without further appeals. Now it is necessary to raise $40,000 to liquidate the accumulated debts and insure the publication of our paper for another year.

The situation which now exists is that obligations for paper, for raw material and the wages in the printing plant have accumulated and must be [illegible] The DAILY WORKER must deal with capitalist institutions which have the power to go into court if The DAILY WORKER [illegible] not meet its obligations.

THE situation is that there are accumulated obligations with the business concerns with which The DAILY WORKER deals which demand payment immediately. If they do not get payment they have recourse to the courts.

The Central Executive Committee of the party believes that it is the loyalty of the members of the party to the institution they have built, The DAILY WORKER, that will prevent such a calamity happening to our movement.

What is required is quick and generous support. The party members must rally en masse to the work of saving The DAILY WORKER for our movement.

Within the next two weeks at least $10,000 in cash must come into the offices of The DAILY WORKER, to avert the catastrophe, and this must be followed by additional sums during the succeeding two weeks to make the total funds needed to save and insure The DAILY WORKER. This is a heavy task but it is not an impossible task for those who are the vanguard of the American revolutionary movement and who have built The DAILY WORKER and have supported it so splendidly in the past.

The Central Executive Committee of the party has taken all the possible steps to mobilize the resources of the party to save The DAILY WORKER. However, all that has been done to secure funds immediately will not help unless the party membership finishes the task by rushing immediate donations to The DAILY WORKER and raising the $10,000 needed during the next two weeks.

Other Party Papers Involved.

IT is not only the life of The DAILY WORKER which is involved in this crisis. There is bound up with The DAILY WORKER the Workers Monthly and the literature department of the party. The printing plant and the home of the party and The DAILY WORKER are involved. The DAILY WORKER plant publishes the papers of the Young Workers League, the South Slavic section, the Greek section, and the Polish section.

The regular appearance of all these papers is involved in the fight to save The DAILY WORKER.

A Miracle of Militant Support Needed.

THERE is the latent strength in our movement which has never been mobilized which can save The DAILY WORKER but it must be mobilized now. The party can save The DAILY WORKER if for once it can perform the miracle of mobilizing all its power for the fight for the institution which is the heart of our movement.

Every branch secretary must immediately send in all the funds available.

Every circulator of The DAILY WORKER coupon lists must send in the money collected.

Every party member must send in a contribution direct to The DAILY WORKER—$10, $5, a $1 bill.

Comrades and sympathizers who can make substantial loans for three months are urged to send in $100, $50, $25, repayment of which will be guaranteed by The DAILY WORKER and the party.

Comrades, Monday's issue of The DAILY WORKER must have at least a page filled with the names and donations of those comrades and sympathizers who have acted in answer to the call and who have aided in achieving the miracle of saving The DAILY WORKER for the Communist movement.

Until the catastrophe which faces The DAILY WORKER is averted there is no other work of greater importance for the party than the work of raising the funds to save The DAILY WORKER.

We must avert the threatening disaster. Act quickly.

Central Executive Committee,
WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY OF AMERICA.
C. E. Ruthenberg, General Secretary.

KAUFMAN MACHINE IN FURRIERS' TRIES TO RESCUE ITSELF FROM DEFEAT BY COMMITTEE CONTROL

By WILLIAM W. WEINSTONE.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 12.—The third day of the Furriers' Union convention opened with an acknowledgement by the Kaufman machine of the blow administered by the left wing opposition at yesterday's session in seating Ben Gold, which was a victory of the New York joint board over the international machine.

The acknowledgement was grudgingly made by the appointment of prominent delegates of the New York board as officers of important committees. Gold was made secretary and Gross chairman of the resolutions committee; Winchefsky chairman and Gross secretary of the education and organization committee; Shachtman and Sorkin, joint board delegates, were placed on the committee on law and constitution. Other delegates were assigned to officers' reports and other committees.

Liberality Only Apparent.

This apparent liberality is, however, a concealed policy of diplomacy with which Kaufman hopes to retain control thru a maneuver similar to that used by Sigman of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union of disarming the opposition, avoiding a fight and putting thru some deals to patch up a majority against the clearcut left wingers who number about twenty-five in the convention and who, together with the anti-Kaufman elements on the New York joint board and other sympathizers, make up a slight majority in the convention.

In this move, Kaufman is trying to apply the French adage that "He who takes a step backward may take a greater leap forward."

The left wingers have been watching these maneuvers and aimed to force the fight, understanding that Kaufman is employing these diplomatic maneuvers as a means of getting out of a tight corner.

Use All Schemes Possible.

Meyer London, yellow socialist, arrived in the city today, ostensibly to address the convention, but really to pull wires for the Kaufman machine. How far Kaufman will succeed in the game he is playing, events will show.

Today's sessions were devoted to reading the regular and suplementary reports of the general executive board. The latter is a special document against the New York joint board, distributed to all delegates and then read on the floor with the intention of prejudicing the delegates.

Attacks Communists.

It contains a long series of documents regarding the joint board of New York and goes back to 1920 to build up a case against the present board. It contains an attack against the Communists and the usual Sam Gompers concoctions ingenuously gotten up in 32 pages.

After reading, the report was referred to the committee controlled by Kaufman elements. Upon Gold's motion, the committee was instructed to report the next morning. The remainder of the day was spent in reading the G. E. B. report, which shows how well the machine organizes the unorganized.

The report brazenly states that in Mount Vernon it spent $2,000 maintaining two organizers to look after a strike of twenty workers and that after three months the strike was called off because—"firms restricted trade. We decided to suspend strike activities temporarily."

The report also claims organization

PURCELL GIVEN HEARTY OVATION AT CLEVELAND, O.

Federation of Labor Is Sponsor for Meeting

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CLEVELAND, Nov. 12.—Albert A. Purcell, president of the Amsterdam International Federation of Trade Unions and fraternal delegate to the recent American Federation of Labor convention at Atlantic City from the British labor unions, received an ovation at his meeting in Cleveland at the Engineers' Auditorium where he spoke on world trade union unity.

Cleveland Federation Backs Meet.

This meeting was arranged by the Cleveland Federation of Labor and Harry McLaughlin, president of the Cleveland Federation of Labor, acted as chairman of the meeting in which Purcell urged that the workers of all countries unite in a drive against international capitalism.

Purcell outlined the situation of the trade unions in the varirous countries of Europe. He showed how the trade union movement in Austria had been split up into three sections, owing to the parcelling up of Austria-Hungary. He showed that the labor movement of Czecho-Slovakai was divided into three different federations, and that in Greece, Roumania, Poland, Bulgaria and Hungary the trade union movement is harassed and suppressed. In Roumania there are 7,000 trade unionists in jail merely for their activities in building up the trade union movement. In Egypt and Palestine there are the beginnings of trade unions, which are being driven from pillar to post.

In England there are at least 2,000,000 unemployed, including the 1,500,000 registered jobless. There are sections of the country where there are thousands of young workers who have left school and have not yet been able to get a position. The state talks about giving these unemployed a "dole." That is the sneering word that they use for the unemployment insurance for which the workers furnish the funds. When the duke of Westminster gets his hundreds of thousands of pounds a year, he does not call it a dole, altho he is far less

RENT HOMES TO WORKERS AT COST IS DEMAND PRESENTED AT CITY HALL BY DELEGATION OF WORKING WOMEN

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Members of the United Council of Working Class Women invaded the city hall today to present arguments for city built houses to rent to workers at prices within their means, not above cost.

In 1923 the governor's commission for investigation of the housing situation in in New York City submitted a report which aroused the whole city, especially the workers, who are the real sufferers.

This report gave a picture of unbearable housing conditions, unsanitary surroundings and exorbitant rents—it was a damning indictment against the laws that were passed in 1920—for the report proved that those laws failed to relieve the rent and housing crisis.

The united council pointed out in 1923 that the extension of the rent laws to 1926 would not benefit the great masses of workers, furthermore the council declares that the special commission report on rent and housing stands today as correct as it stood in 1923.

The rents remain high, the landlords make few or no repairs, we are compelled to live in unwholesome houses. Firetraps are still the workers' quarters and the workers are still in the grip of the greedy landlords as they were in the past years, and as they will be in the future under the extension of the rent laws.

TThe workers cannot pay $20 per room in the newly built tax exempt houses, consequently, three and four families must live in three and four rooms, or live in firetrap tenements.

'HUSK' GIRL FATHER IS FREED FOLLOWING JURY DISAGREEMENT IN TRIAL

LITTLETON, Colo., Nov. 12—The trial of the elderly country doctor for the murder of his "husk-girl" daughter has come to an end. Dr. Harold Elmer Blazer has been freed of the charge of murder, following a disagreement of the jury.

The jury after many hours of battle were unable to reach a verdict. Judge Samuel W. Johnson dismissed the jury which had been hopelessly deadlocked for a number of hours. Upon dismissal the statement by the jury showed that but one man had stood against acquittal of the doctor on the charge of murder. Blazer was freed after the prosecutor had asked that the charges be dismissed.

REPORT THAT FENG SEIZES PEKING, CHINA

Expected to Wage War on Chang Tso-Lin

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Nov. 12. — Dispatches from China yet unconfirmed state that the provisional president, Tuan Chi-jui and his war minister, Wu Kwang-hsin are virtually held prisoners in Peking by a sudden seizure of the capital city by the troops of General Feng Yu-hsiang. The report comes from Shanghai.

This dispatch indicates that Feng Yu-hsiang, who has been consolidating his forces near and west of Peking, has taken the field to collaborate with the forces from the central provinces of Wu Pei-fu and General Sun Chuan-fang of Chekiang province to drive the arch-reactionary tool of imperialist interests—Chang Tso-lin.

Regards Feng as Important

MOSCOW, Nov. 12.—Opening of hostilities between the christian General Feng and Chang-Tso-lin means the beginning of a most important military phase in the Chinese revolution, according to Soviet officials who have been in close touch with the visiting Cantonese Generalissimo Khu Khan Min, who is here.

The time is well chosen for Feng to wage a decisive war, Soviet officials declare. There is no effort to conceal the Soviet sympathy for Feng.

Italian and American Movie Interests Want Soviet Russia's Films

MOSCOW, Nov. 12. — Italian and American cinema firms are negotiating with Russian producers for the exportation of Soviet films for which there is a growing demand abroad. Among the films to be shortly sent to Italy, Germany, America and France are: "The Cross-Country Automobile Race," "The Moslem Women," "Lena Goldfields," etc.

The Red Star Cinema company has released a scientific film just completed, entitled "Rejuvenation." The film is the result of three years' work under the guidance of leading scientific specialists.

Bremen Enters Port with Six Casualties; Storm Damages Ship

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Battered form stem to stern, after riding out the most terrific storm in the thirty years' experience of her captain, the North German Lloyd liner Bremen, with six casualties among her passengers and many of her crew disbled crept into port and docked at Hoboken. Her entire superstructure was damaged.

RUMORS AND COUNTER-RUMORS OF ANTHRACITE SETTLEMENT DO NOT SHAKE DISCIPLINE OF U. M. W. OF A.

The following is the first of a series of articles by William F. Dunne, editor of The DAILY WORKER, who is now in the field of struggle of the 158,000 striking miners in the anthracite region of Pennsylvania. The DAILY WORKER hopes to run an article each day while Comrade Dunne is in the anthracite, among the miners of whom he writes.

• • • •

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Nov. 12.—Rumor and gossip, reports and counter-reports, alleged terms of settlement and denials of any settlement at all, wild statements of desertion of one group or another of the mine owners from the coal operators' association, reports from "inside" sources of intervention by Coolidge, what Pinchot is said to have said to Lewis and the latest bulletin from "sources close to Inglis," chairman of the coal owners' committee, "no chance of a settlement before Christmas," "we'll all be back to work by Thanksgiving," "no work until the miners go back without the union," "no work without the checkoff,"—miner and merchant, preachers and newspapermen are speculating and predicting as to the outcome of the anthracite strike which closed 828 mines employing 158,000 men on Sept. 1.

The miners have little to do except talk; it is unorganized talk. Meetings are held only at the call of the scale committees or by order of district officials. There is none of the tenseness ordinarily associated with a strike of this size nor is there apparent any intensification of the class division that a determined strike usually brings forth.

Business Opposes "Radical Foreigners."

Everybody supports the miners, bankers, businessmen and workers in other trades except that the "radical foreign element" is unanimously denounced. This of course does not include "good foreigners" like President Capellini of District I.

Precisely because of the preponderance of foreign-born workers and their sons in the ranks of the striking miners, the Lewis-Capellini machine has made every possible effort to secure all the necessary stage properties for a 100 per cent American strike.

Success has attended their efforts so far.

The discipline of the United Mine Worekrs is something to marvel at. In the whole 450 square miles of anthracite territory in which 158,000 workers produce the domestic fuel for the whole Atlantic seaboard, not a single miner is working who has not been granted permission to do so by the union.

Well Disciplined.

The official orders are for no meetings and no meetings are held. The men are instructed to stay away from the business districts of the mining towns as far as possible and this order too is obeyed with the exception of the younger miners who play a little pool and drink more or less temperately in the "soft drink" parlors.

Only the lack of the usual long strings of loaded coal cars, and the idle hoisting apparatus at the mines indicates that a strike has been on for more than two months.

The demands for strike relief are not widespread as yet. Most of these demands have come from the Pottsville district where there is little opportunity for the strikers to obtain other employment. In the Scranton-Wilkes-Barre section many of the strikers have gone to work in the textile factories, on public work, etc. The demands for relief made by the locals have so far brot the reply from the officials "to clean out the local treasuries first." But in at least one instance the use of the local treasury for strike relief brot also the threat of revocation of its charter by Capellini.

Class Struggle Taboo.

The class struggle is taboo in this strike. The gossip among the miners is of the acts and utterances of republican and democratic politicians with which the Lewis-Capellini machine is tied to such an extent that only a surgical operation such as was required by the famous Siamese twins can extricate the masses of the min-

CLASS WAR RAGES IN PA. MINES

Union and Non-Union Miners Fight Cut

By GEORGE PAPCUN

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 12. — A call will be issued for a general strike of all miners in the coke region on Monday, Nov. 16. Meetings will be held in all important sections of the region where the coke that fires the steel mills of Pittsburgh is furnished by miners now unorganized.

At Marianna in the unionized field 600 coal miners are out on strike against the 1917 scale. Here the company has built iron fences around the mines. Armed guards are held in reserve. Searchlights from the roofs and mine tipples send their glares thru the night and search every road and open space.

Try to Shoot Pickets

An attempt to open the mines with scabs last night failed. Shots were fired by deputies at pickets but there were no casualties. Seven miners, including all the local union officials were evicted from company houses. The entire city looks like an armed camp under martial law.

Up in the coke region, where the non-union miners also are striking the strike is spreading slow but sure around Republic. There a huge and enthusiastic meeting of strikers was addressed by George Papcun, A. Jakira, Tom Ray, L. Jutic and others. Numerous pickets are on the job. Sixty pickets watching Tarhill Mine No. 1. The company is quite disturbed.

State police are searching for strike leaders and arrests are expected. The four pickets arrested the other day were fined and released. The International Labor Defense helped by paying the fines. Here, too, armed deputies are guarding the mines.

Strikers have received orders to vacate the company houses, but these orders are ignored. The strikers are

New York City, Nov. 17, evening, at the New Star Casino.

MILLION FARMERS FACE STARVATION AS CROPS FAIL IN GEORGIA; APPROPRIATION ASKED OF COOLIDGE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—More than one million farmers in Georgia face starvation as the result of complete crop failures due to drought. Enduring almost unbelievable privations the "poor white trash," as the plantation owners stigmatize the poor farmers of that state, are in danger of death from lack of food. So deplorable is the condition that Congressman Bell of Georgia has requested Coolidge to authorize an appropriation of $500,000 for the relief of the people in the famine-stricken region. Farmers in 32 counties are affected, Bell said.

The demand for such a small appropriation, $500,000, means but 50c for each of those affected, and is an insult to the farmers of Georgia. It is only a political gesture of Bell to enable him to maintain the support of his constituency. The government can spend millions for dirigibles, airplanes, submarines and other equipment for imperialist slaughter but cannot adequately provide for famine sufferers within the confines of the United States.

AGREEMENT ON ITALIAN DEBT SAVES TYRANT

Morgan Stands Back of Mussolini

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Mussolini's debt commission has reached an agreement with the agents of Wall Street, known as the United States debt commission. This means that the obligations to the United States of the third largest debtor nation has been settled on terms that will enable Italy to establish its credit with the House of Morgan so that it can absorb some of the enormous surplus of gold that has accumulated in the United States and is piling ever higher, until desperate measures are necessary in order to dispose of it.

It furthermore means that Mussolini and his bandit government is to be subsidized by American imperialism, and the fascist leader and his predatory bands of cutthroats will become the official agents of American bank capital.

Coolidge Sits In.

Announcement that an agreement had been reached was made shortly after noon, following a conference between Coolidge and members of the American debt commission, which was followed, in turn, by a joint session of the two full commissions. Secretary of the Treasury Mellon announced the agreement.

The actual terms will be announced late this afternoon after the experts of the two countries have worked out the figures involved in the huge mass of documents submitted.

It is definitely known tho, that they are the most liberal terms granted to any debtor nation under the pretext that the Italian internal situation is far worse than that of any other government in Europe.

Saves Fascismo.

The Italian currency would have fallen to nothing on the exchanges of the world had it not been for a satisfactory agreement having been reached. The terror of Mussolini and the frame-up against the yellow socialists and free masons on the charge of conspiring to assassinate Mussolini combined with the fall of the lira would have wrecked the government of the tyrant.

Only the conclusion of the agreement saved the situation. This desperate position of the fascist government gives the lie to the claims that Mussolini has re-established the economic system of Italy on a firm basis.

Sculptor Dies.

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 12—Two unmasked bandits today entered the fifth floor store of B. M. Kaufman, diamond merchant, and escaped with $40,000 in gems.

NEW YORK WORKER TENANTS EXPOSE LANDLORDS WHO CHARGE HIGH RENTS FOR DISEASE-LADEN APARTMENTS

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—The commission on housing and regional planning that is now "investigating" the housing conditions of New York City had all it could do when more than forty witnesses that have appeared before it, told of the miserable apartments they must live in and the amounts they are forced to pay.

Use Coal Bins for Rooms.

Coal bins and storerooms in cellars have been converted into apartments by the landlords by the use of beaver board for walls and are being rented out at present for an average rent of $12.50 a room.

The witnesses described how their homes were overrun by mice, rats and vermin and that the landlords were making no attempt to clean up these conditions.

Letter carriers testified that due to the low wage that they receive, their wives and young children are forced to accept employment in industries or in buildings doing chore-woman work in order to be able to pay the rent. Some of the letter carriers have to work in movie and music halls as ushers at night in order to make ends meet.

Rents Increase, Wages Decrease.

Other workers that appeared pointed out that their wages were lower than they were making in 1920, but they are forced to pay higher rents than when they paid in 1920, and that lnadlords are still boosting the rents.

In the Negro section of Harlem, landlords refuse to keep light burning in the dark hallways. Many of these hallways are pitch dark with winding stairs and the Negro workers living in these houses often injure themselves by falling down stairs.

Evictions Increase.

The clerk of the seventh district municipal court testified that there has been an increase of over 2,500 dispossess proceedings in the past year over the number in the same period last year. In 1924, in Harlem, which is a working class district and where this court is located, there were 29,490 dispossess cases. So far this year, with the months of November and December lacking, there have been 31,500 cases where workers' belongings have been moved onto the street. The clerk pointed out that most of these cases were the result of non-payment of rent.

Other tenants before the commission brot out that the landlords had sealed up dumb waiters in many places forcing those living on the top floors to carry pails of garbage and waste down many flights of stairs.

Unsanitary Conditions.

Others told of faulty plumbing, unsanitary apartments where the light of day never penetrates for which they must pay exhorbitant rents.

Renting agencies brot in showed that there were many apartments vacant, but that the landlords demanded that they collect such high rents that it was impossible to find tenants to move into the apartments.

Politicians Refuse Co-operation.

Tenants complained that when they called at the tenement house department, fire department and health department to have them remedy conditions in many of the houses, these commissions refused to co-operate with them in any way whatsoever.

The testimony brot out that many landlords were charging 288 per cent more for their rooms now than they did in 1920 and that these landlords had made few repairs in the apartments during that period.

Threaten Rent Riots.

Threats of rent riots were made if the present rent law, which is far from adequate and is merely a gesture towards protecting the tenant, was repealed. Most of the witnesses urged the commission to extend the law and if possible to make the law more stringent in its protection of the tenants.

Little can be expected from the commission appointed by the city hall crowd as these politicians work haud in glove with the landlords who maintain filthy apartments. Many dollars are placed in the clammy palms of health, fire, and other inspectors thru the year by renting agencies and landlords so that they would emulate the three monkeys: Hear no evil, see no evil, speak no evil, of the landlords and their servants.

Soft Coal Strike, Too

demanding the removal of the host of armed guards.

At the hall where Papcun was speaking the state police searched the assembly, but Papcun was gone. At the big meeting last night where Tom Ray and Papcun spoke, the sheriff and state police issued a proclamation prohibiting picketing and marching.

Papcun in his speech called on the striking miners to defy the proclamation and the injunctions. This met with the hearty approval of the strikers.

The Royal mine was picketed today. Various pickets were held up with guns, strikers were shot at and gas bombs thrown among the pickets.

The companies are getting desperate. Tom Ray and Papcun are leading the picket lines. Big mass meetings are to be held all over the coke region on Sunday.

WORKERS PARTY CIRCUIT SCHOOL STARTS MONDAY

First Class to Open in Milwaukee

Opportunity for the workers of Milwaukee, Wis., Waukegan, Ill., Gary and South Bend, Ind., to acquire a good knowledge of the elements of Communism opens Monday, Oct. 16, with the beginning of the circuit school conducted by the district agitprop department of the Workers Communist) Party.

The course of study is so organized as to cover all the essentials of elementary Communist theory—including Marxian economics, Leninism, and the practical problems of the struggle of the workers for the overthrow of capitalism. The classes in each of the cities mentioned will meet once a week, at 8 p. m. Instruction will be in charge of Oliver Carlson, of Chicago, who will visit each of the cities in the circuit regularly every week.

Opens in Milwaukee.

The circuit opens in Milwaukee on Monday night. There is still time to register for the classes. Prospective students may enroll now, or on the opening night of the school in their respective locality. The fee for the eight weeks' course of study is $1.50.

Those in charge of the classes announce that they will in no case be limited to members of the Workers (Communist) Party, but will be open to anyone interested in acquiring a knowledge of the elements of Communist theory. Some twenty workers have already enrolled for the Milwaukee class and it is expected that the number will be considerably increased before the school opens on Monday.

EVEREST F. BALCHUNAS

1893—1925

AFTER spending three years in traveling from one section to another in an attempt to effect a cure of consumption, Comrade Everest F. Balchunas died at the Cook county hospital.

Comrade Balchunas was very active among the Lithuanian workers in Lithuania and when he arrived in this country in 1913, to escape the military laws of the czar, he joined the Lithuanian socialist federation.

In Left-Wing Fight.

During the left-wing split, Balchunas fought the reactionaries in the federation and aided Comrade Stellson and others to organize the Lithuanian Communist Federation. He attended every convention that the Communist Party held and escaped the department of justice at the Bridgman convention.

He was also active in the organization of the American Lithuanian Workers' Literature Association, which is today controlled by the Lithuanian Communists.

Following the Bridgman convention he contracted a cold which developed into a slight form of consumption. His doctor advised him to leave the machine shop that he was working in and also to leave the city.

Goes West for Cure.

Balchunas left Chicago and went to California, then Arizona, New Mexico and then to Denver, Colorado, in his attempt to effect a cure. Unable to find work and having used up what little savings he had, he returned to Chicago. Failing to find work in Chicago and unable to pay a doctor for consultations he entered the Cook county hospital, where he died after eight months' treatment.

As Comrade Balchunas died without any relatives in this country, the District Eight Committee, Lithuanian Section, Workers (Communist) Party and the American Lithuanian Workers' Literature association are arranging his funeral which will take place Saturday afternoon, Nov. 14.

Funeral Saturday Afternoon.

All Workers (Communist) Party members are requested to participate in the funeral of Comrade Balchunas, which will leave the Parlanicia chapel, 3238 So. Halsted St., at 2 o'clock sharp, Saturday afternoon for the Lithuanian National Cemetery, Justice Park, Ill., where he will be buried.

Many Rumors in the Anthracite

ers from their paralyzing influence.

In this connection of the miners' union officialdom with the parties of American capitalism is to be found the principal reason for the sudden onslaught upon the left wing and its activities in the strike as personified in the persons of Alex Reid and Pat Toohey—both members of the United Mine Workers of America.

An additional reason is the fear that in the anthracite, the most powerful stronghold of the Lewis machine, the internal program of the left wing, expressing as it does the basic needs of the miners, would alienate thousands of the coal diggers who, for lack of better leadership, now follow Lewis blindly.

Holding Down the Lid.

Dissatisfaction with the Lewis policy of mere cessation of work by the miners while the maintenance men are left on the job, which is now only sporadic and somewhat feeble, is bound to develop as the strike drags on. There will be scandals over the enormous sums made by the operators out of their huge piles of culm which are being disposed of at fancy prices without any attempt by the Lewis machine to stop this source of profit for the operators. There will be increasing demands for strike relief. Without left wing leadership and the miners terrorized and afraid to incur the anger of both Lewis and the local authorities, the machine can and will crush any opposition.

The anthracite miners are well disciplined, as has been said. But it is not a class discipline. It works today in favor of the coal operators—not for the strikers.

entitled to it than the workers who furnish the means whereby the parasites live.

Purcell painted the misery and the exploitation that the workers suffer in China and India. He pointed out that these Chinese and Indian workers are competing with the American, British, French and Japanese workers, whose masters, the British, American, French and Japanese capitalists, have invested their surplus profits—that they have wrung from the toil of the workers of their own countries—in factories in China and India.

It is the duty—in self-protection—of the organized workers of the capitalist countries to help the workers of these countries to organize. Without this organization, the capitalists will drive down the conditions of the workers of their own countries. In some instances this has already happened, and the prospect is that it will continue.

Soviet Russia's Unions.

Purcell then spoke of the trade unions of Soviet Russia. The mention of Russia brought forth a peal of applause. He explained that in 1920 he had gone to Soviet Russia, and saw the parctical beginnings of the trade union movement. They were still groping, not yet having found the method of building them up. Again in 1924, Purcell, together with other prominent leaders of the British trade union movement, such as Bramley, Smith and others, went as a delegation to Soviet Russia, where they were shown whatever they desired. They saw the union machinery—they visited the clubs. Purcell described that the clubs are schools for training trade unionists into becoming better trade unionists and to fit them for the work of reconstruction. "They use the palaces and villas that they inherited to teach the illiterate. That is part of their function—a function that, of course, we have hot to perfrom, being that we are so much more intelligent—only the workers of Russia have got rid of their masters, which we have not."

He spoke of the miners' federation, and the unions of the other industries. "The British labor movement at its congress at Scarborough decided that it is none of our business what political belief a worker has—whether he is republican, syndicalist, socialist, or Communist. All we want to know is whether he is a worker, then we know that he is part of the movement.

"It is time that the workers are getting out of their insularity. It is time that they see beyond their own district council, their own state federation. They must look upon the question as a world question."

Against Capitalist Wars.

Purcell then showed the horrors that confront the workers of the world after the "war to end all wars." "Why are they preparing more dangerous and powerful gases and chemicals, airplanes and bombs? Is it because war will never come again, as they said? It is not. They are preparing these death-dealing machines because they know that we are further from peace than before. These chemicals will not be used against the belligerents, but against the women and children. It is time that the workers of the world tell the masters in unmistakeable terms that they will not go along in this war game. That we can do only if we have world trade union unity."

Purcell ended with an eloquent appeal to the workers of this country to consider the suggestions of the British Trade Union Congress. He asked them to go beyond the confines of their immediate situation and to envisage the problems that confront the entire labor movement of the world. "Even if we cannot prevent war, we will make the masters, the financiers, who are interested in war, the vested interests, which have something to gain by the war, be careful in their war talk. We will be able to tell these war gourmands that if they are interested in war, they may go out and fight them themselves."

The speaker was interrupted by rounds of applause. His appeal met with a most hearty response from the 1,000 workers present.

Meeting Has Great Portent.

Unquestionably the coming of Purcell has been of inestimable significance to the trade union movement of this city. If the workers—and particularly the trade union leaders—of this city respond only in a small measure to his appeal, the movement in Cleveland will look forward. Perhaps it may not be too much to suggest that the Cleveland Federation of Labor, or some of the progressive elements in the federation sponsor a move to send a trade union delegation to Soviet Russia, so that representative American workers may see with their own eyes what is taking place in Soviet Russia, and may see, as Purcell said, "that the Russian trade union is a bonafide trade union, as bonafide as the movements in America, Great Britain or any other country."

Soviet Report Shows the Workers' Republic Is Brightest Spot on Earth

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, Number Eleven of the series of reports headed "Social and Political Facts on the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics," arrives from Moscow. No worry about the unemployed problem here, no talk of crushing war debts, no speculations about fake "peace pacts," these troubles are for the capitalist world. Communists in the Soviet Union, as in the anti-Soviet nations, deal with these problems as aspects of the developing world revolutionary situation. But Report Number Eleven shows that the Soviet Union is dealing with the future, growing ever brighter, with "Plans and Perspectives" for the days immediately ahead.

These facts, persistently presenting themselves, in increasingly brilliant colors, to the oppressed of the world, must ultimately convince the victims of capitalism that their only escape lies along the road that the workers and peasants of Russia have already trod.

• • • •

New blast furnaces are being built and ovens repaired in the Southern Urals that will turn out steel now obtained in London.

The Miassky File Factory is being extended and during the last few months turned out 10,000 dozen files, which amounts to 145 per cent of the program.

Two big facts there. A basic industry shows continual improvement, while a factory outstrips by half what was demanded of it.

Rich accumulations of new radium deposits have been discovered in two places along the White Sea coast.

This is merely one of the many incidents showing the growing success met with in the search for new fields for the exploitation of the Soviet Union's untold wealth in natural resources.

• • • •

One paragraph says:

> "Since the commencement of the campaign up to Oct. 1, 153,318,300,000 poods (pood is 36 pounds) of wheat products were purchased and stored, which amounts to 90.7 per cent of the program. . . The loading of grain is proceeding without interruption."

Sufficient reply to the Chicago Tribune's fake reports from Riga, Latvia, of a new famine.

• • • •

Good news from the valley of the Volga (the Mississippi River of the Soviet Union) that was hardest hit by the 1921 famine. Here it is:

> "Traffic on the Volga has increased by 170 per cent as compared with last year. Demands for the coming year indicate a further increase. In connection with this the merchant fleet will be increased by 80 units."

And Chicago only talks about the "lakes-to-the-gulf" waterway.

• • • •

That the funds with which to build for the New Day in the Soviet Union are increasing is shown by this statement:

> "The general total for the state and all local budgets amounts during 1925-26 to about five milliard roubles, which is an increase of about 40 per cent on the total figures of the present 1924-25 budget."

• • • •

Then this is very important:

> "Donetz coal is rapidly conquering a place on the French market by its quality and cheapness."

This shows that Russian coal, which is being mined in ever greater quantities resulting in over-production at home, is successfully competing with German and British coal in France.

• • • •

And again:

> "The sale of Soviet oil on the Constantinople market has increased five-fold. . . . The first consignment of 40 ploughs, manufactured in the factories of the Soviet agricultural machine trust, has been sent to Constantinople."

Thus the oil riches of the Soviet Union find an ever-increasing market. While the news that Soviet Russia is exporting farm machinery to the Near East shows that the problem of modernizing agriculture at home is being rapidly solved.

• • • •

And just to tell the world that Soviet rule is here to stay, a five-year program for tea growing in the Soviet Republic of Georgia is announced that will tend to make the Soviet Union entirely independent of the rest of the tea producing world.

All progress in building the Soviet Union!
An advance for the world social revolution!

Working Women in Demands on N. Y. City Government

Even in these firetrap tenements, by the commission's report, families with young and old boarders crowd as many as 14 into the small space of three and four rooms.

Such conditions undermine the family life of the workers, when a worker has to rent an apartment he is asked to pay one and two months rent in advance, which he cannot do. The old apartments which rent for four and five dollars a room, are made over into costly apartments, and the workers who cannot pay more than five dollars per room must share apartments and undergo special hardships.

In view of these outstanding facts, the United Council of Working Class women proposes:

In order to relieve the great masses of workers' families with their young the United Council of Working Class Women, consisting mostly of housewives and affiliated with neighborhood housewife councils in every borough and other housewives' organizations, proposes the following:

That the city build houses or rent them to the workers at prices within their means not above cost.

The united council of working class women appeals to all the working class women in the house, shop, and factory to support the demands of the United Council of Working Class Women, only thru unity of all the workers, men and women, will the workers better their conditions.

I. W. W. VOTES TO RETAIN ITS NEW BUILDING

Forms Union Branch in Germany, Report

The 17th general convention of the I. W. W. yesterday voted against the proposal to sell the building recently purchased and also turned down the proposal to dispose of the printing plant, which had been, according to Manager Kohn, running at an expense that did not justify its being retained, he recommending that printing be done elsewhere.

Kohn showed that the different print shop managers had varied in their efficiency. Under the management of Anz, who adheres at present in ideology and organization to the emergency program, the costs of printing one dollar's worth of matter was $1.04, under George Williams $1.34, and while Kohn had reduced the expenditure to 94 cents, his failing health impelled him to offer his resignation. He asked that another be placed in his position.

Fellow Worker Joseph O'Neil of the Agricultural Workers Industrial Union retired from the convention and George Elsasser was seated as alternate.

It was reported to the convention that the Marine Transport Workers Industrial Union, No. 510, has established a branch at Bremerhaven, Germany.

Kip Rhinelander Knew Before Marriage That Wife Had Negro Blood

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 12—A new angle developed in the Leonard Kip Rh[illegible]der case when Attorney Lee Par[illegible] Davis, attorney for the defens[illegible]howed that Kip knew that Alice [illegible]as of the Negro race before he ma[illegible]ied her. Philip Rhinelander, the millionaire father, is seeking annulment of the marriage because the wife is a descendent of the Negro race.

Davis charged that Philip Rhinelander and his millions and not the husband are behind this move and he has used every contemptible method for degrading the girl and her family to secure the annulment. Davis threatened to bring the old man's nasty letters written to the girl into court. He quoted young Rhinelander saying to Alice when stories began appearing about the girl's Negro origin, "Never mind, Alice, I'm the one who should care and I don't."

Sanitarium doctors have been brot as witnesses by the millionaire father to show that his son is all but short of an imbecile and was irresponsible when he contracted the marriage.

INDEPENDENT UNION FRACTION IN NEW YORK WILL MEET SATURDAY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 12—All party members who are members of the independent unions must attend the regular Independent Union Fraction meeting at the headquarters, 108 E. 14th St., New York City, Saturday, Nov. 14, at 3 p. m.

The party policy of the independent unions as decided by the National Industrial Department will be considered and plans made for carrying it out.

Kaufman Machine Is Desperate

in South Norwalk, where it declares it won two dollar increases for members. But here the membership is in revolt against the machine for a reactionary agreement, which tied the union to a five-year agreement for a forty-eight hour week and no shop chairmen.

Ignores New York.

Nothing is said in the report of activities of the New York joint board, where 1,500 workers have just been added to the union in the militant strike of the Greek furriers; but much is told of their part in the La Follette "progressive" movement, which betrayed the movement for a labor party.

The report has nothing to say regarding the betrayal, despite the fact that the union is on record as favoring a labor party. This is not surprising, since Kaufman's machine at the A. F. of L. convention just held, voted with Green and his cohorts to damn the labor party movement and keep labor tied to the kite of capitalist politics.

The report proudly endorses the injunction secured by the Boston local union against the firm of Isadore Millman, which aroused the opposition of every progressive worker in the union. Similar reactionary policies are endorsed.

The left wingers will fight the adoption of the report and expose the class collaboration policies which are ruining the union.

The left wing has introduced resolutions for a labor party, the recognition of Soviet Russia, amalgamation of the needle trades unions, shop committees, the sending of a delegation of needle trades workers to Soviet Russia, class conscious educational program, world trade union unity, endorsement of The DAILY WORKER and Freiheit, recognition of the First of May as a holiday, demands for a fighting policy against class collaboration and for militant trade demands.

ARBITRATION, THE FOE OF THE ANTHRACITE STRIKERS, APPLIED TO LABOR BUT NOT TO CAPITAL

The following article upon the possibility and significance of arbitration and what it means to the anthracite strikers comes at a time when all their enemies are trying to force a settlement without granting the wage demands by arbitration and mediation. This is the tenth of a series of articles by Alex Reid, secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee, whose efforts to speak to meetings of miners was cut short by a jail sentence, from which he was recently released.

• • • •

By ALEX REID

Secretary Progressive Miners' Committee.

(Article X.)

The claim of saving the anthracite industry, from the menace of substitutes, according to the coal owners, necessitates the immediate resumption of operation, with the points in dispute left to the tender mercies of arbitrators.

The United Mine Workers have nothing to arbitrate. They are either correct in their demands, or incorrect. It is they who place their lives in jeopardy to produce the coal that warms our firesides and keeps us from freezing. It is they who give their lives—500 of them per year—that their loved ones may exist.

Not Only Wages.

Arbitrate? It is not only a question of wages, hours and working conditions that they are asked to arbitrate. It is life itself.

The miners refuse to arbitrate their demands, not because they feel their case is unjust, but because they have had bitter experience with arbitration before, which has always left them standing with the empty bag.

The miners are asked to arbitrate the only thing they have for sale—their human labor power. They are asked to arbitrate how much money they will receive for a certain amount of work, that in turn determines the kind of food he shall eat, the kind of food his wife and little children shall eat, the clothes they wear, the kind of schooling they will get, the kind of house in which they will be sheltered and raised.

Arbitrate Lives.

In truth, the miners are asked to arbitrate the kind of environment their children will grow up into womanhood and manhood, are asked to arbitrate the life of the toiler and the very future and life of his children.

The mine workers point out that this propaganda for arbitration is very much one-sided, and the claim of the operators that arbitration must be accepted as a principle for all other disputes, is very inconsistent indeed, and that the arbitration is to be applied only to one side of the fence—the miners' demands.

It is noticeable that the operators do not invite arbitration of the amount of interest they shall receive on their investment, or the profits on their watered stock. No mention is made of arbitration about the amount they shall charge for coal, or the amount they shall charge their wage slaves for rent while existing in the coal companies shacks—called houses—where the snow slides in and the cold winter blasts roar thru.

Only for Labor.

No, indeed, arbitration is only for the labor power of the miners, but must not be used to interfere with the enormous profits from the miner's labor power.

The mine workers remember the refusal of the Rockefeller interest to arbitrate in Colorado in 1913, when President Wilson asked them to do so, instead they sent in mine guards and militia and shot and killed thirteen men, women and children, and burned them in a pit where they had taken refuge, in a tent colony at Ludlow, Colorado. The Rockefeller preacher, John D. Jr., refused to arbitrate and starved and burned the mine workers into submission.

Capital Don't Arbitrate

The workers remember that Judge Gary, chairman of the board of trustees of the steel corporation, and a member of President Wilson's industrial commission in 1919 also refused to arbitrate the steel strike when Wilson requested him to do so. Why? Because Gary, like Rockefeller, felt they were strong enough to break the workers, and break them—for the time being—they did.

The Delaware and Lackawanna railroad in the last strike of the railroad shopmen refused to arbitrate the question, and in the railroad shops of that company, situated in the hard coal fields, are to be found harrowing conditions under which the workers have to slave.

Arbitrate your life, hopes and aspirations, your future as a man, the future of your children—what kind of men the priviledge of arbitrating wrapped up in the question of wages today, in the question of environment, which to a great extent is based on the wages, and living conditions as a result of the price for which labor is sold, is what arbitration means to the slaves of the pits.

Progressives Oppose Arbitration

The progressive miners in the anthracite have fought against any attempt at arbitration and will continue to do so. We refuse to give any set of men the priviledge of arbitrating our lives and happiness.

When the rising power of the working class becomes so strong in any industry, and the workers are about to win during a strike one of the favorite weapons of the bosses is, and will be, arbitration.

The anthracite miners can win this strike. The coal owners are beginning to realize the miners' strength, hence their frantic efforts to arbitrate the strike demands.

No arbitration, is the slogan of the anthracite miners.

STRIKERS FIND NATIONAL PLOT TO HERD SCABS

Fabulous Pay Offered by Silk Mills

By Albert Weisbord.

(Worker Correspondent)

HILLCREST, N. J., Nov. 12.—How the silk owners' association of Hudson county, with headquarters at a New York employment agency, is canvassing the entire nation to get workers and money to break the strike at the Hillcrest Silk Mill and even offers as much as $70 a week, exepnses and $30 commission for securing scabs, was revealed by clever detective work on the part of two strikers.

Suspicions Verified.

Growing suspicious on reading advertisements in New York papers calling for weavers for out-of-town work, these two silk strikers went to apply, saying that they were from another state. It didn't take them long to find out that the employment agent wanted to send them to the very mill on which they were striking, the Hillcrest Silk Mill, altho no hint was given of the strike. The strikers were able to point out secretly to others who had answered the add that they were to be shipped out as scabs and so persuaded them not to go.

In the meantime, one of the strikers gained the confidence of the agent to such an extent that he was offered a job as assistant to secure scabs in Connecticut, with $70 a week salary, all expenses paid and $30 extra for each scab secured. As the striker pretended to agree, the agent invited him out to the plant to make final arrangements.

Nation-Wide Plot Revealed

The following important information was wormed out of the agent: First, that the silk owners association of Hudson county is supporting the Hillcrest mill owner, De Barr, to the limit. This is for the very good reason that the strike is against an attempt to introduce the three and four loom system. Not only would this system be established in Hillcrest but in all of Hudson county, if the strikers lose, and it would effect thousands of workers there, as well as bringing wage cuts for Astoria, Long Island, Brooklyn and New York City.

Second, that a fund has been established to secure strikebreakers thruout the country. Scabs are to be paid forty dollars a week, much more than the strikers ever could make—and besides to have free railroad fare, with room and board en route paid by the company. On Sunday, free "entertainment" was to be furnished.

Third, that the bosses and government agents are trying to frame-up the strike leaders,—Albert Weisbord, secretary of the United Front Committee of Textile Workers' central bureau, and George Pearlman, of the Hudson county committee.

Strikers Give Answer

Strikers declare that their answer to this plot will be to double the picket line, to fight harder than ever to spread the united front by winning more workers for the strike, and by spreading the warning that the fate of all silk workers depends upon the outcome of the strike,—that the bosses are ready to cut wages nationally and to put all silk workers on a three and four loom basis.

All workers are urged to get their organizations to join the United Front Committee, which has its headquarters at 393 Broadway, Union City, New Jersey.

Factory Schools Teach Russian Orphans Trades

MOSCOW, Nov. 12.—The people's commissariat of education is organizing a series of "factory schools" in which homeless children and waifs will be taught various trades in addition to general education. There are to be 20 schools of this type, with facilities for 10,000 youngsters.

The chief attention in these schools will be directed towards equiping the pupils for skilled work in factories and work shops after graduating from the schools.

The factory schools will be run in close connection with industrial enterprises, co-operative organizations and other public bodies. The system of work in these schools will be harmonized with the discipline existing at the adult factories and work shops, with the necessary deviations to conform to the character of the youngsters. The working time will be from 4 to 6 hours daily, depending on the respective ages.

Such schools will be opened at Ivanovo-Voznessensk, Orel, Moscow and other industrial centers. Special funds for this purpose have been granted by the council of people's commissaries.

The Movement for World Trade Union Unity

This is the fourth instalment of a series of articles dealing with the question of World Trade Union Unity. This instalment deals with the British Workers and International Trade Union Unity. Following instalments will deal with the Communists and World Trade Union Unity, and the American Federation of Labor and Unity.

By TOM BELL.

At the meeting of the executive bureau of the Amsterdam International in June, 1924, the British representatives, led by Fred Bramley and A. A. Purcell, president of the international, stood for the opening up of negotiations with the Russian unions on the question of unifying the trade union movement. This was bitterly opposed by the right wing of the Amsterdam International. However, this proposal of the British representatives opened the road toward making the question of unity one of international significance. At that time these British leaders looked upon the Amsterdam International as being the logical unifying center, but today they stand along with the Russian trade unions for a world congress to establish a single united trade union international.

In June, 1924, the Russian unions sent a delegation to the Hull meeting of the British Trades Union Congress, headed by Tomsky, secretary of the All-Russian Central Council of Unions. This delegation raised the question of the creation of a united working class movement to meet the offensive of the capitalists and the dangers of new wars and fascism before the British trade unions.

In return the British Trades Union Congress sent a delegation to the sixth congress of the Russian trade unions in December, 1924. There the question of working for trade union unity in a practical manner was taken up with the result that the Russian unions invited the British unions to join them in establishing an Anglo-Russian trade union unity committee to work for unity on an international scale. The representatives of the British unions agreed that this was necessary and that they would recommend that their general council endorse the plan. This has been done and the Anglo-Russian unity committee co-ordinates the efforts of the two strongest trade union movements in the world for trade union unity.

On its return from Russia the British delegation published its report on conditions in Russia under the title of "Russia Today." This report has become famous thruout the world since that time. The reactionary leaders of Amsterdam and the capitalist press attacked it viciously. The delegation was slandered and vilified and every effort was made to prejudice the workers aganist the report because it was favorable to Soviet Russia.

The following is the gist of the conclusion regarding Soviet Russia, arrived at by the British delegation. It explains why the capitalist press attacks the report:

> A report on labor conditions in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics must begin by pointing out that in Russia the workers are the ruling class. For unless the reader bears this in mind throughout he will be misled by much in the Russian labor conditions that at first sight seems very much the same as with us. Really everything is quite different; because in Russia we have a regulation of the workers' rights that they have put upon themselves for their own well-being. Elsewhere we have a restriction of the workers' rights put upon them by the wealthy. . . No one who grasps this will ever be misled by the lies he can read almost daily that the worker in Russia lives a life as limited as, and even less liberty than, with us. The Russian workers are the ruling class of Russia. They enjoy the rights of a ruling class. They are beginning to exercise its responsibilities. They still have much to learn, but they have made a start. In a village school visited by one of the delegates the children were learning to write in copybooks in which over "God save the czar," had been pasted, "Once we were slaves, now we are free."

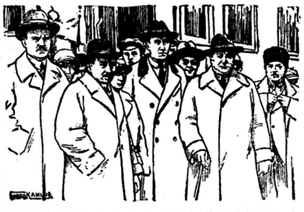
For World Trade Union Unity



The Russian delegation to the Anglo-Russian Trade Union Unity Conference held in London recently. From the left to right: W. Michailov, M. Tomski, chairman of the delegation; O. Chernyshev, I. Lepse, G. Melnichanski, secretary.

The following few extracts from the captalist and socialist press will indicate how bitter they were against this report:

The London Daily Chronicle (Feb. 28, 1925) under the headline, "Trade Unionists Who Were Hoodwinked," said of the report:

"It is a naive document, and where it is not naive it is misleading."

The following headlines appeared in the London capitalist press regarding the report: Daily Mail: "Eyewash: For Blind Leaders of the Blind." Westminster Gazette: "Labor's Soviet Whitewash." Daily Express: "Red Whitewash."

The socialist press was no less bitter in its efforts to discredit the report. Le Populaire, organ of the French socialist party had a leading article under the headline: "The Naive Delegates of the Trade Unions Will Deceive No One." Every paper supporting the right wing of Amsterdam against international trade union unity denounced the report. In America the conservative labor press attacked the report, led by the reactionary Jewish Daily Forward of New York.

During the last year the movement toward the left of the British workers has shown itself in no uncertain manner. A. J. Cook, on the basis of the R. I. L. U. program, was elected to the position of secretary of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain over the reactionary Amsterdam leader, Hodges, who was civil lord of the admirality in the the MacDonald cabinet.

The revolutionary wing of the trade union movement organized in the National Minority Movement, led by such staunch revolutionary fighters as Harry Pollitt of the Boilermakers' Union, and Tom Mann of the Engineers' Union, has grown to great proportions. In February, 1925, the conference of the National Minority Movement held in London, had present over six hundred delegates representing over six hundred thousand trade unionists. This is no fake membership because the membership of the Minority Movement is based upon dues payment, both individual and collective. This movement has as its basis the program of the R. I. L. U., and is making rapid headway in winning over great masses of British trade unionists to their revolutionary program.

The capitalist attack on the wages of the British miners produced a wonderful exhibition of solidarity in the formation of the workers' alliance composed of the miners, railwaymen and transport workers, backed by the Trades Union Congress. The Trades Union Congress also secured the support of the transport workers of continental Europe in refusing to ship coal to Britain in the event of a miners' strike. This alliance pledged itself to strike along with the miners and actually issued strike orders. This display of solidarity and militancy forced the capitalists to halt their offensive on the miners. The government subsidized the mine owners to the extent of £50,000,000 on the understanding that there would be no reductions in wages and that the existing contract be extended until May, 1926.

That the British ruling class understands that this swing to the left on the part of the workers means a challenge to the capitalist system, is shown in the preparations being made to administer a crushing blow to the trade unions. The fascist movement is openly organizing. Strikebreakers are being organized, on approval of the government in an organization named the Maintenance of Supplies. Cabinet ministers openly threaten the use of force against the working class. The Communist Party and the National Minority Movement leaders are arrested charged with seditious propaganda, especially among the armed forces.

The right wing trade union leadership was repudiated at the Scarborough Trades Union Congress, and the left wing leaders assured of the support of the overwhelming mass of trade unionists. In the labor Daily Herald a discussion raged for some weeks on the question: Shall the workers arm? The parliamentary labor party is still dominated by MacDonald & Co. But the masses of the trade unionists are following the left wing—the battles being fought between the left and right wings inside the movement today are preparatory steps towards an effective challenge of British capitalism.

The new outlook of the British trade union movement was given concrete expression at the Scarborough Trades Union Congress held in October, 1925. The following constitutes the program of the British trade unions according to the decisions of that congress:

1. That capitalism can no longer function in the interests of the working class and must be replaced by a system of society based upon the socialization of the means of wealth production.
2. In the struggle against capitalism new forms of struggle are necessary; therefore it is necessary to organize shop committees to mobilize the workers for the fight against capitalism.
3. The actions of the general council regarding international trade union unity were endorsed, and the council instructed to continue to work with the Anglo-Russian Unity Committee for this aim.
4. Definitely broke with British imperialism and declared that the British empire was based upon the exploitation of millions of colonial slaves, that it was the duty of the unions to aid in the destruction of this slave empire, and that the Trade Union Congress must help the colonial workers to organize themselves in trade unions and political parties for the fight against British capitalist exploitation.

This program, in conjunction with the growing class consciousness of the trade unionists as shown by the growth of the Minority Movement, has laid the basis for the renovation of the British trade union movement. That movement has always been held up as the ideal conservative, craft union movement of the world. So conservative was it that the great deeds of the founders of the first trade unions at the beginning of the last century, and the heroic deeds of the Chartists between 1830 and 1849 were forgotten. But the misery brought upon the British workers by the capitalist crisis has forced them forward as a matter of self-preservation. The British workers will prove in the future that they are able to perform even greater deeds than the heroic Chartists in the coming great class conflicts.

The movement for world trade union unity having for its basis the 11,000,000 trade unionists of Britain and Russia represents a powerful force in the working class movement today. The opposition of the reactionary Amsterdam leaders, encouraged by the American Federation of Labor officialdom, to this movement will be swept aside, by the sheer necessity of the workers to defend themselves against the coolie standard of living forced upon them by capitalism.

CELEBRATE 8TH YEAR AT GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Good Meeting in Spite of Many Obstacles

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich.—Efforts of local comrades to make the eighth anniversary celebration a big demonstration in behalf of workers' rule in the Soviet Union, resulted in a great response from Grand Rapids toilers, several hundred of whom attended the meeting held under the auspices of the Workers (Communist) Party at the S. and D. Hall.

Late information reaching here that, because of his editorial duties on The DAILY WORKER, forcing him to return to Chicago immediately after his Detroit meeting, Comrade J. Louis Engdahl could not be present at this event as advertised; and the further augmentation of this disadvantage thru the failure of two other scheduled speakers to appear at all, made a complete last minute rearrangement of the program necessary.

Comrade B. A. Faulkner, veteran fighter of the revolutionary movement in Michigan, acted as chairman. Following his opening remarks he introduced Comrade James Barkin, who, himself well remembering the old Russia of czarist days, made a brief address, treating the relation of the American working class to the Union of Soviets.

Bechtold Principal Speaker

Comrade Eugene Bechtold, local organizer, reviewed the economic and political developments of Soviet Russia during the last eight years, which today have reached a stage of utmost importance, constituting a victory not merely confined to the Russian workers, but a triumph for the proletariat of the entire world.

After assailing the Locarno security pact as the latest scheme for attacking the U. S. S. R., the speaker treated in detail the demands formulated by the Workers (Communist) Party, the struggles for which will teach the working class the true nature of American capitalist democracy and will lead them onward to the workers' and famers' government of the United States.

Honor Frunze

Bechtold asked the audience to rise and stand in silence in memory of the late red commissar of war, Michael Frunze, following which the speaker made the collection appeal for The DAILY WORKER, which, thru the cooperation of Y. W. L. Comrades Louis Druker and Dena Van Heck on the floor, amounted to $29.50.

Copies of the anniversary edition of The DAILY WORKER and the Workers Monthly were sold, and several orders taken for the highly informative book "Russia Today."

Sokal Speaks in Lithuanian

Joe Sokal, particularily well known among Lithuanian workers concluded the meeting with an address to the remaining audience in his native tongue.

General satisfaction prevailed among the comrades as to the outcome of the celebration despite all obstacles; it being the third of a series of mass meetings of major importance arranged and conducted by local Communists.

WHAT OUR SHOP NUCLEUS HAS DONE

By ANDREW HOLMES, Worker Correspondent.

After having accepted at the 1923 convention a resolution dealing with the reorganization on a shop nuclei basis, our party had quite a lengthy discussion on this subject.

The German, French and Czecho-Slovakian parties, at the time of the last convention of the Workers Party, had reorganized many of their units into shop nuclei. Our party, on that occasion, reaffirmed its stand and resolved immediately to start the task of reorganizing the party on the basis of shop nuclei.

In our factory there were enough party members last May to start a nucleus. We therefore proceeded with the formation of such a shop nucleus. Previous to the actual formation of the nucleus, we were, as party members, working as a unit in this factory.

Our union, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers which, it is well known, not only solidly supported LaFollette and the LaFollette movement, but assessed the membership of the union one dollar each for the LaFollette campaign. In our shop, however, we, the party members, put up such a splendid campaign, that many of the workers there, who were members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, refused to pay their LaFollette assessment. We succeeded in collecting $11 among these workers for the Workers (Communist) Party campaign.

After we were organized into a shop nucleus, we mapped out our activities. Because of the precarious position we were in there was at first difficulty in carrying on intense activity. In the first place, a general attack was launched against the party members. With the assistance of the Jewish Forward and other yellow sheets our enemies succeeded in spreading prejudice and antagonism against the Workers Party and the Trade Union Educational League. Naturally our struggle was made more difficult by that. Two of our members, as a result of a collaborative frame-up between the boss and the shop chairman, lost their jobs. However, we soon gained three new members.

The conditions in the tailoring industry are very bad. For the past year, the majority of the workers have been employed on the average only half time. In spite of these handicaps, we succeeded in selling considerable literature and tickets for the various party affairs.

Two months ago we helped organize a branch of the International Labor Defense in our factory, with fifteen members, and are thus forging ahead.

What is our activity at present? On the first of May this year a new agreement was concluded with the manufacturers. There was a universal not a general wage cut agreed to. Namely: they took most of the sections in the various shops and, under the cloak of readjusting economy, thousands of members lost their jobs. Those remaining were hardly in a position to eke out a livelihood.

This collaborative method carried in itself the germ of another catastrophical occurrence. As stated above, President Hillman assisted the manufacturers in cutting the standard of pay of the workers. The International Tailoring company, which is enjoying huge profits and is still unsatisfied, asked repeatedly for such enormous reductions that even the Amalgamated officialdom could not comply with them because they realized it would mean the loss of their official position in the union.

The result of this was the strike against the firm. This strike has been in force for the last four months. If the Amalgamated officialdom would have rejected the first demand of the manufacturers, for a wage cut, they surely would not have forced the alternative—a general strike because if the International Tailoring Co. could not secure scabs, the entire local market would have its last chance to manufacture garments with scabs.

To sum up, what has been the mission of our shop nucleus? Thru education the membership was made more acquainted with the meaning of the class struggle. We did everything to familiarize the workers with the class collaboration which exist between the manufacturers and the officialdom of the union. Thru such activities our own membership would be welded into a more militant body. We are now in a better position to withstand and repel every attack against the standard of living of the workers.

Bellaire Authorities Forbid Celebration of Bolshevik Revolution

By A Worker Correspondent

BELLAIRE, Ohio. Nov. 12.—The municipal authorities have stopped the eight anniversary meeting arranged by the Workers (Communist) Party on Friday, Nov. 6. The comrades were notified the night before the meeting that they could not hold the meeting. The hall keeper was intimidated, and was told that he would get a fine of $500 if he allowed the meeting to take place.

The district office of the Workers Party is determined to get the right of free speech in Bellaire. As far as can be learned, the Wheeling Steel company and the coal operators are behind the action of the municipal authorities.

The Workers Party is preparing to wage the fight for free speech. Recently a meeting of the party in Cleveland was disrupted by the police. Putting two and two together, it would appear as if the authorities are preparing a campaign against the Workers (Communist) Party, preliminary to a general attack on the organized labor movement.

The open shoppers are carrying on a broad campaign. They are utilizing the newspapers to the full, and everywhere are agitating for the open shop. The coal operators are working overtime, to beat down the standard of the miners. Only recently it was announced that anthracite coalfields in West Virginia, which have not been operated for years, will reopen if the international commerce commission will reduce freight rates. This means a regular campaign against the anthracite miners which attacks the bituminous miners as well.

Rochester, N. Y., Is Proud of Celebration of Workers' Republic

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 12.—The anniversary of the Russian revolution meeting in Rochester was one of the very best held. The hall was beautifully decorated with red bunting, large palms adorned the windows and platform and banners were hung everywhere in the large hall with "Hail to the Workers Republic" "Greetings to the Communists of the World" and other appropriate slogans.

The music was furnished by a large Lithuanian chorus. Speeches were made in Italian, Jewish and English. When Mother Bloor, who spoke in English rose to speak, a young comrade stepped out on the platform and led the large audience in singing The International. Mother Bloor's address was received with the warmest appreciation. She reviewed the stupendous achievements of Soviet Russia in the last 8 years and pointed out the significance of this to workers of the entire world.

RUSSIAN BRANCH GIVES 'RETURNED FROM SIBERIA' AT WORKERS' THEATER

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—The Russian Branch No. 2, of the Workers (Communist) Party is arranging a five-act play, "Returned from Siberia," for Saturday, Nov. 14, and Sunday, Nov. 15, at the Russian Workers' Theater, 431 East 6th St.

There will be a symphony orchestra of 35 pieces to accompany the play. After the play there will be dancing to the wee small hours of the morning.

OMAHA WORKERS HOLD RUSSIAN REVOLUTION CELEBRATION SUNDAY

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 12. — The eighth anniversary celebration of the Russian revolution will be held at the Labor Temple Ball Room, 19th and Davenport Sts., Sunday afternoon, Nov. 22, at 2:30 p. m., under the auspices of the Omaha Workers (Communist) Party, the Independent Ladies' Club, and the Workmen's Circle Branches 626 and 258.

Comrade Robert Minor, member of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party, will be the main speaker. Minor has been in Soviet Russia a number of times and every Omaha worker should take this opportunity to hear of the conditions as they are in the first workers' and farmers' government.

A small admission of 25 cents will be charged. All proceeds are to go to aid our organ, The DAILY WORKER.

Y. W. L. Area Branch No. 1 Grand Masque Ball Saturday Night

To raise funds to help carry on the league work in District No. 8 and to help maintain The Young Worker, Working Area Branch No. 1 of the Young Workers (Communist) League is arranging a grand masque ball on Saturday, November the 14th at the Workers Lyceum, 2733 Hirsch Blvd.

Young Workers (Communist) League Area Branch No. 1 meets every Friday night at 8:00 p. m. at 166 W. Washington St. and is carrying on activity among the young workers employed in the downtown shops and stores.

All members of the party and the league are expected to support this affair.

The admission charge is only 35c. Music is furnished by I. Letchinger's Mid-West Syncopators.—"Nuff sed!"

Famous Musicians to Play Saturday for Rescue Dance

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Two celebrated artists will donate their talent for the benefit of The DAILY WORKER at the Rescue Party arranged for this Saturday evening, Nov. 14, at the Bronx headquarters, 1347 Boston road.

Liese Soskial, violinist, will give two numbers, the Sonata in G Minor by Tartini (first movement), and Tamburin by Rambeau Kreisler.

Josephina Arinea will give a number of selections on the piano.

Not only residents of the Bronx but music lovers from all over the city who know of the splendid work of these two artists will flock to the Rescue Party to hear them and in that way help The DAILY WORKER while spending a most pleasant evening. And, of course, there will be dancing until early morning.

YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE TO HOLD MASQUE BALL SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 14

To raise funds for The Young Worker and the District No. 8 office of the Young Workers' League which is planning a wide field of activity, Working Area Branch No. 1 of the Young Workers' League is holding a masque ball on Saturday, November 14, 1925, at the Workers' Lyceum, 2733 Hirsch Blvd.

All the Workers Party and Young Workers' League members and sympathizers of the Young Workers League and its activities are urged to attend and to come masked as valuable prizes will be given to best single costumes or a group portraying some revolutionary event or epoch. Admission to the dance is only 35 cents.

WOBBLY LUMBER JACKS KNOW A-THING OR TWO

Don't Believe Hokum About Communists

By W. J. M.
(Worker Correspondent)

SPOKANE, Wash., Nov. 12.—While walking along the "skidway" (Trent avenue, where the lumber jacks hang out) the Worker correspondent talked with a number of lumber jacks in their hob nailed shoes and short legged pants.

Generally speaking their opinions as expressed by themselves, as regards conditions in the woods are "rotten", "bum", "not worth a dam."

While talking to these "working stiffs," as many of these old time Wobblies rate themselves, your correspondent asked them to explain their reason for condemning the lumber camps so severely.

One old timer said: "Well, the last job I shipped out to we had to hike 15 miles after we left the train. Before we reached camp we had another hike up a ravine. At the head of this ravine stood a shack, its logs almost ready to crumble down.

Too Rotten For Pigs.

"Inside was straw in the bunks, the floor was covered with filth; no bull cook to keep the place clean. I never saw a pig pen look so filthy, and the grub was equally rotten.

"The wages were a little more than $3.00 per, and out of that you paid $1.25 per for your flop on the straw in the filthy, lousy bunk house and for the stuff they doled out to you for food, and that's why I say the woods are rotten."

When They Fought The Bosses.

When reminded that the I. W. W. once made the lumber barons of the Northwest furnish libraries and shower baths, and asked why they had failed to maintain these conditions, he replied:

"In those days, the Wobblies fought the lumber kings. Now the Wobblies fight each other, that is, a bunch of pie card artists fight each other while the rank and file are shot to hell."

Don't Believe Anarchist Bunk.

Your correspondent then asked him about the rumor that circulates among the Wobblies that the Communist split the Wobblies.

"Communist split hell!" he replied. "Ain't Harrison George, an old time Wobbly, a Communist? No, its only the ignorant Wobblies that swallow that gag.

"Any Wobbly that is posted knows that the Communist did all in their power to keep the Wobblies from splitting, but because the Communists showed up same disrupters and pie card artists in the Wobbly movement they sought revenge by telling the rank and file that the Communist split us.

And He Is Not a Communist

"If the I. W. W., as an organization would let a handful of Communists split us, then we are not worthy the name of a labor organization. Did the Communists split any of the A. F. of L. organizations? No, then how in hell could they split the I. W. W.?

"The I. W. W. permited themselves to be split by a bunch of anarchistic pie card artists in spite of the Communists, and that old stuff that the Communists split us is an insult to a thinking Wobbly!"

When asked if he was a Communist he replied "No."

Lost Union—Lost Conditions.

The above statement as regards conditions in the lumber camps of the Northwest was corroborated by other lumber jacks, while a few of them spoke of conditions not quite so bad, but none of them interviewed by your correspondent had any praise for wages, hours and working conditions in the woods.

Some laid the bad conditions to the 4 L. a company union, others to the unorganized state of affairs among the lumber workers and others to the lack of the fighting spirit of the old time I. W. W., but all agreed that the trade of a lumber jack in the woods of the Northwest was nothing for a slave to envy.

NEW YORK WORKERS' SCHOOL HAS CLASSES FOR ORGANIZATION WORK FOR MEMBERS OF TRADE UNIONS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Many courses of special interest to trade unionists are offered by the New York Workers' School in its bulletin of courses offered for this year.

A course in trade union work will be offered in which the structure and growth of the American trade union movement and the major political, economic and technical problems met by union officers and union members will be taken up. Some of the problems included are: organization of the unorganized; amalgamation; class collaboration; shop committees; labor and the law; politics in the labor movement; and the fight against reaction and reformism. Instructor is Bert Miller; leading trade unionists will participate in round table discussion of strike strategy and specialists will take up the problems and technique of wage and price negotiations and agreement and other special topics.

Teach Garment Union Members.

Another special course of great importance to the needle trades is entitled "The History and Problems of the Needle Trades Industry." Twenty-five or 30 of the most active workers in the various needle trades unions will be admitted into this special training course. It aims to prepare active workers in the needle trades industry for responsible work in their respective unions. The various vital problems facing officers, executive board members, business agents, departmental heads and the active union workers will be taken up, including the history of the industry, the problems of seasonal fluctuations, contractors, jobbers, inside shops, etc. and the tasks of shop chairmen, organization committees, campaigns, finances, office management, etc. This course will be conducted by specialists in their respective fields, under the general direction of a commitee of which Alexander Trachtenberg is the secretary and whose other members are Ben Gitlow, Sascha Zimmerman, J. Zack, and Bert Wolfe.

Public Speaking.

A course in public speaking, instructor Carl Brodsky, is also attracting much attention among organized workers as it is of great practical use to them. For students of an advanced nature, training in research work will be of great use in investigating the conditions in a given industry, wages, profits, and economic trends. A limited number of qualified workers will be admitted to this course; the instructor is Alexander Trachtenberg.

Workers Correspondents.

There are courses in English of all grades for such trade unionists as were not born in the United States or whose training for reading, writing and speaking English is somewhat limited. A special course in workers' correspondence or working class journalism should interest all union officials who have the special tasks of editing or writing for journals, giving publicity to strikes and meetings and other work of a similar nature. For those not qualified for this course, a more elementary course in composition is offered.

Economics.

Finally, there is a general group of courses in economics, politics and history that should interest leading workers in the unions. Among them are especially recommended: "American Economic and Political History;" "History of the American Working Class" and "Marxian Economics." The instructors for these courses are Anton Bimba and Jacob Mindel.

All of these courses open the last week in November so that workers interested should hasten to register at the Workers School now if they hope to get admited. The fee for each course is $2.50 for three months. Registration takes place every afternoon and evening at the Workers School, 108 East 14 St., Room 34.

Courses in English, trade unionism, economics, politics, and history, are also offered to the unions at their headquarters for small fees and the Workers School will furnish competent instructors for such courses.

INVESTIGATE ANCIENT BATTLEGROUND; LEAVE MODERN SYRIA ALONE

Word from Syria has been received in Chicago, but it does not concern the sanguinary conflict raging there now, except in a remote manner. The Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago has received word from Prof. James H. Breastead, in charge of the Armagedon expedition of the university, that the uprisings today will not halt the excavation of Megido Ridge, "the battle ground of the ages." Investigations and excavations have been going on here for considerable time, and preparations are under way to slice off the top layer of the battle ground to discover what happened thousands of years ago. If these gentlemen want to find ghastly remains among ruins they could dig into the ruins of Damascus, "the mother of cities," and discover horrors that the ancient conquerors never dreamed of.

I. C. C. "Threatens" Expose of St. Paul Railroad Financing

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Incensed at accusations that it could have prevented the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad being thrown into a receivership if it had approved certain financial plans submitted to it by the road's directorate, the interstate commerce commission is threatening to disclose some of the secrets as to how the financial end of the road was "managed" at its meeting here on November 30. The commission's threat to expose the St. Paul's financial history and methods used by various banks in railroad financing has made many of the political observers in Washington smile wisely as they remember that the commission has made threats in the past.

Ford Company Agents Tour Soviet Ukraine

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Nov. 12. — Representatives of the Ford Automobile Co. have recently arrived in the Ukraine to study the state of tractor cultivation in the Ukraine, and the working of the tractors manufactured at the Ford factory.

The Americans have toured throut the Ukraine, and on being interviewed, stated their impression that the American tractor has firmly established its popularity among the Ukrainian peasants, who are utilising the tractor not only for ploughing, but also for other agricultural purposes. According to the Ford representatives, it is already the dream of every Ukrainian peasant to acquire a tractor.

Radio Stations in Moscow.

MOSCOW, Nov. 12.—The Moscow Soviet has ordered the installation of radio receiving stations thruout the province of Moscow.

In every town and village where there are radio amateurs, radio receivers and loud speakers will be installed, and consultations bureaus established for the benefit of amateurs.

The whole work of "radiofication" is to be completed by the coming winter. The peasants are manifesting intense interest in this work.

Russ Tourist Association.

MOSCOW, Nov. 12.— The Russian Tourist association of Moscow is completing its 30th year of fruitful activity in the organization of historical and ethnographical excursions.

The activities of the association increase year by year. In 1924 alone the association organized 170 excursions in and around Moscow, in which more than 4,000 members took part.

At the present time the association is preparing for publication a "Guide to Moscow and Environs" and a series of informative booklets on matters of interest to tourists.

PASSAIC MILL WORKERS HOLD MEETING FRIDAY

Organizing a United Front Against Cut

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PASSAIC, N. J., Nov. 12.—The united front committee of textile workers is making a headway in organizing the textile workers. This Friday will be the second mass meeting which promises to be more successful than the first held two weeks ago.

The work of organization hardly began and yet hundreds of workers joined the organization. It seems that the workers of Passaic are awakening and beginning to see that unless they organize themselves, they are hopeless.

The average wages for a 48-hour week is $23.00. This explains everything. How can a worker live on $23 a week, when the cost of living is as high as it is? How can a worker educate his children, who gets $23 for 48 hours? Everybody knows that you cannot make even a half decent living on such starvation wages.

It is time for the textile workers to build a strong organization and fight for less hours and more wages. The united front committee of textile workers is helping to create such a fighting organization. Help the U. F. C. of T. W. and you help yourself.

Come to the Friday mass meeting. Speakers in all languages. English, Ben Gitlow; Polish, Radwansky; Hungarian, Lustig; Russian, Dmitrijov; Ukrainian, Italian and German.

Be at the mass meeting at Neubauer's Hall, President street and Parker avenue. The headquarters are open every night for registration, 25 Dayton Ave.

Seattle Painters Demand Referendum on Expulsion Law

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 12.—Painters' Local No. 300 makes a demand on the international union that the amendment which was adopted at the Montreal convention, held in 1925, and now used to expel Communists, be submitted to the membership in a referendum.

The Seattle painters point out that the amendment can be used to expel any unionist that may dare to "advocate united and militant action against the bosses" and that this amendment penalizes union members, who differ on union policy, from those in power and that it splits the Brotherhood instead of uniting it in a "common struggle for the better things in life."

The amendment will go to referendum if 25 locals in five different states or provinces demand it, according to the constitution of the Painters' Brotherhood.

WASHINGTON COOLIDGE SUPPORTER VIES WITH CHARTERIS FOR HONOR OVER WORST ATROCITY STORIES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Frederick William Wile, a Washington press correspondent who now is an ardent eulogist of President Coolidge, and who broadcasts political "news" from the capital for a radio company, has been identified as the original press sponsor for the story that German army officers cooked the bodies of dead German soldiers, during the war, in order to utilize the oil for military purposes. Gen. Charteris, formerly in charge of propaganda in London, disclosed the fact at a dinner in New York, recently, that this story was a lie manufactured by himself. British labor and liberal circles have been aroused by the discovery, and have searched the documentary history of the lie.

Compete for "Honor".

According to the London Herald, one of the prominent war correspondents has now testified that Charteris told him this story late in 1916. The first use made of it in the press was in April, 1917, when Wile, in the Daily Mail, owned by Northcliffe, asserted that the Berlin Lokal Anziger had "callously admitted what had been known for some time in Allied countries"—that the German command was frying the fat out of the bodies of German dead. Gruesome descriptions of this process were printed, under headlines referring to "Hun Ghouls".

The dispatch printed in the Lokal Anziger which was credited to Karl Rosner, a famous war correspondent, mentioned coming into a region which was oppressed by the stench from a reduction plant, in which flesh was being made into fertilizer, pig feed and oil. The word translated by Wile as "corpses" describing the raw material, was a German word which is generally used to describe only the dead bodies of animals—such as horses, cattle, dogs, etc. Nowhere was there a reference to the "corpses" as being human.

Another Lie Nailed.

An officer has also come forward with direct denial of the story that human bodies were "reduced" in a certain concrete chamber over a canal at a specified point in Belgium. The photograph taken in that spot when this British officer was present, showed the deadly effects of an Allied shell, which had killed the staff of a German mess kitchen. The picture was used, however, as evidence that these dead were being cut up for "reduction."

Denver Workers Flock Into Trade Unions

DENVER, Nov. 12—Organization among Denver workers is taking a leap forward with new activity among the shoe repairers teachers and jail guards. The Yellow Front shops are now 100 per cent union with the formation of a Denver local of shoe repairers. The jail guards have joined the city employes' union and a teachers' local is under way with the staff of the Denver Labor college as the nucleus from which to penetrate the public school system.

A union label trick by employers was exposed by the Bakery Workers' Union. Old Homestead bread is non-union but the wrapper carries a big union label which is shown when housewives ask for union bread. The label covers only the printing on the wrapper. The bread inside is as scabby as ever, the union bakers show.

Jewish Masses Settle on Soviet Land Grants

MOSCOW, Nov. 12.—In the course of the last year, with the assistance of the Soviet authorities, 6,000 Jewish families were settled on the land, which means a population of about 20,000 people. There are now existing hundreds of Jewish villages.

The desire for settling on the land is very great among the masses of laboring Jews. Land is to be alloted for another 10,000 families in the coming year. Much assistance has been given to the Jewish settlers by the "Agro-Joint" organization of America, which has spent about $700,000 in the first year on supplying the new settlers with the necessary implements. The Soviet government, in addition to subsidies, extends also numerous privileges to the colonists in regard to taxes, etc.

Before the revolution the Jewish masses were not allowed to work on the land. The antisemitic czarist policy would not allow the Jews to engage in this important branch of the national economy. Now, under the liberal regime of the Soviets, the Jews prove to be highly capable and industrious agriculturists, serving in many districts as models to their gentile neighbors in the adoption of modern agricultural methods.

The extent of the popularity of the desire for settling on the land among Jewish masses may be gauged from the fact that more than 30,000 Jewish families have applied for colonization on the allotments to be granted by the Soviet agricultural authorities in the coming year.

Labor Unions Will Have Fat Chance to Use Air

WASHINGTON,, Nov. 12.—There are too many broadcasting stations in the congested districts of the United States, and congress should strictly limit the total number to avoid general interference and ruin of the existing service. That was the burden of Secretary Hoover's speech as chairman of the fourth national radio conference, held in Washington, D. C. His declaration put an end to the dream that labor organizations might soon be broadcasting trade union propaganda from their own stations.

Speakers representing existing broadcasting stations confirmed his view. The ether is jammed full already, and if labor gets its message out to the millions of receiving sets it must pay the high prices charged by the existing broadcasters. The "air" of radio is no more free than is good prairie land. It is all taken up.

Education in Moscow.

MOSCOW, Nov. 12.—As compared with last year, the number of schools functioning in Moscow has been increased from 319 to 390, and the number of students from 152,970 to 180,680.

During the present year 210 kindergartens with 5,720 children will be functioning, and also 277 children's homes for 23,450 children.

56,265 students are learning trades in technical institutions.

Warrants Issued for Five Dicks

(Special to The Daily Worker)

JOLIET, Nov. 13.—Attempts are being made to locate five Burns detectives so that warrants that the union has had issued for their arrest can be served on them and the Burns finks brought back to Joliet to answer for the bombing of a garage where organized auto mechanics have been on strike now for 11 weeks. The strikers, who are being transferred to a local of their own from the railway machinists, demand 85 cents an hour for day work and 90 cents for night work. They have been getting around 60 cents. The Buick garage is the leader in the fight against decent pay.

Dicks Frame Strikers.

The Burns frame-up, as charged by the attorney for the strikers, started in getting the confidence of a striker by a man who posed as an insurance solicitor. The striker and the supposed solicitor had a few drinks and walked downtown to the Buick garage where there is a 3-foot space to the next building. Here the solicitor persuaded the tipsy striker to step in with him. The Burns man after lighting a bomb, according to the union story which led to the issuance of the warrants, told his companion to run away while he himself stayed in the background.

Police Release Dicks.

Just as the striker ran four other Burns men who had been planted pursued him and shot him, pursuing him in co-operation with the police. Unfortunately one policeman looked into the space where the bomb was dropped and seized the skulker in the shadow, who turned out to be the Burns agent. The police let him go the next day, but when the union attorney got on the trial he had the sheriff take out warrants for all five Burns men in this bomb frame-up against the union.

Civic Opera Offers Die Walkuere, Faust and Tosca This Week

Perhaps the most interesting feature of the many characterizing the second week of the season was the inclusion in the schedule of the first repeat performance of "Der Rosenkavalier," on Friday night, Nov. 13. This tuneful German opera in the comedy vein has proved the most successful novelty that the company has introduced in years. The first repetition of "La Traviata" Saturday afternoon and the season's first performance of "Tosca" Saturday night are also noteworthy features. The latter, sung at popular prices, with no seat in the Auditorium costing more than an ordinary theater seat, with a cast including such artists as Eleanor Sawyer, Fernand Ansseau, Cesare Formichi, Vittorio Trevisan, and Lodovico Oliviero.

"Samson and Delilah" will be sung, a spectacular opening for the third week. A star cast, including Louise Homer, Charles Marshall, Edouard Cotreuil, Cesare Formichi, Jose Mojica, Lodovico Oliviero, Antonio Nicolich and Desire Defrere will interpret the colorful biblical opera.

Monday, Nov. 16 brings a repetition of "Manen Lescaut," with Muzio, Cortis, Rimini, and Cotreuil in the cast. Moranzoni will conduct Tuesday, Gounod's masterpiece, "Faust" will be given with Miss Sawyer in the role of Marguerite. Others in the cast include Hackett, Bonelli and Lazzari. Grovlez conducting.

Wednesday, "The Masked Ball" will be repeated with Raisa, Marshall, Lenska and Steel; Polacco conducting. "Die Walkuere" will be given its premiere performance of the season on Thursday evening with Ferrai, Van Gordon, Lenska, Lamont, Kipnis, and Cotreuil in the cast; Polacco conducting. Friday night no performance is scheduled. Saturday afternoon, Nov. 21, "Martha" will be sung with Mason, Pavleska, Schipa, Lazzari and Trevisan; Moranzoni conducting. Saturday night "Il Trovatore" will be sung at popular prices with Muzio, Lenska, Cortis and Bonelli, Weber conducting.

Railway Express Workers Want 12 Pct. Increase in Wages

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Demands including a 12 per cent raise in pay have been made upon the American Railway Express Co. and the Southeastern Express Co. by the new American Federation of Express Workers. The organization, split off from the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Express and Station Employes, now claims over 15,000 members.

The American Railway Express Co is reported to have agreed to a conference Dec. 7 on wage demands; the date for the conference with the Southeastern has not been fixed. Revision of working agreements has been taken to the United States railroad labor board, as conferences with the two companies failed to result in a settlement.

AMERICAN YOUTH HAS FAT CHANCE OF REACHING TERRA FIRMA AFTER FLIGHT IN ARMY AND NAVY PLANES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Despite the objections of Colonel Moreland at the court-martial trial of Colonel William Mitchell, on charges of "conduct prejudicial to military discipline and behavior." Mitchell is now introducing evidence to prove the statements he made that the army and navy heads were guilty of "criminal negligence and inefficiency" in the administration of the air service.

At first the administration had hoped to avoid any discussion of the army and navy's policies due to the bad effect it might have on the youth of the nation if Mitchell "split the beans" and showed these youths the real condition of the planes they were to fly in.

Air Casualities High

In the few days that Mitchell has had to put witnesses on the stand, he has been able to establish thru these witnesses that are at present engaged in the chemical war, aviation, and anti-aircraft services, that the peace-time fatalities in the army air service from 1919 to 1924 were approximately 22 times more than in all of the rest of the army combined. Fatalities in the navy air service amounted to 226, in the army 39 and air mail 40. It has been shown that out of the 5,000 pilots in the air service but one out of ten gets proper training, and that of this number 500 would be able to "handle" a plane after two weeks training, 500 more after a month's training and the others would be useless unless given at least three to six month's training.

Wooden Overcoats Their Reward

The chances that young aviators have in ever landing on terra firma safely was told by one of the officers when he showed that for the past four years the planes operated by the national guard have often been faulty and lacked parachutes, so that when the engine went dead, as a rule the aviator could resign himself to either a long stay in a hospital or a much longer rest in a wooden overcoat.

The expedition commanded by Lieut. Commander Byrd that went into the Arctic were sent by the navy department into ice-filled seas with a plane that was not built for Arctic regions but for tropical regions. The planes had been specifically bought by the navy for use in Hawaii, the Phillipines and Panama. The planes used in the Arctic were not even given the proper tests.

It was brought in the course of the investigation that the flight of the Shenandoah was carried out against the wishes of the late Commander Lansdowne and that its safety factor had been reduced by the use of hylium instead of hydrogen, by the removal of one of the gas engines in the dirigible and also thru the detrioration of one of the gas cells due to lack of proper care.

Score Whitewashing

The navy was blamed for the silencing and suppression of the facts in the disaster of the Hawaiian PN-1 and Shenandoah flights the attempt of the navy instructing Lansdowne's widow what to say in the whitewash investigation that took place following the Shenandoah disaster was scored.

Lemberg Prison Hunger Strikers to Be Sent to Vronki Bastille

MOSCOW (IRA), Nov. 12.—Reports have arrived from Warsaw that the political prisoners of the Lemberg prison have again gone on hunger strike because their demands have not been fulfilled. In order to break down the hunger strike, the prison administration, in contradiction to the existing regulations, has decided to transport many prisoners to the hard labor prison in Vronki which is well known to all the political prisoners for the brutal rule against class-war fighters.

Portland, Ore., Bread Line Grows.

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 12.—The bread line is growing larger in Portland, Ore., according to Mrs. Ida Maus who runs what is known as Grandma's Kitchen, at 286 Front street. "Talk about starvation in India, we've got our share of it in Portland right today," said Grandma Maus. The kitchen feeds men and women who are foodless and homeless. Beds are provided for homeless women and more beds are in demand daily.

Pacifist Denounces Compulsory Military Training in Schools

In a pacifist speech against militarism, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, before the Evanston Woman's Club, attacked American colleges and universities for instilling militarist ideas into the minds of the students.

"Seventy-eight institutions in 28 states make military training compulsory," she declared. "This is not done by law; students are told they must drop their studies to parade on drill grounds in uniform. Board of trustees are the bodies which foment this psychology of war."

Government Employes Forced to Pass Before Cenotaph of Unknown

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Nov. 12.—All the government employes and their families had a short vacation from their regular work today as they were mobilized by the Baldwin government to furnish the demonstrants for armistice day. They passed before the cenotaph containing the body of England's unknown soldier, lifting their hats and bowing like rows of automatons. Many wreaths furnished by various societies were placed upon the tomb.

Every year that passes sees British crowds more cynical of the war than befor. No one pays any attention to the observance of the anniversary of its armistice except those dependent for their livelihood upon a pretense to patriotism.

Trans-Caucasian Project.

MOSCOW—(Tass)—Nov. 12.—The government of the Trans-Caucasian Federation of Soviet Socialist Republics has sanctioned a gigantic project of amelioration works to be done during the next five years on the territory covering over three million dessiatines out of which 2,250,000 dessiatines are to be irrigated, 250,000 dessiatines to be drained and 500,000 to be protected from flooding waters.

WINNING STRIKE DUE TO CONTROL BY LEFT WING

Furriers' Joint Board Improves Conditions

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Fifteen hundred Greek fur workers who won a 10-day strike against their open shop bosses assembled before the joint board office to celebrate before returning to work under full union conditions. Bearing signs announcing their victory and calling upon all non-union fur workers to organize, the successful strikers were about to carry their celebration thru the fur manufacturing district in a parade back to the jobs but the police at the last moment revoked their verbal permission for the parade and the workers concluded their rejoicing with a concert in the joint board building instead.

Left Wing Leadership Wins.

Substantial wage increases are won. Those who were geting $25 a week or less than the new minimum scale will now get at least $28 to $46, according to the grade of work they do. All will get 10 holidays with pay a year; 44 instead of 49 hours constitutes the working week. Time and half pay for overtime and only union workers in the shops are won.

This organization campaign, so well ended with the 10-day strike, was a comparatively short one, lasting only a few weeks. It was under the direction of the left wing New York joint board of the union. Greek employers have formed an association which will include about 150 of the larger and more important shops, and each boss signs individually with the joint board Strikes are still on against a few small bosses.

Russian Technician Invents Diving Suit for Deep-Sea Exploring

ODESSA, Nov. 12.—A technical expert of Odessa, by the name of Vasileyev, has designed a new diving outfit which enables him to work on the bottom of the sea at a depth of more than one kilometer. Existing diving outfits do not permit working any deeper than about 1,000 feet. With the new outfit it will be possible to distinguish the composition of submerged bodies, such as wood from stone, iron from copper, and so on.

It is asserted by specialists that Vasileyev's invention means a revolution in diving activity.

THE REVOLUTION

The Russian Revolution
by
William Z. Foster

Here is not only a history of the Russian revolution, but also many interesting sidelights, all enlivened by personal accounts of the author's varied experiences in Soviet Russia.

Written by an outstanding figure in the American labor movement—and a book that should be in every worker's library.

Through the Russian Revolution
by
Albert Rhys Williams

Williams was a sympathetic spectator of the first hectic year of the revolution. He tells an intriguing and graphic story of the revolutionary crisis and the subsequent counter-revolutionary invasions.

The addition of interesting photographs and color plates of posters issued during this period, add greater value and attractiveness to the book.

Words of Two Statesmen

> I think we are here not so much to do honor to Mr. Hughes as to thank him for having done honor to us. There is no better test of the character of a people than that afforded by knowing what kind of man they honor and trust.
> —Mr. Elihu Root.

> I thank you, Mr. Root, for what you have said, but if I have been able to render any service it has never failed to find inspiration and guidance in your achievements and counsels.
> —Mr. Charles Evans Hughes.

These sentiments resounded thru the highly ornate and commodious ball room of the Hotel Astor in New York during the course of a banquet given in honor of former Secretary of State Hughes. Mr. Root, who served in a former republican cabinet as secretary of state and whose most recent performance was helping formulate the principles of the world court of international justice, was the second honored guest. Gentlemen and scholars, both. The fulsome flattery the two statesmen accorded each other is further evidence of why the words of American diplomats are the jests of European courts. Compared to old world statesmen they are pigmies.

Tho one cannot impute to them a very high degree of intelligence, the banquet served the purpose of furthering the Wall Street campaign in favor of this country entering the world court. It is not what the exquisite gentleman, Mr. Hughes, said of his esteemed predecessor, Mr. Root, or what Mr. Root said of Mr. Hughes, but what both these very polite gentlemen said of foreign relations that divulges the motive of this affair at the Astor.

It was staged as a political counter-blast to the campaign of Senator Borah against this country's participation in the world court. One thousand politicians and ward heelers, described as "townsmen" of Mr. Hughes, were in attendance. Their job is now religiously to propagate the sentiments expressed there.

At the coming session of congress the question of the world court will be the major problem of foreign policy. Wall Street is inclined to look with suspicion upon the Locarno conference as leading toward the creation of a grouping of European nations preparatory to devising a means of resisting the steady inroads of American finance-capital. Tho unquestionably initiated by the British foreign secretary, Mr. Austen Chamberlain, in the hope of creating a "security pact" against the Soviet Union, the private conferences between representatives of all the nations at Locarno seriously considered means of combating the extension of the Dawes plan for European nations according to opposition papers in Europe and such spokesmen for industrial capital in this country as the Chicago Tribune.

Since the Locarno conference was called and future conferences will be called under the aegis of the league of nations it is necessary for the United States government to enter the league, even tho they enter, as Senator Borah says, thru the back door of the world court in order to prevent a European coalition dominated by Britain against the United States.

Another noteworthy feature of the banquet was Mr. Root's endorsement of Mr. Hughes' policy in relation to the Soviet Union. The Hughes bogey of resising Bolshevik propaganda was praised as an act of superlative statesmanship. Both Mr. Root and Mr. Hughes serve the Standard Oil company, which desires to crush Russia.

It was in the interest of the Rockefeller combine that the famous Root mission, including the renegade socialist, Charles Edward Russell, was sent to Russia. The report was an oil report. And upon the basis of the report of the Root mission Mr. Hughes based his "policy" on Soviet Russia, and with the usual hypocrisy characterizing baptist statesmen, declared that Russia had an "immoral" form of government which the government of Harding, Hughes, Daugherty, Fall, Denby, Hoover & Co. could not deal with. But the real motive of Hughes was OIL, just as it was the sordid corruption of Teapot Dome that determined the policy of his co-worker, Mr. Albert B. Fall, secretary of the interior.

Hughes, as the good and faithful servant of Standard Oil, opposes Russia because Rockefeller interests want to wrest from the Soviets the rich oil wells of Baku, and for no other reason.

He favors the world court because he thinks that combination of international banditti can be used as a stepping stone toward the conquest of the revolution and the pillaging of the natural resources of that country, and because it may serve American imperialism against other European nations.

The victorious revolution in Russia will, with its invincible arms, smash any conspiracy against them the day it is hatched and the Communists of this country and the world will do their part in destroying the effectiveness of imperialist ventures against the Soviet Union, including the world court.
